Mr. BALL. I am willing to change it to 4 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I repeat that I shall consent to the request for unanimous consent if the Senator will substitute Tuesday for Monday.

Mr. BALL. I accept the modification of the proposed unanimous-consent agreement suggested by the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER], and will change the time so that the limitation of debate shall begin on Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. It is proposed to modify the unanimous-consent agreement so as to read:

After the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. on Tuesday, August 16, 1921—

And so forth.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, yesterday afternoon the Senate considered but did not pass a short bill for the relief of Maj. Francis M. Maddox, United States Army. We reached an agreement, I think, that the pending bill should be passed and that the bill in which I am interested should follow. I do not think there is any opposition to my bill. I should like to have the proposed unanimous-consent agreement laid aside for a moment until we may pass the bill in which I am interested. It will only take a minute to do so.

Mr. POINDEXTER. What is the request the Senator from Alabama makes?

Mr. HEFLIN. About five weeks ago the Senate passed a bill proposing to give certain relief to Maj. Maddox. The measure has the indorsement of the Secretary of War. The other House passed a similar bill, cutting the amount down by $4. I desire that the House bill, which has been favorably reported by the Committee on Claims of the Senate, may be passed.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I stated on the floor that I would not object to the consideration of the bill of the Senator from Alabama after the pending bill should have been disposed of. That statement stands.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President—

Mr. HEFLIN. Very well, Mr. President. I shall not object to the unanimous-consent agreement proposed by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BALL], with the understanding with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] that my bill shall be considered after the pending bill shall have passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent agreement proposed by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BALL]?

Mr. HEFLIN. I do not object.

Mr. BORAH. I desire to ask a question. If the proposed unanimous-consent agreement is made, would it prevent a Senator moving to take up another bill at any time when the pending bill is not actually under discussion?

Mr. HEFLIN. No.

Mr. BORAH. Then I have no objection.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, as I understand, there is nothing in this proposed unanimous-consent agreement that prevents a vote on the pending bill before 2 o'clock on Tuesday if we should reach the point where we could vote, is there?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No.

Mr. POINDEXTER. My understanding is that the intention was to proceed at the time the Senator from Delaware indicates in the agreement under a limitation of debate.

Mr. BALL. If the Senate agrees to the request for unanimous consent, so that after 2 o'clock on Tuesday speeches shall be limited to 10 minutes and not more than one speech shall be made by each Senator, I see no reason why the bill could not be laid aside in order to take up any other business on Monday.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I should like to have the proposed agreement again read.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I should like to suggest that we can not have two measures pending as the unfinished business before the Senate at the same time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again read the request for unanimous consent.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BALL] asks unanimous consent—

That after the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, August 16, 1921, no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 10 minutes upon the bill (S. 2131) to extend for the period of seven months the provisions of Title II of the food control and the District of Columbia rents act, approved October 22, 1919, and for other purposes.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Is it the understanding of the Senators who present the request for unanimous consent that the pending bill is not to be voted on until after 2 o'clock on Tuesday?

Mr. LENROOT. Not necessarily.

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is the understanding that I had in discussing the matter with the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. JONES of Washington. If the debate runs out, then the bill remains the unfinished business and one objection would prevent the Senate doing any business whatever until 2 o'clock on Tuesday. I am not in favor of any agreement like that. If any Senator should get out of humor with reference to the matter, then the business of the Senate would absolutely stop.

Mr. BALL. If we should fix a definite time to vote on Tuesday, then the bill could certainly be laid aside for other business.

Mr. LENROOT. But we could not do that without calling the roll to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Why not put in the proposed agreement the words "unless otherwise disposed of?"

Mr. LENROOT. It will stand that way as it is.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is implied.

Mr. JONES of Washington. No; that is not implied, as I understand. My impression is that the understanding is that the bill will not be voted on before 2 o'clock on Tuesday.

Mr. McNARY. I ask that the request for unanimous consent be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again state the request for unanimous consent.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from Delaware asks unanimous consent that after 2 o'clock p. m. on Tuesday August 16, 1921, no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 10 minutes upon the bill (S. 2131) to extend for the period of seven months the provisions of Title II of the food control and the District of Columbia rents act, approved October 22, 1919, and for other purposes.

Mr. JONES of Washington. While the proposal does not in express terms say that we can not vote before Tuesday, it is stated by those who propose it that it is the understanding that we will not vote until after 2 o'clock on Tuesday.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I have no particular interest in it, but why not make it read at 2 o'clock on Tuesday we will proceed to the consideration of this bill and that in the meantime it shall be temporarily laid aside?

Mr. BALL. Why could not it be agreed to fix the time for limiting debate on Monday, so that the Senate might thereafter go on with other business?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I have certain reasons for not desiring a vote on Monday.

Mr. BORAH. If such an agreement is made as the Senator from Washington suggests, that would not prevent us from doing other business.

Mr. HARRISON. The suggestion of the Senator from Washington was that after 2 o'clock on Tuesday speeches should be limited to 10 minutes?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. And that the bill should be laid aside until 2 o'clock on Tuesday?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. That would be a satisfactory arrangement.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Is it necessary to embody that in the agreement itself. Can not the Senator from Delaware, of his own volition, if he chooses so to do, simply ask unanimous consent that the bill be laid aside now, and give notice that he will bring it up again at 2 o'clock on Tuesday? That will give us all day Monday for the consideration of other business.

Mr. LENROOT. No; because if that were done, even though the bill were temporarily laid aside, as I understand the rules, if there were any unfinished business at the time of adjournment it would displace the pending bill; in other words, this bill would not remain the unfinished business.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Would that be true if the pending bill were temporarily laid aside?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes. If temporarily laid aside it must be still the unfinished business at the time of adjournment or it will lose its place.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I think it can be agreed by the Senator from Delaware that he will give way in the meantime to any other business that may be presented and not insist upon the consideration of the pending bill until the hour named.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, as I understand the situation, if I should follow the suggestion of the Senator from Washington, and other business should be before the Senate on Monday at the hour of adjournment, then that other business would become the unfinished business at 2 o'clock on Tuesday.

Mr. NELSON. I will suggest, Mr. President, if I may be allowed, that we agree that the present unfinished business be displaced only temporarily by unanimous consent; that it shall remain the unfinished business from now until disposed of, subject to be laid aside temporarily by unanimous consent.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Let me suggest that we agree now by unanimous consent that the pending bill shall be laid aside to be taken up at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, and that after that hour speeches shall be limited to 10 minutes until the bill is disposed of.

Mr. LENROOT. In my opinion, that will cover it.

Mr. KELLOGG. I think that will answer the purpose.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I submit that suggestion.

Mr. BALL. I ask the Senator to repeat his statement.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I suggest that unanimous consent be given now to lay aside the pending bill; that it be taken up at 2 o'clock on Tuesday; that after the hour of 2 o'clock on Tuesday speeches be limited to 10 minutes; and that no Senator shall make more than one speech on the bill until it is disposed of.

Mr. BALL. Under the rules of the Senate, it would not be displaced as the unfinished business at 2 o'clock by some other measure which might be made the unfinished business in the meantime.

Mr. JONES of Washington. If we enter into such an agreement by unanimous consent, I take it that it really takes the bill out of the category of unfinished business and makes it a special order, to be taken up at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, and then to be disposed of.

Mr. BALL. With the understanding that the debate shall be limited to 10 minutes?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. And that it must be disposed of on that day.

Mr. BALL. I agree to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Delaware, please, state his request?

Mr. BALL. The request is for unanimous consent to lay aside temporarily Senate bill 2131; that it shall be taken up at 2 o'clock on Tuesday; and that thereafter the debate shall be limited to 10 minutes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. As provided in the original proposal. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request for unanimous consent will be stated.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

It is agreed by unanimous consent that the further consideration of the bill (S. 2131) to extend for the period of seven months the provisions of Title II of the food control and the District of Columbia rents act, approved October 22, 1919, and for other purposes, shall be postponed until Tuesday, August 16, at 2 o'clock p. m., and after the said hour of 2 o'clock p. m. on said day no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 10 minutes upon the bill, and that before adjournment on said day a vote shall be had upon the final passage of the bill.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Would not the last clause require a call for a quorum? I suggest that the last clause be stricken out, because I think that with the 10-minute limitation on debate the bill will be disposed of on that calendar day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the modification suggested by the Senator from Washington, is there objection to the request for unanimous consent? The Chair hears none, and the unanimous-consent agreement is entered into.

FREE TRANSIT THROUGH PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I move the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 665, being order of business 121.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 665) to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the motion of the Senator from Idaho to take up the Panama Canal tolls bill—and I may say that I am in thorough sympathy with that measure—was disposed of very quickly. As I heard the vote it was practically unanimous, for I did not hear any Senator vote against the motion. However, I desire to call the attention of the Senators who happen to be present to a statement that I read in the newspapers, because I fear Senators may have made a mistake in their vote.

The statement is as follows:

President Harding has informed Senate Republican leaders, according to information to-day, of his opposition to early action on the Borah bill to restore the free tolls privilege to American coastwise vessels using the Panama Canal. Mr. Harding was said to take the position that to avoid a possible dispute with Great Britain and other nations the free tolls question should be deferred altogether until after the approaching disarmament conference, as discussion of the question at this time might create obstacles to success of the conference.

The President also was represented as preferring settlement of the free tolls question by diplomatic negotiations rather than by legislation, aside from the disarmament conference complication.

Senator BORAH was said, however, to be disposed to press his free toll bills within the next few weeks.

I am, I repeat, in thorough sympathy with the motion of the Senator, but I fear that some of the Senators on the other side voted under a misapprehension when they voted for it; that they were not apprised of the President's stand.

Mr. BORAH. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be laid aside temporarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE, NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1960) providing for an additional judge for the northern district of California. If the bill shall be taken up, I imagine there will be no objection to its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1960. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1960) providing for an additional judge for the northern district of California, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an additional judge for the northern district of California, who shall reside in said district and shall possess the same qualifications and have the same powers and jurisdiction and receive the same salary now prescribed by law in respect of the present district judge therein.

SEC. 2. That the clerk of the district court for the northern district of California and the marshal and district attorney for said district shall perform the duties pertaining to their offices, respectively, for said court.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT TO NATIONAL DEFENSE ACT.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 2307, a bill reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, which I can explain in about two minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

Mr. BORAH. May I ask the Senator what the bill is?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I will explain it now, pending the request for unanimous consent.

The bill carries seven amendments to the so-called national defense act. Each of them is minor in character and is in the nature of a correcting amendment to the Army reorganization act of last year. They all relate to the National Guard in its relations with the War Department and the Regular Army.

The amendments have been agreed to by a conference of adjutants general of the States, by the National Guard officers interested, by the Chief of the Bureau of Militia Affairs, by the joint committee of Guard and Regular officers on the General Staff, by the Secretary of War, and unanimously by the Military Affairs Committee.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is the Senator sure he can dispose of the bill before adjournment? I simply ask about it so that it will not remain undisposed of at that time.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I am quite certain that it can be disposed of before adjournment.

Mr. BORAH. I would not want it to be pending when the adjournment took place, because it might interfere with S. 665.

Mr. WADSWORTH. If I can not have it disposed of before that time, I will withdraw it.

Mr. BORAH. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of Senate bill 2307?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2307) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 3, 1916, and to establish military justice," approved June 4, 1920, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will make an explanation of this bill.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I shall. It is very simple.

Mr. KING. So many measures have been enacted on the ground of the national defense that have been oppressive and iniquitous that I hope this is a good one.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator again is oversuspicious of the Committee on Military Affairs. It does not report that kind of bills.

If the Senator would like to know about some of these amendments, they are very simple. They have all been agreed upon by everybody that can possibly be concerned, and they do not lead to appropriations. They improve, generally speaking, in minor respects, the status of the National Guard and its officers.

For example, to-day a National Guard officer can not be put upon the eligibility list for General Staff duty unless he shall have already displayed General Staff qualification during the last war. That manifestly is unjust, because there is another provision of the statute which authorizes the Secretary of War to appoint National Guard officers to serve here with the General Staff on temporary detail. Many of them have served here. Many are still serving, doing excellent work, doing more than any other element in merging the Guard and the Regulars into a better understanding. This bill, among other amendments, provides that when a National Guard officer, having served a detail here with the General Staff, displays eminent qualifications for General Staff duty his name may be placed upon the eligibility list for General Staff work. That is one of the amendments.

Another is this, for example: The commissions of National Guard officers come directly from the Government, but in the Army reorganization act we also authorize National Guard officers to accept Reserve commissions, which come directly from the President. Hundreds and hundreds of them have done it. Their acceptance of Reserve commissions makes them eligible for duty with their consent with Regular troops and to enjoy all the status of a Regular officer. Now, this little inconsistency has come up: A National Guard officer will accept a commission as a captain in the Reserve. He is a captain in the Guard when he does that. Subsequently he is promoted to be a major in the Guard. He is still a captain in the Reserve, and there is no provision of law which will permit him to be promoted to be a major in the Reserve, so that his grade in the two categories shall be the same. The bill takes care of that.

The bill also simplifies the method of the disbursement of National Guard funds in the several States. At present the Quartermaster General has to pay the National Guard troops in the States. This bill permits the disbursing officer in the State to pay them, thereby saving a lot of paper work and time and red tape.

Little things of that sort are covered by the amendments. There are seven altogether. If the Senator insists, I can go on and explain them.

Mr. KING. No. I will ask one general question: The Army is being reduced in numbers to conform to the act recently passed?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. KING. It has seemed to me that the number of officers in the Army is entirely disproportionate to the number of privates. I am told that promotions are being made now in great numbers, regardless of the number in the Army, and that pretty soon we will have more generals and major generals and other high officers than would be called for in an army of three or four hundred thousand men. Is there anything in this bill that increases the number of officers or that makes for their promotion or that exaggerates the evil—because I think it is an evil—to which I have just referred?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Not at all. As I said in the beginning, this bill relates only to the National Guard.

The bill is quite long, because in drafting it we had to reprint and recite completely the sections of the national defense act in order to include the new language. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, is the bill unanimously reported?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is unanimously reported from the committee and unanimously favored by the associations, the National Guard, and everybody.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from New York? The Chair hears none. The amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The amendment of the Committee on Military Affairs was, on page 1, line 6, after the word "amended," to insert "to read," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended, be, and is hereby, further amended to read as follows:

That the second paragraph of section 5 of said act, as contained in section 5 of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 3, 1916, and to establish military justice," approved June 4, 1920, hereinafter referred to as the Army reorganization act, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"After the completion of the initial General Staff Corps eligible list, the name of no officer shall be added thereto unless upon graduation from the General Staff School he is specifically recommended as qualified for General Staff duty, and hereafter no officer of the General Staff Corps except the Chief of Staff shall be assigned as a member of the War Department General Staff unless he is a graduate of the General Staff College or his name is borne on the initial eligible list: Provided, That the name of any National Guard or reserve officer who has demonstrated by actual service with the War Department General Staff during a period of not less than six months, as hereinafter provided for, that he is qualified for General Staff duty, may, upon the recommendation of a board consisting of the general officers of the War Department General Staff, assistants to the Chief of Staff, be added to said eligible list at any time. The Secretary of War shall publish annually the list of officers eligible for General Staff duty, and such eligibility shall be noted in the annual Army Register. If at any time the number of officers available and eligible for detail to the General Staff is not sufficient to fill all vacancies therein, majors or captains may be detailed as acting General Staff officers under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, That in order to insure intelligent cooperation between the General Staff and the several non-combatant branches of such branches may be detailed as additional members of the General Staff Corps under such special regulations as to eligibility and detail as may be prescribed by the President; but not more than two officers from each such branch shall be detailed as members of the War Department General Staff.

Sec. 2. That section 37 of said act, as contained in section 32 of the Army reorganization act, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 37. Officers' Reserve Corps: For the purpose of providing a reserve of officers available for military service when needed there shall be organized an Officers' Reserve Corps consisting of general officers of sections corresponding to the various branches of the Regular Army and of such additional sections as the President may direct. The grades in each section and the number in each grade shall be as the President may prescribe. Reserve officers shall be appointed and commissioned by the President alone, except general officers, who shall be appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Appointment in every case shall be for a period of five years, but an appointment in force at the outbreak of war or made in time of war shall continue in force until six months after its termination. Any reserve officer may be discharged at any time in the discretion of the President. A reserve officer appointed during the existence of a state of war shall be entitled to discharge within six months after its termination if he makes application therefor. In time of peace a reserve officer must at the time of his appointment be a citizen of the United States or of the Philippine Islands, between the ages of 21 and 60 years. Any person who has been an officer of the Army at any time between April 6, 1917, and June 30, 1919, or an officer of the Regular Army at any time, may be appointed as a reserve officer in the highest grade which he held in the Army or any lower grade; any person commissioned in the National Guard and recognized as a National Guard officer by the Secretary of War may upon his own application be appointed as a reserve officer in the grade held by him in the National Guard. No other person shall in time of peace be originally appointed as a reserve officer of Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, or Air Service in a grade above that of second lieutenant. In time of peace appointments in the Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, and Air Service shall be limited to former officers of the Army, officers of the National Guard recognized as such by the Secretary of War, graduates of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, as provided in section 47b hereof, warrant officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army, National Guard, and Enlisted Reserve Corps, and persons who served in the Army at some time between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918. Promotions and transfers shall be made under such rules as may be prescribed by the President and shall be based so far as practicable upon recommendations made in the established chain of command. So far as practicable, reserve officers shall be assigned to units in the locality of their places of residence. Nothing in this act shall operate to deprive a reserve officer of the reserve commission he now holds. Any reserve officer may hold a commission in the National Guard without hereby vacating his reserve commission."

SEC. 3. That the second paragraph of section 67 of said act be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"The appropriation provided for in this section shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories under just and equitable procedure to be prescribed by the Secretary of War and in direct ratio to the number of enlisted men in active service in the National Guard existing in such States and Territories at the date of apportionment of said appropriation, and to the District of Columbia, under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, That the sum so apportioned among the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia shall be available under such rules as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War for the actual and necessary expenses incurred by officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army when traveling on duty in connection with the National Guard; for the transportation of supplies furnished to the National Guard for the permanent equipment thereof; for office rent and necessary office expenses of officers of the Regular Army on duty with the National Guard; for the expenses of the Militia Bureau, including clerical services, now authorized for the Division of Militia Affairs; for expenses of enlisted men of the Regular Army on duty with the National Guard, including quarters, fuel, light, medicines, and medical attendance; and such expenses shall constitute a charge against the whole sum annually appropriated for the support of the National Guard, and shall be paid therefrom, and not from the allotment duly apportioned to any particular State, Territory, or the District of Columbia; for the hire of clerks in the offices of United States property and disbursing officers, as approved by the Secretary of War; for the promotion of rifle practice, including the acquisition, construction, maintenance, and equipment of shooting galleries and suitable target ranges; for the hiring of horses and draft animals for the use of mounted troops, batteries, and wagons; for forage for the same; and for such other incidental expenses in connection with lawfully authorized encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction as the Secretary of War may deem necessary, and for such other expenses pertaining to the National Guard as are now or may hereafter be authorized by law."

SEC. 4. That section 81 of said act, as contained in section 44 of the Army reorganization act, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 81. Militia Bureau of the War Department: The Militia Division of the War Department shall hereafter be known as the Militia Bureau of the War Department. After January 1, 1921, the Chief of the Militia Bureau shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, by selection from lists of present and former National Guard officers, recommended by the governors of the several States and Territories as suitable for such appointment, who hold commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps, who have had 10 or more years' commissioned service in the National Guard, at least five of which have been in the line, and who have attained at least the grade of major. He shall hold office for four years, unless sooner removed for cause, and shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a major general of the Regular Army during his tenure of office, but shall not be entitled to retirement or retired pay. While serving as chief, his reserve commission shall continue in force, and shall not be terminated except for cause assigned. Until the chief is appointed, as provided in this section, the President may assign an officer of the Regular Army, not below the rank of colonel, to perform the duties of chief. For duty in the Militia Bureau and for the instruction of the National Guard the President shall assign such number of officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army as he may deem necessary. He may also assign for duty in the Militia Bureau three officers who hold or have held commissions in the National Guard and who at the time of appointment are reserve officers, and any such National Guard officers while so assigned shall receive out of the whole fund appropriated for the support of the National Guard the pay and allowances of a Regular Army officer having the same rank and length of service as said National Guard officer, whose prior service in the Organized Militia shall be counted in ascertaining his rights to longevity pay. The President may also assign, with their consent, and within the limits of the appropriation previously made for this specific purpose, not exceeding 500 officers of the National Guard, who hold reserve commissions, to duty with the Regular Army, in addition to those attending service schools; and while so assigned they shall receive the same pay and allowances as Regular Army officers of like grades, to be paid out of the whole fund appropriated for the support of the militia."

SEC. 5. That section 99 of said act be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 99. National Guard officers and men at service schools, etc. Under such regulations as the President may prescribe, the Secretary of War may, upon the recommendation of the governor of any State or Territory or the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, authorize a limited number of selected officers or enlisted men of the National Guard to attend and pursue a regular course of study at any military service school of the United States, except the United States Military Academy; or to be attached to an organization of the same arm, corps, or department to which such officer or enlisted man shall belong, for routine practical instruction at or near any Army post during a period of field training or other outdoor exercises; and such officer or enlisted man shall receive, out of any National Guard allotment of funds available for the purpose, the same travel allowances and quarters, or commutation of quarters, and the same pay, allowances, and subsistence to which an officer or enlisted man of the Regular Army would be entitled for attending such school, college, or practical course of instruction under orders from proper military authority, while in actual attendance at such school, college, or practical course of instruction, and for the necessary period of travel from and to his home station."

SEC. 6. That section 109 of said act, as contained in section 47 of the Army reorganization act, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 109. Pay for the National Guard officers: Captains and lieutenants belonging to organizations of the National Guard shall receive compensation at the rate of one-thirtieth of the monthly base pay of their grades as prescribed for the Regular Army for each regular drill or other period of instruction authorized by the Secretary of War, not exceeding five in any one calendar month, at which they shall have been officially present for the entire required period, and at which at least 50 per cent of the commissioned strength and 60 per cent of the enlisted strength attend and participate for not less than one and one-half hours. Commanding officers of companies and corresponding units shall receive $240 a year in addition to the drill pay herein prescribed. Officers above the grade of captain shall receive not more than $500 a year, and officers below the grade of major not belonging to organizations, shall receive not more than four-thirtieths of the monthly base pay of their grades for satisfactory performance of their appropriate duties under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe. Pay under the provisions of this section shall not accrue to any officer during a period when he shall be lawfully entitled to the same pay as an officer of corresponding grade in the Regular Army: Provided, That section 9 of an act amending the act entitled 'An act to authorize the President to increase temporarily the military establishment of the United States, approved May 18, 1917,' approved August 31, 1918, shall also apply to the purchase of uniforms, accouterments, and equipment for cash by officers of the National Guard and National Guard Reserve, whether in State or Federal service, on proper identification and under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe."

SEC. 7. That the first and second paragraphs of section 110 of said act be, and are hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 110. Pay for National Guard warrant officers and enlisted men: Each warrant officer and enlisted man belonging to an organization of the National Guard shall receive compensation at the rate of one-thirtieth of the initial monthly pay of his grade or specialist ratings as of like grades and ratings in the Regular Army for each drill ordered for his organization where he is officially present and in which he participates for not less than 1½ hours, not exceeding 8 in any one calendar month and not exceeding 60 drills in one year: Provided, That no enlisted man shall receive any pay under the provisions of this section for any month in which he shall have attended less than 60 per cent of the drills or other exercises prescribed for his organization: Provided further, That the proviso contained in section 92 of this act shall not operate to prevent the payment of enlisted men actually present at any duly ordered drill or other exercise: And provided further, That periods of any actual military duty equivalent to the drill herein prescribed (except those periods of service for which members of the National Guard may become lawfully entitled to the same pay as officers and enlisted men of the corresponding grades in the Regular Army) may be accepted as service in lieu of such drills when so provided by the Secretary of War."

"The duty of disbursing and accounting for the amounts appropriated for the purpose of this and the last preceding section may, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, be performed by the disbursing officer of the United States appointed pursuant to section 67: Provided, That stoppages may be made against the compensation payable to any officer or enlisted man hereunder to cover the cost of public property lost or destroyed by and chargeable to such officer or enlisted men."

The amendment was agreed to.

MR. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I offer one amendment which is corrective of the text and to bring the matter up to date. On page 6, line 10, I move to strike out the words "now authorized for the division of militia affairs." That is old language, coming over from the years prior to 1916, in which the national defense act was originally written.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY. On page 6, line 10, after the word "services," it is proposed to strike out the comma and the words "now authorized for the division of militia affairs."

MR. WADSWORTH. I ask that those words be stricken out, because there is no such thing as a division of militia affairs any more.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

MR. KING. Mr. President, we have heard a great deal recently about open sessions and the light of publicity in relation to all public matters. Secret sessions have been condemned and demands have been made for a full and frank consideration of public questions and public matters. I saw in the morning paper the statement that the Committee on Finance of the Senate had adopted a policy, at least a temporary one—I hope the report is untrue, because in my judgment the policy is wrong—of hearing behind closed doors testimony respecting the tariff bill now before the committee. It has been stated that witnesses appeared before the committee and gave testimony in secret—testimony which doubtless will influence the preparation of the schedules which will appear in the next tariff law. The people are interested in laws which tax and burden them, and they are entitled to know what causes produce or effect legislation.

In view of the well-known fact that representatives of all sorts of business and industries are here seeking to obtain legislation favorable to their interests or to prevent the enactment of laws conceived to be detrimental to them, it seems to me that the Finance Committee ought not to hear any witness or take any testimony relating to the tariff bill except in the open and before the eyes of the public. I can not believe that the Finance Committee has adopted a policy of secrecy. I certainly hope that if they have done so, they will abandon it; that they will give to the Senate and the country all testimony taken by them.

I am also advised that the majority members of the Finance Committee are considering in secret and executive session two important matters—the question of American valuation and the question of an embargo in aid of the dye monopoly. Those two matters, it had been announced, would be considered by the entire membership of the Finance Committee, and would not be regarded as partisan questions. I am now advised that such is not to be the case. I hope that the information I have received may prove to be incorrect, and that the Finance Committee, following the policy advocated by the Republican Party during the past four years, of open diplomacy and open hearings and opposition to secrecy in public matters, will do everything in the open, so that the American people may know just what is being done with respect to these matters that affect so vitally the welfare of the American people.

We are interested in a tariff act that will deal justly with the American people. We do not want a tariff act to be written by the dye monopoly and by other monopolies and trusts that are seeking to profit by legislation and to prostitute legislation in their own interest.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read three times the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill was passed.

REMISSION OF CHINESE INDEMNITY.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate joint resolution 85, to provide for the remission of further payments of the annual installments of the Chinese indemnity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McNARY in the chair). Is there any objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 85) to provide for the remission of further payments of the annual installments of the Chinese indemnity, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to remit to China as an act of friendship any or all further payments of the annual installments of the Chinese indemnity due under the bond for $24,440,778.81 received from China pursuant to the protocol of September 7, 1901, as modified by Executive order on the 28th day of December, 1908, pursuant to the authority of the joint resolution of Congress approved May 25, 1908, for indemnity against losses and expenses incurred by reason of the so-called Boxer disturbances in China during the year 1900, such remission to begin as from October 1, 1917, and to be at such times and in such manner as the President shall deem just.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I can imagine it possible that everybody has not understood the joint resolution from its reading; but it is a very simple measure, and one to which I know the Senate will agree.

After the Boxer rebellion there was a protocol drawn and signed by all the nations imposing punitive damages, to which we objected and with which we had no sympathy. But the protocol was agreed to, and we were apportioned 7 per cent of the total amount imposed on the Chinese nation. Our share amounted to $24,000,000 gold.

On May 25, 1908, we remitted ten million of that amount to China. The balance was to be paid in 10 annual installments. Four million were set aside for the payment of private claims, which have all been settled, and the Government claim was for military expenses, amounting to $9,655,000. China has paid on that in annual installments $8,418,000, leaving still outstanding a claim of $1,236,858, which was being paid in annual installments.

When the World War came on, and China entered the war with us, we stopped the collection of those payments, and it is proposed now that we shall simply collect no more money under that Boxer indemnity. It is an act of friendship and kindness to China. They have not asked for it, but it is carrying out the policy we followed before of not exacting from them an annual payment for something which has already been all paid and settled, and cost this Government nothing.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether this payment, if it were paid, would liquidate the entire indebtedness or claim?

Mr. LODGE. This $1,236,000 would liquidate everything that remains. It is a small balance from our claim for military expenses at the time of the Boxer rebellion. It was punitive damages. I hope the Senate will agree to pass the joint resolution and remit the rest of the payments.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it seems to me that if we did not do it, it would be a departure from the policy which we have followed in the past, and to which we really had pledged adherence.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSIDERATION OF THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] made some observations a few moments ago with reference to certain things going on in the Finance Committee. Up to this afternoon I have not felt very much aggrieved by what was being done. It has been the custom of both parties in the past, in the consideration of tariff bills, to admit the minority to be present during the hearings, and then exclude them when the bill was being written. I expected that precedent to be followed in the framing of this bill.

But it was announced that the committee would first take up the question of American valuation and the question of a dye embargo, believing those to be fundamental questions which ought to be settled before the rates were decided upon. Very graciously the minority was asked to participate in those hearings, we being given the assurance that we would also be permitted to participate in the final decision of those two questions. That statement was given to the press, and we have been proceeding upon that theory, and we supposed we would be acceptable company to-day when it was proposed that the committee should go into executive session for the purpose of determining only those two questions.

I was very much surprised, therefore, this morning when I arrived at the committee meeting to find that my services and those of my associates in the minority were no longer desired with reference to those questions. However, I did not take any offense at that; it was a mere party action in connection with the settlement of those two questions, as well as in writing rates.

Mr. LODGE. They are both tariff questions, are they not?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; probably it might be said that they are both tariff questions, and I am not disposed to criticize the decision of the committee, although they had extended us an invitation originally to sit with them to the end of the consideration of those questions.

But since then, Mr. President, I have heard, as coming from an entirely reliable source, what disturbs me somewhat. I myself had asked that certain Government experts be subpoenaed. Especially had I insisted during the hearings that certain appraisers in New York, who had testified before the committee in the hearings on the emergency tariff bill, should be subpoenaed, because they had then given testimony which indicated that there was not any real reason why there should be a resort to the American valuation scheme in order to protect any industry in this country.

During the hearings I frequently referred to their testimony as indicating that foreign prices, especially German prices, which seemed to be so much feared, have been invoiced since the war higher than they were before the war, and the invoiced prices were very little below the American selling prices, and therefore if our Republican friends wanted to provide against German competition they could do it by the imposition of a small tariff, without any resort to this extraordinary remedy of American valuation. I was anxious to hear them.

Somehow or other, those gentlemen had not arrived; they had not been put on the stand, up to this morning; so that I had no opportunity to cross-examine them. I did not suppose they were going to be brought here at all. But I now learn that those very men I have been trying to get here, and who I thought were so important and essential to the proper presentation of this matter in the hearings, are here and are being examined to-day by the committee in executive session, and that their testimony is not being taken down stenographically.

That seems to me to be quite a serious matter, and I think, as the ranking member of the minority on that committee, I have a right, in behalf of the minority, to complain of that procedure. I hope I have been misinformed about it. I hope that these witnesses have not been called, the importance of whose presence I have stressed so much, not only in my requests of the committee that they be subpoenaed, but in my cross-examination of witnesses, referring to their testimony and using their testimony for the purpose of eliciting answers to certain inquiries I put to the witnesses. Having permitted us to participate in the hearings and cross-examine witnesses, I hope these important witnesses have not been withheld until the committee went into executive session and the minority was excluded, and now their testimony is being taken, testimony of experts of the Government about the very things we have been for two weeks inquiring into. I have insisted all the time that the expert testimony was worth more than the testimony of all the other witnesses put together, and I hope that these witnesses are not there before them to-day, and being cross-examined, and their testimony not taken down, so that the Senate and the country may have the benefit of it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I wish to say one word apropos of the statement made by the Senator from North Carolina. The morning newspapers carried the report that testimony was being taken by the Finance Committee in executive session, and the statement of the Senator gives support to the publications. I do not wish to criticize a committee of the Senate or the personnel of a committee of the Senate, but I respectfully submit that it is highly improper for that committee, at least with reference to the tariff bill committed to its charge by the Senate, to take testimony in secret respecting that measure, a measure of such vital importance to the American people. Not only the Senate but the people are entitled to know who testify before that committee and what representations are made which may affect the interests of all parts of our country, and it would seem highly improper if testimony is taken not to have it reported and printed and made available for Senators to aid them in forming their judgment as to the merits of the various schedules that will be reported in the bill.

I sincerely hope that the Finance Committee has not pursued the course indicated, but that it has received no testimony or heard no witnesses in secret, and that it will have printed for immediate use by the Senate all testimony given before it. If a different course has been followed, then I hope that the Senator from North Carolina will protest against it on the floor of the Senate and submit a resolution requiring the Finance Committee to have open sessions when it considers testimony and that all testimony taken shall be printed.

SOUTHERN IRON & METAL CO., JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

Mr. FLETCHER. In order to get rid of a bill on the calendar, which has passed the House, and a similar bill having passed the Senate twice, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1940) for the relief of the Southern Iron & Metal Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,189.35, for the relief of the Southern Iron & Metal Co., Jacksonville, Fla., for salvage material consisting of submarine cable sold and delivered at Key West, Fla., to the Southern Iron & Metal Co., at the instance of the director of purchase and storage of the War Department, which salvage material was in good faith paid for but was not of the kind and quality represented.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. G. SEUPELT.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, Senate bill 2041, for the relief of J. G. Seupelt, is a local bill. A similar bill has passed the Senate two or three times already, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. It is a short bill and will take but a minute.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to permit one J. G. Seupelt to enter under the homestead laws, at the appraised price, a certain unsurveyed island in the Colville Indian Reservation, Washington, known as "Hog Island," containing about 152 acres, located in the Columbia River, and within sections 26 and 35, township 30 north, range 36 east, of the Willamette meridian, in the State of Washington: Provided, That proceeds arising hereunder shall be subject to the provisions of section 6 of the act of March 22, 1906 (vol. 34, U. S. Stats. L., p. 81): Provided further, That the right of entry by the said Seupelt shall be exercised within 90 days after the execution and acceptance of the survey of the island: And provided further, That the land hereby disposed of shall be subject to all the laws of the United States prohibiting the introduction of intoxicants into the Indian country, until otherwise provided by Congress.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SURVEY OF CALAVERAS RIVER IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 1269, to make a preliminary survey of the Calaveras River in California with a view to the control of its floods. The bill was reported by the Committee on Commerce favorably by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]. It is a local bill, of peculiar interest to California, and I ask that it be taken up.

Mr. LENROOT. Does it carry any appropriation?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. No.

Mr. LENROOT. Let it be read, Mr. President.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary survey to be made of the Calaveras River in California with a view to the control of its floods, in accordance with provisions of an act entitled "An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1917.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KANSAS CITY & MEMPHIS RAILROAD & BRIDGE CO.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I report back favorably without amendment from the Committee on Commerce the bill (S. 1794) to authorize the Secretary of War to release the Kansas City & Memphis Railroad & Bridge Co. from reconstructing its highway and approaches across its bridge at Memphis, Tenn., and I submit a report (No. 254) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 1794. Is there objection?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I do not think any of us know what the bill is. Can we not have it go to the calendar so that we may see what it is?

Mr. CARAWAY. Will the Senator permit me just one minute to say that a similar bill passed the Senate once before? There was a bridge at Memphis constructed by the Kansas City & Memphis Railway & Bridge Co. that had a wagon way and was a toll bridge. The approach to it fell down and since that time a new bridge has been built that has a wagon way and is a free bridge. The old bridge is not used. The county of Crittenden, Ark., was bearing the expense of building the approach to the new bridge and an agreement was reached between that county and officials of the Kansas City & Memphis Railway & Bridge Co. whereby the bridge company was to pay $12,500 to help construct the approach to the new bridge.

If the bill shall pass, it will permit the Secretary of War to relieve the old bridge company of the necessity of reconstructing an approach to the old bridge that would never be used because it is an approach to a toll bridge when a free bridge parallels it only a short distance away.

Mr. LENROOT. What is the emergency that the bill should not take the usual course and go to the calendar?

Mr. CARAWAY. The emergency is simply that the county is trying to construct the approach now and needs the money. A similar bill passed the Senate at one time without objection.

Mr. LENROOT. I shall not object, but I think it is a very bad practice to act upon bills immediately upon being reported from a committee unless there is some real emergency.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and empowered to release the Kansas City & Memphis Railway & Bridge Co., a corporation, from the duty now imposed upon it by the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved April 24, 1888, and all acts amendatory thereof, to maintain approaches to its bridge at Memphis, Tenn., and a way over and across said bridge for wagons and other vehicles, animals, and foot passengers, upon its payment to the road fund of Crittenden County, Ark., the sum of $12,500.

Sec. 2. That upon the compliance by the said Kansas City & Memphis Railway & Bridge Co., a corporation aforesaid, with the provisions of section 1 of this act the provision hereof shall take effect, and for that purpose an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved April 24, 1888, and all acts amendatory thereof, are hereby so amended as to relieve said company of the necessity of maintaining said approaches to and said passageway across said bridge for wagons and other vehicles, animals, and foot passengers.

Sec. 3. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

ST. MARYS RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2340) to authorize the construction of a toll bridge across the St. Marys River at or near St. Marys, Ga., and Roses Bluff, Fla.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 6, before the word "bridge," to strike out "toll"; in line 7, after the word "point," to insert "suitable to the interests of navigation and at or"; on page 2, line 1, after the name "Florida," to strike out "said bridge to be constructed at or near said points most suitable to the interests of navigation and"; in line 3, after the word "act," to strike out "of Congress approved March 23, 1906," and at the end of line 5, after the word "waters," to insert "approved March 23, 1906," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the St. Marys Bridge Co., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Georgia, its successors and assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the St. Marys River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation and at or near St. Marys, Camden County, Ga., known as the "Borrell tract," and to the shore opposite thereto, known as "Roses Bluff," in Nassau County, Fla., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Marys River, at or near St. Marys, Ga., and Roses Bluff, Fla."

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, August 15, 1921, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 11, 1921.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas L. Walker, of Lexington, Ky., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 42, with headquarters at Louisville, Ky., in place of Presley Stockton Ray.

POSTMASTERS.

INDIANA.

Lowell D. Smith to be postmaster at Sellersburg, Ind., in place of Lawson McMaster, resigned.

KANSAS.

Marie C. Walker to be postmaster at Brownell, Kans., in place of M. C. Walker. Office became third class July 1, 1921.

William W. Barney to be postmaster at Fort Dodge, Kans., in place of W. W. Barney. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Fred Carlson to be postmaster at Lost Springs, Kans., in place of O. L. Mowrer. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

David H. Pugh to be postmaster at Tampa, Kans., in place of D. H. Pugh. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Walter C. Ray to be postmaster at Wilmore, Kans., in place of W. C. Ray. Office became third class October 1, 1920.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Alexander F. Gray to be postmaster at Charles River, Mass., in place of A. F. Gray. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Leo D. Glynn to be postmaster at East Long Meadow, Mass., in place of L. D. Glynn. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

MICHIGAN.

Roy P. Eymer to be postmaster at Turner, Mich., in place of R. P. Eymer. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

MINNESOTA.

Olga P. Hatling to be postmaster at Dalton, Minn., in place of O. P. Hatling. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Lizzie A. Schmidt to be postmaster at Dundee, Minn., in place of L. A. Schmidt. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Matilda Blodgett to be postmaster at Ghent, Minn., in place of Matilda Blodgett. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

MISSOURI.

J. Herbert Hunter to be postmaster at Russellville, Mo., in place of J. J. Vaughan, resigned. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

NEBRASKA.

Cora E. Saal to be postmaster at Brock, Nebr., in place of C. E. Saal. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Birge L. Neumann to be postmaster at Oakland, Nebr., in place of O. E. Swanson, resigned.

Minnie M. Mason to be postmaster at Salem, Nebr., in place of M. M. Mason. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Inez M. Griffith to be postmaster at Verdon, Nebr., in place of I. M. Griffith. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Charles F. Southard to be postmaster at North Haverhill, N. H., in place of C. F. Southard. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

NEW YORK.

Stanly A. North to be postmaster at Chazy, N. Y., in place of F. E. Doane, resigned.

William Holmes to be postmaster at Clifton Springs, N. Y., in place of G. E. Barry. Incumbent's commission expired January 6, 1920.

William J. Herbage to be postmaster at Slingerlands, N. Y., in place of M. J. Coughtry. Office became third class October 1, 1920.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Niels E. Sorteberg to be postmaster at Bowdon, N. Dak., in place of Zora Svendsgaard, resigned.

George H. Rieland to be postmaster at Streeter, N. Dak., in place of F. S. Putman, removed.

OHIO.

Lowell E. Blakeley to be postmaster at Botkins, Ohio, in place of L. E. Blakeley. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

OKLAHOMA.

Charles H. Hoffman to be postmaster at Dilworth, Okla., in place of H. S. Chambers, resigned.

PENNSYLVANIA.

William Boyd, sr., to be postmaster at New Salem, Pa., in place of A. M. Seaton, resigned.

Charles A. McDannell to be postmaster at Wattsburg, Pa., in place of C. A. McDannell. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Jeane C. Lewis to be postmaster at Weedville, Pa., in place of J. C. Lewis. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Adam C. Dayson to be postmaster at Johns Island, S.-C., in place of A. C. Dayson. Office became third class July 1, 1921.

TEXAS.

John F. Dreinhofer to be postmaster at Ranger, Tex., in place of J. F. Connell, removed.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Walter B. Crickmer to be postmaster at McAlpin, W. Va., in place of W. D. Crickmer. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

WISCONSIN.

William H. Froelich to be postmaster at Jackson, Wis., in place of W. H. Froelich. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Louise Halberg to be postmaster at Mishicot, Wis., in place of Louise Halberg. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 11, 1921.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Dennis H. Cronin to be United States marshal, district of Nebraska.

POSTMASTERS.

INDIANA.

Harold D. Johnson, Milroy.

MICHIGAN.

Hardie L. Reynolds, Fennville.

Maude G. Cook, Grand Blanc.

Rollo G. Mosher, Wayland.

MINNESOTA.

Margaret A. McGinn, Minneota.

OHIO.

John M. Washington, Sabina.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

William C. Stepp, Taylors.

OKLAHOMA.

Ira B. Johnson, Vian.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate August 11, 1921.

POSTMASTER.

OKLAHOMA.

William H. McKenzie to be postmaster at Cement.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, August 11, 1921.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, our heavenly Father, we thank Thee for that love that springs not from our merits but from Thy divine compassion. Strengthen us in all patience and make us fruitful in all good works. Grant that we may always have the deepest sympathy for those patriotic citizens who labor for the common good of our splendid country. Go with them whose doubts and fears outnumber their joys and are in the way of perplexity and uncertainty. From day to day may we make gains in knowledge, in wisdom, in forbearance, in self-control, and in unselfishness, and after a little while bring us to the Father's house. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. Is there objection?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I wish the gentleman would ask for two minutes, so I may be able to ask him a question or two in one of those minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, Mr. Speaker, two minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I make that request in order that I may submit a unanimous-consent request that it may be in order to take up for consideration under the rules of the House the bill (S. 1915) to amend the War Finance Corporation act in order to relieve certain growers and shippers of agricultural products, after the disposition of the bill from the Committee on Appropriations making appropriations for the Shipping Board.

Mr. GARNER. Now, Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask the gentleman from Wyoming something about the program for the next week until the 20th. I see in the newspapers this morning he has arranged to adjourn or take a recess by concurrent resolution on the 20th instant. I wish the gentleman would give, for the benefit of this side of the House especially, who are not informed, all the information available as to what he expects to do from now until the day he takes a recess, and what time he expects to take a recess?

Mr. MONDELL. Well, we expect to consider to-day two bills from the Committee on Ways and Means, as the gentleman from Texas understands. They may take the entire day, although I hope not. Following that, to-morrow we hope to consider the bill from the Committee on Appropriations making appropriations for the Shipping Board, to which I just referred. Following that, we hope to take up for consideration the bill S. 1915, relative to which I am submitting a unanimous-consent request. We do not know now when the Committee on Ways and Means may be ready to report their tax bill, but I am assuming that the bill will be ready, so that it can be presented to a Republican conference on Monday.

Mr. GARNER. What does the gentleman mean by Monday now, Monday afternoon, so that the bill can be introduced Monday afternoon and considered Tuesday, or does the gentleman mean that it will be introduced on Tuesday and considered Wednesday and only have four days for its consideration during next week?

Mr. MONDELL. I have been under the impression that we probably would not be able to reach the bill for consideration sooner than Wednesday.

Mr. GARNER. Does the gentleman propose to consider the bill under the 5-minute rule or does he expect to pass it under a special rule?

Mr. MONDELL. That is a matter for the conference to determine.

Mr. GARNER. Well, this is a very important matter just now, let me say to the gentleman. If we are to take up this bill under the 5-minute rule and undertake to pass it with two or three days' consideration, the gentleman is going to find it will be impossible, I think, to do so, and he will finally, if he expects to pass it on Saturday, the 20th, have to come in and get him a rule, because I imagine the House, if it is going to consider it under the rules of the House, will at least give it some consideration, and if it does it will certainly take them more than two or three days to pass it under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. MANN. I judge from the gentleman's remarks he wants us to pass it under a rule.

Mr. GARNER. I did not say that at all; I am merely asking the gentleman for information. I desire to be able to advise the Democratic membership who are absent about what the program will be next week, and they would like to be here to vote on a special rule if it is to be considered under a special rule, and if it is to be considered under a 5-minute rule, some may want to remain away until the vote on the final passage.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman from Texas is of the opinion it will take a considerable length of time to pass the bill unless it is passed under a special rule?

Mr. GARNER. If the House gives it intelligent consideration, certainly it will, because it is one of the most important measures that has been brought before the House.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, I do not want to embarrass the gentleman from Texas—

Mr. GARNER. No; and the gentleman can not embarrass the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MONDELL. If the gentleman were in our place and were to have charge of this legislation, I assume that he would consider it under a rule?

Mr. GARNER. Let me say to the gentleman from Wyoming if I had made up this bill as his party has made it up and insisted upon it being a partisan matter, if I had been idiotic enough to do that, then I would have said, "This is my baby, you can not put your hand on it." But in the first place I would not have done that.

I would have invited the entire committee in, and I would have made up this bill as it ought to have been made up, by the entire membership of the Ways and Means Committee, and have given the House of Representatives an opportunity to consider it under the rules of the House for the purpose of making it the greatest legislation in the history of the country. But you have not done that. Having proceeded as far as you have, you have said to the country that this was a Republican measure, a measure you do not propose to have the Democrats given any credit for, or charged with any responsibility for, and therefore we can not offer any amendment to it.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, it is all very easy for the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] to make the speech he just has made and declare if he had his way about it he would do something that never has been done in the history of the Congress. His party never did what he suggests, and no other party ever did what he suggests.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. I will.

Mr. GARNER. I wish the gentleman would refer to the acts of 1916, 1917, and 1918, and he will find we passed those bills under the rules of the House without cutting off right of amendments, and that every Republican Member had every opportunity to offer amendments when they were considered.

Mr. MONDELL. And with an ironclad understanding binding every gentleman on the Democratic side, except a very few who could not be so induced, to vote against every amendment we offered.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] a question.

Mr. GARNER. Let the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] ask the gentleman from Wyoming a question.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Wyoming be extended three minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. GARNER. Let me say to the gentleman from Wyoming, if he will refresh his memory he will recall that in the consideration of the internal-revenue acts of 1916, 1917, and 1918 it was almost the unanimous vote in this House, both of Republicans and Democrats. It was not necessary to have an understanding on the Democratic side, because these measures were of such a nature, and were made up by both the Republicans and Democrats on the committee, that we had no occasion to have a conference or understanding.

Mr. MONDELL. I hope, Mr. Speaker, the Democrats will be as patriotic in peace as the Republicans were in war. [Applause on the Republican side.] They have this incentive to vote for our bill which we did not have to vote for theirs, namely, that it will be a wise and proper piece of legislation and in the interest of all the people. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. May I suggest that, of course, this revenue bill, as it has been framed and as it is going to pass, will be nothing more than an enacting clause anyway, will it? The Senate eventually will make the bill.

Mr. MONDELL. The Senate, as a coordinate branch of the Government, will pass upon the measure, but, judging by our experience so far in this session of Congress, we anticipate that the bill will be practically as the House passes it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Well, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] yield to me for a moment?

Mr. GARNER. When the gentleman from Tennessee finishes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. We have passed one enacting clause on a tariff bill that is now in the Senate. I myself do not see why it should take so very great an amount of time to pass another.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman from Tennessee then agrees with the gentleman from Texas that the proper thing to do is to pass the tax bill under a rule?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. No; I do not.

Mr. GARNER. The "gentleman from Texas" has not suggested that it pass under a rule.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I do not; because the reason the tariff bill is merely an enacting clause is because that it was passed under a rule.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I want to say this to the gentleman from Texas: I was a member of the committee with him in 1916, 1917, and 1918. And there was no politics in the committee in those days, because the Republican Party never has any politics during a war period. I had hoped it would be possible to have the very valuable assistance of the gentleman from Texas and his colleagues in drafting the new revenue law, but there is no man who has been so responsible as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] has been in making that absolutely impossible. Throughout the hearings, which we were trying to conduct in an entirely nonpolitical way, the gentleman from Texas and his colleagues sought to make politics from the beginning, and it made it utterly impossible, unless we wanted to delay this bill for months, to have the valuable assistance which the gentleman from Texas could have given if he had abandoned his partisanship and had considered this bill in an effective way.

Mr. GARNER. Does the gentleman say that the mere method of examining witnesses by the Republicans was not sufficient to say to the Democrats, "We do not want you to sit with us"? The gentleman from Ohio and his committee never invited the Democrats to sit with them in the consideration of this bill, even in the hearings. The only information we got was from the Secretary of the Treasury. We can not have those hearings. They were submerged, in the Printing Office or somewhere else, so that you Republican gentlemen can not have the information. They do not intend to let you have the information. I made inquiry this morning, and we can not find the hearings. They afford the only information given to the committee, and the Democrats were sure, after the Secretary of the Treasury had appeared before the committee, that their services would be dispensed with and they were no longer needed in the committee. So it means that you are going to make up a partisan bill.

Mr. MONDELL. Now, Mr. Speaker, I resubmit my unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that after the consideration of the appropriation bill it shall be in order to consider the bill (S. 1915) to amend the War Finance Corporation act.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I do not think it should say "after the consideration of the appropriation bill." We do not know about the time of that now.

Mr. MONDELL. I assume that, as a member of the rules committee, the gentleman from Tennessee would have no objection to voting for a rule for the consideration of the bill. But gentlemen on both sides desire to know as far as possible in advance what the House is to consider, and it is only for the purpose of giving notice in advance of the measures that are to be taken up that I make the request.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Now, it will be perfectly satisfactory if we can understand that to-day is to be devoted to the bills from the Ways and Means Committee; that to-morrow the appropriation bill, which is privileged, is to be considered, and the next day, if it is necessary to consider it for that long; and that then, immediately following that, this bill shall come, and the program is not to be cluttered up by any of these matters that are already made in order by special rule.

Mr. MONDELL. I will say to the gentleman that our present intention is to adhere to that, and to consider nothing but the bills from the Committee on Ways and Means which are to be considered to-day, and the appropriation bill, and to send the so-called beer bill to conference, and then pass the bill in regard to which I have asked unanimous consent.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The gentleman used the expression, "That is our program, if we adhere to it."

Mr. GARNER. No; he said the intention was to adhere to it.

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. WINGO. When will this bill come up?

Mr. MONDELL. On Saturday. But we might reach it Friday afternoon.

Mr. WINGO. To-morrow is Friday. You intend to take up the day with what?

Mr. MONDELL. With the two bills from the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. WINGO. You expect to conclude consideration of them to-day?

Mr. MONDELL. We hope to, and we may reach general debate on the appropriation bill.

Mr. WINGO. And then the appropriation bill comes up to-morrow?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes; and it might be possible to conclude that in the afternoon, so that we may have some general debate on the other bill on Friday. But we will probably reach it Saturday.

Mr. WINGO. I am not complaining, but there are two gentlemen who want to know when it will be brought up.

Mr. MONDELL. Friday afternoon, or more probably Saturday.

Mr. WINGO. Will the gentleman indicate what length of time he intends to give to the House for the consideration of that bill?

Mr. MONDELL. My impression was that we could dispose of it in a day. But there is no disposition to rush the consideration of the measure.

Mr. WINGO. Gentlemen have asked me for time. I wanted to have some idea about it. I have no disposition to rush or to delay, but I wanted to know as to the time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, can the Members of Congress depend upon what the newspapers say about a recess being taken on the 20th of the month? Others besides the members of the steering committee would like to make plans accordingly.

Mr. MONDELL. It is possible that the recess might not occur until two, or possibly three, legislative days later than that, but it is expected to take a recess for perhaps a month soon after the passage of the revenue bill.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. MANN. What is the bill that the gentleman asks to make in order?

Mr. MONDELL. It is the bill to amend the War Finance Corporation act in order to provide credits for the exportation of farm products.

Mr. MANN. Has it been reported to the House?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes; I understand so; or is ordered reported.

Mr. MANN. I have not seen it.

Mr. MONDELL. It has either been reported or will be reported this morning. The committee has ordered a report.

Mr. MANN. I do not think we should make a thing a special order before it is reported.

Mr. MONDELL. The committee on yesterday ordered the report to be made.

Mr. WINGO. If the gentleman from Wyoming will permit me, I would suggest that there are really not many very material changes made in the bill as it came from the Senate, so that Members who see the bill can to-day get a general idea about it. There is one very material change from the House committee bill.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will make the request later. I do not think we should set down a bill for consideration on a certain day when it has not yet been reported to the House.

Mr. MONDELL. The committee has ordered a report.

Mr. MANN. We can not act upon hearsay. There is no such bill on the calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WINGO. I understood it was already reported to-day.

Mr. MONDELL. It was ordered reported last evening. I understood it was reported.

Mr. MANN. It was not reported last evening.

Mr. BRAND. It will be reported this morning.

Mr. MANN. When it is reported it is time enough to make the request.

Mr. BRAND. I am not questioning the fact; I am just stating that it will be reported this morning.

Mr. MANN. Sometimes it is said bills would be reported, but they have not been reported.

Mr. WINGO. It was the understanding of the committee that the report would be in to-day, so that the House could consider it Friday. That is the information we have been given by those who are in charge. I can assure the gentleman that I have no disposition to delay the report, and absolutely no effort will be made to delay the report. I am surprised that it is not already in this morning.

Mr. MANN. I know nothing about that, but I am not willing to have the House set a bill down for consideration that has not yet been reported. When it has been reported I shall have no objection to the request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 71. An act for the consolidation of the offices of register and receiver in district land offices in certain cases, and for other purposes.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 71. An act for the consolidation of the offices of register and receiver in district land offices in certain cases, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

CONTRACTS FOR FUTURE DELIVERY OF GRAIN.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5676) taxing contracts for the sale of grain for future delivery and options for such contracts, and providing for the regulation of boards of trade, and for other purposes, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked on the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5676) taxing contracts for the sale of grain for future delivery and options for such contracts, and providing for the regulation of boards of trade, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman whether or not this bill, since it came back from the Senate, would stop any kind of gambling besides what are known as "puts and calls"? Does it stop the ordinary gambling in grain on exchanges in the daytime during the regular hours of business? The Senate has changed the House bill and put some teeth in the House bill. It did not have any teeth before, except at nighttime.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection; and the Speaker announced as the conferees on the part of the House, Mr. HAUGEN, Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan, Mr. TINCER, Mr. RAINEY of Illinois, and Mr. ASWELL.

AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION ACT.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 7294) supplementing and defining the national prohibition act, disagree to Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate on the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7294) supplementing and defining the national prohibition act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. This is an important matter, and I think there ought to be a quorum here to ascertain the sense of the House as to whether this action should be taken.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I move a call of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, when the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Anderson	Fairchild	Kunz	Riordan
Anthony	Favrot	Langley	Rodenberg
Atkeson	Fess	Larsen, Ga.	Rosendale
Bankhead	Fields	Larson, Minn.	Rucker
Barbour	Fitzgerald	Lee, N. Y.	Ryan
Barkley	Flood	Lehlbach	Sabath
Beedy	Focht	Linthicum	Sanders, N. Y.
Bird	Freeman	Luce	Scott, Mich.
Boles	Fuller	Luhning	Siegel
Bond	Funk	McCormick	Sisson
Brennan	Gahn	McSwain	Slomp
Brinson	Gallivan	Maloney	Snell
Britten	Gilbert	Mead	Snyder
Brooks, Ill.	Glynn	Merritt	Stafford
Brooks, Pa.	Goldsborough	Montague	Stevenson
Browne, Wis.	Gould	Montoya	Stiness
Burdick	Graham, Pa.	Moore, Ind.	Stoll
Burke	Greene, Vt.	Morgan	Sullivan
Cantrill	Hawes	Morin	Summers, Tex.
Christopherson	Hayden	Mott	Taylor, Ark.
Clark, Fla.	Hicks	Mudd	Taylor, Colo.
Clarke, N. Y.	Hogan	Nolan	Taylor, N. J.
Classon	Hudspeth	O'Brien	Taylor, Tenn.
Cockran	Humphreys	O'Connor	Ten Eyck
Codd	Husted	Ogden	Tincher
Cole, Ohio	Hutchinson	Oliver	Tinkham
Collins	James	Osborne	Tyson
Cooper, Ohio	Johnson, S. Dak.	Palge	Underhill
Cramton	Kahn	Parker, N. Y.	Upshaw
Crowther	Kearns	Perlman	Vaile
Dallinger	Kendall	Peters	Vare
Dempsey	Kennedy	Porter	Volk
Dickinson	Ketcham	Pou	Ward, N. Y.
Domnick	Kless	Rainey, Ala.	Wason
Doughton	Kindred	Rainey, Ill.	Weaver
Drane	Kirkpatrick	Reber	Wheeler
Dunn	Kitchin	Reed, N. Y.	Williams
Echols	Klecza	Reed, W. Va.	Williamson
Ellis	Knight	Rhodes	Woods, Va.
Elston	Knutson	Riddick	Wright

The SPEAKER. On this vote 270 Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

CORRECTION OF A VOTE.

Mr. GEINERD. Mr. Speaker, on June 11, 1921, I was recorded as not being present. I was present and voted "yea" on House resolution 110. I have just discovered the error.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the correction will be made.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate, the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill (H. R. 7294) supplemental to the national prohibition act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. I object.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. WALSH. I will reserve the objection.

Mr. MANN. If the request be granted in the form in which it is put, of course the House will have no opportunity to vote upon any of the Senate amendments. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to deprive the House at this time of an opportunity to vote on any of the Senate amendments?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I think that is a matter for the gentleman to determine under the rules, whether he desires to have a vote. I suppose he can have a vote.

Mr. MANN. There is no way of getting a vote after the House has disagreed to the Senate amendments. The gentleman's request was to take the bill from the Speaker's table and disagree to all the Senate amendments and agree to the conference. If that request is granted, there is no chance for a vote either now or hereafter on any of the Senate amendments, and I asked the gentleman whether he desired to put the House in an attitude where it would have no opportunity to vote on any of the Senate amendments to the bill.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I am just making the usual motion in cases of this kind.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman says this is the usual request. I have seen hundreds of cases in the House where bills on the Speaker's table have been taken from the Speaker's table and an opportunity given in the House to vote on Senate amendments. I think the House ought to have an opportunity, if it desires, to vote on any of these Senate amendments.

Mr. WALSH. I object to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I move to take the bill (H. R. 7294) from the Speaker's table, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves to take the bill from the Speaker's table, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. That motion is not in order, Mr. Speaker, and I make the point of order that it is not. The gentleman can not make such a motion as that. He may move to take the bill from the Speaker's table. He can not go beyond that at this stage of the proceedings, because the right to move to concur takes precedence of the motion to disagree to the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Then, Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table H. R. 7294.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves to take from the Speaker's table the bill which has just been reported.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that motion is not privileged.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WALSH. This is a measure involving the consideration of a Senate amendment which requires consideration in the Committee of the Whole. I direct the attention of the Speaker to Senate amendments 17, 18, 19, and 20, which not only make this act applicable to certain Territories and possessions of the United States, but make the national prohibition act applicable to certain Territories and jurisdictions of the United States which that act itself did not make applicable to them. On its face I submit that is an amendment requiring and authorizing the expenditure of money for the enforcement of the national prohibition law, for the appointment of officers and for printing, furnishing of blanks, and other incidental expenses of enforcement, and that it requires the expenditure of money and makes a charge on the Treasury. Now, if we should bring in a bill for the enforcement of the constitutional amendment in the Virgin Islands and in Hawaii, even though we brought in the identical national prohibition law, it would require consideration in Committee of the Whole. Now, they seek by a Senate amendment to say that an act which by its terms was not put in force in certain jurisdictions of the United States shall thereafter be applicable to those jurisdictions. And it is not certain sections of the act, but it is the entire act. The enforcement provision, the provisions for the appointment of officers, the provisions for the printing, and every line of the national prohibition act are now to be put in force in places where they were not originally to be in force under the terms of the act as it passed Congress.

Now, I know there are precedents to the effect that where Senate amendments might require the expenditure of money, or might even decrease an appropriation, they are considered as ordinary amendments and can be acted upon in the House; but, Mr. Speaker, I submit that this case is upon a different footing than the precedents which undoubtedly the Speaker has had called to his attention, or which will be brought out, because this takes an entire act, from its title to the signature of the Chief Executive, and transports it into a jurisdiction in which it was not theretofore to be enforced, and which under its terms requires enforcement. It requires the appointment of agents, requires the expenditure of money, and requires the performance of a vast number of different duties which but for this amendment could not be performed in those jurisdictions.

The SPEAKER. It would seem to the Chair that the question is, whether this amendment is not naturally a modification of the bill as it passed the House. It does not seem to the Chair at first blush that it is.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, the national prohibition act is in force in the Virgin Islands and Hawaii, and the only object of this is to confer jurisdiction on the Territorial courts of those Territories.

The SPEAKER. Does the Chair understand that was in the original House bill?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It was in the original House bill, so the words "national prohibition act" do not add anything.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would be glad to have the gentleman cite the Chair to that portion of the prohibition bill.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Originally I suppose that it would be applicable to the United States and all the Territories subject to its jurisdiction.

The SPEAKER. If that is so, the Chair does not think it adds anything to it.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The reason it was left out is that I had the assurance of the Attorney General's office that it would apply to the Territories, so in the draft I did not repeat it.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman cite the Chair to the clause of the original act.

Mr. MANN. After all, the Speaker is not called upon to construe these fine points of existing law. What is pending before the Speaker is the Senate amendment which on its face provides for an expenditure of money. The Speaker is not required to make a Supreme Court decision that this amendment means nothing. The gentleman from Minnesota says that the amendment means nothing, that it accomplishes nothing. That is a fine-haired construction. The fact is the amendment is here. The Senate added that amendment and it is pending before the House, and it is no answer to the parliamentary proposition to say that it means nothing, that what it accomplishes has all been accomplished.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that if the gentleman from Minnesota can show that the main purpose is in the original act, then it would seem to the Chair that this would not be any charge upon the Treasury.

Mr. MANN. The Senate amendment on its face puts a charge on the Treasury. Now, the gentleman seeks to get around that by saying that it is already provided by law and that the Senate did not know what they were doing when they added the Senate amendment. It may be that that is true; I don't know. But the Senate amendment is here and the Chair must presume that the Senate amendment is there to accomplish a purpose. The only purpose it can accomplish is to put the additional burden on the Treasury.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to have the gentleman from Minnesota cite to the Chair the original act which extends the jurisdiction over the Hawaiian and Virgin Islands.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, the local courts in Hawaii and in the Virgin Islands are given jurisdiction by this act over the enforcement of the prohibition law.

Mr. WALSH. That is not what the amendment says.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. That is what it means.

Mr. MANN. That is in the original bill?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes; and the mention of these islands and Hawaii is only for the purpose of making clear what has been in force in Hawaii and in the Virgin Islands.

The officers there are enforcing the national prohibition act under the original Volstead Act. The question has been raised whether the local courts have jurisdiction, and the Senate amendment is to make that clear. The Senate amendment is simply to make clear the language in the original act. It now applies to all Territories of the United States. The question as to whether or not the Territory and islands mean the same thing.

The SPEAKER. That is what the Chair would like to have the gentleman from Minnesota cite to the Chair in the original act.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the House stand in recess five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. I object.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, if it is impossible for two-thirds of the House to determine what it is going to do with the proposition, I think we ought to stand in recess for five minutes.

Mr. MANN. It is a good thing once in a while for the House to consider a proposition. The trouble used to be that the Democrats would pass on anything without knowledge or consideration, and we do not do that way. No wonder the gentleman from Tennessee is surprised.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. That, of course, was characteristic of the Republican Party during the days of its power, but it seems to me it is going back to the old method. I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks that the House stand in recess five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts makes the point of order that the words "and the national prohibition act" being Senate amendment No. 17 in section 3 of the bill under consideration, makes the bill subject to consideration in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union because those words involve an expenditure and a charge upon the Treasury. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD], as the Chair understands him, rebuts that claim by saying that those words mean nothing because they are already in the law. The Chair has asked the gentleman to submit the phrase in the original law substantiating his position, and the Chair thinks the gentleman should have a reasonable time in which to examine the law to find those words.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, that is what I thought.

Mr. WALSH. But, Mr. Speaker, I make the contention that the words are not in the original law, and the gentleman from Minnesota has now had nearly eight minutes to find them.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the Speaker permit a suggestion from me?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. BLANTON. Clearly both the Constitution and the Volstead Prohibition Act applied not only to the United States, but to all territory subject to its jurisdiction. I call the attention of the Speaker to the language of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution, which provides:

SECTION 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

It was not necessary that the Volstead Act specify that it applied to each State, and each Territory, and the District of Columbia, and to the Territory of Hawaii, and to the Virgin Islands, because all of this territory is within the jurisdiction of the United States. The Constitution is the fundamental law of the land, and it prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquor in the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof. The Volstead Act undoubtedly covers it.

The SPEAKER. But if it be in the original act there must be somewhere an express provision to that effect.

Mr. BLANTON. There should be an express provision in the act, and if the Chair will just hold the matter in abeyance it may be found.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is trying to give the gentleman reasonable time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, while the gentleman from Minnesota is busy examining the law, I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the language of this bill under consideration is not to make the national prohibition act applicable to the Territories, but to all territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. Whether that applies to the Philippine Islands—

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, it does not apply to the Philippine Islands for the reason that there is an express provision in the statute with reference to the Philippine Islands that it shall not apply unless expressly so specified.

Mr. MANN. But here is this statute which says that the national prohibition act shall apply to all territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. Clearly that embraces the Philippine Islands, the Isthmus of Panama, the islands of Guam and Tutuila, and all other territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. I do not think the original act applies to all those.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The original act does not apply to the Philippines for the reason that there is an express provision in that statute to the effect that no law shall apply to the Philippine Islands unless it is expressly so provided.

Mr. MANN. A statute passed a year ago stating that no law shall apply does not affect the right of Congress to enact a new law which does apply, and that is what this new proposed act does.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It must specifically apply to it.

Mr. MANN. It does not have to specifically apply at all. The other act is not an organic act, it is not the Constitution, but is merely an act of Congress, and is on the same footing with this proposed act of Congress. When you say that it applies to all Territories subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and that is what it does say, you do not have to examine some other act to find out what it means. This is the last act of Congress. Of course, the man who drew the original bill did not know enough to know that.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Perhaps the gentleman—

Mr. MANN. Oh, I am not referring to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Well, I approved it myself. The Attorney General has held that it does not apply in the Philippines because of that particular language in the organic act governing the Philippines.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Minnesota ready to cite the law?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I have been unable to find the provision in question, but there is no doubt in my mind that it has been so understood in regard to the Hawaiian and the Virgin Islands, and that it has been so held by the Attorney General's department. The constitutional amendment expressly provides that it shall apply to all territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. I am not able to find in the act the provision that I felt sure was there, but there is no doubt in my mind that the language in question adds nothing so far as the Philippines and the Virgin Islands are concerned.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule. The gentleman from Massachusetts claims that the clause "and the national prohibition act shall apply not only to the United States but to all territory subject to its jurisdiction," being a Senate amendment, extends the operation of the present prohibition law and, therefore, that the bill must be first considered in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and consequently can not be brought up here now. It seems clear to the Chair that extending the operation of the act to all territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, if the provision is new, does involve a charge upon the Government, and, therefore, obviously the bill must be first considered in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and, therefore, can not be considered in the House at this time. The gentleman from Minnesota responds that the original prohibition law contains this same provision. The Chair has asked him to cite to the Chair that provision and the gentleman says now that he can not find the provision which he thought was in the original law. Until it is shown that this provision is in the original act, and no evidence of that is now offered, the Chair must sustain the point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. Right there, Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. The Chair has ruled.

IMPORTATION OF DYES AND CHEMICALS.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8107, and, pending that, Mr. Speaker, I am very certain that the gentleman from Texas would agree to a request to limit general debate to one hour, one-half to be controlled by myself and one-half by the gentleman from Texas or the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLIER].

Mr. COLLIER. How much time does the gentleman wish to give?

Mr. LONGWORTH. One-half hour to each side.

Mr. GARNER. I have not had any request for time on this side of the House to discuss the matter, but I do not know what might develop in the course of the consideration of the bill. What time does the gentleman suggest?

Mr. LONGWORTH. So far as I am concerned I have only one request to discuss the bill.

Mr. GARNER. I will say to the gentleman that the gentleman from Wisconsin did say he would like to have a little time to discuss the bill in case the emergency arose, and I told him that I would try to give it to him.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Then I would ask that the general debate proceed for not to exceed one hour, or a shorter time if necessary, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] and one-half by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that general debate be for one hour, one-half to be controlled by himself and one-half by the gentleman from Texas. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the motion to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8107, with Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8107, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8107) to control importations of dyes and chemicals. Be it enacted, etc., That subdivision (a) of section 501 of the dye and chemical control act, approved May 27, 1921, is amended by striking out the words "three months" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "ten months."

SEC. 2. That all furniture, file cases, typewriters, and other office appliances in use by the War Trade Section of the Department of State on May 28, 1921, shall be transferred to and become the property of the Treasury Department.

SEC. 3. That the appropriation "Collecting the revenue from customs, 1922," is hereby made available for the payment of salaries and all other expenditures incident to the operation of the Dye and Chemical Section, Division of Customs, Treasury Department, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. WALSH. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALSH. That section 3 of this bill constitutes an appropriation.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, it is my contention that this does not constitute an appropriation. There is now in existence an appropriation heretofore made for the payment of expenses for collecting revenues from customs. This merely makes a portion of that existing appropriation available for paying such officers as may be employed in the enforcement of this particular provision. It does not constitute the taking of any money from the Treasury. It merely changes or adds to the purposes for which the appropriation has been made. It is legislation simply and not an appropriation. I might call the attention of the Chair to a ruling made by the present occupant of the Chair. On May 23, 1921—this is on page 1656 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—an amendment was offered providing as follows:

Coast Guard: Not to exceed $20,000 of the amount appropriated for the fiscal year 1921 under the subhead "Rations" is transferred and made available for expenditure during the fiscal year under the subhead "Contingent expenses."

The present occupant of the chair ruled that that was legislation and not an appropriation. The Chair's decision is on page 1656, in which he says:

The Chair thinks the item of $20,000 could be carried in this bill as a deficiency for the purpose for which $20,000 is carried in this item. The difference is that it is carried from one purpose to another in this deficiency bill, and the Chair is inclined to think the Committee on Appropriations, having control over these funds, has authority in this deficiency bill to carry the amount from one item to another as proposed by this item.

This is merely a divergence of funds from one particular service to another. It in no way affects the amount of the appropriation and in no way actually appropriates money from the Treasury.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, the instance which the gentleman from Ohio has cited is one in which the present occupant of the chair participated by ruling when a deficiency bill was before the House, but it is a different matter when you transfer one appropriation in an appropriation bill when it is under consideration and when you have a bill of this sort; but the Chair will recall the two recent instances which were passed upon by the House, the pink bollworm resolution, where a point of order was made to an appropriation making a portion of the appropriation for the eradication of the pink bollworm available for reimbursing the States, that the point of order was sustained, and previously a point of order was held against a measure—I think some Indian legislative bill—making appropriations heretofore made available for some other purpose for which the funds were not available. It is upon all fours with those cases. If we are going to have that clause of Rule XXI, I submit it ought to be strictly adhered to. It is the best way to get this rule corrected and put in proper shape.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, this case is undoubtedly on all fours with the pink bollworm proposition. In that instance there was an appropriation of $545,000 appropriated for the eradication of the pink bollworm. The Committee on Agriculture reported a provision authorizing a divergence of $200,000 of that amount for a purpose not originally enumerated in the law, to wit, to pay for the use of land in the eradication of the pink bollworm. Now, the appropriation is already made, but this bill proposes to divert it for another purpose and I do not think there is any doubt but under the logic of the Chair at the time, who held that the divergence of an appropriation already made was tantamount to making a new appropriation, that the point of order in this case is good because this does divert for another purpose than the appropriation already made.

Let us illustrate it, if the Chair please. Suppose you make an appropriation of $10,000 for a purpose which would take only $5,000. Then $5,000 will be reverted to the Treasury. Now, it is contended that another committee other than the Appropriation Committee has authority to come in and divert the other $5,000 for some other particular purpose. I think the logic of the Chair at the time he held the pink bollworm diversion was not authorized under the rules of the House was good, and if it was, undoubtedly this is on all fours with it.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Let me say simply this, that I doubt whether the case already cited by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is exactly on all fours. The Fordney Emergency Tariff Act transferred to the Treasury Department the employees of the State Department, which had hitherto carried the general functions of regulating these importations. They are now in the Treasury Department and they are employed in collecting under the division of customs in that department. There is an appropriation heretofore made for paying the salaries of employees under the customs division of the Treasury Department. These particular officials are in that division, and therefore it is not a new appropriation, but merely a diversion of service within the particular departments specified. It is not, as in the case of the bollworm, a transfer for an entirely different object.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I make the further point of order on section 2 that the Ways and Means Committee does not have authority to transfer typewriters, furniture, file cases, and other office appliances from the State Department to the Treasury Department. That properly comes from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the other point of order should first be determined. The gentleman from Florida was making a point of order as to section 2. I think the Chair should first determine the question as to section 1.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will rule.

Section 3 of the bill reported by the Ways and Means Committee provides that the appropriation for collecting the revenue from customs for 1922 "is hereby made available for the payment of salaries and all other expenditures incident to the operation of the dye and chemical section, division of customs, Treasury Department, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922." To that section the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] makes the point of order that it carries an appropriation reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, and that under the rules of the House that committee has no jurisdiction over appropriations. Clause 5 of Rule XXII prohibits any other than the Committee on Appropriations from bringing in or making appropriations.

The Speaker a few days ago sustained a point of order in the bollworm case in which it was sought to make an appropriation already made, already available in the Department of Agriculture, available for a new purpose by the Secretary of Agriculture. The point of order was made that that could not be done in a bill reported by the Committee on Agriculture, and the Speaker sustained the point of order. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] cites a decision made by the present occupant of the chair on the 23d of May of this year. That was an entirely different proposition. In that case an appropriation available for rations was transferred in a deficiency appropriation bill and reported by the appropriating committee to another purpose, and the Chair held that that transfer could be made. The committee reporting the deficiency appropriation bill, having full jurisdiction, could have reported an original appropriation for the purpose for which the transfer was made. And in that case the Chair overruled the point of order. In this case it seems clear to the Chair that section 3 is an infringement on the jurisdiction of the Committee on Appropriations, and therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Chairman, a few words of comment may be proper as to the resolution before us. I am not opposing any effort to give just protection to American dye interests or woolen, cotton, or any other industries that require protection to compete in business, and for that reason the pending resolution continuing the control of the War Trade Board is extended only until the Fordney tariff bill, now before Congress, becomes law. That bill carries protection of 35 per cent based on American valuation and a 7-cent specific duty per pound, or nearly three times 1916 rates then agreed upon by the dye people. Any higher rates may be oppressive, and I doubt if justification can be found on some items covered by these dye duties contained in the tariff bill now before the Senate. A proposal to add to these duties if an embargo is defeated may result in an indirect embargo as objectionable in character as the one specifically defeated in the House. That should be avoided, but it is proper to protect the dye interests the same as every other interest covered by the emergency tariff law, and this resolution does that.

Let me briefly repeat that an American dye business of small importance before the war has grown through a war embargo that kept out all competition to become a great industry interrelated with other businesses, with practically unlimited capital and with an unending supply of coal-tar products for raw material. Two companies, with total assets of over $560,000,000, are engaged in manufacturing dyes and other chemicals. A hundred other companies have large investments in dyes, so the assets are practically without limit. Many companies are members of the Chemical Foundation Co., a general dye monopoly agency that secured possession of 4,500 alien patents during the war for a song. All talk of this company being a philanthropic institution is moonshine, because it is simply a holding company for its members, who make unlimited profits and then attempt, sanctimoniously, to distract attention from their big grab by saying the foundation company is educational and its profits limited. The extortionate profits are made by the agency's principal, standing in the background. A threatened suit against the Government for several hundred thousand dollars is evidence of its motives.

A MONOPOLY THAT EXPORTED 40 PER CENT OF ITS TOTAL PRODUCTS IN 1920.

Leaving out of consideration the bad record of the Chemical Foundation Co. and of the Dyes Industries, that look after dye lobbying and other incidentals, it appears that last year in 1920 the American dye monopoly produced $95,000,000 of dyestuffs, about 40 per cent of which, or about $35,000,000, was exported. Prices charged to the American consumer by these companies that enjoy an undisturbed monopoly of American trade were from four to ten times the cost, on the average, of many dye prices prior to the war.

Profiteering without limit was the rule, and every large company has refused to make any statement of its actual costs, while some of these dye companies, I am informed by letter, pay their dye company presidents $75,000 a year, or ten times the salary of a Member of Congress. In England such salaries, I am informed, are limited to $5,000, or less than 7 per cent of the American salary standard. These American companies now demand a continued embargo with unlimited profits from Congress.

While $95,000,000 worth of dyes were manufactured here in 1920 and $35,000,000 of American dyes were then exported, all the dyes imported from Germany in 1920 reached $335,000 in value, or less than 1 per cent of the dyes exported to other countries by an American dye monopoly that grips the home market and squeezes American consumers while reaching out for world markets. If there is any greater hypocrisy or public fraud in existence than this American dye monopoly, it should be pointed out to a long-suffering public.

A MONOPOLY THAT COMPETES IN THE WORLD'S MARKETS.

Even President du Pont, of one of the dye companies, said 18 months ago in Senate hearings that in dye manufacturing he could meet the world in six months. Over a year ago he verified his prediction, and with a $280,000,000 company he is now at the head of one of the greatest dye industries of the world.

In October, 1920, the Department of Commerce declared:

Germany will never again regain its lost supremacy in the world trade in dyestuffs. * * * Germany, it is now conceded, will not be the strenuous competitor she was formerly in the world trade.

That statement, based on official data, has never been challenged. In the face of that official declaration that Germany can not compete here and can not even be a strenuous competitor with American dye producers in the world trade; in the face of a declaration by America's greatest dye manufacturer a year and a half ago and since the war that within six months American producers would meet Germany on more than even terms, and we are faced by a refusal of all dye companies to show their books; in the face of a disclosure that America exported over one hundred times as much as we received from Germany last year, or $35,000,000, in dyestuffs; in the face of official statements put in the Senate hearings that America need never depend on private dye companies for chemical aid in case of war, with the $100,000 lobby record when securing passage of the 1919 bill; in the face of all this and of the scandalous, ill-smelling record of the Chemical Foundation Co. and the Dye Industries Co., two irresponsible corporate agencies of the dye monopoly, what shall be said of letters sent by two Cabinet officers last week to the Senate Finance Committee simultaneously demanding that the dye embargo be extended without limit in the name of public defense?

Official reports issued from the War Department officials are to the contrary and to the effect that this Government will be ready to meet all its needs for chemical warfare now or in the future without depending on private aid. But where and when is war to be waged by the United States that we should coddle these great creatures of monopoly? How can this Nation save its face with the world by pleading for world disarmament on one hand and demanding an embargo on dyes with which to smother undeveloped enemies on the other—extending the grasp of international friendship while the left hand grips a weapon that is diabolical in its effect and proclaims to the world our complete surrender to uncivilized warfare? That is the appeal made to the American Congress by two distinguished Cabinet officers.

I do not care to review evidence submitted on which the House emphatically defeated any dye embargo, nor do I care to comment on the tremendous power of a dye lobby that even now swarms through the Capitol corridors and not long ago carried to the doors of the Foreign Affairs Committee its demand for validation of the fraudulent Chemical Foundation Co. contract, a contract that violated all principles of law, Federal or international. These are matters of official record, but I do contend that the shifting, flag-waving, dye monopoly, which has robbed the American people of many millions of dollars annually, shall no longer hold its tight grip on the country.

WE UNDERTAKE TO RESTORE CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT (PARTY PLATFORM).

The dye embargo measure is being fought before the Senate committee now, and every influence has been brought to bear by the dye interests that can be persuaded to enlist in their last stand. Even distinguished members of the Cabinet, as stated, have advised the Senate committee just what to do in the matter. The legislative methods of the dye lobby have been questioned, and efforts to enlist administrative support in trying to influence legislation after positive House action are an unwarranted intrusion into the legislative field that logically seeks to destroy the independence of judgment assured Congress under the Constitution.

I have listened to many of my Republican colleagues who unsparingly denounced Executive and administrative interference in legislative matters by the past administration. I have voiced my own protest in the past in this same place against usurpation of power by a former Executive. I believed then I was right, and since last election I have believed the overwhelming verdict of the country was largely based on opposition to such interference with legislation and with legislators who could not easily withstand official pressure.

May I diverge from the dye subject for a moment to offer a reminder of the not far-distant past? During the war usurpation of legislative control by President Wilson was declared by those on this side of the aisle to be insistent and growing. He assumed to administer the Executive rawhide to recalcitrant statesmen and denounced opponents of his legislative program in another body as the "willful twelve who represented nobody's opinions but their own." The lash was sharply applied to these twelve apostles of a constitutional right to express their judgment on matters of statecraft. It smarted when a thoughtless, sensational press, like chuckling schoolboys looking for favor from the teacher, joined in excoriating men who had been selected by twelve great Commonwealths of the country to speak for such States in the highest legislative body in the world.

INDEPENDENCE OF THE SENATE.

Within two years after that day the Senate selected as its own presiding officer one of the willful twelve to preside over its own deliberations, while to-day a waiting public learns from the tombs how a brilliant intellectual, with the premiership of the United States in his grasp and with world leadership before him, struck from his visiting list his closest friends, and through unbridled ambition lost all for the bubble reputation. Passed on the street to-day, with all his honors and ability, he commands only sympathy. The present Executive is not exclusive. On the contrary, he is intensely human, and will not make the mistake of isolation charged to his predecessor. Whatever mistakes of any character—and mistakes may be made—they are more likely to come from poor advice from trusted friends. President Harding has himself denounced Executive interference and may be depended upon not to countenance interference in legislation by subordinate members of his official family.

Efforts to distort meaning of my letter of protest against official pressure by two Cabinet members do not require any apology or explanation. I do not, and have not, questioned the motives or purpose of any such opposition coming from these distinguished men any more than I would question that of my colleagues who yielded to what they believed to be convincing arguments in favor of an embargo. I have protested against the implied direction of these officials on grounds stated.

In like manner statement of failure by the Department of Justice for over three weeks to acknowledge my letter asking that proceedings be begun to set aside the Chemical Foundation Co. contract is a statement that can not fairly be misconstrued. Failure to answer a proper courteous letter speaks for itself, but whatever action may be taken I assume will be based on its judgment of the merits of the case. No improper influence was suggested from refusal to act, but efforts by its organizers to prove the Chemical Foundation Co. is a philanthropic organization and that criticism of its purposes are unfounded are constantly urged on the public. Its influence is large and its attempt to prevent surrendering many million dollars of alien property seized will not fail at any step of the proceedings. I do not discount that influence and am content to place the matter before the Congress and the country, leaving responsibility for action with the duly authorized officials.

A BRIEF STATEMENT OF THE CHEMICAL FOUNDATION CASE.

I have presented a case wherein Government officials in positions of authority, months after the armistice, seized 4,500 alien patents, estimated at values upward of $10,000,000, and thereafter at private sale without competition confiscated or took title to themselves in the name of the Chemical Foundation Co., turning over to the Government $250,000 as an equivalent for the patents. I have set forth their own admissions to that effect taken from official hearings. In efforts to validate their fraudulent contract, I have alleged and offer to prove that the said company sought to secure from the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House a validation of Alien Property Custodian sales, some of which smell to heaven, and that this effort was attempted by parties who were then advertised as Chemical Foundation Co. officials. I have alleged what I believe is a fact, that this Chemical Foundation Co. has threatened suit against the Government to recover license fees paid on the patents before the pretended sale, and that the sum sought to be recovered from the Government is for more than the original amount turned in on the pretended sale.

Matters of international law involved by the seizure and confiscation for private purposes long after the armistice also enter into the proceedings, but the charge that the sale was fraudulent and knowingly entered into by ex-Government officials having control of the properties seized and sold is again reiterated. The record has been presented to the House and to the proper Government prosecuting officer.

I believe that the exceptional care and duty placed upon a trustee in charge of property has been flagrantly violated by men who were placed in governmental positions of exceptional responsibility in the Alien Property Custodian's office, and that apart from the legal aspect of the case justice demands that full restitution be made to the Government with such further proceedings as may be warranted.

This in part is only one angle of the dye monopoly embargo, but to my mind it is a matter that calls for action. It is the cause of extraordinary dye lobby activities and of the exercise of official influence past and present which surrounds dye legislative methods that spent $100,000 in passing a recent dye bill through the House, and is a public disgrace that can only be wiped out by vigorous legal prosecutions.

THE DYE EMBARGO IN THE HOUSE.

Mr. Chairman, a word in conclusion may not be amiss. The defeat of a dye embargo in the House is of more significance than may appear on the surface, although it paved the way for defeat of a bad measure in both branches of Congress.

Standing by itself the dye embargo was of little importance compared with other large legislative questions, excepting that it involved a matter of principle through cringing submission by the American Congress to a notoriously selfish monopoly. That monopoly demanded a continued war-time strangle hold on the textile industries of the country and of far more consequence a fastened grip on the throats of the American people. It was open surrender to a powerful mushroom dye syndicate that paved the way to similar vicious legislation when demanded by other interests.

The House vote of 402 cast on July 21 was nearly a record vote and reaches about 95 per cent of the actual total membership. The recorded vote was 209 to 193, or 16 majority against an embargo. I have been informed that a majority of 25 or more was assured if needed on that same vote. Of the majority votes cast, 113 were Democrats and 96 were Republicans, who voted without direction and were nearly evenly divided. Practically all the Republican Party "leaders" passed through the tellers in favor of a dye embargo, or were so recorded later. They led a strong minority to defeat. Leadership may be a fair explanation for two-thirds of the vote cast for the dye embargo. Remembering the unprecedented action of Cabinet officers who have urged passage of an embargo and of House leaders we may well marvel at the situation and ask what influence directed that vote and why? Leadership that does not lead right may well be challenged, and when that leadership somersaulted within 18 months on its official record in the House on a dye embargo and then asked Republicans of the House to follow like a flock of sheep, the climax was reached.

WHAT IS PUBLIC SENTIMENT ON THE DYE MONOPOLY?

We are elected as officials to reflect the sentiment of the people we represent. What is that sentiment? Is it for the dye monopoly? Is it to continue the strangle hold of un-American embargo? Is it for a bunch of men who, under the hypocritical cloak of a foundation sold to themselves at a comparative song millions of dollars worth of property while parading as patriotic Government officials; men who are now threatening suit against that same Government to-day in an effort to recover more loot and who have striven to reach the inner sanctum of a great committee on the peace resolution in order to give standing to their fraudulent contract?

What is the sentiment of the country, of the people we represent, on that subject to-day? I quote from probably the greatest commercial authority in the country, the New York Journal of Commerce, in order to give the viewpoint of business men on the embargo proposition. Next, I will quote from presumably the greatest regular Democratic journal of the country, the New York World, on the same embargo scheme. Next, I will quote from the greatest independent Democratic journals of the country that editorially exert a powerful influence on public sentiment because of their eminently strong writers and that publish papers reaching over 2,000,000 people daily, while last but not least in influence I will quote from the Economist, the voice of the American Protective Tariff League, that for nearly two years has fought this iniquitous embargo, for the reason that it violates every principle of protection and would surrender the people to the hard grip of a recognized monopoly.

No better expression of the sentiment of the country need be asked than from these journals, all of recognized great influence in their respective fields of service. Many others could be quoted to the same effect, while only one or two Pecksniffian monopoly mouthpieces of mud-slinging tendencies will be found to the contrary. Of little influence in their old home town, and of less influence in Congress, they have none at all, and do not speak or know the sentiment of the country. Their position is always evidence of what not to do, whereas the journals I have named, second to none in the country, and from which I briefly quote, are known to carry a circulation of many millions every week and to express fairly accurately the trend of public sentiment:

[Editorial from Journal of Commerce, New York City, Aug. 9, 1921.]
PUSH THE DYE PROBE.

The charges brought by Representative FREAR, of the Ways and Means Committee, against the Chemical Foundation Co. should be probed to the bottom without delay for the justification of those accused and to satisfy a skeptical public opinion.

The country needs a well-established chemical industry for national defense; it is willing that reasonable consideration should be given its builders in view of their vast outlays during the war; it is also willing that a moderate protective tariff should be allowed to American dye makers to meet foreign competition, if necessary. But there are many dyes which can not be made in this country, and American buyers should be free to secure these wherever they can. Any attempt to form a dye monopoly, backed by tariff or embargo, would be an imposition upon the public and should be defeated. If legislative favors of monopolistic nature are to be given to the dye industry, other supplicants can ask for like favors. Nothing would do more to revive the tariff scandals of previous administrations than to grant unnecessary favors to any giant industries which ought to be able to stand on their own feet. Anticapitalists and radicals of all sorts could find no better argument for reviving their old attacks than a reactionary step in the direction of tariff monopoly. Surely the lessons of the past have not been forgotten. Parties and policies have been ruined more than once by unwise tariff legislation.

[Editorial from the New York World, New York City, Aug. 9, 1921.]
CLOAK-ROOM GOVERNMENT.

If it is true, as Representative FREAR charges, that there is a dye monopoly in the United States and that this monopoly has gone so far in its efforts to influence legislation that it has approached three Cabinet officers with favorable results, the country would like to see an inquiry into the industry with especial reference to its activities in the lobbies. The dye interests, having bought the seized German patents from the Alien Property Custodian at a price which seems ridiculously out of proportion to their value, now ask of Congress, with the written approval of Secretaries Denby and Weeks, not of merely a high tariff on imported dyes but an absolute embargo.

"No invisible government has ever shown more brazen effrontery," says Mr. FREAR, "than this dye monopoly." Judging by the results so far obtained, the statement is probably correct. Because of the immense importance of chemical products in time of war, the corporations in possession of the German patents should be allowed to develop without the slightest risk of competition from abroad, according to the Secretaries of War and the Navy. But there are few products which are not essential in time of war. If Congress is to regard industry as a preparation for war, there might as well be an embargo on steel, copper, rubber, cotton, and everything else. The argument is laughable.

What has happened to the report, accepted some few weeks ago by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, authorizing a subcommittee of that body to look into charges that the dye manufacturers had organized as a monopoly and that they had "employed agents, attorneys, and lobbyists to influence Congress in behalf of special legislation in the interest of such monopoly"? Where is this subcommittee and what has it done?

[Editorial page of the New York, Chicago, Boston, Washington, and San Francisco Hearst papers.]

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE DYE TRUST—IT DIDN'T GET THE EMBARGO IT DEMANDED.

(Copyright, 1921, Star Co.)

The Dye Trust got its tariff, and that is all right. But the Dye Trust didn't get the embargo it wanted. And that is all right, too. The Dye Trust will be right back in Washington, lobbying for reconsideration, and it must be watched every minute.

The basis of the Dye Trust is the Chemical Foundation. The Chemical Foundation is one of those organizations which used the camouflage of excessive patriotism to shield its operations for profit. To begin with, the assets of the Chemical Foundation were 4,500 patents and several hundred trade-marks seized by the Alien Property Custodian. The Alien Property Custodian handed the valuable German property over to a corporation, which consisted of his assistant and subsequent successor, Francis A. Garvan, as president, and five members of the sales committee of the custodian's department—George L. Ingraham, Otto T. Bannard, Cleveland H. Dodge, B. Howell Criswold, Jr., and Ralph Stone.

As the advisory sales committee, these gentlemen led the Alien Property Custodian to sell the chemical patents to themselves and to Mr. Garvan, then assistant custodian. Acting upon this unselfish and patriotic advice, the Alien Property Custodian patriotically sold the patents and trade-marks to his advisers for $250,000, though they were worth many times that.

Having thus patriotically obtained the goods, the patriotic organizers, who had incorporated under a Delaware charter—Delaware permitting incorporators to do anything to stock issues short of murder—proceeded to put out $400,000 of preferred stock, patriotically keeping the voting power in the common stock and imposing this in a voting trust, consisting of the five patriotic sales advisers who had recommended the sale of the patents to themselves and Mr. Francis A. Garvan.

The Chemical Foundation now has the impudence to ask Congress to put an embargo on all dyes and make the Dye Trust an absolute monopoly—on the ground of patriotic duty!

The Dye Trust's arguments are as suspicious as its patriotism. In one breath it claims that the whole business of dyes is less than $25,000,000 annually, so a monopoly couldn't hurt much, and in the next breath claims that the dye business is the master key to $2,000,000,000 worth of business, so that if Germans are permitted to sell dyes in our markets they can either compel the payment of enormous profits or else choke our industries to death. To this they add that unless the Dye Trust is given an absolute monopoly of the dye business its members will lose $450,000,000 investment.

The Dye Trust should send its mathematicians to the cobbler shop. Their arithmetic is full of holes and needs half-soling, at least.

We congratulate Representative FREAR and the other Members who knocked the dye embargo out of the House tariff schedules. The time has come to put an end to these schemes of exploitation, cloaked in the garb of and disgracing the name of 100 per cent Americanism.

[Editorial from the American Economist, July 29.]

THE DEFEAT OF THE DYE EMBARGO.

The American Economist is much pleased at the defeat in the House of Representatives of the embargo on dyes and other chemicals derived from coal tar, as proposed by Representative LONGWORTH. There is no good reason why this one industry should be singled out to be the recipient of especial advantages not accorded to other and more important industries. It is entitled to adequate tariff protection, as are all domestic competitive industries, but it is not entitled to a monopoly, nor is any other industry. An embargo would lead to price-fixing and to profiteering. That this is true is shown by the fact that such has been the result of the war embargo on chemicals and dyes.

One of our great grounds for objection to embargo has been the fact that it would destroy the protective tariff system to the great detriment of our chemical and industrial supremacy. Instead of placing domestic industry on a fairly competitive basis with foreign industry, it would destroy all foreign competition and lead to a riot of profiteering. Adequate protection does not lead to profiteering; embargo inevitably does.

To Representative JAMES A. FREAR, of Wisconsin, we extend our hearty congratulations for the masterly way in which he led the opposition to the embargo system to decisive victory. We also congratulate the Republicans and Democrats who so manfully stood against such odds and voted in the interests of their constituents, rather than in the interest of a profiteering trust. Like the Good Shepherd in the parable, we weep over the lost sheep among the Republicans who have wandered afar on the "mountains wild and bare," and we shall earnestly seek to have them returned in safety to the protectionist fold, so that they may not be destroyed by that ravening wolf, Monopoly, parading in sheep's clothing, Embargo, further disguised as patriotism.

The following letter was sent with accompanying testimony to the Department of Justice, with request that prosecution be had against the Chemical Foundation Co. to set aside its $250,000 sale by Government officials to themselves:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18, 1921.

HON. HARRY M. DAUGHERTY,
Attorney General, Department of Justice,

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Herewith please find House Resolution No. 148, also extract from testimony taken from hearings on H. R. 2706, Ways and Means Committee, June 18 to July 18, 1919, and on H. R. 8078, Senate Finance Committee, December 8, 1919, to January 12, 1920.

The resolution sets forth specifically that Francis P. Garvan, Joseph Choate, Jr. (and Ramsey Hogue), were employed by the United States Government as officials in the Bureau of Investigation, office of the Alien Property Custodian, in charge of alien patents. That several months after signing of the armistice and about February or March, 1919, they negotiated a sale by the Government and prepared necessary documents for a conveyance to themselves and their associates at private sale and at a nominal purchase price of 4,500 alien chemical patents. The pretended sale was made to the Chemical Foundation Co., a private company, of which they were organizers and principal officers, and was made without notice to the public, without any competition, and for a consideration of $250,000, although reputable men declare two of the 4,500 patents were worth $10,000,000, and the others, though of less value, would add to that total.

Reference is made to original public documents for additional evidence regarding the chemical company, of which company Mr. Garvan was president while serving as Alien Property Custodian. After the sale and as such public officer by public acts he confirmed the sale previously made to him and his associates when they were in charge of the Bureau of Investigation and while he and they were substantially in control of such property. Extracts of testimony herewith disclose the public position of the parties and activities when negotiating the sale on the part of the Government to themselves. Absence of substantial consideration will be furnished by reputable witnesses. A refusal of Alien Property Custodian Garvan to file any report of his administration as such officer while at the same time he was and now is president of the private Chemical Foundation Co. will give an understanding of methods pursued.

Attempted justification of the sale is offered by saying that the alien patents are held by this private company for the benefit of stockholders in dye companies who are privileged to use such patents on payment of royalties or licenses at prices fixed by the chemical company. Though no part of the resolution, I am informed that this private chemical company has threatened suit against the Government for royalties claimed to have been paid the Government before such pretended sale of patents was made, thereby indicating its general purposes and character. I have charged in the resolution that the pretended sale was fraudulent and simply amounted to a seizure of such alien patents by such public officers and holding of the property to their own private use. That conclusion is inevitable from the testimony.

A violation of a well-known principle of international law occurred when these alien patents belonging to private parties were seized long after the armistice was signed, not as a war measure nor for protection or aid of the Government, but seized for use of a private company by public officers who secured the transfer and possession to themselves for private purposes as stated. The legal responsibility of the Government to the real owners of the patents presumably extends to a return of the patents, or, in any event, their equivalent value. Apart from the violation of principles of international law here involved occurs responsibility by the Government for alien property taken over by these public officials to themselves in a private capacity at a private sale practically without consideration.

The Chemical Co., I am informed, in order to foreclose the Government's right of recovery, recently sought through its officers to have inserted in the peace resolution a provision validating all sales by the Alien Property Custodian, which effort failed through the watchfulness of committee members. It is represented that the Chemical Foundation, through its stockholders, represents a majority of the chemical interests of the country, and by its absolute control of patents and royalties the public is without protection from its exactions. Its power rests with the patents fraudulently acquired, and if the sale is set aside the other question largely will be settled by action. Probability of securing an early expression from the House on the resolution seems doubtful because of proposed recess, and it was offered only to secure added support for your action in the matter.

Your public announcement that your department would vigorously prosecute fraudulent sales made during or since the war has been hailed by the country as a vindication of its judgment last November. As a member of the House investigating committee, I aided in securing evidence which I believe warrants prosecutions and recoveries by the Government in different cases disclosed, but in all the thousands of pages of testimony taken by the House committee I know of no case that presents such a flagrant violation of official duties by men who served on both sides of a contract. From their own undisputed testimony these men violated not alone ethics of public trust and confidence but acted in defiance of well-established principles of law, and also of international law, that directly affects the good name of our Government with all other nations of the world.

The great power and influence of the chemical monopoly will be thrown against any effort to compel restitution to the Government of many millions of dollars in property, for which the stockholders paid only 2 per cent value, and this same power which sought to force validation by Congress of this sale, and spent over $100,000 for lobbying in order to secure dye legislation, will attempt to reach administrative as well as legislative action.

The public complains over punishment of "little fellows," and those skeptical of motives often question prosecutions that may serve political ends, but the case presented by the resolution is bipartisan in character; it challenges the confidence of the people in the integrity of public officials; and it affects prominent ex-officials who set an example of public irresponsibility before their subordinates and before the country.

Any information I may have is at your command, and I trust you will do all in your power to vindicate the law and to right the wrong that in its attempts to validate and "cover up" has reached even to the doors of legislative halls. Such efforts to foreclose the Government's right to inquire and to prosecute are as vicious and "indefensible" in character as was the original fraudulent sale.

Very sincerely, yours,

JAMES A. FREAR.

This letter written July 18 and received the next day by the Department of Justice has not been acknowledged nor has any further information been asked by that department from the one offering to furnish any needed data.

The following letter carries its own tale of protest against administrative interference with a plain legislative proposal now pending in Congress:

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 6, 1921.

Senator BOIES PENROSE,

Chairman Committee on Finance,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: To-day's press states that dye interests now seeking to secure a three-year dye embargo from your committee have persuaded Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of Navy Denby to write your committee urging continuance of the war dye embargo for an indefinite period, in order that this country may be provided with chemicals in case of war. If correctly reported, this preposterous claim is only another evidence of the enormous power of the dye monopoly headed by the Chemical Foundation Co., which has already sought to exercise its influence on three Cabinet members, including Attorney General Daugherty, who thus far has failed to acknowledge or act on my letter to him of July 18, copy of which is hereto attached. No invisible government has ever shown more brazen effrontery than this dye monopoly, which was driven to cover in the House on July 21 by a vote of 209 to 193, including in the majority vote 96 Republicans and 113 Democrats. I am sure a much larger majority would have been recorded had the vote been needed, and I do not believe any dye embargo proposal can pass the House, whatever action may be taken elsewhere.

We may well be concerned over the power of these dye interests that reach to three Cabinet officers in their effort to perpetuate their present exclusive power in this country. Not one line of evidence in all the hearings, I am informed, suggests that this Government depended upon or received aid from any dye establishment in the country during the recent war, and the argument that we should preserve this half billion domestic dye monopoly, with its excessive prices and enormous power because of approaching war and through need of private protection, is both preposterous and ridiculous. Secretaries Weeks and Denby are reported by the press to have written your committee simultaneously that the dye embargo should be continued for that reason. If so, they certainly had little information on which to base such statements, and caution is thrown to the winds when dye interests bring these two letters to your committee on the same day to influence committee action. I have no fears of their influence, either on your committee or on the body you represent, but I do express concern over any power that can secure such letters from such high sources, and more important that apparently has endeavored to smother efforts made to have the Government bring legal proceedings in order to set aside the Chemical Foundation Co. sale. Failure for practically three weeks to receive any reply from the Attorney General is an unusual oversight by the department that represents the Congress as well as the administration, and it is impossible to believe failure to acknowledge receipt of an official courteous letter was due to an oversight.

In my letter to Attorney General Daugherty, as you will note from the attached copy, I have stated that Francis P. Garvan and Joseph Choate, Jr., while employed by the Government in the Alien Property Custodian's office in positions of control, conceived the idea of seizing alien patents then on file in the Patent Office and taking them over to themselves and their associates in a private capacity under the name of the Chemical Foundation Co., a Delaware corporation. They did this several months after the armistice was signed and seized some 4,500 patents, worth $10,000,000 or more, taken over at "private sale" for $250,000 or about 2 per cent of the actual value of such patents.

A copy of the testimony taken at congressional hearings attached hereto contains undisputed admissions of this fact by the parties who negotiated the sale to themselves. Thereafter I am informed and evidence will be produced, if need be, that they sought to validate this fraudulent sale by having a general provision in the Versailles treaty and after rejection of the treaty by the Senate, these same interests, acting through a prominent official of the present administration, who was advertised as vice president of the Chemical Foundation Co., again sought to secure validation of such contracts by insertion in the peace resolution recently passed by Congress. This effort was defeated by members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, as set forth in letter to Mr. Daugherty hereto attached.

I do not speak of the international aspect of seizing such patents long after the war was closed, because that is a matter which carries its own argument, but the astounding proposition of covering up this alleged sale made by these public officials to themselves while apparently representing the Government is now further emphasized by threats from the Chemical Foundation Co. to sue the Government for a large amount of money, reputed to reach a half million dollars or more, in an effort to secure license payments made to the Government before the alleged sale.

The character of this dye embargo effort that put through the House last session a bill drawn by Mr. Choate, according to information in my possession, and paid $100,000 in lobby fees suggests what power lies behind these interests which obtains indorsements from high administrative officers, and apparently prevents action upon the facts stated. The dye embargo can not be put through Congress, in my judgment, but these interests should be called to account and the fraudulent contract set aside in order to protect the Government's interests, and I ask your cooperation in trying to secure prosecution on such charges as are contained in my letter to Mr. Daugherty.

I am sending copies of this letter to the President and to others who would seem to speak with authority on matters herein set forth.

Very sincerely,

JAMES A. FREAR.

Mr. Chairman, as a concluding word of commendation of opposition by 209 Members of Congress to a dye embargo during times of peace, I offer one of the letters received this day typical of hundreds that have come expressing opposition to the same dye embargo.

THE AMERICAN PROTECTIVE TARIFF LEAGUE,

New York City, N. Y., August 14, 1921.

HON. JAMES A. FREAR, M. C.,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. FREAR: Again we want to congratulate you regarding the defeat of dye monopoly embargo in the House of Representatives on July 21, 1921.

All will concede that your exposure of the methods of the Dye Trust and your admirable handling of the question in the House Republican caucus and on the floor of the House of Representatives were responsible for its defeat.

Your continuing opposition in seeking prosecution of the Chemical Foundation through the Attorney General and your follow up of the Dye Trust's campaign in the United States Senate are also to be commended in the highest terms.

We have opposed this un-American policy of embargo for over two years, and it is only within the past few weeks and during your campaign that the country has been aroused to the enormity of the demands of the dye circle.

Leading newspapers are now demanding investigation which is promised in the United States Senate and some of them recommend prosecutions.

We are astounded that members of the Cabinet should leave their "executive" position and attempt to interfere with the "legislative," as they have by their recent letters to the Finance Committee of the United States Senate in favor of embargo. The honorable Secretaries must be obsessed by the misinformation of the galaxy of paid lobby lawyers or paid "experts" representing the dye interests.

We do not believe that the members of the Cabinet who have thus attempted to interfere with legislative action realize the general sentiment of the people against the well developed dye monopoly established under military embargo and now continued in the emergency tariff, which expires on August 27.

Fortunately Representatives in Congress and the United States Senators respond to the sentiment of the country more quickly than appointive officers, and I sincerely hope and pray that the Congress will definitely decide to eliminate embargo from all legislation.

We are very glad to tell you in reply to our letter of July 18 to all Representatives in Congress asking them to vote against embargo only one Representative criticized our position. We conclude from this that even those who voted for embargo were influenced to do so against their better judgment.

Very truly, yours,

WILBUR F. WAKEMAN,
Treasurer and General Secretary.

The following letters speak for themselves:

JUNE 29, 1921.

HON. THOMAS W. MILLER,

Alien Property Custodian,

Sixteenth and P Streets NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. MILLER: Will you please send me a copy of the report of Mr. Francis P. Garvan while Alien Custodian? I understand such report was prepared, and would like to have a copy if so.

Thanking you very much for your kindness, I am,

Very sincerely,

JAMES A. FREAR.

ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN,

Washington, D. C., July 6, 1921.

HON. JAMES A. FREAR,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN: In reply to your request of June 29, 1921, you are advised that Mr. Francis P. Garvan made no formal report while Alien Property Custodian.

Very truly, yours,

GEORGE E. WILLIAMS,
Managing Director.

Telegram read to the Republican conference July 6:

NEW YORK, July 6, 1921.

HON. JAMES A. FREAR,

Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.:

To your colleagues to-night please say that it is the firm conviction of the executive committee of the American Protective Tariff League, after careful survey and consultation with conservative party business men, that approval of dyestuff embargo will lose every doubtful congressional district next year. That embargo has no place in American fiscal system, and especially in any tariff act.

WILBUR F. WAKEMAN,
Treasurer and General Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to discuss the dye schedule. I desire to make some remarks for the benefit of the Committee on Ways and Means, reporting this bill, as to the economy claims that are now being presented to the public daily. The claims that are now being made by the executive departments and the Congress claiming reductions in expenditures heretofore authorized for this year are nothing but political bunk. This administration led the people to believe that with the establishment of the Budget Bureau we were through with deficiencies, and the Congress believed it. And yet in the first 20 days of this fiscal year an estimate has been submitted by the Director of the Budget Bureau, with the approval of the President, asking for $125,000,000 for the Shipping Board. Since then I am informed other deficiency estimates have been submitted. As to the estimate submitted by the Director of the Budget Bureau for the Shipping Board, the Committee on Appropriations has reported a bill recommending an appropriation of only $48,500,000 instead of the $125,000,000 which the Director of the Budget said was necessary. If the Congress follows the Director of the Budget Bureau it will take $76,500,000 more from the Treasury of the United States than the Committee on Appropriations says should be taken, and if it does not follow the Director of the Budget in the very first estimate submitted by him, then why should we continue a bureau that seeks to have the Congress make such an extravagant appropriation? Why not abolish it and save the money?

One establishment under the executive department where economy was to be practiced is the Shipping Board. Why, the press tells us that when my good friend from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] and other gentlemen went to see the President the other afternoon they told the President that in the $350,000,000 to be saved out of this year's funds $25,000,000 would be saved out of the Shipping Board's funds. I am told that the figures were given out by the Republican leader, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL], and in the face of the fact that the Committee on Appropriations has reported a bill to provide for a deficiency of $48,000,000 for the Shipping Board, they would have the Congress and the country believe that out of the board's current funds they are going to save $25,000,000. If they have so much that they can save $25,000,000 this year, then you should never pass that deficiency bill.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. No; I can not yield.

The chairman of the Shipping Board said he was going to economize, but he informed the House in his testimony that he has created three new jobs, two vice presidents to receive $35,000 each per year, another one to receive $25,000 a year, and a special assistant, another new office, at the rate of $20,000 a year. Well, if he had not been pledged to economy, the good Lord only knows what he would have paid; and the general counsel told the Congress or its committee that he had started negotiations with the highest priced lawyers in the country to represent the board, making absolutely no contracts as to the fees to be paid them, and your committee feels called upon to bring in a special provision restricting him from entering into any such contract without first receiving the approval of the Attorney General, and I hope the Congress will adopt it. But that is economy from one bureau which is counted on to save $25,000,000 while asking for a deficiency of $125,000,000, and you are giving them $48,000,000.

The Director of the Bureau of the Budget, Gen. Dawes, is all right. He can save more money in the newspapers in a single week than the Government could spend in a year. Of all appointments made by the President I certainly approved of none more than his, and while I am losing some of my optimism I still have some little hope. I am for him because he makes me feel good in the morning when I read of the saving that he has effected the day before. Why, he wrote the President a letter on July 19 and he showed the Chief Executive of the Nation that in 19 days he had saved $112,000,000. Handing that statement to the press, he said that was doing pretty well for 19 days. I agree. That is at the rate of $6,000,000 a day, and if continued he would save $2,000,000,000 this year, and make almost criminal the action of the Ways and Means Committee in reporting the tax bill they are now framing. But if you look at the items of this proposed saving of $112,000,000, the very largest item in it was the Treasury Department, $30,343,149, that he was going to save this year from the funds available for the Treasury. So he wrote the President. But on that same day, July 19, 1921, the budget officer of the Treasury Department wrote a letter to the head of every bureau in the Treasury Department complaining that in their responses to budget circular No. 1 they had not saved enough money, that an analysis showed that the total amount to be saved from all bureaus in the Treasury Department amounted to but $2,000,000, and to offset this he said, "You have submitted to us estimates for deficiencies amounting to $40,000,000." Well, if he was right, why should the Director of the Budget write the President that the Treasury Department was going to save $30,000,000 out of the funds appropriated for this year?

If it is correct that they are going to save $30,000,000, then why should the budget officer of the Treasury on that very same day, July 19, write to the heads of the various bureaus in the Treasury Department that their total savings amounted to only $2,000,000? That statement caused me to make inquiry. When I heard that, I lost confidence in the statements which had previously been made, which had given me so much pleasure each morning as I thought of the savings of the previous day.

Director Dawes told us that he was going to save $10,000,000 in the Navy Department. Of course, he is not going to do that, and my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER] knows it.

Mr. BUTLER. He knows how we are going to save some.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. We passed the naval appropriation bill, and while we did our best to reduce it, it still appropriated $410,000,000, and I am satisfied that the $10,000,000 they told him they would save is money that has been available and simply will not be spent this year but will not be turned back into the Treasury; and when they submitted to him the estimated savings of $10,000,000 I wonder how much they estimated their deficiencies at, because I know that he must have received such estimates, and I am going to introduce a resolution to-day asking him to give the Congress all the information he has as to the items making up this $112,000,000 savings, and also the estimated deficiencies, because we ought to have that information now and not at the end of the fiscal year.

Now, let us take another item. The Department of Agriculture is estimated to save $1,687,000. A good part of that is a paper saving. For instance, the fund for eradicating the foot-and-mouth disease. It has been available since 1916. If there is no epidemic, it is not used. If there is one, every dollar may be used.

He claimed the War Risk Bureau would save $16,000,000. Yet, on the same day that he issued this statement to the President, the budget officer of the Treasury Department, in his letter to the heads of the various bureaus of the Treasury Department, stated that the War Risk Bureau had estimated for a deficiency in response to budget circular No. 1. Then why should the Director of the Budget write the President that there would be a saving? Have they been "putting one over" Director Dawes?

But while I have lost confidence in that saving, I must say that when I read this week of the visit of the Ways and Means Committee to the President, that the Republican leader announced to the President that he was going to save not the miserable $112,000,000 claimed by Gen. Dawes but $350,000,000, I know they convinced the President that Gen. Dawes was a mere piker in the game of economy, because, while he proposed to save only $112,000,000, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] could save $350,000,000. Mr. MONDELL enumerated his savings. Instead of saving the pitiful $15,000,000 claimed by the Director General for the War Department, he is going to save $50,000,000 in that department. I will say that my information is that they are going to make a legitimate saving of $15,000,000 in that department. In the Navy Department, Mr. MONDELL said we were going to save $100,000,000 instead of the trifling sum of $10,000,000 claimed by Director Dawes.

And the Republican leader had the nerve to estimate that he is going to save $25,000,000 out of current expenses of the Shipping Board, when the Appropriations Committee has already reported a bill to provide for a deficiency of $48,500,000. He said he was going to save $25,000,000 in the Department of Agriculture. Bless your heart, the entire appropriation is only $33,000,000, and if he saved that much he would destroy the entire organization of that department. But it is rumored that he now says he was going to get this $25,000,000 out of the appropriation of Federal aid for roads, when everybody knows that we made no appropriation for roads for this fiscal year, and the only money available at all for roads is money made available for the last fiscal year. Under the law, it was allotted within 60 days after the beginning of the fiscal year—before September 1, 1920. It was allotted to the States, and it can not be taken back. We could not take it back if we wanted to, because some of the States have used their allotments. Others have not; but if you should take it back from some States it would be unfair; it would violate the spirit of the law that the funds should be equitably distributed as between the various States. I believe it would violate the language as well as the spirit of the law.

It must be clear that these claims are absurd. When all deficiencies are in, the expenditures for this year will reach the sum estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who seems to be lacking in political cupidity and tells the truth as he sees it.

Time will prove that all these claims of reduced expenditures are nothing but bunk. It is a smoke screen behind which the Republican Party intends to put over this scheme. They promised to reduce taxes and they have to do it. They should not cut the taxes without reducing the expenditures. They have not cut expenditures, so now they must pretend that they are making the cut. If they can put that over, they can justify a cut in taxation of $500,000,000. Then toward the end of the fiscal year there will be a deficit, and the Treasury will have to borrow money. That will depreciate the value of the Liberty bonds and raise interest rates generally; but the administration and leaders of Congress believe that the people can be fooled and that they will never know it; at least, they hope to get by with this scheme until after next election, and in the meantime they will in time of peace borrow money with which to pay the current expenses of the Government. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I will.

Mr. LONDON. Does not the gentleman believe that most of the people can be fooled most of the time? [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. The Republican Party proceeds on that theory. I advise my friend, Director Dawes, to get out of the game, for he has not studied the right political arithmetic. He should leave it to MONDELL. The gentleman from Wyoming has fooled them once and he may do it again. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I believe this extension of time provided for in this bill is important, and I hope the House will grant it. When the emergency tariff bill was passed, six months' limitation was provided for, but the operation of the bill relating to the dyestuff industry was limited to three months. It was thought at that time that the War Trade Board had the power to control this, but for safety three months was provided for in the bill. Now, it is found that the general tariff bill can not pass within three months' time from the date of the emergency tariff bill, and therefore this extension of time is highly important and I hope the resolution will pass. I was much interested in the statement of my good friend from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. He is always interesting and a good fellow, and he is talking about fooling the people. Well, the Democrats tried it for eight years, but at last the people found them out, and on the second of November last registered their objection to being fooled along that line any longer. He says that we are going to try it again. Let me tell you how we are going to try it—that is by cutting out $600,000,000 of taxes in our internal revenue law. There was brought over from the last administration a debt of $545,000,000 put upon the people of this country as the result of Democrats tampering with the railroads of this country for political reasons only. The full cost of that tampering was over $4,000,000,000, but $545,000,000 of that sum was unpaid. Now this administration is clothed with the responsibility of taking care of that debt in some way or other. It is a war baby, and the question is, Is it a proper thing to impose on the people right now taxes to meet that obligation created by the past administration in this matter? I say no.

Let me tell you, gentlemen, when the Democratic Party came into power in 1913 there was required $1,000,000,000 a year to pay the running expenses of this Government. When they went out of power it required more than $6,000,000,000 per year. When they came into power the debt of the country was $1,000,000,000, and when they went out of power it was $25,000,000,000.

Of course we had a great war which was largely responsible for that, but a very large portion of that money spent was criminally wasted. When they came into power there were 400,000 Government clerks, and when they went out of power there were 1,000,000. Pretty expensive for the American people! When the Democrats came into power the railroads were carrying freight for seventy-two one-hundredths of a cent per ton per mile, and when they went out of power the railroads were charging 1½ cents per ton per mile. Eighty-four per cent increase in freight rates created by Democratic folly of taking over the railroads for no other purpose except to get votes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. What are they charging now?

Mr. FORDNEY. The same rate.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Have they not been raised since they took back the roads?

Mr. FORDNEY. Not since the 4th of March. They could not have the gall to do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman two minutes more.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Does the gentleman say that private control of the railroads has not raised freight rates?

Mr. FORDNEY. Not since the 4th of March, and the gentleman knows it, if he knows anything about it, and he could find out by consulting the Interstate Commerce Commission as I have. Now, we find that during the Democratic administration they authorized the issuance of Government bonds, Treasury notes, and certificates of indebtedness, and what do we find? Deducting from the total public debt $10,000,000,000 which the Allies owe us we owe $14,000,000,000. What do you find? Seven billion eight hundred millions of that in short-time certificates due within 21 months. Do you think that is good business judgment? If you do, I do not.

You have unloaded upon the Republican Party this responsibility of paying 60 per cent of the total Government debts today, less what the foreign Governments owe us, all of it falling due in the next 21 months, and you expect us to pass a bill and tax the people of this country to do that and say well and good. Oh, no; it is a war baby, my dear friends, and you know it; and the indebtedness should be spread over a term of years instead of being paid this next year, and that is exactly what we are going to do. We are cutting the taxes by $600,000,000, and that means $6 for every man, woman, and child in this country, and they will hail that with delight when they learn it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. The gentleman has just spoken of what he claims was the waste and extravagance committed under the Democratic administration. Does not the gentleman know that under the Smith-Cummins law $631,000,000 were taken out of the Treasury and paid to the railroads?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, yes; I know that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. When nothing—

Mr. FORDNEY. I decline to yield any further.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. And did not the gentleman vote for it?

Mr. FORDNEY. And the gentleman knows that Congress did that because the gentleman's party had shouldered upon the people of this country that debt, and that must be paid.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Now—

Mr. FORDNEY. I decline to yield. The railroads were in fairly good condition when the gentleman's party took them over from private ownership, and when it turned them back to private ownership they were bankrupt, and the gentleman knows it.

The gentleman talks about no extravagance. Over in London, England, there were found in the office of the Shipping Board 400 clerks, with not work enough for 20, and a few days before the old Shipping Board went out of business here the secretary of the board put into office 80 Democrats at salaries ranging from $2,500 to $3,600 each a year, with not a blamed thing for any of them to do but to draw their pay. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, how much time remains?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas has seven minutes and the gentleman from Ohio six.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Is the gentleman from Texas going to use any more time?

Mr. GARNER. How much time have I?

The CHAIRMAN. Seven minutes.

Mr. GARNER. I do not know that I will—

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield me two or three minutes?

Mr. GARNER. I will yield the gentleman three minutes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, it is not in reference to this bill but in reference to the statement of the gentleman from Michigan I think, maybe, a statement clear cut ought to be made. He says, and the other gentleman who interrupted him said, and perhaps correctly, that the Government administration of railroad affairs under Mr. McAdoo and his successor cost this Government a million dollars a day by way of a deficit. I am willing to grant that. Then I want to say that during that time the railroads did function and carry freight. I want to say further that under the Republican bill, known as the Esch-Cummins bill, those railroads were turned back to the private owners and operated by the private owners in March, and that since that time the rates have been increased, as stated by my colleague [Mr. GARNER] or the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MOORE], from 20 to 40 per cent, and to-day the people of the United States are paying not $100,000,000 a day, but, as I said, they are paying more than $700,000,000 a year in increased freight rates, and no man can escape the fact that the railroads since Government control have cost the people of America far more in freight rates alone than they cost us in freight rates and deficits during Government control.

Mr. ANDREWS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I will yield.

Mr. ANDREWS. Did not President Wilson issue the proclamation returning the railroads to their owners?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Undoubtedly. President Wilson called on the Republican Congress to pass a proper law by which the railroads could be turned back to their owners. The Republican Congress dillydallied and delayed until finally he had to write a separate message and tell them that if they did not pass a law under which they could be returned he was going to return them anyhow on the 1st of March. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And under the stimulus of that second message a Republican Congress did pass the Esch-Cummins bill, and on the 1st of March they were turned over to the owners under that law. But what was the Esch bill? The bill first guaranteed the peak of high prices in profits to the railroads for six months, after the owners got them, and under that guaranty you first paid two or three hundred millions to the railroads, and then you passed another law calling for some more payments at once, and before you get through with it the Government will pay the roads on that six months' guaranty probably over a billion dollars.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I will.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. I want to say, as a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, that the Government had paid the railroads $631,000,000 under that guaranty, and in addition to that they have loaned them $300,000,000 and none of that has been returned. The railroads owe the Government—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas two minutes more.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. The railroads owe the Government $721,000,000. And in addition to that, we have to-day a bill before our committee, on which we are holding hearings, and which the Republican Party is proposing to put through in this Congress, authorizing the Treasury Department to let the railroads have $500,000,000, and all this in addition to the outrageous increase of freight rates and passenger fares, which has cost the American people millions.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Then, I want to say that if the railroads cost the people in deficits in operation a million dollars a day, or $365,000,000 a year, this Esch bill in guaranteeing the private owners the profits provided in that bill has cost the people twice that sum and more. This Republican bill has paid them the $600,000,000, and the other sums stated by my colleague from Mississippi; and in addition the people have been compelled to pay in raised rates and fares $700,000,000 or $800,000,000 a year more than they paid to the Government when the Government was operating them.

Mr. ANDREWS. Did not all this come out of the Federal control act as a logical result?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. The Federal control act, as every Republican in this House admitted by his vote, was necessary when it passed. The Esch-Cummins law was a concoction of Republican statesmanship after the war was over. That is the difference between the two. We had to take them over; you voted with us to do it. We administered them with such economy that they cost the people even by your say so only $1,000,000 a day, and you took them back and gave them to the railroads on such terms that they cost the people more than they did under Government control by $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 a day.

Mr. MADDEN. It was such an economy that it cost the people $4,600,000,000 more than it would have cost if the Government had not taken them over.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. The gentleman voted for the Government to take them over, and the statement he makes now is out of his head, and that is all. He is simply talking through his hat.

It ought to be clearly understood that the Esch-Cummins bill guaranteed to the railroad owners a profit for six months after they took them back equal to the average profits earned by them during the three years prior to their taking over by the Government, and these three years covered the highest earnings of these roads. It was under this monstrous guaranty that the roads have already collected of the Government the $631,000,000, as stated by the gentleman from Mississippi, and the returns are not yet all in. They are still claiming more.

This bill further required the Interstate Commerce Commission to permit the roads to fix such rates as would enable them to earn 5½ per cent net on their capital invested. Under this requirement the roads were given a free hand to raise their rates as high as they wanted to, and they have raised them so high that the traffic has been almost killed. People will not use the roads if they can help it. High freight rates have become one of the biggest factors in causing the stagnation of industry. The effrontery of the railroads in raising rates and making demands on the Government has no limits. They even sought to make the Government pay them for alleged inefficiency of the labor employed by them after the roads were turned back to them.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LONDON].

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Chairman, it is hardly fair to ask time of the Democratic leader, because I intend to criticize both parties. This quarrel between the Republicans and the Democrats as to who is responsible for the heavy burden of taxation is amusing.

Billions of dollars have been wasted during the war, as has been stated by the gentleman from Michigan. The administration was Democratic. I said some time ago that the Democratic stealing was of the petty larceny variety, while the grand larceny thieves were Republicans—the one-dollar a year men. I hope the Democrats will forgive me this reflection upon their ability.

Napoleon once wrote to the Directory:

Fellow citizens: I assume that you took it for granted that our commissaries would steal some money, but you also assumed that they would furnish some supplies to the army. They did the former but they did not do the latter.

The experience in the last war was that the supplies were abundant, but that the stealing was unlimited. One of the worst forms of robbing the Government was the furnishing of superfluous supplies. You are paying now for your vote for the war and you will be paying for many years to come. There is no use to evade your responsibility. When you voted for the war you voted to take the lives of the American boys, and also voted to waste the earnings of the American people. The responsibility is upon all of you who voted for the war.

Mr. ANDREWS. How much would you have saved for the National Treasury if you had managed the war?

Mr. LONDON. I voted against the war, and I would have saved every dollar.

Mr. ANDREWS. And where would America have been then? Mr. LONDON. Right here, and it would have been greater than it is to-day.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, though very little has been said by the representatives of the three parties here as to the merits of this bill, I shall occupy only a moment, because I think the House very thoroughly understands what is contemplated here to be done.

Every provision of the so-called Fordney emergency tariff act, except one, expires on the 27th day of November of this year. The provision relating to the importation of these coal-tar chemicals expires on the 27th of August. Now, suppose this bill is not passed; what will be the situation? No control by the Government is possible over unlimited importations, except the rates which would be in existence under the present tariff law. Those rates are confessedly inadequate. In fact, some of the most important coal-tar chemicals, dyes, medicinals, and others are actually on the free list. And it is easy to contemplate what might happen during the hiatus that will lapse between the 27th of August and the date at which the permanent tariff law will become effective. I do not agree with my friend from Texas [Mr. GARNER] that the snow will have begun to fly by that time. In fact, I believe that we will have enacted and the President will have signed a permanent tariff law by the 27th of November. And all this does is to make all of the provisions of that bill expire at the same time.

I wrote a day or two ago to the President of the United States, knowing his interest in this matter, both from its industrial standpoint and from its standpoint of necessary preparedness for the country, not only while he was a Member of the Senate but since he has become President, and I received to-day the following:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 10, 1921.

Hon. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My DEAR CONGRESSMAN LONGWORTH: I have your note calling my attention to the fact that the bill extending the provisions of the emergency tariff act relating to the protection of the American dye and chemical industry is to be before the House on the morrow. I am aware that the Secretary of the Treasury has already called the attention of your committee to the extreme desirability of extending this protective provision.

Surely we would be both unmindful and unjust if we failed in a suitable protection of this industry until the new and complete tariff revision act is made effective.

Very sincerely,

WARREN G. HARDING.

Now, if no gentleman desires to ask me any question, I ask that the bill be read under the 5-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subdivision (a) of section 501 of the dye and chemical control act, approved May 27, 1921, is amended by striking out the words "three months," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "ten months."

With a committee amendment, as follows:

On page 1, line 6, strike out "ten months" and insert in lieu thereof "six months."

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I heard the statement just made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH], that he thought the tariff bill would be signed and become a law before the 27th of November. Of course, if it is, this amendment, stating 6 months, instead of 10 months, would be all right. I do not want to interfere with the report of the Committee on Ways and Means. If this was a compromise in the committee—and I do not know whether it was or not—

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will say to the gentleman that I would be very glad if the bill as originally drawn had been favorably reported, but the members of the committee thought it might be wise to limit the period to the period of the Fordney emergency law.

Mr. MANN. Personally, I do not myself believe that there ought to be any opportunity given for large importations of dyestuffs under the existing tariff law. Of course, I am not going to oppose the recommendation of the committee. If the new tariff law becomes effective before the 27th of November, this extension is sufficient, and whenever the tariff law becomes effective it supersedes this law anyhow.

It would have seemed to me much wiser to have fixed the date beyond the 27th of November. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] says the snow will fly and fall before the tariff law is signed. He knows much more about that than I do, because the delay will necessarily come from the minority in the Senate. He may speak knowingly. There is no cloture rule in that body, and it is very easy to delay the final vote upon a bill in the Senate.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. And it is not improbable that delay may be had.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. I yield for information. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARNER. I wanted to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. MANN. Very well; I will yield for a question.

Mr. GARNER. Of course, if he will yield I can give the gentleman information. [Laughter.] Has the gentleman noticed in this morning's newspaper the fact that there was a bloc formed of Republican agricultural Senators from the West for the purpose of trying to get fair consideration for the products of the West? And does he not imagine those gentlemen will do something in the way of delay until they can get what they want?

Mr. MANN. No. The West has had fair consideration in the House, and the West will have fair consideration in the Senate. That will not cause a delay. The delay, if there is any, will come from the obstruction of the minority.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. MANN. I do not yield for a long debate.

Mr. GARNER. According to these gentlemen's statements this morning, they did not get fair play for the West in the House, so that they differ from the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Well, in the first place, I do not believe everything I see in the newspapers. The gentleman from Texas seems to accept as gospel everything that he sees in a newspaper.

Mr. GARNER. When you find it in the Washington Post I presume it is true.

Mr. MANN. Well, I assume that everything that I see in a newspaper is not absolutely correct. However, that does not affect this matter. I think 10 months would have been a wiser period than 6 months, because the period ends in any event when the new tariff bill becomes a law. I do not believe that it is wise to leave a lapse of time, but if this is a compromise in the committee of course I have no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk resumed and completed the reading of the bill.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the committee amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having under consideration the bill (H. R. 8107) to control importations of dyes and chemicals, had directed him to report the same back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 186, nays 91, not voting 153, as follows:

YEAS—186.

Ackerman	Elliott	Kissel	Olpp
Andrews	Evans	Kline, N. Y.	Parker, N. J.
Ansorge	Fairfield	Kline, Pa.	Patterson, Mo.
Appleby	Faust	Kopp	Patterson, N. J.
Arentz	Fenn	Kraus	Perkins
Atkeson	Fish	Kreider	Petersen
Bacharach	Focht	Larson, Minn.	Pringley
Beedy	Fordney	Lawrence	Purnell
Begg	Frear	Layton	Radcliffe
Benham	French	Lazaro	Ramseyer
Bird	Frothingham	Leatherwood	Ransley
Bixler	Gensman	Lineberger	Reavis
Blakeney	Gerner	Little	Reece
Bland, Ind.	Goodykoontz	Longworth	Rhodes
Bowers	Gorman	Lubring	Ricketts
Brooks, Pa.	Graham, Ill.	McArthur	Roach
Brown, Tenn.	Green, Iowa	McKenzie	Robertson
Burtness	Greene, Mass.	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Robison
Burton	Greene, Vt.	McLaughlin, Pa.	Rogers
Butler	Griest	McPherson	Rose
Cable	Hadley	MacGregor	Rosenbloom
Campbell, Kans.	Hardy, Colo.	Madden	Ryan
Campbell, Pa.	Haugen	Magee	Sanders, Ind.
Cannon	Hawley	Mann	Schall
Chalmers	Hays	Mapes	Shaw
Chandler, N. Y.	Herrick	Martin	Shelton
Chindblom	Hersey	Merritt	Shreve
Clouse	Hickey	Michener	Sinclair
Cole, Iowa	Hill	Miller	Sinnott
Colton	Himes	Mills	Smith, Idaho
Connell	Hoch	Millsbaugh	Smith, Mich.
Connolly, Pa.	Hogan	Mondell	Speaks
Coughlin	Houghton	Moore, Ill.	Sprout
Curry	Hukriede	Moore, Ohio	Strong, Pa.
Dale	Hull	Morgan	Summers, Wash.
Darrow	Ireland	Mott	Sweet
Denison	Jeffers, Nebr.	Mudd	Swing
Dowell	Jones, Pa.	Murphy	Temple
Dunbar	Kahn	Nelson, A. P.	Tilson
Dupré	Kelley, Mich.	Newton, Minn.	Timberlake
Dyer	Kelly, Pa.	Newton, Mo.	Towner
Echols	King	Nolan	Treadway
Edmonds	Kinkaid	Norton	Vestal

Walsh
Walters
Watson
Webster

White, Kans.
White, Me.
Winslow
Wood, Ind.

Woodruff
Woodyard
Wurzbach
Wyant

Young Zihlman

NAYS—91.

Almon
Aswell
Beck
Bell
Black
Bland, Va.
Blanton
Bowling
Box
Brand
Briggs
Buchanan
Bulwinkle
Byrnes, S. C.
Byrnes, Tenn.
Carew
Carter
Collier
Connally, Tex.
Cooper, Wis.
Crisp
Davis, Minn.
Davis, Tenn.

Deal
Drewry
Driver
Fisher
Flood Fulmer
Garner
Garrett, Tenn.
Garrett, Tex.
Griffin
Hammer
Hardy, Tex.
Harrison
Hayden
Huddleston
Jacoway
Jeffers, Ala.
Johnson, Ky.
Johnson, Miss.
Jones, Tex.
Keller
Kincheloe
Lampert

Lanham
Lankford
Lea, Calif.
Lee, Ga.
Logan
London
Lowrey
Lyon
McClintic
McDuffie
Mansfield
Moore, Va.
Nelson, J. M.
O'Brien
O'Connor
Oldfield
Oliver
Overstreet
Padgett
Park, Ga.
Parks, Ark.
Parrish
Quinn

Raker
Rankin
Rayburn
Rouse
Sanders, Tex.
Sandlin
Sears
Sisson
Smithwick
Steagall
Stedman
Summers, Tex.
Swank
Tague
Thomas
Tillman
Vinson
Ward, N. C.
Wilson
Wingo
Wise
Wright

NOT VOTING—153.

Anderson
Anthony Bankhead
Barbour
Barkley
Boies
Bond
Brennan
Brinson
Britten
Brooks, Ill.
Brooks, Wis.
Burdick
Burke
Burroughs
Cantrill
Chandler, Okla.
Christopherson
Clague
Clark, Fla.
Clarke, N. Y.
Classon
Cockran
Codd
Cole, Ohio
Collins
Cooper, Ohio
Copley
Cramton
Crowther
Cullen
Dallinger
Dempsey
Dickinson
Dominick
Doughton
Drane
Dunn
Ellis

Elston
Fairchild
Favrot
Fess Fields
Fitzgerald
Foster
Free
Freeman
Fuller
Funk
Gahn
Gallivan
Gilbert
Glynn
Goldsborough
Gould
Graham, Pa.
Hawes
Hicks
Hudspeth
Humphreys
Husted
Hutchinson
James
Johnson, S. Dak.
Johnson, Wash.
Kearns Kendall
Kennedy
Ketcham
Kiess Kindred Kirkpatrick
Kitchin
Klecza
Knight
Knutson
Kunz

Langley
Larsen, Ga.
Lee, N. Y.
Lehlbach
Linthicum
Luce
McCormick
McFadden
McLaughlin, Mich.
McSwain
Maloney
Mead
Michaelson
Montague
Montoya
Moore, Ind.
Morin
Ogden
Osborne
Paige
Parker, N. Y.
Perlman
Peters
Porter
Pon
Rainey, Ala.
Rainey, Ill.
Reber
Reed, N. Y.
Reed, W. Va.
Riddick
Riordan
Rodenberg
Rossdale
Rucker
Sabath
Sanders, N. Y.
Scott, Mich.
Scott, Tenn.

Siegel
Slomp
Snell
Snyder
Stafford
Steenerson
Stephens Stevenson
Stiness
Stoll
Strong, Kans.
Sullivan
Taylor, Ark.
Taylor, Colo.
Taylor, N. J.
Taylor, Tenn.
Ten Eyck
Thompson
Tinch
Tinkham
Tyson
Underhill
Upshaw
Valle
Vare
Voigt
Volk
Volstead
Ward, N. Y.
Wason
Weaver
Wheeler
Williams
Williamson
Woods, Va.
Yates

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota (for) with Mr. KITCHIN (against).

Mr. REBER (for) with Mr. GALLIVAN (against).

Mr. HICKS (for) with Mr. DOUGHTON (against).

Mr. PORTER (for) with Mr. COCKRAN (against).

Mr. PAIGE (for) with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas (against).

Mr. BROOKS of Illinois (for) with Mr. MONTAGUE (against).

Mr. FULLER (for) with Mr. KUNZ (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. ANTHONY with Mr. RIORDAN.

Mr. FREE with Mr. BARKLEY.

Mr. LUCE with Mr. DOMINICK.

Mr. OSBORNE with Mr. TEN EYCK.

Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Mr. VOLK with Mr. MCSWAIN.

Mr. STINESS with Mr. WOODS of Virginia.

Mr. SIEGEL with Mr. FAVROT.

Mr. HUTCHINSON with Mr. SULLIVAN.

Mr. LANGLEY with Mr. CLARK of Florida.

Mr. KIESS with Mr. STEVENSON.

Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. CULLEN.

Mr. DUNN with Mr. HUMPHREYS.

Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin with Mr. MEAD.

Mr. TAYLOR of New Jersey with Mr. LARSEN of Georgia.

Mr. MORIN with Mr. UPSHAW.

Mr. TINCER with Mr. TYSON.

Mr. WHEELER with Mr. GILBERT.

Mr. KNUTSON with Mr. KINDRED.

Mr. ANDERSON with Mr. WEAVER.

Mr. MONTOYA with Mr. BRINSON.

Mr. KNIGHT with Mr. DRANE.

Mr. WASON with Mr. FIELDS.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON with Mr. STOLL.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. RUCKER.

Mr. BURROUGHS with Mr. POU.

Mr. ELSTON with Mr. RAINY of Illinois.

Mr. WILLIAMSON with Mr. CANTRILL.

Mr. FREEMAN with Mr. HAWES.

Mr. GLENN with Mr. LINTHICUM.

Mr. KENNEDY with Mr. HUDSPETH.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington with Mr. SABATH.

Mr. GOULD with Mr. COLLINS.

Mr. THOMPSON with Mr. BANKHEAD.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. RAINY of Alabama.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. LONGWORTH a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

REIMPORTATION OF ARMY SUPPLIES.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of House joint resolution 183.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of a joint resolution which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read the title of House joint resolution 183, imposing a duty of 90 per cent on all goods exported from the United States for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces and its allied forces and which have been sold to any foreign Government or person, when reimported into the United States.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, pending the motion I should like to inquire of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] if we can come to an agreement as to the length of time for general debate?

Mr. GARNER. I will say to the gentleman from Oregon that I have requests for 40 minutes, in addition to what time I may want to use myself. I may want to make a statement concerning the merits of this bill, and I have requests from other gentlemen which will occupy 40 minutes.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the gentleman agree to 40 minutes on a side if I can accommodate him with five minutes of my time?

Mr. GARNER. That would give me only five minutes for myself.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Let us have an hour on a side.

Mr. GARNER. If the gentleman will agree to not exceeding an hour on a side, I am sure we can accommodate ourselves, and if the time is not used we can go on with the 5-minute debate.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the gentleman agree to 45 minutes on a side if I agree to accommodate him with five minutes?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. No; let us have an hour.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, when did this bill pass the committee? I never received any notification of the meeting.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not know about the notice that was sent to the gentleman, but there was a meeting called day before yesterday and the bill was reported then. Some of the Democratic Members were present. The meeting was formally called.

Mr. COLLIER. I will say to the gentleman that I was absent from my office at that time and did not receive notice of that meeting.

Mr. GARNER. Let me suggest to the gentleman from Oregon that we have an hour and forty minutes of debate, and that the gentleman take 40 minutes and give me an hour.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think the gentleman ought to accept the proposition which I have made.

Mr. GARNER. I do not know what the situation may develop.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will give the gentleman 50 minutes and my side 40 minutes.

Mr. GARNER. Fifty minutes for this side and 40 minutes for your side?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Reserving the right to object, it is now 10 minutes after 3. There is no reason why there should not be an hour on a side.

Mr. HAWLEY. Probably some gentleman on that side will demand a roll call on the bill, and that will keep us here until 6 o'clock.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Let us have an hour on a side.

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman from Tennessee is correct. I shall have to insist that the gentleman give me an hour on a side.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the gentleman agree to 50 minutes on a side, and I will yield to him 5 minutes out of my time?

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman does not look like a member of a certain race which is noted for driving close bargains, but he is showing considerable ability in that line. I think we ought to have an hour, because I may want 20 minutes of that time to discuss the bill, and I have requests from other gentlemen to discuss other matters which will take 40 minutes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the debate be limited to two hours, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HAWLEY] and one-half by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon is entitled to make the first proposition.

Mr. HAWLEY. Then, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the time be limited to two hours—one hour to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] and one hour to be controlled by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon asks unanimous consent that the time for general debate on this bill be limited to two hours, one hour to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] and one hour by himself. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. J. Res. 183, imposing a duty of 90 per cent on all goods exported from the United States for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces and its allied forces and which have been sold to any foreign government or person when reimported into the United States, with Mr. McARTHUR in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read.

The committee amendments were read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HAWLEY] is recognized for one hour.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I shall very briefly state the purpose of the resolution. Upon the cessation of hostilities in Europe, which came rather unexpectedly, the United States had in various European countries very large quantities of supplies which it had shipped to different ports and interior points for the support of our Armies and the armies of our allies. At the conclusion of the war the question arose as to what disposition should be made of this property. There was about $1,700,000,000 worth of it in France. There were very considerable quantities in other countries in Europe. Three considerations were involved in the question of its disposition. If we brought it back to the United States, it would require very considerable expenditures in freight and the employment of a very large number of persons, and would possibly interfere with the return of our troops from foreign shores. The second consideration was that the French Government advised us that if we sold the goods or brought the goods back to this country, there having been made no provision or arrangement with them for their being landed in France free of duty, France would impose duties upon them of about $150,000,000.

The third consideration is that out of sympathy for our allies and their destitute condition and the very great losses which they have been put to, we sold the goods to them at a very low price so that they could use them for rehabilitation of their devastated areas, feed the people, and for other purposes for the common good of the people of our allies. We received from the several billions of dollars worth of goods we had over there something over $800,000,000. On the $1,700,000,000 worth that was in France we received something over $400,000,000; that is, they were sold for a little less than 25 cents on the dollar. The intention was that these goods should remain in France, that they should be used there for the benefit of their people. The French Government bought them on very advantageous terms, and they in turn were to dispose of them to their war-stricken people. It has eventuated, however, that the French Government has sold them to speculators and individuals and corporations who are prepared now to bring them back to the United States, and a considerable quantity of them have already been returned.

Under existing law practically no duties are imposed on them and no duties which would protect the American manufacturers of these articles and their laborers. They are being bought in Europe at a sacrifice price and sold here at prices disturbing the markets and the conditions of labor in connection with every industry which manufactures similar articles in this country.

Mr. COLLIER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWLEY. I will.

Mr. COLLIER. I notice that you have put a rate of 90 per cent duty on these goods. Was that done arbitrarily in order to prohibit their being brought back, or did the committee attempt to equalize any difference?

Mr. HAWLEY. In a rough way they will a little more than equalize the difference. The intention is that no body of speculators should be permitted to take advantage of the generosity and kindness of our Government toward the stricken foreign people by buying supplies that were intended for their use and bringing them here to our detriment. They were to remain in Europe and that is what should be done with them. [Applause.]

Mr. COLLIER. The gentleman says that these goods were sold for 25 cents on the dollar.

Mr. HAWLEY. The goods sold in France were sold at 25 cents on the dollar.

Mr. COLLIER. The reason I am asking these questions is that I was not present in the committee at the hearings. The gentleman says that the Government bought the greater part of these supplies and sold them to individuals.

Mr. HAWLEY. The arrangement was made that the Government of France should pay for these goods with 10-year bonds at 5 per cent interest. We sold them to France with the understanding that they in turn should dispose of them to her people so that her people should get the benefit of the extremely low prices, that she might scatter them among her people and her people have time to pay for them. We do not believe that they ought now to be brought back to the United States.

Mr. COLLIER. The French Government, the gentleman says, has sold them to speculators.

Mr. HAWLEY. She has sold them and is selling them. There have been a great quantity brought into this country, and there is a great quantity still on the way.

Mr. ANDREWS. Is there any record showing that France exacted $150,000,000 in duties on these goods that are brought back?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Will the gentleman from Oregon permit me to answer?

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. There is a record, and I expect to tell the committee about it.

Mr. CHALMERS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHALMERS. If our Government took 10-year 5 per cent bonds, then you sold them at less than 25 cents on the dollar.

Mr. HAWLEY. We made very advantageous terms for the benefit of our allies.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWLEY. I will.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Of what do these goods consist?

Mr. HAWLEY. If the gentleman will turn to page 2 of the report he will find a table that contains the tabulations of the goods.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWLEY. I will.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Has the gentleman a copy of the contract between our commission that negotiated the sale of these supplies and the French Government?

Mr. HAWLEY. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM], who will follow me, will present all of that material. Mr. Chairman, I now yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I have no hesitation in saying to the members of the committee what I honestly believe, that this duty ought to be so high as to be prohibitive. I am not attempting in any way to conceal my view about the matter, and that is the way I feel about it. I think this stuff was sold to the other countries under conditions and at times and under circumstances such as to make it proper and right that they should keep it in their own country and off of our markets.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes; I will yield.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I remember to have read testimony taken before one of the committees of this House that 27,000 new automobiles and trucks were sent over to France, some of them five or six months after the armistice, and that these were turned in at these low figures.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. There were more than that. There were over 33,000, and the figures are given in the report. The sworn testimony before one of the investigating committees was that after the signing of the armistice over 33,000 new automobiles and trucks and vehicles were landed in France.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. Has the gentleman a copy of the statement sent to the committee at the time they were considering this bill that he could let me have?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. No; I have not.

Mr. GARNER. I want to say to the gentleman that if a copy of that had been included in the report I would not ask about it. I did ask for a copy of it, and it was promised, but I could not obtain it. It contains an honest statement, which this report does not give. It was the intention of the committee to keep the information from the House, and I said so at the time.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. If 33,000 new automobiles, presumably made under war contracts, so manufactured, were sent over to France, some of them five and six and eight and nine months after the armistice was signed, how does the gentleman reconcile that fact with his statement that this is a meritorious proposition.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I do not understand what the gentleman means.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. As I understand the gentleman, he said he thought it was a wise thing to send those over there.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. No; I did not say so at all. I have condemned it time and time again.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. The gentleman must have made that condemnation in the last Congress, for I do not remember to have heard him.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. If the gentleman had been here in the last Congress he would undoubtedly have heard me.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I prefer not to at this time. After the signing of the armistice there were large stocks of goods all over the European countries, not only in France but in Great Britain, in Italy, and other European countries.

As shown by the American inventory which I have here, but which I shall not take the time to refer to further, unless some Member wants to see it, there were in France $1,739,189,302.65 worth of stuff. The Liquidation Commission started to dispose of that. Several plans were proposed. One was to bring the material back to this country, another was to sell it to the French and other peoples as individuals, and another to sell it to the French Government. Hundreds of millions of dollars were expended over there in the construction of buildings on French ground. There was not title to a foot of it in the American Government, because the French Government insisted upon the provisions of French law, which provide that no foreign Government can own any French soil except for diplomatic purposes, and only then with the consent of the French Government. The French Government insisted upon that, even though it was war time, and as soon as the war was over they said to our Government and our Liquidation Commission, "We will not sell you any of this land; we will not give you any permanent right to hold it; you must either sell this stuff or get it off the land and restore the land to its original condition."

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Not just at this time. So that our Government found itself in the position of having all these costly buildings and other structures which had been constructed to help win the war, on French soil, which they had to either wreck and junk at large expense or sell to the French Government. Then it came to the movable property, and as soon as our Government talked of removing that property, to this country the French immediately invoked their old law, which had been in force for a number of years, and although they had said nothing about it when we took those goods into their country, when the proposition was made to sell them or take them out they immediately said that before we could do that we must pay their import duties on this stuff, which figured up $150,000,000. I want to read a part of the report of the Liquidation Commission showing exactly about what was done. This report is found in the reports of the Committee on War Expenditures in the Department of Foreign Affairs, serial 4, parts 75 to 78.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes; and then I shall yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER].

Mr. YOUNG. Does the gentleman say the import duties were to be levied if we took the property out of France or left it in France?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. The French Government said we must pay it whether we took it out or sold it over there.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. In his investigation of that matter does the gentleman think the Government made a good or a bad contract when they sold this property in France?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. The committee of which I was chairman never made a report about its views as to that contract. I could readily see how the United States Liquidation Commission was up against a very hard proposition, and, so far as the reports of our committee are concerned, the Liquidation Commission was never criticized in respect to this sale. I personally do not feel now that I can make any particular criticism about it, because the commission was laboring under the worst kind of difficulty. There was congestion in shipping on the ocean, and the French were insisting upon the provisions of their law by which they said we must pay $150,000,000 duty, and the charitable consideration in the minds of the Liquidation Commission toward the suffering people of Europe was such as to induce in the minds of the commissioners the idea that we ought to help those people out.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Does the gentleman recall who was the head of the Liquidation Commission?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes; Edwin B. Parker. I read now a part of the report of the Liquidation Commission:

Under this contract the considerations moving from France are: (1) Four hundred million dollars in 10-year 5 per cent bonds, with semi-annual interest from August 1, 1920; (2) the assumption by France of all rents for installations accruing after August 1, 1919, and the agreement of France to hold America harmless against all claims of every nature whatever arising out of American occupation and use of such installations and lands; (3) the waiver by France of all claims whatsoever for taxes or customs duties on properties imported into France and sold since August 6, 1917.

Our people took that stuff into France, England, and Italy without any arrangement about import duties, in the hurry and haste of war, not thinking that the French or any other Government would ever impose any such duties. They took it in and suddenly found when the war was over that these duties were to be imposed. Let me read further from the report of the commission:

Most of the property which the commission sold in France was brought in without the payment of import duties. Until this contract was signed the French Government had never relinquished its right to claim payment of such duties, though the point was vigorously pressed, both by the commission and by the representatives of the British Government in France, that the salvaging of surplus war stocks was an incident of the war and as such they could not be held subject to import duties. The French position on this point was, however, a strong one. It was supported by a precedent set by the United States Government in dealing with the surplus stocks left in the Philippine Islands at the close of the Spanish-American War, the usual customs duties having been paid on such stocks. The commission had the inventories studied in connection with the French tariff schedules and it was found that $150,000,000 was a conservative estimate of the aggregate customs duties, payable under the normal rules for all of our stocks in France. This claim was given weight in fixing the final purchase price of $400,000,000.

This and the provision relative to the ownership of the soil upon which our buildings were constructed, together with the charitable considerations, induced our commission to sell this material to France. I want to read now two extracts from report of the liquidation commission; and, by the way, in answer to the gentleman from New Jersey who asked about it, I would say that I have here a copy of the contract with the French Government and he will find it set out at large in my extension of remarks.

Let me say, however, that not the slightest safeguard will be found in this contract as to what shall be done with the goods. Neither was there ever the slightest care taken by any of our authorities to see that when our expeditionary forces entered European countries they should not be subjected to vexatious impositions and taxes, an agreement as to which matters might have been readily made then for the mere asking.

Now, let me read what our commission says were some of the reasons why they did this.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I will.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Was there an agreement between the Government of France and the United States regarding the amount of money that was to be paid?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes. Here is the substance of what the agreement says:

Under this contract the considerations moving from France are: (1) $400,000,000 in 10-year 5 per cent bonds, with semiannual interest from August 1, 1920; (2) the assumption by France of all rents for installations accruing after August 1, 1919, and the agreement of France to hold America harmless against all claims of every nature whatever arising out of American occupation and the use of such installations and land; (3) the waiver by France of all claims whatsoever for taxes or customs duties on properties imported into France and sold since April 6, 1917.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman spoke of following a precedent that was established in reference to the Philippines. To whom did that property belong and what was the tariff levied on?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I have not looked it up, but I imagine it perhaps belonged to Spain, but I am not sure about that. I know that France invoked that old precedent which they hunted up, and by means of that made the argument with reference to these duties. Now, the liquidation commission urged this as one of the good reasons why they did this:

A very large percentage of these stocks, manufactured and assembled under pressure, handled and rehandled under tremendous handicaps, were in a condition and of a character which clearly would not have justified the cost of returning them to America. As our troops were evacuating France we had to look forward to the time when we would be left without facilities for keeping possession of, guarding, handling, delivering, or shipping home these goods. It was clear that the hungry, cold, and industrially demoralized people of Europe stood in crying need of a large percentage of these supplies—supplies which under existing conditions could not, as a whole, be advantageously returned to America at any time, and such part of them as might justify the cost of handling and transportation could hardly be held in France until conditions should become nearly enough normal to make possible their shipment.

Again, in a letter by the chairman of the commission to M. Morel, French negotiator, this was said:

After the sacrifices, which can not be measured in terms of dollars, which have been made by both of our peoples, it would be criminal stupidity on the parts of the representatives of both our Governments to fail to agree on the disposition to be made of the surplus war supplies remaining on French soil. This commission sincerely hopes that it will not be forced to sell for shipment out of France anything that the French people really need or can utilize to advantage, and we are therefore not only willing but anxious to make to the Government of France a price for this property which will be attractive to it and to extend credit for the entire purchase price.

May I not, in conclusion, remind you that, as the treaty of peace with Germany has been signed and measures have been taken by your Government and ours, together with their associates, to insure a lasting peace, and as the American Expeditionary Forces are being very rapidly withdrawn and returned to their homes, it is imperative that the surplus war supplies belonging to our Government in France should be speedily disposed of, if not to the French Government then to others who urgently need and are seeking to acquire them, to the end that they may be promptly and fully utilized to bring back a measure of prosperity to the suffering peoples of the world.

Our commissioners, taking into account the various matters which I have referred to, and animated by the most high and charitable motives for the assistance of our late allies and companions in the struggle with Germany and Austria, negotiated a sale of all of our material overseas not needed for our own immediate uses to various countries, all of which I will show by a table attached to these remarks, and especially negotiated a sale to the Government of France of all our remaining property there for $400,000,000; this is to be paid, as I have said, in 10 years with interest at 5 per cent.

It was found that England had a similar law to France as regards import duties, but the English Government waived any claims under it and permitted us to dispose of our property there as we thought best. The French attitude, however, was, as I have said, entirely different. Our liquidation commission sold our property abroad for but a few cents on the dollar, and one of their principal ideas, as shown by their report, was to aid the suffering peoples of Europe and help them get on their feet again.

What was done with it? Vast quantities, hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of it, have been sold to speculators, and it is now being shipped back into this country duty free and sold to our people and destroying our own markets. Is there anybody in the House who thinks that is what we had in mind; is there anybody in this House who can defend that proposition? And yet I tell you not only is it coming here in large quantities but it has already come here in large quantities. The customs officer of the Treasury Department informs me that in the month of June approximately $2,500,000 worth of reimported American goods, from England and France, came into this country, much or most of which is doubtless this material.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HAWLEY. I yield the gentleman three additional minutes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I have in my hands here a copy of the Association of Commerce News Bulletin, published in the city of New Orleans, and the statement is made that on the 17th of July the steamship Georgia landed at New Orleans and discharged a cargo of this kind of material worth hundreds of thousands of dollars which consisted of everything from horse-shoe nails to books and clothing. Now, in view of the immense amount of stuff left on the other side I want to ask you gentlemen of this House, what effect do you think the dumping upon the market of this material will have upon our American industries?

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I have not the time. I want the laboring men of this country to go to work. That is our most pressing need. I do not believe it is the right thing for us to do to permit this stuff to come into our markets and close the doors of our factories and be sold to our people, especially at a time when it pays not one cent duty but comes in free. So I have introduced this bill with the idea of putting on a duty that will be prohibitive when it comes in, or if it does come it will not come in sufficient quantities to affect the legitimate market. In doing so I am invoking the best sort of protective policy I can imagine.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. In just a moment. There have been organized many companies in the United States for the purpose of dealing in this kind of stuff. I have in my files here a considerable number of letters from that sort of concerns, all protesting against such a law as this resolution intends.

One of these corporations is Stevens, Webb Co. (Inc.), of New York.

Here is a paragraph from their letter:

We have for the past six months been organizing a company for the disposal of these goods, which your bill forbids. I have talked to several persons who are Members of the House, and they have advised me to come straight to you in an attempt to prevent the passage, or at least delay it until our company can free itself from obligations which it has incurred.

He came into my office, as have many others who have organized these companies, and they tell me that they have bought millions and millions of dollars' worth of these goods and that they are on the way over here. The Association of Commerce of the City of New Orleans—and I have the information here through the kindness of Mr. DUPRE—advises that there will be landed in the city of New Orleans during the month of August at least five ship cargoes of this stuff.

It would be hard to estimate how extensive this traffic in surplus war goods will become. Many companies, as I have said, have been formed for this business. I have before me an advertisement which I will insert with these remarks. This company, as I understand it, is dealing entirely in reimported war trucks.

I am advised that one firm in New York is offering, at prices way below the cost of manufacture, over 3,000 tons of saddlery imported from England. To illustrate the boldness of these dealers, a company has been formed, with headquarters at New York and branch offices in Paris and Bilbao, called Ford of France, which company, as I am advised, deals in nothing else except Ford machines bought from the French stock sold by our Government to the French Government. In response to a telegram inquiring about this company which I forwarded to Henry Ford at Detroit, Mich., and in which I stated, "Party here claiming to represent you interested in New York concern called Ford of France. Are you in any way connected or interested in this company? Please wire answer," I have the following telegram:

DETROIT, MICH., July 11, 1921.

W. J. GRAHAM, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.:

No person is authorized to represent Mr. Ford in the capacity your telegram indicates.

E. G. LEBOLD,
General Secretary to Henry Ford.

In an article evidently well supported by facts appearing in the Association of Commerce News Bulletin, of New Orleans, on August 2, 1921, the statement is made that the Government of France has disposed of these goods to the Société Commerciale et Maritime Française, whose United States connection is reported to be Grallon & Co. (Inc.).

Whether the French Government is directly involved in these transactions or not I do not know. I do know, however, that the property was sold to the French Republic in large part and that if it is coming back to this country it is either coming directly from the Government or from speculators to whom the Government has sold, and in either case it ought not to come.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I will.

Mr. GARNER. I want to ask the gentleman whether this 90 per cent he has in his bill here is in addition to the present rate of duty in the law?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I will quote, if the gentleman please, section 4, paragraph (p), of the Underwood Tariff Act. Mr. HAWLEY. Will the gentleman yield? Section 404 of the Underwood Tariff Act also relates to this.

Mr. GARNER. All of these items?

Mr. HAWLEY. Absolutely.

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman is considerably mistaken.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Listen. Here is what paragraph (p) says:

That upon the reimportation of articles once exported, of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal revenue laws upon such articles, except articles manufactured in bonded warehouses and exported pursuant to law, which shall be subject to the same rate of duty as if originally imported, but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

In other words, unless these articles that are named pay the internal-revenue taxes they will come in duty free.

Mr. GARNER. A large proportion of them are automobiles and trucks.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] has expired.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Under the leave given me, I here insert, first, a statement of the inventoried value of goods in France; second, the contract with the French Government; and, third, the truck advertisement hereinbefore referred to.

APPENDIX VII.

Categorical summary of inventories of American Expeditionary Forces property in France, showing cost and present value, as estimated by United States Liquidation Commission—War Department, July 8, 1919.

A	B	C	D	E	F <sup>1</sup>	G	H <sup>1</sup>
Category.	Inventory cost.	Percentage of total.	Description.	Ratio of estimated present value to cost.	Estimated present value.	Percentage of total.	Estimated value of A. E. F. property available for sale to France.
				Per cent.
1	$323,721,869.50	18.6	Clothing and textiles.....	75.3	$243,775,246.27	23.14	$137,579,876.85
2	259,168,998.86	14.9	Subsistence supplies.....	84.0	217,498,098.85	22.43	135,459,595.37
3	14,861,948.74	.9	Kitchen utensils and household furniture.....	33.0	4,958,692.75	.51	5,267,952.52
4	92,837,183.32	5.3	Machinery, metals, tools, and hardware.....	57.5	53,499,781.35	5.53	47,510,597.34
5	14,128,873.77	.8	Building materials.....	45.0	6,378,131.27	.66	6,419,181.27
6	8,078,978.01	.5	Lumber and other forest products.....	53.0	4,273,446.00	.44	4,243,190.00
7	186,270,430.36	10.7	Railway and dock equipment.....	64.0	119,473,982.93	12.32	113,632,503.93
8	352,300,196.89	20.3	Transport equipment.....	42.0	147,680,933.92	15.23	134,678,660.92
9	46,564,220.08	2.7	Hospital and toilet supplies and chemicals.....	67.5	31,319,474.09	3.23	24,666,377.43
10	4,318,450.32	.2	Photographic, measuring, and musical instruments.....	48.5	2,092,546.76	.22	2,027,374.76
11	9,404,032.91	.5	Electrical equipment and supplies.....	58.0	5,454,256.06	.66	4,809,018.39
12	14,479,538.08	.8	Oils, gasoline, and paints.....	87.4	12,639,897.55	1.3	13,305,029.30
13	76,134,542.86	4.4	Ordnance and gas equipment and supplies.....	5.1	3,075,951.75	.4	3,785,978.97
14	600,107.02	.04	Blasting apparatus and supplies.....	11.5	68,850.23	.007	68,850.23
15	99,546.17	.005	Printing plant and supplies.....	35.0	35,234.02	.003	31,364.02
16	15,240,040.27	.9	Office fixtures, stationery, and supplies.....	58.5	8,923,684.33	.92	8,895,257.43
17	4,746,658.79	.3	Hides and leather.....	99.0	4,700,803.30	.49	5,078,269.30
18	6,207,829.55	.4	Air Service apparatus and equipment.....	38.0	2,355,865.39	.24	2,335,865.39
	11,659,477.95	.6	Other materials, not otherwise specified.....	55.0	8,595,369.28	.69	5,921,119.28
	180,980,637.00	10.4	Permanent installations to May 1, 1919.....	21.8	39,256,500.00	4.05	39,256,500.00
	4,882,036.51	.3	Recent installations, advance section.....	19.8	967,500.00	.1	967,500.00
	120,361.00	.007	German signal corps dumps.....	100.0	120,500.00	.01	120,500.00
	13,091,473.77	.8	German and American dumps, advance section.....	17.2	2,250,000.00	.23	2,250,000.00
	4,105,726.00	.2	Light railways.....	61.0	2,500,000.00	.25	2,500,000.00
	6,249,826.90	.4	Signal Corps installations.....	72.0	4,500,000.00	.46	4,500,000.00
	145,000.00	.008	Laboratory apparatus.....	65.5	95,000.00	.01	95,000.00
	590,968.00	.04	Aytre car erecting plant.....	50.0	295,484.00	.03	295,484.00
	88,000,000.00	5.0	Estimated value of materials and supplies in installations not embraced in categorical inventories.....	50.0	44,000,000.00	4.53	44,000,000.00
	1,739,189,302.65	100.0	Total.....	55.7	969,585,230.10	100.00	749,641,066.70
			Deduct 25 per cent to cover cost of merchandising, labor, storage, insurance, interest, and overhead expense.....				187,410,266.68
							562,230,800.02

<sup>1</sup> The difference between column F and column H is represented by a series of differences in quantities. These reductions are shown, by services, on chart B, Appendix VIII. They were calculated also by categories. They represent sales and other dispositions since the inventories were taken.

APPENDIX X.

(1) CONTRACT OF SALE, UNITED STATES TO FRANCE, AUGUST 1, 1919—THE BULK SALE TO FRANCE.

This contract entered into this 1st day of August A. D. 1919 by and between the United States of America (hereinafter called America), acting through the United States Liquidation Commission—War Department—of the one part, and the Republic of France (hereinafter called France), acting through Le Sous-Secrétaire d'Etat aux Finances, of the other part, witnesseth:

That whereas America is the owner of certain property now located in France which was imported into, acquired, or constructed in France since April 6, 1917, by the War Department of the United States of America (hereinafter called War Department); and

Whereas it is deemed advantageous to both Governments that America sell and France purchase said property:

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and for the other considerations herein stated, it is mutually agreed, as follows:

ARTICLE I.

Description of property.—America agrees to and does hereby sell to France without warranty of quantity, quality, or condition, and subject to the reservations, exceptions, and conditions hereinafter set forth, and France agrees to and does hereby purchase from America all of the property now located in France and now owned by the War Department, described as follows:

(a) All of the buildings, structures, docks, warehouses, telephone and telegraph lines, railroads, and other installations of every kind and character constructed or acquired in France since April 6, 1917, together with the leases, appurtenances, and equipment appertaining thereto; and

(b) All of the movable property, consisting of material, equipment, and supplies imported into or acquired in France since April 6, 1917.

ARTICLE 2.

Exceptions and reservations.—America reserves from the property described in article 1 hereof (which is sold subject to the following exceptions and conditions) property as follows:

(a) All animals.

(b) Undelivered material, equipment, and supplies which America has already sold or contracted to sell (1) to other nations, (2) to relief associations or organizations, (3) to Spanish company for export to and distribution in Spain, and (4) motor transport of English manufacture only, for return to and distribution in England, all aggregating in selling value approximately seventy-seven million two hundred and sixty-five thousand five hundred and ninety-seven dollars and eighty-three cents ($77,265,597.83).

(c) Equipment, material, and supplies forming a part of the equipment of the individual soldier or of the military units which have been or may be hereafter withdrawn from France for return to the United States;

(d) Material, equipment, and supplies now in France needed by America and already ordered returned to America for the use of the War Department, of the estimated cost value of fifteen million dollars ($15,000,000);

(e) Subsistence and supplies necessary to meet the requirements of the American Expeditionary Forces and other War Department organizations so long as they are in France, which subsistence and supplies are now located both in depots and points other than depots, such stocks now in depots being of the estimated cost value of four million dollars ($4,000,000); and

(f) Medical, surgical, and hospital supplies and supplementary and dietary foodstuffs needed in the treatment of the sick and injured, reserved for the use of the American Red Cross in connection with its activities in Europe, of the estimated cost value of ten million dollars ($10,000,000). Should the Secretary of War of the United States of America, or his authorized representative, hereafter request that France resell to America additional property of similar nature for the use of the American Red Cross, then, in such event, France agrees to resell same to America so long as it is held by France unsold, delivering it to the American Red Cross at the same price at which France has valued such property in making this purchase, so that the resale shall be at cost to France without profit. America agrees to give France credit on the bonds hereinafter mentioned for any property so resold.

ARTICLE 2.
Consideration.

(a) Bonds.—In addition to the other considerations herein enumerated, France agrees to pay for the above-described property the sum of $400,000,000, to be evidenced by bonds of the Republic of France, dated August 1, 1919, bearing interest from August 1, 1920, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, interest payable in equal semiannual installments on February 1 and August 1 in each year, said bonds maturing 10 years after date, both principal and interest payable in dollars to the United States of America or its assigns at Washington, D. C., in gold coin, or, at the election of America, payable in francs of the Republic of France at the cable-buying rate as fixed by the Federal reserve bank of New York on the New York market at noon of the due date thereof. Said bonds shall be in such form and of such denominations as may be prescribed by agreement between the Treasury Departments of America and of France and shall be delivered within 90 days from August 1, 1919.

(b) Claims and rentals.—France assumes the payment of all rentals which shall accrue subsequent to August 1, 1919, on account of the occupancy of the installations of every character purchased by it from America. All requisition, damage, and restoration claims of every nature whatsoever connected with or growing out of the use and occupation of said installations have already been taken into account by France in estimating the utilization value of said installations, and deduction has been made accordingly from the purchase price mentioned in subdivision "a" of this article 3 hereof, and France assumes the payment of and agrees to hold America harmless against all such claims.

(c) Waiver of claims: France waives all claims of every nature which it has or may have against America for national taxes on account of the importation of or transactions in relation to property heretofore imported or acquired by America in France since April 6, 1917.

ARTICLE 4.

Title and possession: (a) Title to the property hereinbefore mentioned, sold by America to France, shall pass to France upon the signing of this contract. Delivery of possession shall begin immediately and shall be completed within 30 days from August 1, 1919. So long as said property is in the possession of America it shall be held at the joint risk of America and France; provided, however, that the risk to America shall terminate absolutely with August 31, 1919, whether delivery has at that time been taken by France or not. At the time of delivery of possession a receipt in substantially the following form shall be signed by representatives of the respective Governments:

"Be it known that on this _____ day of _____, 1919, the United States of America War Department has delivered to the accredited representative of the Republic of France, on authority of the United States Liquidation Commission, War Department, all the property, both fixed and movable, belonging to the United States of America War Department embraced or located in installation, depot, or park known as _____ Department _____ Project No. _____, as shown on the Jadwin Report of Installation, page _____. Executed in _____ parts, each having the full force and effect of an original."

(b) France hereby grants to America, rent free, the temporary use of such installations and movables purchased by France in accordance with the terms of this contract as may be required by the American Expeditionary Forces and other War Department organizations so long as they are in France or as may be necessary to complete the liquidation of the affairs of the War Department; provided, however, that so long as such installations and movables are retained by America for its use under the terms of this subdivision "b" of article 4 hereof, they shall be held at the risk of America.

In witness whereof, on the day and year first above written, this contract has been executed in four parts, each having the full force and effect of an original, by the United States of America, acting through the United States Liquidation Commission—War Department, Edwin B. Parker, chairman; and by the Republic of France, acting through le Sous-Secrétaire d'Etat aux Finances, Paul Morel.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
By E. B. PARKER,
Chairman United States Liquidation
Commission, War Department.
REPUBLIC OF FRANCE,
By P. MOREL,
Le Sous-Secrétaire d'Etat aux Finances.

The following is the truck advertisement above referred to:

Big trucks at one-half price—5½-ton Macks, 3½-ton Packards, 5-ton Pierce-Arrows, 3-ton Whites, 4-ton Riker-Locomobiles—It will pay you to investigate—Regular 90-day guaranty against defective parts—Trucks sold on partial-payment plan if desired—Dealers: Get a Truck Co. of America franchise for your territory. Write at once—Fleet owners: We can supply you at a great saving—Truck Co. of America, world's largest truck dealers, 1681-1685 Broadway, at Fifty-third Street, New York. Telephones—Circle 0287-0288-0289.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 25 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PARRISH].

Mr. PARRISH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, the overshadowing national question for the next 50 years at least will be that of economy in Government expenditures and the raising of the necessary revenue to meet such outlay. The time has come in the history of our Nation when economy must be the watchword of its public officials and Government expenses must be reduced. The Nation simply can not continue to spend money at the shocking rate it has been spending it in the past. Congress must realize definitely and finally that the American people can not and will not submit to the unbearable burdens of ever-increasing appropriations and added taxation. America's finances are sound and her credit to-day is the best in all the world and is approached only by two other countries, that of Japan and Switzerland; but we must find a way to stop reckless or wasteful expenditures or expenditures of doubtful value to the Government or the people. Public money should be expended with the same keen business judgment and foresight as is exercised by the best regulated business concerns. Just now the business interests of the Nation which touch vitally the life and prosperity of our people is partially stagnated at least by reason of excessive tax burdens and other burdens in the way of licenses or restrictions that have been placed upon them by the Government during the war and continued in force for a period of almost three years, during which there was neither peace nor war, and such conditions prevail to-day. It is now time that men from every section of the country devote their best thought and talent to a careful study of the Nation's economic needs, to the end that there may be speedily evolved means and methods by which the people's burdens may be lifted and business once more placed on a safe and sane basis.

There seems to be at least one way by which we can with safety reduce public expenditures if we will do our part, and that is by bringing about an agreement among the other nations of the earth to reduce the amount of money that will be spent for purposes of national defense. The people of the various nations of the world are staggering beneath the burdens of military preparations, and in this respect their burdens are being added to from day to day rather than lightened. Experts in a position to know say that more than 92 per cent of all the money appropriated by Congress is used to pay past, present, and future obligations of a naval and military character, and that less than 8 per cent is used for the constructive civil expenses of the Government. Similar ratios will be found in the expense accounts of the other leading nations of the earth, and so appalling are these figures and so destructive and wasteful are the results that it would seem that the civilized nations would not only be willing but eager to come together in some mutual and binding agreement by which the military and naval burdens could be effectually lifted from their people to the end that peace and prosperity would become the watchword not only of our own country but of all other nations as well. This is indeed the most absorbing question of the hour and if the President of the United States fails America in this crisis or if America should fail the world posterity will be unforgiving and the curses of civilization will rest mightily on the party failing to respond wholeheartedly to this the greatest call ever made of men or nations since the dawn of civilization.

Approximately $5,500,000,000 were appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, $4,780,000,000 were appropriated, and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, taking into consideration the deficiencies, the annual appropriation will amount at least to $5,000,000,000, and there seems to be a wide dispute as to the amount that will be necessary to meet the current expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923; but Mr. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, says that at least $4,550,000,000 will have to be provided for that purpose. Within the next two years there will mature in round numbers about $7,500,000,000 worth of short-time Government obligations, and while these obligations must of necessity be met by some kind of refunding plan, yet the interest on the public debt, together with the annual expenditures, will in all probability call for an outlay totaling about what will be required for the current fiscal year. How to raise this tremendous sum presents a question which challenges the best thought of our financiers and statesmen. The reduction of the Army to 100,000 men or less, together with the corresponding reduction in officers, according to reliable estimates, will save a little more than $80,000,000, and this is a saving that ought to be made. If an effective agreement is reached for universal disarmament, then the expenses of both the Army and Navy ought to be very greatly reduced.

During the recent political campaign the Republicans who now have full charge of both branches of the Government, disregarding of the facts, boldly stated to the American people that if they were intrusted with the management of public affairs, taxes would be very greatly reduced, and the speakers of that political faith were loud in their efforts to convince the people that if they were intrusted with this responsibility that they would at once put more business into Government and less Government into business, and would simplify the revenue laws and reduce the burdens of taxation. To these promises the American people ought to hold them to the strictest accounting and they ought to be called before the bar of public opinion and forced to make good their promises or be ostracized for making promises in the face of the facts which they knew could not be carried out. However, be that as it may, the demand for relief from the burdens of taxation was so pressing that the people believed the Republican campaign promises and swept them into office by a majority seldom seen in political campaigns.

Now, you are meeting yourselves coming back. Your Secretary of the Treasury, a man of business ability, has appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of the House and stated very frankly to that committee, that the burdens of taxation can not be reduced materially if necessary public expenses are paid. In other words, this conservative business man at the head of the Treasury Department frankly tells the Republicans in effect, that their campaign promises were false, and that they can not continue to spend money in the future as they have in the past and reduce the burdens of taxation very materially. There seems to be a wide difference of opinion among the Republican leaders as to whether Mr. Mellon is right. Mr. MONDELL, the majority leader, comes forward as the financial Moses to lead them out of the wilderness and boldly proclaims that Mellon is wrong, that he knows a way by which $2,000,000,000 can be saved. An analysis of his proposition simply shows that he would cut this amount off in the first half of the year and would be forced to add it on in the last half of the year. A suggestion that is far from sound economically, it is a subterfuge pure and simple and merely postponing the day of reckoning.

The Republicans have been in full charge of both of the legislative branches of the Government for almost three years and in charge of the executive branch since March 4, 1921, and notwithstanding the fact that President Wilson, through message and otherwise, repeatedly requested the Republicans, since they came into power, to revise and correct the inequalities of the present tax laws, yet the Republicans have not up until this good hour passed one single law which would simplify the present revenue laws or remove one single inequity therefrom. This failure on their part is unpardonable, and has worked untold loss and hardship on our people. The revenue laws, under which we have been doing business for the past several years were passed during the conduct of a great war, and were in the main of necessity war measures. They were hurriedly passed during unsettled conditions and were never intended to remain on the statute books indefinitely during times of peace. A law passed under such conditions naturally would have many uncertainties, if not confusing and conflicting provisions, in it, and since its passage, there have developed many practical difficulties in its interpretation and enforcement.

In December, 1919, President Wilson, in a message to Congress very earnestly urged the immediate simplification of the income and profit tax laws, in order to save the taxpayers inconvenience and expense, and in order that the liability of the individual taxpayer to his Government might be made definite and certain and along with his message he transmitted recommendations from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue showing more than 100 irregularities, defects, and inequities in the existing law. On at least two other occasions he called the attention of Congress to the same matter, each time urging and requesting Congress to grant relief. It is needless to say that his appeal was strongly echoed by the great body of the taxpayers throughout the entire country, but what has been done during the nearly three years since you took charge? What is your answer? There is no answer. It is now well up in August. The law by which you propose to raise the revenue in the future has not yet been submitted to Congress. It is admitted that whatever revenue law is passed by this Congress will have to be made retroactive in many of its provisions and in these particulars it will date back and cover all business transacted from the first day of January of this year.

In other words, notwithstanding the great demand for immediate revision of the tax laws and notwithstanding the fact that you have had at your command every agency and power of the Government, you have forced American business men and American business interests to conduct their business in the dark for at least eight months of the current year without their even knowing what part of their profits would be given over to the Government in the way of taxes, and without, indeed, giving them any guide as to how they might best transact the business in which they were engaged. Legitimate business has been staggering in the dark simply because those in authority were unwilling to light the lamp that would give light to the path that they were to travel. The business men of this country are not complaining so much of the taxes they must pay, though they are demanding relief from the present burdens, but they are complaining, and justly so, at the multitudinous and brain-racking technicalities and uncertainties through which they must go in order to determine what tax they must pay their Government. There is nothing so fatal to successful business as to compel it to function in confusion and doubt. To-day business is up in the air. It is at its wits end. Five million laborers are out of employment. We can not adjust prices. We can not do anything with certainty until we have fixed rules and standards to guide us. We do not know where we stand with the Government, and unless relief is speedily given the result is going to be that the great body of business men in this country will lose confidence in the business ability of those in charge of the affairs of the Government to administer its affairs in a conservative and businesslike way. In the face of these undeniable facts, what have you accomplished? You have "fiddled while Rome burned," you have procrastinated, debated, and talked about reduction until conservative men are weary and sick at heart, and now demand and insist that some action be taken speedily. Had it not been for this cry which came from every section of the country I dare say that the present Congress would have recessed and left tax revision go over until December. There was much general talk of such procedure until the people made themselves heard.

More than four months were given over to the Fordney tariff bill, which in practical results is worse than wasted. The bill is one of the most dangerous pieces of legislation that has been passed by any Congress since the creation of our Government, and the result of such legislation will be to cause further stagnation of business, cut off our exports, and choke up the channels of trade. It may relieve the favored few, but it will oppress the masses.

The incorporation into the bill of the American valuation feature is especially inopportune just at this time. It will add to the uncertainty in national exchange values the question of American valuation, and here again uncertainty and confusion will find its way into the business of our foreign trade, and depression will inevitably follow.

Few people really understand the practical results that will actually follow the adoption of this plan. We seem to have delegated unto ourselves an all-sufficient air, and apparently have become intoxicated with the idea that we hold the world's balance of trade and that any plan we propose will have to be accepted by the other nations. It is true that we are the creditor Nation of the earth. We own more than one-half of the world's supply of gold, and the nations of Europe owe us better than $15,000,000,000 in public and private obligations. It is also true that we hold the balance of power, and our money is master in the exchange markets of the world, and almost always sells at a premium. But this exchange valuation has a back-fire to it. The high premium on the American dollar has a strong tendency to keep our surplus products out of the foreign markets, and in this way militates directly against us. Just at this time Switzerland furnishes a striking example of the disadvantages that may come to a country by reason of a high premium on its exchange. Her money sells at a premium everywhere in Europe, and yet her business is slowly but surely dying as a result of the high value of the Swiss franc. Swiss chocolates were once the favorite in all the world, but now few people in Europe can afford to buy them, and domestic chocolates have taken their place in the local markets of practically every European country. Her hotels and pleasure resorts heretofore overflowing at this season of the year are practically empty, because travelers can get so much more for their money in other countries. To some extent at least we seem to be suffering the same fate, for during the first four months of this year our exports as compared with the same months in 1920 have fallen off $1,000,000,000, or about 35 per cent, and the same is true of our imports. If to this condition of affairs you add a law which requires the value of imports to be fixed at American ports of entry and our foreign customers are required to wait until their goods reach our own customhouses before they know what duty they will have to pay us you are throwing many stumbling blocks in the way of foreign commerce and embarking upon a policy that may destroy a large part of our world's trade, and if you add insult to injury by levying as you propose the highest tariff rate ever known, you will literally choke up the channels of trade. The European nations will buy only such things as they are forced to buy from us, and our surplus goods and raw materials will remain on our hands. Through the agency of the League of Nations, England, France, and other nations of Europe are lending support to those buying their products. They are doing this by means of governmental guaranties, but America has not seen fit up to this date to take this precaution in regard to her foreign trade. However, if we are going to get our part of the world's commerce, we must hereafter make a fight for it and make conditions so inviting that Europe will be induced to come here and trade with us, and unless some such arrangements are made which will include a change in our tariff policy there is little prospect that the 5,000,000 laborers now idle will find employment any time soon.

I warn you now; America may well look with deep concern upon anything that would tend to isolate her from the commerce of the world, for therein lies the hope of prosperity and happiness for our people. Therefore, instead of doing America a service in the passage of the tariff bill, you have undoubtedly paved the way to do real harm and have complicated rather than simplified the economic problems that must be solved before we can ever get back to normal conditions.

I call these things to your attention because they affect vitally our people, and have a direct bearing upon the ability of our people to pay the necessary revenue to meet the demands of the Government.

In the light of these facts future laws affecting the economic conditions of our country, including our revenue laws, present a most interesting study indeed, but it likewise presents many perplexing problems and difficulties. How can the burdens of taxation be reduced and yet the necessary revenue be raised? What the Republican majority will do about it no one seems to know, but judging from the expressions heard up to date it is very evident that the leaders on the Republican side are yielding to the demands of the big interests, and are seeking to devise some scheme by which the burdens of taxation, if not reduced, may be shifted from those of large incomes to those of small incomes and to the public generally, and whatever so-called reduction that will be made I fear after careful analysis will not be a reduction at all, but will simply be a shifting of the burdens from those more able to pay to those less able to pay.

Seldom, if ever, have the big interests had such a hold on the Government in Washington as it has at this time. This fact is not only evident to the Democrats but to some of the Republicans as well. Representative FREAR, a Republican from Wisconsin, has made the charge direct in connection with the dye schedule, and has fearlessly charged that the Chemical Foundation has attempted to influence three members of President Harding's Cabinet, and in the Evening Star of Monday, August 8, 1921, he is quoted as saying:

No invisible government has shown more brazen effrontery than this dye monopoly. We may well be concerned over the power of these dye interests that reach three Cabinet officers in their efforts to perpetuate their present exclusive powers in this country.

In the same paper, Representative KELLER, a Republican from Minnesota, makes the direct charge that the influence of Wall Street is in the saddle in Washington. For the benefit of the country at large I quote the article in full just as it appeared:

CHARGES WALL STREET CONTROLS GOVERNMENT—REPRESENTATIVE KELLER ATTACKS ADMINISTRATION AND WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE.

Charging that the machinery of government has been commandeered by a little clique, ignorant of the A B C's of economics, whose blind obedience to Wall Street is responsible for the stupid, selfish, short-sighted policy that is retarding our prosperity and creating profound distrust and discontent among the people, Representative KELLER, of Minnesota, independent Republican, delivered an attack upon the administration generally and on the House Ways and Means Committee particularly for its handling of tax and tariff problems in a statement issued last night.

Declaring that most Members of the House want to carry out the people's wishes with regard to taxation and other economic questions, Mr. KELLER says a "little dominant minority has tied down the safety valve of free discussion until an explosion impends which will scatter the Republican Party from Maine to California."

"The President has assumed more power than any of his predecessors," Mr. KELLER continues, "and tells Congress what bills to pass and what not to pass. Bills concocted at secret conferences are introduced without being referred to responsible committees."

If the charges made by these distinguished Republicans are true, if, as Representative FREAR says, the invisible Government is showing such brazen effrontery, then the big powers will have their way in the writing of the revenue laws, and if they do, it does not take a prophet to foretell the result. The plain American who needs our help most will not have a chance in the hands of the Republicans, who have an overwhelming majority.

The harmful effect of unjust tax burdens is seen in many different ways. It kills the initiative of our people, discourages investments, retards the sale of lands, and makes it more difficult for our people to get homes and causes the withdrawal of capital from business by driving it into so-called frozen assets, such as tax-exempt securities. Already men of large means are investing their money in such securities. In the past few years we have seen the personal wealth of the country so rapidly segregated into tax-free securities that whereas the taxable income of the individual taxpayers in 1916 was $992,972,985, in 1917 it was reduced to $731,372,053 and in 1918 it was further reduced to $392,248,329, and it is now estimated that at least $15,000,000,000 of tax-exempt securities are now outstanding, and it would seem from this that we should give careful study to the question of restricting the further issuance by the Government of tax-exempt securities.

In conclusion, let me say that the American people want a reduction in taxes and not a shifting of its burdens, and they will take no deception. Results and not promises is what they demand. They will accept no subterfuge. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. NEWTON].

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, on account of the limited time, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the greatest obstruction in the way of industrial development of this country is the lack of adequate transportation at a reasonable cost. The farmer finds that, after he pays the freight necessary to carry his products to the market, there is little left to reward him for his labor. The manufacturer finds that, after he has deducted the freight, which he must pay to get his raw material to the factory, and after he has paid the freight necessary to carry his manufactured products to the consumer, he is compelled to fix his price so high that the consumer can not afford to buy. As a result, production is being curtailed, prices are being kept up, and the industries and labor of the country are suffering. If this condition continues, many of our industries must cease to operate. For illustration, southeast Missouri produces barytes; her mines have long been successfully operated. To-day barytes mined in Europe is being delivered in New York cheaper than the freight which must be paid to carry Missouri barytes to that point. As a result, the Missouri mines are closed. And yet relief from the railroads seems hopeless. High as their rates are to-day, they are not high enough to enable them to earn a profit. If relief from this condition is to be had, it must come from a cheaper form of transportation.

As a result of the World War and the industrial conditions which have followed it, we are confronted with foreign competition so keen that if our industries are to survive every possible economy of production must be practiced, and the chief cost of production in this country is the price which has to be paid for the transportation of raw materials and of manufactured products. Our competitors abroad are using cheaper forms of transportation. If we are to compete with them and live, we must do likewise. And now, at a time when our commerce demands and must have cheaper transportation, we find our railroads in such a condition that they can only respond by increasing their rates.

We have in this country 26,000 miles of navigable rivers. Much has been done to improve them, and yet they are rolling uselessly through our valleys contributing nothing toward our production, and this is so because our railroads in the past have been able to carry our commerce at a rate which our industries could afford to pay. But conditions have changed. Our commerce can no longer afford to pay rates which our railroads can afford to make. Our railroads must be paid a rate which is reasonably compensatory in territory where a cheaper form of transportation is not available, and if our commerce is to continue to grow it must be aided where waterways are available by a rate of transportation which our waterways alone can afford to give.

There are those among us who are not yet convinced of the practicability of river navigation, but before this year is passed a demonstration will have been made by the Government in its barge-line operations which will convince the most skeptical that the solution of our transportation problem can be found in the use of our waterways. We have now ready for use upon the Mississippi 40 new steel barges, each of 2,000 tons capacity. We are to have for use upon the Mississippi 6 new tunnel-type, twin-screw towboats of 1,800 horsepower each. One of them, the Natchez, was completed and delivered in December, and since that time has been in use upon the Mississippi. Three others were delivered about the 1st of June, and the remaining two will be delivered early in the fall.

The Natchez has demonstrated the success of this type of boat. She has carried 6,000 tons of freight from New Orleans upstream to St. Louis in 12 days, and she has carried 12,000 tons of freight from St. Louis to New Orleans in six days. In other words, she has carried enough merchandise upon one trip from St. Louis to New Orleans to load 480 freight cars, allowing 25 tons to each car. When all six of these new towboats are in operation they will be able to carry from St. Louis to New Orleans in six days 2,880 carloads of freight, or enough to load 57 freight trains with 50 loaded freight cars to the train. When these six new towboats are in operation they alone will be able to carry annually between New Orleans and St. Louis 1,500,000 tons of freight. Two hundred such towboats could carry annually between St. Louis and New Orleans 50,000,000 tons of freight at a rate which is little more than 50 per cent of the average rail rate which the business of the country is now being compelled to pay. Think of the stimulus to the industries of the valley which such transportation facilities would afford. This demonstrates beyond cavil the potentiality and economy of our rivers as bearers of freight.

But there are those who contend that river navigation is not a financial success. Let us now consider that question. The barge line is allowed 80 per cent of the rate charged by the rail lines which parallel the river. The rail rates upon these lines are infinitely less than the average rail rates of the country. Prior to January of this year the rate upon 100 pounds of sugar for a haul of 700 miles upon a rail line from New Orleans to St. Louis was 44 cents, while the rate on 100 pounds of sugar from New Orleans to Camden, Ark., 360 miles, but inland, and where no water competition existed, was 50 cents. The rate on 100 pounds of hardware from St. Louis to New Orleans, 700 miles upon a rail line paralleling the river, was 44 cents, while the rate on 100 pounds of hardware from St. Louis to Wiggins, Miss., a point 100 miles this side of New Orleans, but 50 miles inland, was 87 cents.

In January of this year the Interstate Commerce Commission readjusted the rates. Under the new rates the railroad paralleling the river hauls 100 pounds of sugar from New Orleans to St. Louis for 59 cents, while it charges 67 cents for hauling 100 pounds of sugar from New Orleans to Camden, Ark., only half the distance. Under the new rate the railroad paralleling the river hauls 100 pounds of hardware from St. Louis to New Orleans for $1.73, while it charges $2.08 for hauling 100 pounds of hardware from St. Louis to Wiggins, Miss. And the barge line under the new rate is permitted to charge only 80 per cent of the rail rate which parallels the river, and that rail rate is infinitely less than the average rail rate of the country. As a matter of fact, the railroads paralleling the Mississippi have carried freight for years at less than the cost of transportation. It was by this method that commerce was driven off the river.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I think I could supplement the illustration the gentleman is giving by giving other illustrations by the hour if necessary. The truth of the business is the same thing prevails in Texas. They charge us 55 cents per hundred pounds from my home town, 160 miles, to Galveston, but they will haul similar freight from Memphis to New Orleans for 17 cents a hundred pounds. The fact that the law has permitted cutthroat methods on the part of the railroad has prevented us from having river navigation.

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. The railroads haul, under the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, 100 pounds of apples from San Francisco to Boston for 75 cents, but if they drop that 100 pounds of apples off at Kansas City or anywhere in the interior they will charge you $1.62.

As bearing upon the practicability of river navigation, it is interesting to note the results of the Mississippi River Barge Line operation between St. Louis and New Orleans during the past six months at the low rates I have just described.

Mr. ROACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. ROACH. The gentleman has stated that the barge line which is operating upon the Mississippi is carrying freight at a rate which is far less than the average rail rate of the country. Can he inform the House as to whether or not this barge line is operating at a loss or a profit?

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. I am glad my colleague has asked that question, and in this connection I will state that the following figures show the financial result of the Mississippi Barge Line operations for the six months' period ending July 31 last:

FEBRUARY.
Gross receipts.....	$86,480.78
Operating expenses.....	77,677.71
Profit.....	8,803.07
MARCH.
Gross receipts.....	92,792.43
Operating expenses.....	95,783.61
Deficit.....	2,991.19
APRIL.
Gross receipts.....	166,366.10
Operating expenses.....	122,541.24
Profit.....	43,824.86
MAY.
Gross receipts.....	158,263.23
Operating expenses.....	129,555.98
Profit.....	28,707.25

JUNE.
Gross receipts.....	$175,867.65
Operating expenses.....	133,743.28
Profit.....	37,124.47
JULY.
Gross receipts.....	190,438.48
Operating expenses.....	133,278.67
Profit.....	57,159.81

You will note that the amount of business done has increased steadily each month since February, and that each month's operation, except March, shows a profit even at the low rates which they were permitted to charge. Can the railroads of the country boast of a showing like this? As a matter of fact, more than three-fourths of the railroad systems contend that they have been and still are losing money, and we learned to our sorrow by our experience during the war the cost of operating railroads. The Government took the railroads over and operated them for three years, charging rates which were infinitely higher than it permits the barge line to charge, and it operated during a time when freight was abundant, and yet do you know the result of that experiment? I called upon the Secretary of the Treasury recently requesting him to give me a statement showing the amount of money which the Federal operation of railroads has cost the Government up to date, including moneys expended under the guaranty clause of the Esch-Cummings bill. I was astounded when I learned that our actual loss to date on this account amounted to $1,452,605,245, while we have loaned the railroads an additional sum of $655,913,487. And yet we hesitate to appropriate a few million dollars to provide for river transportation, which can give us an infinitely cheaper rate and still operate at a profit.

After all we have gone through, this Congress and the country should begin to realize the importance of cheap inland water transportation and the impetus it will give to the industries and to the commerce of the country, and yet there are Members of this House who raise their hands in holy horror at the suggestion of spending a few million dollars for the improvement of our inland rivers. Our Government expended during the fiscal year ending June 30 last year, through the War Department, $1,610,587,338. We expended upon our Navy $736,021,456. We expended through the United States Shipping Board $539,565,649. We expended through the War Finance Corporation $228,472,186. We expended through the Grain Corporation $350,328,494. We expended for the purchase of securities of foreign Governments $421,337,028, and yet we appropriated for the improvement of all the rivers and all the harbors of this broad land of ours only $15,000,000. The demand of the hour is "More business in Government."

We expended during the last fiscal year in the payment of interest upon our public debt $1,020,251,622, and that great burden will continue to recur as the years roll by until the enormous debt upon which it accrues has been paid from moneys collected from the people. The people can not pay until the industries of this country are developed. Our industries can not develop until the cost of transportation is reduced; and what method have we for reducing the cost of transportation except by developing and using the limitless waterways with which this country abounds?

We are proud to boast of our natural resources. Our capacity for industrial development is unlimited, but before we can proceed successfully we must have adequate means of economic transportation available to every section of the country. To do this we must develop a system consisting of railways, waterways, and highways. To our railroads we have been abundantly liberal, to our highways we are contributing without stint, but to our waterways, the most potential and economic of them all, we have been niggardly. This attitude of our Government must be changed, and that change will be accomplished when the shippers of this country, including the farmers, the merchants, and manufacturers, whether they live on rivers or inland, come to realize the universal benefit which will flow from cheaper and more abundant facilities for transportation.

One of the most distressing spectacles of the whole war was presented by the railroad administration. With one arm of the Government that administration spent millions of dollars building barges and towboats, trying to establish commerce upon the Mississippi, while with another arm of the Government it wasted millions of dollars carrying commerce at half of the cost on the rail lines paralleling the river trying to keep commerce off the Mississippi. And yet people wonder why it was that during the war the railroads lost money and the barge line was not a financial success.

That water transportation is cheaper than rail is conclusively proven by the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission permits rail lines paralleling our rivers to make potential water rates which are far less than compensatory to the railroads. And this point is demonstrated by the further fact that the rate upon hardware from St. Louis to Reno, Nev., is more than the rate upon hardware from St. Louis to the Hawaiian Islands. It is interesting to note from the tariffs established by the Interstate Commerce Commission that the rate on 100 pounds of apples from San Francisco to Boston by rail is 75 cents, while the rate upon the same quantity of apples from San Francisco to Kansas City, a little over half the distance, but where no water competition exists, is $1.66; that the rate on 100 pounds of fresh fruits from San Francisco to Boston is $1.25, while the rate on the same fruit from San Francisco to Kansas City is $2.08; that the rate on canned fish and fruits from Seattle to Boston is 65 cents per 100 pounds, while the rate on the same canned goods from Seattle to Kansas City is $1.20; that the rate upon agricultural implements from Boston to Seattle is $1.70 per 100 pounds, while the rate on the same implements from Kansas City to Seattle is $2.38 per 100 pounds; that the rate on 100 pounds of paint from Boston to Seattle is $1, while the rate on the same amount of paint from Kansas City to Seattle is $1.42; that the rate on 100 pounds of machinery from Boston to Seattle is $2, while the rate on the same quantity of machinery from Boston to Cincinnati is $3.03.

Thus it will be observed that the rate between inland points is at least twice as great as between water points. If the railroads can afford to carry 100 pounds of machinery from Boston to Seattle for $2, then they ought not to be permitted to charge $3.03 to haul the same amount of machinery from Boston to Cincinnati, only one-fourth the distance. As a matter of fact they can not afford to make such a rate, and it is only another bit of conclusive proof that they can not successfully meet water competition. If the railroads believed that they could compete with water transportation, why have they carried commerce for almost half a century upon the lines which parallel the rivers and between water points at a rate which was little more than half the cost of operation?

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. LAZARO. Recently we made a shipment of rice from Lake Charles, in Louisiana, in my district, to Lawrence, Tex. The water-rate charge was 10 cents per hundred pounds, and by rail it is 25 cents.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit another interruption?

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Certainly.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. We will never get beyond this condition that the gentleman discusses until we amend the transportation act and prevent any railroad from charging more for a short haul than for a long haul.

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. I have a conviction that the gentleman from Texas is correct.

I must confess that it is difficult for me to comprehend the consistency of our national policy in dealing with facilities for transportation. For years we have permitted a coast to coast rail rate which was less than the cost of transportation to the railroads. We did this in order to induce freight to go by rail instead of by water between water points, and we then permitted the railroads between points where water transportation was not available to charge a rate which was compensatory to the railroads and then to add thereto enough to make up the loss sustained by the railroads in destroying water transportation between water points. This would clearly indicate that it is our national policy to abandon our rivers and the high seas as well and to compel our commerce to go by rail, regardless of the cost. And the Interstate Commerce Commission, by the methods which it pursued in the rates which it has fixed, has clearly indicated that it regarded this as our national policy.

And while the Interstate Commerce Commission, one arm of our National Government, has permitted the railroads to waste hundreds of millions of dollars carrying commerce between water points at a confiscatory rate, at the expense of our inland shippers, in an effort to destroy water transportation in this country, another arm of this great Government, the Congress of the United States, has expended more than $375,000,000 building the Panama Canal, and it has expended an additional sum of $3,800,000,000 through the Shipping Board, and it has expended millions more improving our harbors and inland rivers and building barges and towboats, trying to establish water transportation and to insure a merchant fleet for this country.

If the Interstate Commerce Commission is correct in concluding that it is the policy of this Government to establish and maintain only rail transportation regardless of the cost, then the conduct of Congress in authorizing the expenditure of more than $5,000,000,000 in an effort to establish water transportation and to build a merchant marine is indefensible. If, on the other hand, Congress had represented the will of the people in its effort to build a merchant fleet and establish water transportation, then the Interstate Commerce Commission ought to be compelled to desist from the destructive rate-making policy which it has long pursued.

Not only will river navigation benefit the shippers of the country but it will be helpful to the railroads as well. In the past railroads have squandered millions in cutthroat rates upon lines along the rivers to destroy water competition. And this enormous drain upon the railroad systems of the country had to be made up by excessive charges upon inland shipments. When our rivers are put into use and our railroads cease their foolish policy of trying to destroy a form of competition they never have been and never will be able to meet they will then be able to give to the inland shipper a reasonable rate and still operate at a profit. But the thing which makes me wonder is how long will our inland shippers endure this unjust burden? How long will they be willing to contribute hundreds of millions of dollars to reimburse the railroads for losses sustained in their efforts to prevent the country from developing a merchant fleet and still be patient to pay their share in taxes toward the billions of dollars expended by Congress in an effort to establish a merchant fleet?

Even the railroad lines which parallel the rivers will be benefited by river improvements. In the past they have been operated at a heavy loss, but when river navigation is developed a stream of commerce will begin to flow along our waterways. The bulky, heavy commodities, such as wheat, corn, cotton, sisal, molasses, lumber, cement, stone, and building materials, which pay a low rate of freight and to which speed of transportation is of little consequence, will go upon the waterways, while perishable products and high-priced merchandise, which will increase in volume as commerce grows, which pay a high rate of freight and to which speed of transportation is essential, will go upon the rail lines. Experience in Europe has shown that when waterways are developed the tracks of the rail lines which parallel the rivers are multiplied, and the operation of such lines, because of the high class of freight carried, becomes tremendously profitable.

Those who will profit most and who appreciate least the importance of river navigation are the inland shippers. To-day they are reimbursing the railroads by the payment of excessive rates to and from inland points for the losses sustained by the roads in giving potential water rates upon their lines which parallel the rivers. For illustration, the farmer of Kansas or Nebraska, who to-day attempts to avail himself of a cheap water rate by routing his wheat over a joint rail-and-water haul to New Orleans, is charged enough extra from his farm to the river point to make up the railroad's loss on its potential water rate.

When facilities for water transportation from St. Louis to New Orleans are available and the inland rates are adjusted, the farmer of Kansas or Nebraska will enjoy a reasonable rail rate for his wheat to the nearest river point, and he will then enjoy the full benefit of a cheap river rate to the seaboard. Hence when the rivers are in use and rates are adjusted the inland shipper will receive as much benefit from water navigation as the shipper who lives upon the river's bank, while to-day he is penalized for living inland by being compelled, by the payment of excessive rates, to make good to the railroads the losses sustained by them in destroying water competition. It is the inland shipper who should be aroused and who should understand that he above all others is interested in the development and use of our waterways.

That money appropriated for river improvements is an investment and not an expense is demonstrated by the fact that a section of the Monongahela River in the vicinity of Pittsburgh was improved some years ago at a cost of $12,000,000. Over 24,000,000 tons of freight was carried upon that river last year; 21,000,000 of that consisted of coal, which was carried at 15 cents per ton, while the rail rate was $1.25 per ton, thus making a saving of more than $21,000,000 on coal alone in one year. Over 50,000,000 tons of coal were carried over that river during the past three years. Think of the economy of transportation and the stimulus to industry if this system of transportation could be extended over all the navigable rivers of this country.

One of the problems of vital concern to this Government is the problem of the conservation of steel and coal. During the war the Government determined by investigation and by experiment that 29,000 tons of steel, costing $9,500,000, was sufficient to construct enough barges and towboats to carry annually a million tons of freight between New Orleans and St. Louis. The Government in the same investigation determined that to construct railroad equipment sufficient to carry an equal amount of freight would require 95,000 tons of steel, costing over $30,000,000. In other words, the amount and cost of steel sufficient to carry a given amount of freight by rail is three times as great as the amount necessary to carry an equal amount of freight by water. We find now that the 6 new tow-boats and 40 steel barges, which we will have upon the Mississippi, costing, all told, $5,950,000, will be adequate to carry 1,500,000 tons of freight annually between New Orleans and St. Louis. Furthermore, it has been demonstrated that to carry a given amount of freight by rail consumes practically twice the amount of coal which it is necessary to consume in carrying the same amount of freight by water. As a national policy, in the interest of conservation, how can this country afford to longer delay the improvement and use of our waterways?

The greatest barrier in the past which stood in the way of river improvement has been the lack of cooperation between Congress and the people who live along the waterways. Congress has been saying to the municipalities, "You build the terminals, and we will improve the rivers." The municipalities equally gallant have responded, "You improve the rivers and we will build the terminals." And year after year this Alfonso and Gaston performance has gone merrily on, while the banks continue to crumble and the sandbars continue to form. But a new era is dawning. Many cities along our rivers have built and are building modern up-to-date terminals and others have provided funds therefor, while Congress, in the Esch-Cummings bill, declared it to be the policy of Congress to promote, encourage, and develop water transportation, service, and facilities, in connection with the commerce of the United States and to foster and preserve in full vigor both rail and water transportation.

Furthermore, the Republican convention at Chicago and the Democratic convention at Frisco, in their platforms adopted, and upon which they each appealed to the American people for confidence and support, declared for the improvement and use of our inland rivers, and upon these platforms and bound by this pledge the membership of this House was elected.

I trust that this pledge will be kept, and that this Congress, when it convenes again in December, will in good faith proceed to draft and to enact a rivers and harbors bill which will promote, encourage, and develop water transportation, service, and facilities in this country, and that it will appropriate sufficient funds to insure a system of transportation consisting of railroads, waterways, and highways harmoniously coordinated and fully developed and sufficient to supply at all times cheap and adequate transportation for the products of the farms, the factories, and the mills of this country, and thereby insure our industrial and commercial development. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HAWLEY] is recognized.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am glad that this audience makes up in enthusiasm what it lacks in number.

Mr. CHAMBERS. We are enthusiastic before you start. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I shall not consume much time in discussing this particular measure, because the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] will do that amply and capably. Contrary to the expectation of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN], who reveals by the twinkle in his eye what is in his mind, I am not going to make a partisan speech. [Applause.] I value the applause on the Republican side in answer to that statement.

I desire to discuss American foreign relations, in so far as they affect the Republic of Mexico.

The country is familiar with the fact that from the outbreak of the Madero revolution in 1910, which resulted in the abdication of Porfirio Diaz in 1911, until 1920 Mexico has been disturbed and harassed by a series of revolutions, which brought with them not only the destruction of Mexican property and Mexican life but also the destruction of American lives and American property. During that period De la Barra, Madero, Huerta, Carbojal, Gutierrez, Gorza, Carranza, and De la Huerta, each for a season occupied the Presidency. Governments rose and governments fell, but lawlessness, banditry, turmoil, and disorder continued with them all. During these troublous times the safety of American lives and property in Mexico has properly been of deep concern to the Government of the United States.

Protracted and agitated discussion took place throughout the United States as to the course which this Government should pursue with reference to Mexico. There was always heard a very noisy if not large element of our citizenship who demanded that we intervene with an Army and take charge of the Government and affairs of Mexico—always, of course, upon the basis of benevolent purposes in behalf of the Mexican people themselves. But the mass of our people, I believe, have always contended that the United States should give to Mexico the fullest and freest opportunity possible to work out her own destiny and to solve her own national problems.

Military intervention would have involved years of occupation with an Army or immediate withdrawal. In the former case every element of Mexico—bandit and revolutionist, as well as the patriotic and order-loving citizen—either openly or secretly, would have been drawn into one compact force hostile to American occupation. The suppression of guerilla bands among the mountain fastnesses would probably have cost many thousands of American lives and required years of fruitless but bloody warfare. On the other hand, immediate withdrawal after intervention would have made more insecure the lives and property of American residents in Mexico. The resentment aroused by forcible intervention would have spent its wrath upon the only visible objects of its anger. Fortunately, the United States did not heed the advice of those who clamored for military occupation. The best assurance of safety for Americans and American interests in Mexico has always been in the expectation that finally the Mexican people would establish a Government capable of preserving order and imbued with a respect for its obligations to foreigners. It has been believed by the business interests of Mexico, whose best development depends upon security of life and property, that all patriotic classes of Mexican citizens, if not molested by foreign meddling, would suppress anarchy and establish a firm Government.

In 1920 Gen. Alvaro Obregon was, under the terms of the constitution of Mexico of 1917, elected President, and was inaugurated on December 1 of last year. Up to the present time our Government has not officially recognized the Obregon government, and it is to that aspect of the question that I desire to particularly address my remarks.

The reason why the Government of the United States has not recognized the Obregon government seems to be disclosed in a statement issued by the Department of State on June 7, 1921, in which the department indicates that unless the Republic of Mexico enters into a treaty with the United States which particularly stipulates that article 27 of the Mexican constitution of 1917 shall be construed in a certain and particular way, the recognition of this Government shall be withheld.

I quote from the statement:

If these provisions are to be put into effect retroactively, the properties of American citizens will be confiscated on a great scale. This would constitute an international wrong of the gravest character and this Government would not submit to its accomplishment. If it be said that this wrong is not intended, and that the constitution of Mexico, of 1917, will not be construed to permit, or enforced so as to effect, confiscation, then it is important that this should be made clear by guarantees in proper form. The provisions of the Constitution and the Executive decrees which have been formulated with confiscatory purposes, make it obviously necessary that the purposes of Mexico should be definitely set forth.

Accordingly this Government has proposed a treaty of amity and commerce with Mexico, in which Mexico will agree to safeguard the rights of property which attached before the constitution of 1917 was promulgated.

I want to call the attention of the Congress and of the country, however, to the fact that since Obregon became president of Mexico conditions there have vastly improved. He is the first President of Mexico, or the first executive, who has been in control of Mexican affairs since Diaz abdicated, who has been able to establish law and order in the Republic of Mexico. He has already put down with a determined and firm hand every revolutionist of any consequence, and every conspicuous leader of the bandit bands throughout the Republic, and that country which has been so unhappy and so unfortunate in the past is now enjoying the blessings of order and of government.

American travelers in Mexico have informed me that such conditions now obtain. We find that Obregon has also evinced a broad and liberal spirit in his dealings with foreign Governments. He has officially and publicly expressed a desire for American capital to be expended in Mexico, and he has officially, through his diplomatic representatives, given assurance that American property and American lives shall be respected.

We must remember, gentlemen of the House, that the Fall committee which investigated Mexican affairs reported that American damage claims pending against Mexico amount to something like $50,000,000. On the 26th of last October Señor Pasqueira, the confidential representative in the United States of President Obregon, addressed an official communication to the Department of State in which he specifically pledged this country that Obregon is ready and willing to set up an international arbitration commission for the purpose of settling and determining the claims of foreigners for loss and damage suffered during the revolutions in Mexico.

Let me read excerpts from that communication:

Mexico to-day is not merely planning a future of happiness and justice for all within her borders. Out of our new strength we are willing and eager to play our proper part in the creation of a new and better order that will lift ancient burdens from the back of humanity.

A first task, of course, is firm and enduring friendship between Mexico and the United States. Not only are we neighbors, but every other consideration points to the wisdom of an understanding that goes beyond mere treaties and sinks its roots into the heart of each nation. We have the same political institutions, the same aspirations, the same ideals, the same goals.

The Mexican Government is prepared to establish a joint arbitration commission to pass upon and adjudicate the claims presented by foreigners on account of damages occasioned during the revolution. Any claim that can not be adjusted by means of direct negotiations between the claimant and the Mexican Government will be submitted to the consideration of this commission, whose decisions will be deemed final and binding.

Mexico has likewise upheld that, in order to place international relations on a solid foundation, the existence of a permanent machinery or arbitration is essential for the purpose of deciding any difference. As regards the United States specifically, Mexico has already expressed her intentions in article 21 of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and is prepared to enlarge and strengthen this machinery.

Our plan is to establish a national program based on order and justice. It is our firm belief that the people of North America are just as faithful to their own high ideals. Hence, nothing could better shield the dignity of both Republics, as nothing could be more efficacious for the continuance of peaceful relations, than the operation of a commission of this nature, organized in accordance with recognized international practices.

If in days past we have been so anxious for a settlement of American claims for damage in Mexico and for indemnification for loss of American lives in Mexico that we were willing—some of us at least—to send the Army and the Navy to Mexico, it seems to me that now, when we have an opportunity of securing the settlement of American claims by peaceable and legal and constitutional methods, this Government should certainly recognize the Government of President Obregon and accept his offer to establish a tribunal to determine the issues that are now at stake.

But it is contended that article 27 of the constitution of 1917 may possibly be construed by the Mexican Government as retroactive, and that thereby the title of American citizens to oil lands in Mexico may be jeopardized.

In the same communication to which I have just referred the diplomatic representative of President Obregon makes the following statement:

President de la Huerta—

Who was the provisional president who held office just before Obregon was inaugurated—as well as President-elect Obregon have on repeated occasions publicly declared that Mexico will respect all rightful claims duly proved as such, submitting herself to the recognized principles of international law.

And he proceeds as follows:

Another cause of deep national resentment for the Mexican Government is the oft-repeated assertion that our laws are of a retroactive and confiscatory nature, and that our national program is based on a policy of confiscation. This is entirely groundless. Not one square yard of land has been confiscated in Mexico, not a single legitimate right of property has been annulled. Nor do we intend to deviate from this fundamental policy. President de la Huerta and President-elect Obregon have also made repeated public declarations to the effect that article 27 of the Mexican federal constitution is not and must not be interpreted as retroactive or violative of valid property rights.

We are proud people, and the source of our pride is as high a conception of national honor as was ever erected by any nation. Therefore, sir, when the Mexican Government declares that it is willing and ready to assume full responsibility for all of its international obligations it is a solemn pledge that will be kept to the letter.

Gentlemen of the House, during the years of turmoil and tumult in Mexico we have longed for the time when order might be restored. We have been anxious for the time to come in that unhappy Republic when security for life and property might be guaranteed. Under the existing Government of Mexico those things are now being actually realized, and I believe that if the United States wants to do its just and proper share not only for its own citizens resident in Mexico but for the Republic of Mexico it should recognize officially the government of President Obregon and give him a chance to make stable his rule in Mexico.

The Mexican people are a proud people, a people of Latin blood; and whenever the Government of the United States requires President Obregon by treaty to agree to modify or amend the constitution of Mexico, or agree to any particular construction, as a condition precedent to the recognition of that country by the United States, the United States imposes an obligation that is politically impossible of performance. Whenever President Obregon agrees with a foreign nation in order to secure recognition that he will bind himself to procure an amendment or modification of the constitution of Mexico, he may secure recognition abroad, but may lose it at home. The Mexican nature is such that if a Mexican president should adopt such a course he would lose much support at home. Some military leader, some adventurer would soon rally around him an army, and the rule of Obregon would be endangered. President Obregon realizes that condition, and he fears to pledge his country to the modification or amendment or particular construction of the constitution of Mexico lest he injure his own prestige at home.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I will.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman referred to the fact that he expected to talk on a different subject and that I might not agree with him. I want to say that I agree most cordially with what he has been saying. I think myself that we put President Obregon in an impossible condition, one that he can not afford to listen to, and yet I think we will get justice from him in another way.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I am gratified to have the approval of the gentleman from Iowa and have him agree with my views. If we withhold recognition from Mexico, does that course give any added security to American citizens and property in the Republic? Are those interests better guaranteed without recognition of the Mexican Government? On the other hand, if the Obregon Government is recognized, does not that course promote a spirit of cooperation, and does it not give to the Mexican Government incentive to see that American property and American citizens are protected?

Attention should be directed to the fact that practically all of the countries of South and Central America have recognized the Obregon government. We can foster and build up a better feeling throughout South and Central America by recognizing the Obregon government rather than by withholding recognition. An impression of American coercion to secure recognition should be avoided.

Great Britain has not recognized the government of President Obregon because Great Britain delays and waits for action by the Government of the United States. The close connection of the two countries during the Great War as well as British custom would suggest that course.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Yes.

Mr. ACKERMAN. The gentleman anticipated me in saying Great Britain has not recognized the Mexican Government, but I would like to ask the gentleman if any other European countries have recognized it?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Spain, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, and Japan have all recognized the Obregon government. Mexico claims that France has also, although our State Department says that that is not true.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. When did the German Government recognize the Mexican Government?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I do not know the date, but I have it from the State Department that it has. It was some time since December, of course, because Obregon only took office the 1st of December.

Mr. LINEBERGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I will.

Mr. LINEBERGER. Does not the gentleman anticipate that practically immediately after the recognition by the United States of the Government of Mexico that the European nations which have not recognized Mexico will follow suit? I will say that I am much interested in the gentleman's remarks for I resided in Mexico 10 years. I recognize that the gentleman has made a correct estimate of the Mexican character and the political conditions that exist in that country.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Great Britain has not recognized the Obregon government for the reason that the United States has not yet recognized it. Now, I want to say to the gentlemen of this House that if we intend to adhere to the Monroe doctrine—and I know that we do, for I should never be willing to abrogate adherence to that doctrine—but if we, in pursuance of that doctrine, expect to exert an influence on this hemisphere to the exclusion of European nations we must not do those things which will alienate the affections and respect of the Latin Americans on these two continents. We ought to recognize that in pursuance of the policy we proclaim when we avow our adherence to the Monroe doctrine we assume certain responsibilities, and those responsibilities require that we give our aid and assistance to the republics to the south of us in order that they may on their responsibility work out their own destiny.

The Monroe doctrine may be best maintained by giving assurance to nations of the Western Hemisphere that the interest of the United States in their welfare does not spring from selfishness or an ambition to exploit their peoples or their resources. Under that doctrine we forbid the establishment in South or Central America of any European system. By the assumption of such a guardianship over the political life of Latin America we must also embrace the accompanying responsibility to aid and assist them in their aspirations for republican and constitutional government. Our high ambitions in this regard can best be realized by cultivating the broadest spirit of international friendship and mutual respect and consideration. It is difficult to exercise a guardianship over a ward that feels resentful and rebellious, even though there may be no foundation for such an attitude. We can not continue to adhere to our traditional policy enunciated by President Monroe if Europe, Japan, and the South American Republics themselves, the objects of our solicitude, should be hostile to that policy.

May I be allowed to here point out a number of reasons why the present Mexican Government should be recognized by the United States?

It is the only Mexican Government since that of Diaz which has been able to maintain order and put down insurrection and rebellion.

It has announced a broad and friendly attitude toward American capital and American citizens, and President Obregon is reputed to be extremely friendly to the United States and its citizens.

He has given assurances that article 27 of the Mexican constitution of 1917 shall not be construed retroactively.

The present Mexican Government avows its willingness and readiness to establish a joint arbitration commission to pass upon and settle claims by foreigners for damages sustained during the revolution.

American rights and American citizens can better be protected by a government which has been recognized by the United States than by one from which recognition is withheld.

Argentina, Costa Rica, Chile, Colombia, Guatemala, Uruguay, Spain, Switzerland, China, and Austria have recognized the Obregon Government, and Mexico claims that Ecuador, Honduras, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, Nicaragua, Bolivia, Brazil, Holland, Japan, and Germany have also recognized her Government.

Recognition by the United States will promote friendship for the United States among all nations of Central and South America, as well as Mexico, because if Obregon promises the United States to amend the Mexican constitution he may gain recognition abroad but may lose recognition at home.

When to the south of us we find a government constitutionally selected, a government maintaining order, a government putting down insurrection, a government protecting life and property, a government willing to respect its international obligations, a government willing to establish a tribunal to arbitrate and settle the claims of not only Americans but of all other nationals for the loss of life or the loss of property, this great Nation should not withhold its recognition simply on a quibble, on a technicality, especially when President Obregon solemnly, through his own representative, in writing, pledges the United States that he will respect American lives and American property, and that he will see that constitutional guaranties are respected throughout the Republic. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SUMMERS].

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. FREAR].

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Chairman, I presume that it is unnecessary for me to speak on the resolution before the House, but I was asked to do so by the chairman of the investigating committee, of which I was a member, that went into the property that was sold to France. I do not think there is much opposition, if any, to the passage of this resolution, but I may be mistaken as to that.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FREAR. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. If I understood the position of the gentleman, it is that he is opposed to an embargo with reference to the shipping of any goods from any country into this country or from this country to any other country.

Mr. FREAR. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. In view of the statement of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM], which I considered very frank, that this is equal to an embargo, the same as an embargo, what position does the gentleman occupy with reference to this bill?

Mr. FREAR. I thank the gentleman for giving me an opportunity to explain just that very fact. I agree on the subject of an embargo, particularly a three-year embargo. I voted to-day for a three-month embargo simply because under my view of the protective-tariff duty that has been placed under the old Hill bill it was impossible to protect the industries and they might have been wiped out. I do not question the right of any gentleman on the Democratic side who does not believe in the protective theory to vote against that, as he did, and I should probably have done the same if I were in a similar position. In regard to this question, we have practically an embargo upon all war goods that were in this country. The Secretary of War, or whoever stood behind him, refused to sell goods which ought to have been sold, and that was one thing which it seemed to me we might justly have criticized back in the days following the war, when all this surplus property was on hand. To-day we have millions of dollars' worth of surplus property in the city of Chicago, and to my mind it ought to be sold. It ought to be declared surplus and sold; but this property of which he speaks here was sent over to France.

Of course, we know that it would be difficult to get it back here, and $150,000,000 has been suggested as the cost of sending it back. The property was then turned over, as we were informed in the committee, by the Government of France to speculators, who are profiteers, and now they have this property up and they propose to bring it back here and to do what Mr. Baker objected to having done with the property here.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FREAR. The Secretary of War, Mr. Baker, refused to sell property here, because, as he frequently gave out his statement, and as we remember, he feared that it would interfere with business; he thought it would be unfortunate for business to have that property sold at that time. Here is the same proposition, except that now this property is in the hands of profiteers, who bought it for a song. They wish to bring it over here and dump it on the American market. I do not care whether the rate is fixed at 90 per cent or 75 per cent or some other per cent. It seems to me that it is improper to allow that material to come back into this country in competition with other goods here unless a reasonable protective duty is placed upon it. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Does the gentleman consider 90 per cent a reasonable protective tariff?

Mr. FREAR. I would be willing to have the gentleman from Tennessee put it lower than 90 per cent. I do not believe that we would get any of it here under the 90 per cent duty; but I do feel this, that we are adopting by this bill practically the same rule laid down by the Secretary of War, Mr. Baker, and it did not seem to me a fair proposition. I wanted to see the goods sold.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Let us be perfectly frank about this.

Mr. FREAR. Certainly.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Gen. Dawes—

Mr. FREAR. Oh, I am referring to goods over here.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Gen. Dawes sold this property.

Mr. FREAR. That is conceded, but the gentleman does not get my point. What I refer to are goods here at that time, that were held here, which were surplus material, which we had prepared for the war. Those goods were not sold. They even refused to sell canned meats and things of that kind, which ought to have been sold in this country.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Oh, that is in this country.

Mr. FREAR. That is what I say. That is the principle laid down by the administration at that time. I did not think it was right at that time and I do not think it is right now. I think these goods should be sold, but I want to have a sufficient protection put upon them so as to meet the difference in the cost.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The property against which this bill is leveled, so far as I can ascertain, is the property which Gen. Dawes sold in a lump.

Mr. FREAR. That is right, unquestionably.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I wonder if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] agrees with the gentleman in that respect?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Oh, Gen. Dawes was a member of the American Liquidation Commission, if that is what the gentleman means. He was a member of the commission that made the sale.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. And he sold it, did he not?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. He did not sell it; the commission sold it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. But he absolutely dominated the commission at that time.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. No; the big man on the commission was Mr. Parker.

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FREAR. Yes.

Mr. LAZARO. Will the gentleman please tell us how this property was sold, whether at auction or in a private way?

Mr. FREAR. I could not say that, but I can say that it was represented to our committee, of which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] is the chairman, by testimony taken in Europe, that some of the property was practically sacrificed. It would have been thrown away, as he states here. For instance, take the property to which the Government could not get title, upon which buildings had been erected.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. FREAR. Will the gentleman give me two minutes more?

Mr. HAWLEY. I will yield the gentleman two minutes.

Mr. FREAR. We have got to lose all that, $150,000,000 insisted on as duty by the French Government; we will have to lose that or have to sell this property as we are obliged to at a great sacrifice. Now, the question is of bringing that property back here, but the principle is the same as that adopted by the Secretary of War when he refused, in reference to the property that was in this country where there was surplus property, to sell it and prevent it from coming in competition with goods here. I think it ought to have been brought in competition to the extent of helping relieve the high prices in this country.

Mr. LAZARO. I understand it was sold, but what I wanted to find out was how this property got into the hands of the profiteers?

Mr. FREAR. It was sold by the French Government to those people for practically a song, and that is the explanation.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FREAR. I will.

Mr. GARNER. I wish the gentleman would state for the benefit of the House, and especially for his Republican colleagues, the extent of the hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means on this bill and the information that is given to the committee, if any.

Mr. FREAR. Well, the distinguished gentleman from Texas was present with me at one hearing, I think.

Mr. GARNER. There was no hearing; I was not present at any hearing. There was no such thing as one minute of hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means or a single scintilla of evidence submitted.

Mr. FREAR. I presume the gentleman was present when Mr. Graham appeared?

Mr. GARNER. I was not, and it was not a regular meeting of the committee. The Republicans might have been, but no Democrats.

Mr. FREAR. I hate to be held responsible for the action of the Ways and Means Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FREAR. I will leave Brother FORDNEY to answer that.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT].

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, a terrific row was raised about the leather contract that was entered into by Byron, Getts & Benkhe. The opposition to that came from the leather producers of this country—the tanners and leather manufacturers. Now, it seems in some way the President, I believe, ordered a cancellation of that contract—

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes; it was canceled by Executive order of the President.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. By Executive order? So the leather producers and tanners have had that done away with? Now, if this bill passes preventing the reimportation of all leather goods, I suppose the tanners and leather manufacturers will have their way also. Is that right, I will ask the gentleman?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Does the gentleman ask me the question?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Well, when the contract was canceled the harness that belonged to the War Department remained in the custody of the War Department, and is there now for sale and will be sold and disposed of. It did not pass to anyone else. It is owned by the Government. The Government concluded it was sold at too cheap a price and under fraudulent circumstances.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. That means, of course, the leather manufacturers now have no competition but that which we have in our own country.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It does not mean that at all. The Government is going to sell and thinks it can sell it for more than the United States Harness Co. was going to pay.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. It does not mean they will have no competition along that line?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Not at all. It will have that competition.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman allow me three minutes additional?

Mr. GARNER. I yield the gentleman three additional minutes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It will have this competition: The large stock of surplus leather goods and harness which was sold to the United States Harness Co., and which the President has held to be a fraudulent sale, is now in the hands of the War Department, and plans are now being made to sell that harness in another way to the public, as a result of which plan the Government thinks it can get more money than it did from the United States Harness Co. That is the situation.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. So that the competition is withdrawn from the leather manufacturers, tanners, and so forth, for the time being?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Not at all.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. But they are kept off the market.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Not necessarily. The competitor as to harness, I will say, is now the United States Government, where originally it was the United States Harness Co. That is the only difference.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. But the product is withdrawn from the market under the President's order?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It is not withdrawn from the market. It is going to be sold by the Government.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. It is withdrawn temporarily.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I understand it is being sold now, part of it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. This bill will withdraw all that which was shipped abroad.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. This bill will prevent speculators from buying stuff that we practically gave to France, that they are sending back here and reselling.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Oh, well, Mr. Chairman, the contract in regard to the leather goods was a contract that was subject to question, not by reason of any particular doubt of the honor and honesty of men, because I think they were all thoroughly honest, but that which the gentleman from Illinois has succeeded in doing now, after his activities as chairman of the committee on investigation, causing the cancellation of the contract of the President of the United States, or the attempt to cancel it, that withdrew a large amount of leather goods, such as harness, from the market, is to increase the price of leather goods if the gentlemen want to take advantage of it. Now he wishes to go a step further and prevent reimportation of any of those goods that were sent abroad. The gentleman from Illinois has succeeded wonderfully in protecting the consumers of harness goods.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has again expired.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. HAWLEY. And I also yield three minutes to him.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for six minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, much has been said about the railroad question within the last few days, and much more is still to be said about it. I do not blame my colleagues for trying to render to the country some kind of an excuse for the railroad situation—some kind of an excuse for taking over the railroads in the first instance. When we entered the war there were just two things to do. We were up against a situation with respect to the railroads where we had to take one horn of the dilemma. There were just two roads, and we had to take one of them. We had to have the service from the railroads, and the million employees stated emphatically that unless they received three-quarters of a billion dollars annual raise in salary not a railroad would run. They would tie up every engine from San Francisco to the Atlantic Ocean. The railroads could not and would not have paid their demands. How could we have met the situation? Why, if we had just passed a little one-page bill here preventing strikes on railroads during the war, as was proposed by a Senator over yonder and as was proposed here in the House by myself, the railroad situation would have been solved and we would not have had to take them over. But we could not pass the one-page bill preventing strikes on railroads because Congressmen were afraid of the unions. We provided that during the war we could take men away from their homes and firesides and from their businesses and their families and send them to the trenches of France to fight for $33 a month, but you were afraid to provide that the railroad men should not strike during the war and tie up our commerce and war munitions. It would have been easy to pass that kind of a law had you not been afraid of the unions, and that would have been just the thing to have done, as many of these railroad engineers and conductors were then getting over $300 per month already, but you could not stand the pressure. You did not have the courage. You got weak-kneed. You were afraid of the organizations, and we had to do the other thing. We had to take the railroads over, and when we took them over, Brother FORDNEY, you and every Republican Member on this floor knew that those railroad employees were going to get from the Government everything that they had demanded from the railroads—not from a Democratic Government; they could not have gotten it from us if you Republicans had not been willing. But what did the railroad employees do? Just as soon as we took the railroads over and they became Government employees they went to McAdoo and said, "If you do not turn us over $754,000,000 at once and date back six months on our salaries we will tie you up." We will not let a train run from the Atlantic to the Pacific. And McAdoo did it. He turned over to them $754,000,000 in cash out of the Treasury, and he did it because you Republican Members were willing and let him do it.

Mr. FORDNEY. I did not put him in office.

Mr. BLANTON. No; but you let him be held up by the employees. He knew you were not going to pass the little one-page antistrike bill. The country needed railroad service to win the war. So he paid it. And then McAdoo resigned, and he ought to have resigned. Hines took his place. Hines had not got his seat warm before these hungry highwaymen came back and said, "You have got to turn us over $67,000,000 more and date it back." And Director Hines did as they required of him. And he did it with your consent, because you are weak-kneed. And you know it. And before these employees quit demanding they received over $1,000,000,000 in annual raises of wages. If you live 10,000 years, you never will get excused by the people for taking over the railroads, when you could have avoided it by defying the unions. We would have escaped all these terrible burdens and responsibility if we had prevented strikes from occurring on railroads during the war. That was our duty.

The newspapers, why, they are hog tied and hamstrung worse than are you Members of Congress. Do you know why they have not let the country know the truth about why the railroads were taken over? It is because their typographical oath prevents it. Thank God, we now have an acknowledged authentic copy of their oath. On Monday, May 23, 1921, upon request, Mr. Edgar Wallace, representative of the American Federation of Labor, produced at a hearing before the District Committee on the antipicketing bill a copy of the constitution of the International Typographical Union, same being the personal copy belonging to Mr. Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, with his name printed on the back, and which, on page 15 thereof, under the heading "Obligation for members," appeared the oath taken by all members of said Typographical Union, to wit:

Every person admitted as a member of this union shall subscribe to the following obligation, which shall apply only to matters pertaining to the printing industry:

"I (give name) hereby solemnly and sincerely swear (or affirm) that I will not reveal any business or proceedings of any meeting of this or any subordinate union to which I may hereafter be attached, unless by order of the union, except to those whom I know to be members in good standing thereof; that I will, without equivocation or evasion and to the best of my ability, abide by the constitution, by-laws, and the adopted scale of prices of any union to which I may belong; that I will at all times support the laws, regulations, and decisions of the International Typographical Union, and will carefully avoid giving aid or succor to its enemies, and use all honorable means within my power to procure employment for members of the International Typographical Union in preference to others; that my fidelity to the union and my duty to the members thereof shall in no sense be interfered with by any allegiance that I may now or hereafter owe to any other organization, social, political, or religious, secret or otherwise; that I will belong to no society or combination composed wholly or partly of printers, with the intent or purpose to interfere with the trade regulations or influence or control the legislation of this union; that I will not wrong a member, or see him or her wronged, if in my power to prevent. To all of which I pledge my most sacred honor."

You will note in said oath that each member swears:

That my fidelity to the union and my duty to the members thereof shall in no sense be interfered with by any allegiance that I may now or hereafter owe to any other organization, social, political, or religious, secret or otherwise.

There is not a big daily newspaper that will ever mention this question. Why? They are tied up so tight by their employees, every man connected with it under that Typographical Union oath, that everybody knows put the interests of the union before the interest of this Government, they can do nothing. This authentic oath was printed in said hearings. It puts the union above our country and above God Almighty and fraternity and everything else. That is the reason why the newspapers will not help us out. They are hamstrung. Our boys up there in the press gallery could write 14 pages of stuff on this railroad question and tell the real reason why we took them over, but there are only 14 newspapers in the United States that would dare to publish one line of such truth about the question. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I think I have only one more speech. How much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 13 minutes.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, the trouble with my friend from Texas [Mr. GARNER] is that he never reads anything in the report, but gets up here and talks at random. If he had read the report he would not have made the statement he has just made. The automobile list is here. On the first page there is listed 38,000 automobiles and trucks. Let me tell the gentleman what is over there in Europe, some of which is being shipped back to the United States. First let me say to the gentleman from Texas and Members of the House that of the goods sold and listed here $1,722,000,000 were sold over there for $400,000,000, and were sold by the Democrats.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Gen. Dawes sold them.

Mr. FORDNEY. It was under a Democratic administration. Whether it was Dawes or whoever it was, Woodrow Wilson ordered it to be done.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I make the statement now that Gen. Dawes sold those goods.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not yield. There is some harness over there for sale now coming back. We had 148,000 horses at the close of the war, and there was in the possession of the War Department 975,000 saddles, most of them in France, with an order in for 500,000 more. That is what your party did with the taxpayers' money. We had 148,000 horses, and 46,000 of those were in Europe, and we had 1,500,000 halters on hand, with an order in for 500,000 more; this is my information. I want to compliment the gentlemen in charge of the matter of branding horses upon their humanity. Heretofore horses have been branded upon the shoulder or the hip with a branding iron—a red-hot branding iron, which burned in the letters "U. S." upon the horses' shoulders or hips. They thought that very inhuman, and they ordered branding irons to brand horses on their hoofs made of a combination of copper and steel; and they had on hand when the armistice was signed 195,000 branding irons, for which they paid $14 each, or a total of $2,730,000—but they had not branded a blamed horse. [Laughter and applause.] Oh, what intelligence from the Democratic Party in handling the people's money.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Just for a question.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Moss & Co. made those irons, and every member connected with that concern is a Republican.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not know whether the gentleman knows that or not. I do not, and I do not care the snap of my finger what their politics were. It was a cost-plus contract, undoubtedly ordered by Woodrow Wilson or his lieutenants.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] will tell the gentleman that every member connected with that concern is a Republican.

Mr. FORDNEY. All right, if he tells it, I believe him. The gentleman says we had no hearings. Why, we had before us the greatest expert on earth with reference to this matter, and that is the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GARNER. Who heard him?

Mr. FORDNEY. I heard him. That was enough to satisfy me. The Republican members, the majority of the Ways and Means Committee, the business end of the Ways and Means Committee, heard everything he said.

Mr. GARNER. Why did not the gentleman give that information to the remainder of the Ways and Means Committee?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, there is a full moon in the sky, and the gentleman has not yet seen it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. It has been extremely difficult to get away from the crooks that made contracts and took advantage of the Government. I mean those who were Republicans, who were crooks—

Mr. FORDNEY. Who were the crooks? The gentleman's party was in full control, with control in the White House down here on Pennsylvania Avenue, with Secretary Baker and the Secretary of the Navy under instructions issuing those cost-plus contracts—criminally wrong.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. I can not yield now.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I can tell him one claim that he might look into, and that is the claim of the Standard Steel Car Co., owned by Mr. Mellon, now Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. FORDNEY. I decline to yield. On July 17 last the steamer Georgia, from St. Nazaire, France, brought back a cargo of goods. If the gentleman wants to know what is being sold over there, I can tell him a few of the items. Sixty-six thousand one hundred and thirty cases of horseshoes. They had many million horseshoes on hand when the armistice was signed to be used for 148,000 horses. Fourteen thousand five hundred and forty-three cases of horseshoe nails. Oh, there is a long list of stuff here in the report; the gentleman knows what is in the report.

Let me point out what you did in the tariff act of October 3, 1913. You provided in that law that articles, the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported should come in free. We do not propose to have them come back free if we can help it.

Forty thousand automobile trucks and automobiles by the Democratic Party sent to France after the armistice was signed, after the war was over! Oh, what good business, what good business judgment it was. Now that stuff is coming back, after having been sold over there at 25 cents on the dollar, disrupting business here with American citizens out of employment, and gentlemen on that side, why, the only excuse they offer for not voting for this bill is that the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee did not publish everything in their report that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] gave in his statement. We reported all the principal facts that were necessary. Now our Democratic friends find that as an excuse to vote against this bill, just as reasonable as any other tariff argument ever offered by the Democrats, and this after Grandmother Woodrow, with the aid of his southern children, did everything in their power to help bankrupt the American taxpayers. They went out through the country and said to the people and to Members in the House, "If you vote against war measures asked for by this administration you will be considered pro-German."

We said, as Republicans loyal and because we wanted to win this war, "We are going to vote for everything the administration asks for to carry on this war, but if you mismanage affairs the Republicans are not responsible for it, but the Democratic Party is, and we will hold your party responsible." That is what we did; we were loyal to this Government, not alone to the Democratic Party, but we trusted that party to manage the affairs of this Government. The people had voted them into power. God knows I would have put them out if I could, and I never voted to put them in. But did you manage the affairs of this Government well? No; you took over the railroads for no other purpose than to get political votes—1,900,000 men employed—and the Democratic Party—the President—came here to the House and said it was necessary to take over the railroads, the telephones, and telegraph lines and steamship companies in order to win this war. There was a little plug-line telephone company up in my State, and they took that over. I want to know what in the name of God that telephone company had to do with the war in Europe. I found out what it was taken over for. That and other telephone and cable lines, so that when Woodrow Wilson was in Paris, France, cutting a great dash, with 1,385 people taken over with him, paying $600,000 to one hotel while he was there, he did not want any information to come back to this country that he did not control, and therefore he took over all the telegraph and telephone lines to accomplish his political purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired and the Clerk will read.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the resolution to the House with a favorable recommendation—

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will first report the resolution.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask that the resolution be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That all goods, wares, merchandise, military and naval supplies, of any kind whatsoever, originally exported from the United States of America for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces or the Governments associated with the Government of the United States of America in the war with Germany and Austria and which shall have been sold or delivered to any foreign Government, person, or persons by the United States Liquidation Commission or by any other agent or official of the United States of America, when re-imported into the United States of America, shall pay a duty of 90 per cent ad valorem, the value of such articles to be fixed on a basis equivalent to the original value of such articles in the United States, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The committee amendments were read, as follows:

Page 1, line 3, after the word "merchandise," strike out the word "military" and insert "and military."

On page 1, line 9, after the word "Government," strike out "person or persons" and insert "individual, partnership, corporation, or association."

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The question is on the committee amendments.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the resolution to the House with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the resolution as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. McARTHUR, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration House joint resolution 183, and had directed him to report the same to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and the resolution as amended do pass.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution and amendments thereto to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on the amendments? If not, the Chair will put them en grosse.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the resolution.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the Chair permit a parliamentary inquiry?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. BLANTON. If a demand be now made for the reading of the engrossed copy, would it not give the Members a chance to read the debate before they voted on the bill? If they did, it might change the votes of some of them.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think that is a parliamentary inquiry. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the resolution.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the reading of the engrossed copy for the purpose stated.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold that motion for a moment?

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill and joint resolution of the following titles:

S. 1934. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Huntington & Ohio Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a highway and street railway bridge across the Ohio River between the city of Huntington, W. Va., and a point opposite in the State of Ohio; and

S. J. Res. 36. Joint resolution authorizing the appointment of a commission to confer with the Dominion Government or the provincial governments thereof as to certain restrictive orders in council of the said Provinces relative to the exportation of pulp wood and paper therefrom to the United States.

RESIGNATIONS FROM COMMITTEES.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following communications, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

AUGUST 11, 1921.

Hon. F. H. GILLET, Speaker, House of Representatives.

DEAR SIR: I hereby tender my resignation as a member of the Committee on the Public Lands and Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Very respectfully,

P. H. DREWRY.

AUGUST 11, 1921.

Hon. F. H. GILLET, Speaker, House of Representatives.

I hereby resign my membership upon the following committees of the House: Insular Affairs, Elections No. 1, Patents.

Very respectfully,

W. B. BOWLING.

ELECTION OF MEMBERS TO COMMITTEES.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GARNER moves the election of Mr. BOWLING, of Alabama, to membership on the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the motion will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I also ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GARNER moves the election of Mr. DREWRY, of Virginia, to membership on the Committee on Insular Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the motion will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Mr. LAMAR JEFFERS, of Alabama, be, and he is hereby, elected to the Committee on the Public Lands.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resolution will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on House joint resolution 183.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on House joint resolution 183. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by printing a tribute to Maj. STEDMAN, of North Carolina, which appeared in a current magazine.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks by printing an article relative to Maj. STEDMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, August 12, 1921, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. HOCH, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2301) granting the consent of Congress to the Old Trails Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Missouri River, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 339), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. McFADDEN, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill (S. 1915) to provide for the purchase of farm products in the United States, to sell the same in foreign countries, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 340), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8076) granting an increase of pension to Snowden Jones, and the same was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ARENTZ: A bill (H. R. 8183) making appropriation for the United States mint at Carson City, Nev.; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 8184) to punish persons who sell military or naval decorations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. OVERSTREET: A bill (H. R. 8207) authorizing the Secretary of War to transfer to the Georgia Hussars all right and title now vested in the United States to the western dummy fort in the park extension in the city of Savannah, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 186) to reduce the Army to 75,000 enlisted men, exclusive of the Philippine Scouts; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina: Resolution (H. Res. 171) directing the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to furnish to the House of Representatives certain information; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. LANKFORD: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, urging Congress to appropriate money for the elimination of the boll weevil; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. WRIGHT: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, memorializing Congress to set aside money for elimination of the boll weevil; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, urging Congress to amend the transportation act of 1920; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOWELL: A bill (H. R. 8185) granting a pension to Mary J. Wylie; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EVANS: A bill (H. R. 8186) for the relief of the First National Bank of Walthill, Nebr.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 8187) granting an increase of pension to Clarence R. Solomon; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GILLET: A bill (H. R. 8188) for the relief of William Wiest; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HUTCHINSON: A bill (H. R. 8189) for the relief of Bertha Newton Rich; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A bill (H. R. 8190) granting a pension to Anna B. Brackett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEARNS: A bill (H. R. 8191) granting a pension to Amanda Johnson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: A bill (H. R. 8192) granting a pension to Catherine Kennedy; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KINKAID: A bill (H. R. 8193) to amend the first proviso in the act entitled "An act to grant a certain parcel of land, part of the Fort Robinson Military Reservation, Nebr., to the village of Crawford, Nebr., for park purposes," approved June 25, 1906; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KNUTSON: A bill (H. R. 8194) granting an increase of pension to Gustav Buelow; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LOWREY: A bill (H. R. 8195) to carry into effect the findings of the Court of Claims in favor of Dora Alexander Miller and Emma Alexander in her own right and as administratrix of estates of Jennie Alexander, deceased, and of Charlie T. Alexander, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8196) for the relief of the heirs or legal representative of Nat W. Fant, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8197) granting an increase of pension to Malcom C. Rogers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAPES: A bill (H. R. 8198) granting a pension to John H. Dority; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MOORE of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 8199) granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Mackey; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SWEET: A bill (H. R. 8200) granting a pension to Rosetta Moon; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8201) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the town of Hazleton, Iowa, one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. VAILE: A bill (H. R. 8202) granting an increase of pension to William McDermott; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WINGO: A bill (H. R. 8203) for the relief of the legal representatives of the estate of Henry H. Sibley, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WURZBACH: A bill (H. R. 8204) granting a pension to Fred J. Souther; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8205) granting a pension to John S. Souther; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8206) for the relief of Lena Owens; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2360. By the SPEAKER (by request): Cablegram from the Association De Hacendados y Colonos, of Cuba, urging larger concessions to Cuban sugar and tobacco in the reciprocity treaty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2361. Also (by request), resolution of the St. Paul Council of the American Association for the Relief of the Irish Republic, opposing the Penrose bill (S. 2135); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2362. By Mr. BURTON: Petition from divers citizens of Cleveland, Ohio, praying for recognition of the Irish republic; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2363. By Mr. CRAMTON: Letter of W. D. Block, president of the W. D. Block Motor Co., of Detroit, Mich., protesting against the proposed tax on automobiles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2364. Also, petition of Mrs. Fred Wilber and other residents, of Tuscola County, Mich., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388, aiming to regulate Sunday observance by civil force under penalty for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2365. Also, petition of Mr. Evert C. Stringer and other residents, of Tuscola County, Mich., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388, which aims to regulate Sunday observance by civil force under penalty in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2366. By Mr. DRIVER: Petition of C. J. Perry, vice president of the Farmers' Bank, of Bay, Ark., protesting against the proposed stamp tax on bank checks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2367. By Mr. FENN: Petition of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, by John P. Barry, secretary, of New Haven, Conn.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2368. Also, petition of James Flaherty and 29 others, citizens of Hartford, Conn., seeking the recognition of the Irish republic; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2369. By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Petition of citizens of Orting, Wash., opposing House bill 4388; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2370. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of A. L. Salt, vice president of the Western Electric Co., of New York City; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2371. Also, petition of Goulden, Cook & Gudeon, managers of the Connecticut Life Insurance Co., 91 William Street, New York City; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2372. Also, petition of the American Refractories Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2373. By Mr. MacGREGOR: Resolution of the directors of the East Side Serial Savings and Loan Association, favoring the income tax exemption to the extent of $500 in any year for persons deriving revenue not exceeding such sum from investments in domestic building and loan associations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2374. By Mr. MAPES: Petition of Mr. Lester Davison and other residents of Grand Haven, Mich., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388, which aims to regulate Sunday observance by civil force under penalty for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2375. By Mr. A. P. NELSON: Petition of residents of Burnett County, Wis., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388, introduced by Mr. ZIHLMAN; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2376. Also, petition of residents of Clearwater Lake, Wis., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388, introduced by Mr. ZIHLMAN; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2377. By Mr. YATES: Petition of Vermillion County (Ill.) Auto Club, of Danville, Ill., opposing the proposed Federal registration fee of $10 on automobiles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2378. By Mr. YOUNG: Memorial of sundry citizens of Lake Williams, N. Dak., remonstrating against the passage of House bill 4388, providing for compulsory Sunday observance for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2379. Also, resolution of the farmers of Adams County, N. Dak., at a meeting at Hettinger, N. Dak., favoring the enactment of legislation to reduce the freight rates in this country; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, August 12, 1921.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord our God, this is the moment of soul silence, and we beseech Thee to hear us. We thank Thee for the mercy of a new day. Bless each one of us with the mercy of a grateful heart. There are many perils of which we are ignorant and many which we perceive. We can not understand Thy providences, yet we repose our faith in Thee, for Thy abundance overflows and transcends all our needs. Grant that all things base, cruel, inhuman, vain, and ignorant shall lose their power and die away; and may all things pure, upright, ennobling, and enriching grow and gather strength until righteousness and knowledge shall prevail throughout our fair land and the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth. Through Jesus Christ, our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, when the House adjourned last night H. J. Res. 183 was pending under the previous question.

The SPEAKER. There is some other business that the Chair would like to lay before the House before that is taken up.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I renew the request that I made yesterday for unanimous consent that it may be in order to take up for consideration the bill (S. 1915) to amend the War Finance Corporation act, immediately after the disposition of the deficiency appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that it may be in order to take up S. 1915 immediately after the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill. Is there objection?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman if it is his purpose to take up the bill immediately after the passage of the appropriation bill and consider it to its passage?

Mr. MONDELL. It is.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SEARS. Reserving the right to object, how much general debate will be given to that bill?

Mr. MONDELL. I have not talked to the chairman of the committee. I am sure that an arrangement satisfactory to the House will be made in regard to the general debate.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, it is barely possible that I should like to have about 30 minutes at some time to speak on freight rates.

Mr. MONDELL. I am sure there will be a reasonable amount of general debate.

Mr. SEARS. I appreciate that fact, Mr. Speaker; but generally when I want time, the time is limited by the House.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman realizes that I could scarcely modify my request in order to provide for some one gentleman who wanted to speak, but I am sure if the gentleman has a real message that he will be given an opportunity to deliver it.

Mr. SEARS. I want to say in reply to the majority leader that we have been greatly interested in the messages which he has been giving out, statements as to the cutting down of expenses, and the amount he has saved, and that I will endeavor to give a message to the House. I have not occupied much of the time of the House in the six years I have been here.

Mr. WINGO. I should like to say, in view of the statement which has just been made, that I have got about 25 gentlemen here who inform me that they have real messages which they wish to deliver to the House, and each of them wants all the way from 25 minutes to an hour.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, under the reservation of the right to object, I should like to ask whether this bill has been unanimously reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. MONDELL. There is no minority report.

Mr. STAFFORD. I wish to say that I am informed that one member of the committee violently opposes the bill, and I think wishes to present minority views. I do not know whether he made that reservation or not.

Mr. McFADDEN. I will say to the gentleman that no arrangement was made about that.

Mr. DALE. Will the gentleman yield, to give me an opportunity to reply to the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. DALE. I want to say that I suppose the gentleman from Wisconsin refers to me when he speaks of opposition to this measure in the Committee on Banking and Currency. I do not know that I want to file a minority report, but I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin that I am most strenuously opposed to this measure. Reserving the right to object—

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

Mr. DALE. Reserving the right to object—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can not reserve the right to object after the regular order is demanded.

Mr. BLANTON. I will withdraw it.

Mr. MONDELL. I will say to the gentleman that there will be an abundance of time for general debate.

Mr. DALE. I want to ask the gentleman from Wyoming if he expects to bring up this bill to-day?

Mr. MONDELL. No. The bill will probably be brought up to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL]?

There was no objection.

BIOLOGICAL AND GENERAL RESEARCH STATION IN WASHINGTON.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to take from the Speaker's table H. R. 1475 with a Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up from the Speaker's table a bill which the clerk will report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill (H. R. 1475) providing for a grant of land to the State of Washington for a biological station and general research purposes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. Craven, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills and Senate joint and concurrent resolutions of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 1960. An act providing for an additional judge for the northern district of California;

S. 2307. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 3, 1916, and to establish military justice," approved June 4, 1920;

S. J. Res. 85. Joint resolution to provide for the remission of further payments of the annual installments of the Chinese indemnity;

S. 2041. An act for the relief of J. G. Seupelt;

S. 1794. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to release the Kansas City & Memphis Railroad & Bridge Co. from reconstructing its highway and approaches across its bridge at Memphis, Tenn.;

S. 2340. An act to authorize the construction of a toll bridge across the St. Marys River at or near St. Marys, Ga., and Roses Bluff, Fla.

Senate concurrent resolution 7.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes, as it passed the House, be printed as a Senate document, with an index, and that 15,000 additional copies be printed, of which 4,000 shall be printed for the use of the Senate, 9,000 for the House, to be distributed through the folding room, 1,000 for the Committee on Finance of the Senate, and 1,000 for the Committee on Ways and Means of the House.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following title:

H. R. 1940. An act for the relief of the Southern Iron & Metal Co., Jacksonville, Fla.; and

H. R. 1269. An act to make a preliminary survey of the Calaveras River in California with a view to the control of its floods.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committee as indicated below:

S. 1960. An act providing for an additional judge for the northern district of California; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 2340. An act to authorize the construction of a toll bridge across the St. Marys River at or near St. Marys, Ga., and Roses Bluff, Fla.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 2307. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 3, 1916, and to establish military justice," approved June 4, 1920; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Senate concurrent resolution 7.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes, as it passed the House, be printed as a Senate document, with an index, and that 15,000 additional copies be printed, of which 4,000 shall be printed for the use of the Senate, 9,000 for the House, to be distributed through the folding room, 1,000 for the Committee on Finance of the Senate, and 1,000 for the Committee on Ways and Means of the House— to the Committee on Printing.

S. 2041. An act for the relief of J. G. Seupelt; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. J. Res. 85. Joint resolution to provide for the remission of further payments of the annual installments of the Chinese indemnity; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PORT OF NEW YORK DISTRICT.

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I have been authorized and directed by the Judiciary Committee to call up S. J. Res. 88, a similar House joint resolution, House joint resolution 172, by Mr. ANSORGE, of New York, being on the House Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York calls up from the Speaker's table S. J. Res. 88, a similar House joint resolution having been reported and on the House Calendar before the Senate joint resolution was received.

The Clerk read S. J. Res. 88 granting consent of Congress to an agreement or compact entered into between the State of New York and the State of New Jersey for the creation of the port of New York district and the establishment of the port of New York authority for the comprehensive development of the port of New York, as follows:

Whereas commissioners duly appointed on the part of the State of New York and commissioners duly appointed on the part of the State of New Jersey for the creation of the port of New York district and the establishment of the port of New York authority for the comprehensive development of the port of New York, pursuant to chapter 154, Laws of New York, 1921, and chapter 151, Laws of New Jersey, 1921, have executed certain articles, which are contained in the following, namely:

Whereas in the year 1834 the States of New York and New Jersey did enter into an agreement fixing and determining the rights and obligations of the two States in and about the waters between the two States, especially in and about the bay of New York and the Hudson River; and

Whereas since that time the commerce of the port of New York has greatly developed and increased and the territory in and around the port has become commercially one center or district; and

Whereas it is confidently believed that a better coordination of the terminal, transportation, and other facilities of commerce in, about, and through the port of New York will result in great economies, benefiting the Nation as well as the States of New York and New Jersey; and

Whereas the future development of such terminal, transportation, and other facilities of commerce will require the expenditure of large sums of money and the cordial cooperation of the States of New York and New Jersey in the encouragement of the investment of capital and in the formulation and execution of the necessary physical plans; and

Whereas such result can best be accomplished through the cooperation of the two States by and through a joint or common agency: Now, therefore,

The said States of New Jersey and New York do supplement and amend the existing agreement of 1834 in the following respects:

ARTICLE 1. They agree to and pledge, each to the other, faithful cooperation in the future planning and development of the port of New York, holding in high trust for the benefit of the Nation the special blessings and natural advantages thereof.

ART. 2. To that end the two States do agree that there shall be created and they do hereby create a district to be known as the "port of New York district" (for brevity hereinafter referred to as "the district"), which shall embrace the territory bounded and described as follows:

The district is included within the boundary lines located by connecting points of known latitude and longitude. The approximate courses and distances of the lines inclosing the district are recited in the description, but the district is determined by drawing lines through the points of known latitude and longitude. Beginning at a point A of latitude  $41^{\circ} 3' N.$  and longitude  $73^{\circ} 56' W.$ , said point being about sixty-five hundredths of a mile west of the westerly bank of the Hudson River and about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles northwest of the pier at Piermont, in the county of Rockland, State of New York; thence due south 1.15 miles more or less to a point B of latitude  $41^{\circ} 3' N.$  and longitude  $73^{\circ} 56' W.$ , said point being about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles northwest of the pier at Piermont, in the county of Rockland, State of New York; thence south  $56^{\circ} 34' W.$  6.26 miles more or less to a point C of latitude  $41^{\circ}$  and no minutes N. and longitude  $74^{\circ} 2' W.$ , said point being about seven-tenths of a mile north of the railroad station at Westwood, in the county of Bergen, State of New Jersey; thence south  $68^{\circ} 24' W.$  9.37 miles more or less to a point D of latitude  $40^{\circ} 57' N.$  and longitude  $74^{\circ} 12' W.$ , said point being about 3 miles northwest of the business center of the city of Paterson, in the county of Passaic, State of New Jersey; thence south  $47^{\circ} 17' W.$  11.87 miles more or less to a point E of latitude  $40^{\circ} 50' N.$  and longitude  $74^{\circ} 22' W.$ , said point being about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles west of the borough of Caldwell, in the county of Morris, State of New Jersey; thence due south 9.20 miles more or less to a point F of latitude  $40^{\circ} 42' N.$  and longitude  $74^{\circ} 22' W.$ , said point being about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles southwest of the passenger station of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western R. R. in the city of Summit, in the county of Union, State of New Jersey; thence south  $42^{\circ} 24' W.$  7.78 miles more or less to a point G of latitude  $40^{\circ} 37' N.$  and longitude  $74^{\circ} 28' W.$ , said point being about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles west of the business center of the city of Plainfield, in the county of Somerset, State of New Jersey; thence due south 12.65 miles more or less on a line passing about 1 mile west of the business center of the city of New Brunswick to a point H of latitude  $40^{\circ} 28' N.$  and longitude  $74^{\circ} 28' W.$ , said point being about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles southwest of the city of New Brunswick, in the county of Middlesex, State of New Jersey; thence south  $77^{\circ} 42' E.$  10.79 miles more or less to a point I of latitude  $40^{\circ} 24' N.$  and longitude  $74^{\circ} 16' W.$ , said point being about 2 miles southwest of the borough of Matawan, in the county of Middlesex, State of New Jersey; thence due east 25.48 miles more or less, crossing the county of Monmouth, State of New Jersey, and passing about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles south of the pier of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Atlantic Highlands to a point J of latitude  $40^{\circ} 24' N.$  and longitude  $73^{\circ} 47' W.$ , said point being in the Atlantic Ocean; thence north  $11^{\circ} 58' E.$  21.16 miles more or less to a point K, said point being about 5 miles east of the passenger station of the Long Island Railroad at Jamaica and about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles east of the boundary line of the city of New York, in the county of Nassau, State of New York; thence in a northeasterly direction passing about one-half mile west of New Hyde Park and about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles east of the shore of Manhasset Bay at Port Washington, crossing Long Island Sound to a point L, said point being the point of intersection of the boundary line between the States of New York and Connecticut and the meridian of  $73^{\circ} 39' 30'' W.$  longitude, said point being also about a mile northeast of the village of Port Chester; thence northwesterly along the boundary line between the States of New York and Connecticut to a point M, said point being the point of intersection between said boundary line between the States of New York and Connecticut and the parallel of  $41^{\circ} 4' N.$  latitude, said point also being about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles northeast of the business center of the city of White Plains; thence due west along said parallel of  $41^{\circ} 4' N.$  latitude, the line passing about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles north of the business center of the city of White Plains and crossing the Hudson River to the point A, the place of beginning.

The boundaries of said district may be changed from time to time by the action of the legislature of either State concurred in by the legislature of the other.

ART. 3. There is hereby created "The port of New York authority" (for brevity hereinafter referred to as the "port authority"), which shall be a body corporate and politic, having the powers and jurisdiction hereinafter enumerated, and such other and additional powers as shall be conferred upon it by the legislature of either State concurred in by the legislature of the other, or by act or acts of Congress, as hereinafter provided.

ART. 4. The port authority shall consist of six commissioners—three resident voters from the State of New York, two of whom shall be resident voters of the city of New York, and three resident voters from the State of New Jersey, two of whom shall be resident voters within the New Jersey portion of the district, the New York members to be chosen by the State of New York and the New Jersey members by the State of New Jersey in the manner and for the terms fixed and determined from time to time by the legislature of each State, respectively, except as herein provided.

Each commissioner may be removed or suspended from office as provided by the law of the State for which he shall be appointed.

ART. 5. The commissioners shall, for the purpose of doing business, constitute a board and may adopt suitable by-laws for its management.

ART. 6. The port authority shall constitute a body, both corporate and politic, with full power and authority to purchase, construct, lease, and/or operate any terminal or transportation facility within said district; and to make charges for the use thereof; and for any of such purposes to own, hold, lease, and/or operate real or personal property, to borrow money and secure the same by bonds or by mortgages upon any property held or to be held by it. No property now or hereafter vested in or held by either State, or by any county, city, borough, village, township, or other municipality, shall be taken by the port authority, without the authority or consent of such State, county, city, borough, village, township, or other municipality, nor shall anything herein impair or invalidate in any way any bonded indebtedness of such State, county, city, borough, village, township, or other municipality, nor impair the provisions of law regulating the payment into sinking funds of revenues derived from municipal property, or dedicating the revenues derived from any municipal property to a specific purpose.

The powers granted in this article shall not be exercised by the port authority until the legislatures of both States shall have approved of a comprehensive plan for the development of the port as hereinafter provided.

ART. 7. The port authority shall have such additional powers and duties as may hereafter be delegated to or imposed upon it from time to time by the action of the legislature of either State concurred in by the legislature of the other. Unless and until otherwise provided, it shall make an annual report to the legislature of both States, setting forth in detail the operations and transactions conducted by it pursuant to this agreement and any legislation thereunder. The port authority shall not pledge the credit of either State except by and with the authority of the legislature thereof.

ART. 8. Unless and until otherwise provided, all laws now or hereafter vesting jurisdiction or control in the public service commission, or the public utilities commission, or like body, within each State, respectively, shall apply to railroads and to any transportation, terminal, or other facility owned, operated, leased, or constructed by the port authority, with the same force and effect as if such railroad, or transportation, terminal, or other facility were owned, leased, operated, or constructed by a private corporation.

ART. 9. Nothing contained in this agreement shall impair the powers of any municipality to develop or improve port and terminal facilities.

ART. 10. The legislatures of the two States, prior to the signing of this agreement, or thereafter as soon as may be practicable, will adopt a plan or plans for the comprehensive development of the port of New York.

ART. 11. The port authority shall from time to time make plans for the development of said district, supplementary to or amendatory of any plan theretofore adopted, and when such plans are duly approved by the legislatures of the two States, they shall be binding upon both States with the same force and effect as if incorporated in this agreement.

ART. 12. The port authority may from time to time make recommendations to the legislatures of the two States or to the Congress of the United States, based upon study and analysis, for the better conduct of the commerce passing in and through the port of New York, the increase and improvement of transportation and terminal facilities therein, and the more economical and expeditious handling of such commerce.

ART. 13. The port authority may petition any interstate commerce commission (or like body), public service commission, public utilities commission (or like body), or any other Federal, municipal, State, or local authority, administrative, judicial, or legislative, having jurisdiction in the premises, after the adoption of the comprehensive plan as provided for in article 10 for the adoption and execution of any physical improvement, change in method, rate of transportation, system of handling freight, warehousing, docking, lightering, or transfer of freight, which, in the opinion of the port authority, may be designed to improve or better the handling of commerce in and through said district, or improve terminal and transportation facilities therein. It may intervene in any proceeding affecting the commerce of the port.

ART. 14. The port authority shall elect from its number a chairman, vice chairman, and may appoint such officers and employees as it may require for the performance of its duties, and shall fix and determine their qualifications and duties.

ART. 15. Unless and until the revenues from operations conducted by the port authority are adequate to meet all expenditures, the legislatures of the two States shall appropriate, in equal amounts, annually, for the salaries, office and other administrative expenses, such sum or sums as shall be recommended by the port authority and approved by the governors of the two States, but each State obligates itself hereunder only to the extent of $100,000 in any one year.

ART. 16. Unless and until otherwise determined by the action of the legislatures of the two States, no action of the port authority shall be binding unless taken at a meeting at which at least two members from each State are present and unless four votes are cast therefor, two from each State. Each State reserves the right hereafter to provide by law for the exercise of a veto power by the governor thereof over any action of any commissioner appointed therefrom.

ART. 17. Unless and until otherwise determined by the action of the legislatures of the two States, the port authority shall not incur any obligations for salaries, office or other administrative expenses, within the provisions of article 15, prior to the making of appropriations adequate to meet the same.

ART. 18. The port authority is hereby authorized to make suitable rules and regulations not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States or of either State, and subject to the exercise of the power of Congress, for the improvement of the conduct of navigation and commerce, which, when concurred in or authorized by the legislatures of both States, shall be binding and effective upon all persons and corporations affected thereby.

ART. 19. The two States shall provide penalties for violations of any order, rule, or regulation of the port authority, and for the manner of enforcing the same.

ART. 20. The territorial or boundary lines established by the agreement of 1834, or the jurisdiction of the two States established thereby, shall not be changed except as herein specifically modified.

ART. 21. Either State may, by its legislature, withdraw from this agreement in the event that a plan for the comprehensive development of the port shall not have been adopted by both States on or prior to July 1, 1923; and when such withdrawal shall have been communicated to the governor of the other State by the State so withdrawing, this agreement shall be thereby abrogated.

ART. 22. DEFINITIONS.—The following words as herein used shall have the following meaning: "Transportation facility" shall include railroads, steam or electric, motor truck or other street or highway vehicles, tunnels, bridges, boats, ferries, car floats, lighters, tugs, floating elevators, barges, scows, or harbor craft of any kind, aircraft suitable for harbor service, and every kind of transportation facility now in use or hereafter designed for use for the transportation or carriage of persons or property. "Terminal facility" shall include wharves, piers, slips, ferries, docks, dry docks, bulkheads, dock walls, basins, car floats, float bridges, grain or other storage elevators, warehouses, cold storage, tracks, yards, sheds, switches, connections, overhead appliances, and every kind of terminal or storage facility now in use or hereafter designed for use for the handling, storage, loading, or unloading of freight at steamship, railroad, or freight terminals. "Railroads" shall include railways, extensions thereof, tunnels, subways, bridges, elevated structures, tracks, poles, wires, conduits, power houses, substations, lines for the transmission of power, car barns, shops, yards, sidings, turnouts, switches, stations and approaches thereto, cars, and motive equipment. "Facility" shall include all works, buildings, structures, appliances, and appurtenances necessary and convenient for the proper construction, equipment, maintenance, and operation of such facility or facilities, or any one or more of them. "Real property" shall include land under water, as well as uplands, and all property either now commonly or legally defined as real property or which may hereafter be so defined. "Personal property" shall include choses in action and all other property now commonly or legally defined as personal property or which may hereafter be so defined. "To lease" shall include to rent or to hire. "Rule or regulation," until and unless otherwise determined by the legislatures of both States, shall mean any rule or regulation not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States or of either State, and, subject to the exercise of the power of Congress, for the improvement of the conduct of navigation and commerce within the district, and shall include charges, rates, rentals, or tolls fixed or established by the port authority; and, until otherwise determined as aforesaid, shall not include matters relating to harbor or river pollution. Wherever action by the legislature of either State is herein referred to, it shall mean an act of the legislature duly adopted in accordance with the provisions of the constitution of the State.

Plural or singular: The singular wherever used herein shall include the plural.

Consent, approval, or recommendation of municipality: how given: Wherever herein the consent, approval, or recommendation of a "municipality" is required, the word "municipality" shall be taken to include any city or incorporated village within the port district, and in addition in the State of New Jersey any borough, town, township, or any municipality governed by an improvement commission within the district. Such consent, approval, or recommendation whenever required in the case of the city of New York shall be deemed to have been given or made whenever the board of estimate and apportionment of said city, or any body hereafter succeeding to its duties, shall, by majority vote, pass a resolution expressing such consent, approval, or recommendation; and in the case of any municipality now or hereafter governed by a commission, whenever the commission thereof shall, by a majority vote, pass such a resolution; and in all other cases whenever the body authorized to grant consent to the use of the streets or highways of such municipality shall, by a majority vote, pass such a resolution.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals under chapter 154 of the Laws of 1921 of the State of New York, and chapter 151 of the Laws of 1921 of the State of New Jersey, this 30th day of April, 1921.

WILLIAM R. WILLCOX.	[SEAL]
EUGENIUS H. OUTERBRIDGE.	[SEAL]
CHARLES D. NEWTON.	[SEAL]
J. SPENCER SMITH.	[SEAL]
DEWITT VAN BUSKIRK.	[SEAL]
FRANK R. FORD.	[SEAL]
THOMAS F. MCCRAN.	[SEAL]

In the presence of Nathan L. Miller, Walter E. Edge, Alfred E. Smith, Charles S. Whitman, William M. Calder, Lewis H. Pounds, Clarence E. Case, D. P. Kingsley, Irving T. Bush, Arthur N. Pierson, Julius Henry Cohen; in whose presence Messrs. Willcox, Outerbridge, Smith, Van Buskirk, Ford, and McCran signed in the great hall of the chamber of commerce in the city of New York on the 30th day of April, 1921. Attorney General Newton, being at that time absent from the city, signed on the 6th day of May, 1921, at the chamber, in the presence of William Leary, Charles T. Gwynne; and

Whereas the said agreement has been signed and sealed by the commissioners of each State, and has thereby become binding on the two States as provided in the aforesaid acts: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the said agreement, and to each and every part and article thereof: Provided, That nothing therein contained shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the United States in and over the region which forms the subject of said agreement.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this resolution is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, what is this which is before the House?

Mr. ANSORGE. A motion for concurrence in a Senate joint resolution introduced July 25, 1921, in the Senate, and which is in all respects similar to a House joint resolution introduced by me July 8, 1921, and which has been favorably reported by the House Judiciary Committee. It is called up under the rules, being a Senate resolution the same as a House resolution already favorably reported by a committee of the House. I move the concurrence of the House.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Is this a Union Calendar bill?

The SPEAKER. It is a Senate joint resolution, a similar House joint resolution having been already reported by the Judiciary Committee before the Senate bill came over.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, was the bill reported from the Judiciary Committee a Union Calendar bill?

The SPEAKER. No; it is a House Calendar bill.

Mr. MANN. As I understand, the gentleman's request is to take the bill from the Speaker's table, a similar bill being on the House Calendar.

Mr. ANSORGE. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the preamble. The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. ANSORGE. Mr. Speaker, on July 8, 1921, on behalf of the State of New York and the State of New Jersey, I introduced in this House the joint resolution known as House joint resolution 172, asking the consent of Congress to an agreement or compact entered into between the State of New York and the State of New Jersey for the creation of the port of New York district and the establishment of the port of New York authority for the comprehensive development of the port of New York.

The treaty or compact between the two States was signed in the chamber of commerce in the city of New York, with appropriate ceremonies, on the 30th day of April, 1921.

The signing of that treaty was one of the most important events in the history of the two States and in the annals of real constructive progress in this country. [Applause.]

The State platforms of both of the major political parties in New York and New Jersey had advocated joint control and joint development of the port of New York.

At the unofficial convention of the Republican Party of the State of New York, held at Saratoga Springs on July 28, 1920, as part of its declaration of principles appears the following:

A progressive plan of future improvement of harbor facilities must be adopted in cooperation with the State of New Jersey.

We therefore favor a compact or agreement with our sister State which will provide for the creation of a port district and a port authority with adequate powers to develop this port comprehensively.

At the unofficial convention of the Democratic Party of the State of New York, held at Saratoga Springs on August 4, 1920, as part of its declaration of principles is the following:

PORT DEVELOPMENT.

We owe it to the Nation to organize and develop the port of New York. To that end, we favor a compact or agreement with our sister State, New Jersey, which shall provide for the creation of a port district and a port authority with adequate powers to develop the port comprehensively, and with proper protection for New York City over the public ownership and development of its water front and commercial facilities.

The two parties in New Jersey adopted similar platform resolutions.

It will be interesting to the Members on the Democratic side of the House to know that ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith has accepted an appointment as one of the members of the port authority to represent the State of New York.

It can not be said, therefore, that there is anything political in the earnest desire of the good citizens of the two States to cooperate together for the intelligent and comprehensive development of the port of New York.

The lack of cooperation between the two States of New York and New Jersey in the development of the port of New York has, in my opinion, been chiefly responsible for the terrible conditions of congestion which now characterize the distribution of foodstuffs in the city of New York and the adjoining territory; that the terminal facilities at the port are woefully inadequate and antiquated can not be denied.

Representative GOODYKOONTZ, of West Virginia, from the Committee on the Judiciary of this House, who, on behalf of the committee, prepared the report recommending the passage of this bill, correctly states that the port of New York is an asset of the entire Nation. I maintain that, as the trustees of that asset, the people of New York and New Jersey owe it to themselves and to the country to properly develop it. [Applause.]

For a number of years the States of New York and New Jersey have been endeavoring to reach an agreement whereby they could cooperate in the development of the port. More than three years ago the States of New York and New Jersey, by legislative enactment, created a joint commission to investigate and agree upon a report recommending a policy to be pursued by the two States and the Government of the United States, by treaty or otherwise, to the end that the port of New York should be efficiently and constructively organized and furnished with modern methods of pier, rail, water, and freight facilities, and adequately protected in time of war.

The commission made a thorough investigation and study of the situation, and on December 16, 1920, completed a most comprehensive and exhaustive report of plans and recommendations, printed in a bound volume of 495 pages, which I hold in my hands.

I shall not take the time of the House to review in detail the tentative plans of the commission. Briefly stated, they are as follows:

1. Adoption of a compact between the States of New York and New Jersey, providing for—
    - (a) Creation of a single port district.
    - (b) Administration by a single port authority.
  2. Construction of the automatic-electric system with many joint terminal stations in Manhattan for the distribution and collection of general merchandise, freight, and food products.
  3. Development of a standard belt-line railroad system for all parts of the port except Manhattan, embracing—
    - (a) Inner or water-front belt lines in New York and New Jersey.
    - (b) Middle belt lines in New York and New Jersey.
    - (c) An outer belt line in New Jersey.
  4. Consolidation of railroad marine operations not eliminated by the automatic-electric and extended-rail service, with separate joint railroad terminals for—
    - (a) Car-float service.
    - (b) Lighterage.
- Recommendations Nos. 2, 3, and 4 make up the comprehensive physical plan, the improved railroad terminal system which will be the backbone of a rational port development, and the formal adoption of which, in conjunction with the compact, the commission urges upon the legislatures. The economic sequence of construction should be determined by the port authority.

In furtherance of that rational development, though not as a part of the official plan, the commission recommends the following:

5. Construction of food-receiving stations and inauguration of a system of inspection and certification at the railroad joint yards, which would make possible the creation of terminal markets around stations of the automatic electric system in Manhattan and The Bronx.

6. Reorganization with wider piers and slips and more warehouse facilities of the Manhattan and other congested water fronts.

7. Dredging of channels to every part of the port's water front, in keeping with the volume and character of the water-borne commerce seeking to use them, and removal or modification of bridges obstructing the channels.

8. Provision of suitable highway access to every part of the port's water front.

9. Construction of additional terminals for the New York Barge Canal.

10. Wider installation of judiciously selected freight-handling machinery.

11. Creation of bunkering facilities and fuel reserves for steamships.

12. Erection of grain elevators for joint use of New Jersey railroads and New York Barge Canal at a southern terminus of the outer belt line and at Piermont, and early completion of the barge-canal elevator authorized at Gowanus Bay.

13. Provision of better facilities for handling building materials.

14. Zoning of steamship terminals by trade routes as far as practicable.

15. Establishment of free ports in the port district.

16. Obtaining of immediate partial relief from present oppressive terminal conditions through—

(a) Consolidation of marine equipment and service.
(b) Inauguration of voluntary store-door delivery by an organized motor-truck medium.

The creation of a single port authority is the greatest step ever taken toward the intelligent development of the port of New York. [Applause.] Commercially and geographically New York and the industrial districts in the northern part of New Jersey constitute a single unit, a great metropolitan district of more than 8,000,000 people.

In the fiscal year ending August 1, 1914, the last normal year before the war, 76,000,000 tons of freight moved through the port by rail and 45,000,000 tons by water. A substantial percentage of this consisted of perishable foodstuffs, which had to be delivered in a comparatively short space of time.

Over one-half of the foreign commerce of the United States passes through the port of New York. Notwithstanding these facts, we have never had any intelligent, comprehensive plan for receiving and distributing this tremendous tonnage. Of the 76,000,000 tons of freight which moved through the port by rail in 1914, 53,359,000 tons were for local use. Taking the average tonnage of a freight car, this tonnage for local consumption used 3,000,000 freight cars, or 25,000 miles of freight cars, enough to encircle the earth.

It is estimated that 45,000,000 tons of freight, enough to fill a line of freight cars reaching halfway around the world, entered or left the port of New York by water in 1914, exclusive of Hudson River and Sound vessels. Eight thousand four hundred vessels, with a capacity of 24,000,000 net tons—a ton being a unit of 100 cubic feet—cleared from the port of New York in 1914.

Although New York handles over 50 per cent of the foreign commerce of the United States, less than 3 per cent of all Federal appropriations for rivers and harbors have been expended in New York river and harbor development.

The port of New York, with its three entrances, 800 miles of water front, 12 railroads, exclusive of local transit lines, entering the port, a terminus for nearly all of the more important transatlantic lines, not only concerns the people of the two States, but constitutes an asset of the entire Nation. The necessity of creating the port district and authorizing the creation of the port authority is manifest from the fact that over forty municipalities are involved, some of them controlled by men of divergent views and many of them working at cross-purposes and in the dark.

The port of New York is one of the main arteries and principal gateways between the United States and the markets of the world. Any improvement to the port of New York will work a benefit to the entire Nation. [Applause.] The terminal facilities at the port are grossly inadequate. A unified authority and control will bring order out of chaos and afford a blessing not only to the contiguous municipalities but also to the country at large.

The War Department in a letter signed by Secretary Weeks, in recommending the passage of this resolution, said:

The adequate improvement and development of port facilities of New York is a deserving enterprise, and if the work is accomplished on the comprehensive plan of cooperation contemplated by the two States, it will doubtless result in benefit to the transportation interests of the entire Nation.

The legality of the treaty or compact has already been upheld by the courts. Mr. Justice Delehanty in the Supreme Court of New York said that the legislation is "designed to remove artificial barriers existing at the port, and to confer special benefit upon the people of the States of New York and New Jersey, as well as the country at large." It is well established that subject to the approval of Congress any two States may enter into a treaty or agreement to promote the common welfare of their citizens. Judge Delehanty said that under this treaty or compact the two States—agree to cooperate, each within its own sovereignty remaining supreme. It is obvious—that the State of New York has parted with none of its sovereign rights, nor relinquished the control over any property belonging to the people of New York.

Continued Judge Delehanty—

The agreement expressly provides that no property held by any city or municipality shall be taken by the port authority without the consent of such city or municipality. It is therefore clear that no property of the city of New York or of any other city or municipality can be taken or interfered with without the consent of the city or municipality. On this point Judge Delehanty said:

No power to tax is granted, no governmental authority is bestowed, and, as pointed out above, the powers of existing municipalities over their properties and their sinking funds and their power to develop port and harbor facilities are expressly preserved. The sole power granted to the joint board of managers, which power is not to be exercised until the States have agreed upon a comprehensive plan, is to do only what any private corporation may do, namely, to own and operate terminal and transportation facilities and to operate them not for private gain but for the welfare and progress of the community.

The treaty or compact, by article 18 thereof, expressly provides that rules or regulations of the port authority shall not be inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States or of either State. Furthermore, the joint resolution before the House fully protects the Federal Government by the provision contained on page 14 thereof, that nothing therein contained shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the United States in and over the region which forms the subject of the agreement.

It will be seen, therefore, that the cities, States, and Nation are fully protected.

In the interest of the 8,000,000 people in and around the city of New York, in the interest of the people of the entire Nation, I move that the House concur in the Senate resolution. [Applause.]

The resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ANSORGE. I make the usual formal motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was passed, and that the motion be laid on the table.

The motion of Mr. ANSORGE to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. ANSORGE. Mr. Speaker, I now move that House joint resolution 172, of the same tenor, be laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that will be done.

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, leave to extend remarks in the RECORD on the resolution just passed was granted to Mr. ANSORGE, Mr. CHANDLER of New York, Mr. PARKER of New Jersey, Mr. APPEBY, and Mr. LEHLBACH.

HOUSE BILL WITH SENATE AMENDMENTS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, House bill with Senate amendments of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

H. R. 7294. An act supplemental to the national prohibition act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REIMPORTATION OF ARMY SUPPLIES.

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business is the House joint resolution 183, of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution 183, imposing a duty of 90 per cent on all goods exported from the United States for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces and its allied forces which have been sold to any foreign Government or persons when reimported into the United States.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the House joint resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GARNER) there were—ayes 87, noes 43.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of getting a roll call, I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

Mr. BLANTON. And I object to the vote.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 187, nays 83, answered "present" 2, not voting 158, as follows:

YEAS—187.

Ackerman
Andrews
Appley
Arentz

Atkeson
Bacharach
Barbour
Beck

Begg
Benham
Bird
Bixler

Blakeney
Bland, Ind.
Bowers
Brooks, Pa.

Brown, Tenn.	Gorman	McKenzie	Ryan
Burton	Graham, Ill.	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sanders, Ind.
Butler	Green, Iowa	McLaughlin, Pa.	Scott, Tenn.
Cable	Greene, Mass.	McPherson	Shaw
Campbell, Kans.	Greene, Vt.	MacGregor	Shelton
Campbell, Pa.	Griest	Madden	Shreve
Cannon	Hadley	Magee	Sinclair
Chalmers	Hardy, Colo.	Mann	Sinnot
Chandler, N. Y.	Hawley	Mapes	Smith, Idaho
Chandler, Okla.	Hays	Martin	Smith, Mich.
Chindblom	Herrick	Merritt	Speaks
Clouse	Hersey	Michener	Sproul
Cole, Iowa	Hickey	Miller	Stafford
Cole, Ohio	Hill	Mills	Steenerson
Colton	Himes	Millsbaugh	Strong, Kans.
Connell	Hoch	Mondell	Strong, Pa.
Connolly, Pa.	Houghton	Moore, Ill.	Sweet
Cooper, Wis.	Hukriede	Moore, Ohio	Swing
Coughlin	Hull	Morgan	Temple
Curry	Ireland	Mott	Thompson
Dale	Johnson, Wash.	Nelson, A. P.	Tilson
Darrow	Jones, Pa.	Nelson, J. M.	Timberlake
Davis, Minn.	Kahn	Newton, Minn.	Tincher
Denison	Kelley, Mich.	Nolan	Towner
Dowell	King	Norton	Treadway
Dunbar	Kinkaid	Parker, N. J.	Vestal
Dupré	Kissel	Patterson, Mo.	Voigt
Echois	Kline, N. Y.	Pringley	Volstead
Edmonds	Kline, Pa.	Purnell	Walsh
Elliot	Kopp	Radcliffe	Walters
Evans	Kraus	Ramseyer	Watson
Fairfield	Kreider	Reavis	Webster
Faust	Lampert	Rece	White, Kans.
Fenn	Larson, Minn.	Reed, W. Va.	White, Me.
Focht	Lawrence	Rhodes	Williams
Fordney	Lazaro	Ricketts	Winslow
Foster	Leatherwood	Riddick	Wood, Ind.
Free	Lineberger	Roach	Woodruff
French	Little	Robertson	Woodyard
Frothingham	Longworth	Robison	Wurzbach
Gensman	Luhling	Rogers	Wyant
Gerner	McArthur	Rose	Yates
Goodykoontz	McFadden	Rosenbloom

NAYS—83.

Almon	Davis, Tenn.	Lea, Calif.	Rayburn
Aswell	Deal	Lee, Ga.	Rouse
Bell	Drewry	Logan	Sanders, Tex.
Black	Driver	London	Sandlin
Bland, Va.	Fisher	Lyon	Sears
Blanton	Fulmer	McClintic	Sisson
Bowling	Garner	McDuffie	Smithwick
Box	Garrett, Tenn.	Moore, Va.	Steagall
Brand	Garrett, Tex.	O'Brien	Stedman
Briggs	Griffin	O'Connor	Summers, Tex.
Buchanan	Hammer	Oldfield	Swank
Bulwinkle	Hardy, Tex.	Oliver	Ten Eyck
Byrnes, S. C.	Harrison	Overstreet	Thomas
Byrns, Tenn.	Huddleston	Padgett	Tillman
Carew	Jacoway	Park, Ga.	Tyson
Carter	Johnson, Ky.	Parks, Ark.	Vinson
Collier	Johnson, Miss.	Parrish	Ward, N. C.
Collins	Jones, Tex.	Quin	Wilson
Connally, Tex.	Kincheoloe	Rainey, Ala.	Wingo
Crisp	Lanham	Raker	Wright
Cullen	Lankford	Rankin

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—2.

Ansoorge Fuller

NOT VOTING—158.

Anderson	Fess	Knutson	Riordan
Anthony	Fields	Kunz	Rodenberg
Bankhead	Fish	Langley	Rosendale
Barkley	Fitzgerald	Larsen, Ga.	Rucker
Beedy	Flood	Layton	Sabath
Boies	Frear	Lee, N. Y.	Sanders, N. Y.
Bond	Freeman	Lehlbach	Schall
Brennan	Funk	Linthicum	Scott, Mich.
Brinson	Gahn	Lowrey	Siegel
Britten	Gallivan	Luce	Slemp
Brooks, Ill.	Gilbert	McCormick	Snell
Brown, Wis.	Glynn	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Snyder
Burdick	Goldsbrough	McSwain	Stephens
Burke	Gould	Maloney	Stevenson
Burroughs	Graham, Pa.	Mansfield	Stiness
Burness	Haugen	Mead	Stoll
Cantrill	Hawes	Michaelson	Sullivan
Christopherson	Hayden	Montague	Summers, Wash.
Clague	Hicks	Montoya	Tague
Clark, Fla.	Hogan	Moore, Ind.	Taylor, Ark.
Clarke, N. Y.	Hudspeth	Morin	Taylor, Colo.
Classon	Humphreys	Mudd	Taylor, N. J.
Cockran	Husted	Murphy	Taylor, Tenn.
Codd	Hutchinson	Newton, Mo.	Tinkham
Cooper, Ohio	James	Ogden	Underhill
Copley	Jeffers, Nebr.	Olpp	Upshaw
Crampton	Jeffers, Ala.	Osborne	Vale
Crowther	Johnson, S. Dak.	Paige	Vare
Dallinger	Kearns	Parker, N. Y.	Volk
Dempsey	Keller	Patterson, N. J.	Ward, N. Y.
Dickinson	Kelly, Pa.	Perkins	Wason
Dominick	Kendall	Perlman	Weaver
Doughton	Kennedy	Peters	Wheeler
Drane	Ketcham	Petersen	Williamson
Dunn	Kless	Porter	Wise
Dyer	Kindred	Pou	Woods, Va.
Ellis	Kirkpatrick	Rainey, Ill.	Young
Elston	Kitchin	Ransley	Zihlman
Fairchild	Klecza	Reber
Favrot	Knight	Reed, N. Y.

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota (for) with Mr. KITCHIN (against).

Mr. PORTER (for) with Mr. MANSFIELD (against).

Mr. BROOKS of Illinois (for) with Mr. MONTAGUE (against).

Mr. HUTCHINSON (for) with Mr. SULLIVAN (against).

Mr. TAYLOR of New Jersey (for) with Mr. RIORDAN (against).

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri (for) with Mr. KELLER (against).

Mr. JEFFERIS of Nebraska (for) with Mr. TAGUE (against).

Mr. OLPP (for) with Mr. COCKRAN (against).

Mr. PAIGE (for) with Mr. KINDRED (against).

Mr. HICKS (for) with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas (against).

Mr. DUNN (for) with Mr. STEVENSON (against).

Mr. STEPHENS (for) with Mr. SABATH (against).

Mr. LEHLBACH (for) with Mr. RAINEY of Illinois (against).

Mr. KIESS (for) with Mr. MEAD (against).

Mr. PATTERSON of New Jersey (for) with Mr. DRANE (against).

Mr. WHEELER (for) with Mr. FLOOD (against).

Mr. GOULD (for) with Mr. GALLIVAN (against).

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. POE (against).

Mr. RANSLEY (for) with Mr. UPSHAW (against).

Mr. BURROUGHS (for) with Mr. HUMPHREYS (against).

Mr. DYER (for) with Mr. LINTHICUM (against).

Mr. STINESS (for) with Mr. WOODS of Virginia (against).

Mr. MORIN (for) with Mr. HAWES (against).

Mr. OSBORNE (for) with Mr. RUCKER (against).

Mr. HOGAN (for) with Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH (against).

Mr. LANGLEY (for) with Mr. CLARK of Florida (against).

Mr. PERKINS (for) with Mr. BANKHEAD (against).

Mr. ANTHONY (for) with Mr. BARKLEY (against).

Mr. WASON (for) with Mr. FIELDS (against).

Mr. BOIES (for) with Mr. CANTRELL (against).

Mr. REBER (for) with Mr. STOLL (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. KNUTSON with Mr. WISE.

Mr. VOLK with Mr. HAYDEN.

Mr. LAYTON with Mr. BRINSON.

Mr. SIEGEL with Mr. DOUGHTON.

Mr. ELSTON with Mr. HUDSPETH.

Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin with Mr. LOWREY.

Mr. LUCE with Mr. WEAVER.

Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.

Mr. MONTOYA with Mr. MCSWAIN.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON with Mr. GILBERT.

Mr. GLYNN with Mr. FAVROT.

Mr. WILLIAMSON with Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama.

Mr. FULLER with Mr. KUNZ.

Mr. FREEMAN with Mr. LARSEN of Georgia.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A quorum being present, the doors were opened.

On motion of Mr. HAWLEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8117) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes. Pending that I would like to come to some agreement with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] on the time to be allowed for general debate.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I have had several requests for time in general debate.

Mr. MADDEN. I desire to limit the time to not exceeding four hours, if I can. We want to finish the bill to-day.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I appreciate that, but I had hoped that the gentleman would be able to make it two and one-half hours on a side. It may be that some of those who have asked for time will not use it.

Mr. MADDEN. The disposition of the leaders of the House is to expedite the work of the House so that we can get a recess. They are anxious that we should not take more than one day with this bill. I am afraid that if we take more than four hours we will not get through with the bill to-day.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The bill is a short bill; and, of course, the time will be consumed in general debate.

Mr. MADDEN. That is true, but under any circumstances we will not be able to get through until after 5 o'clock.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not know how I am going to take care of some of the gentlemen who have asked me for time if we have only four hours.

Mr. MADDEN. I am in the same fix. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate be limited to four hours, the time to be equally divided between the gentleman from Tennessee and myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the general debate be limited to four hours, one-half to be controlled by himself and one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of this bill.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8117, the urgent deficiency appropriation bill, with Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois in the chair.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN]. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I want first to thank the House for the confidence reposed in me by making me chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and to say to the House that I pledge the very best there is in me to justify that confidence. [Applause.]

I regret very much to be called upon to report as my first bill one which is not very popular. I hope the committee will be patient with me while I deal with this complicated subject, and I ask the committee not to interrupt me for a short time until I can make a connected statement of the condition of the Shipping Board and its affairs as I understand them.

The total appropriations made for the Shipping Board since its inception amount to about $3,300,000,000. The number of ships requisitioned and built before the armistice was 420. They have now a total of 1,700 ships. Approximately 300 of those are wooden ships. The cost of the wooden ships was approximately $300,000,000. The cost per dead-weight ton of the remainder of the ships is approximately $300. That includes all costs, of course—operation, overhead, everything—for all must, as a matter of fact, be charged to ships. The Shipping Board is a creature of the war. Its activities in connection with the construction and operation of ships were caused by the war, although the Shipping Board existed some time before the war began. It was, however, organized for a totally different purpose than that in which it has been engaged since the war began.

During the period of the war the Shipping Board engaged in the construction of dry docks, in the construction of docks and yards, cities, towns, railroads. They spent fabulous sums of money in connection with all of these activities.

The war found America without ships and it was evident to everyone that ships must be a part of the equipment of the country if we were successfully to transport men and supplies and munitions abroad. Everything was done that human ingenuity could do to establish facilities. They were established at an enormous cost. It seemed to be the aim of all to find facilities regardless of cost. Everyone knew that a great army could not be maintained in the field 3,000 miles away with any uncertainty as to transportation facilities. Many mistakes were made by the Shipping Board. Extravagant waste existed. Nobody denies that; it was one of the results of the war. There was no system of accounting whatever. The urgent need seemed to be material for ship construction. Every effort was bent in that direction. The accounting of expenditures was a lost art. No one knew what became of anything or where it went, how it got there or how much it cost.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. If the gentleman will pardon me, I must ask not to be interrupted until I can make a connected statement. The comptroller of the Shipping Board stated to your committee that under the stress of war the accounting department was not able to find out where ships went and when they came away from the place to which they went. No record of the voyages was given to the Shipping Board, for military reasons, so the Shipping Board representative stated. The result was that the comptroller was unable to get either the cost or the revenue to have them entered upon the books. Over 9,000 voyages were made by the ships under the control of the Shipping Board, and 6,000 of those voyages have not yet been audited. That does not mean that any money is coming from the unaudited voyages.

The ships are operated under what is called an M. O. 4 and an M. O. 3 contract. That means a managing operator's contract. The contract provides that the Government of the United States shall expend all the money to operate a ship, to keep it in repair, to pay its port charges, to pay any damages, to pay the men, and that the operating manager shall receive 5 per cent of the gross receipts. It does not make much difference whether these accounts are ever audited or not, because there can be no possibility of profit to the Government of the United States on that kind of a contract. There has been great loss in the operation of the ships. It is estimated that that loss amounts for last year to $200,000,000. No one has the exact figures. No one can find from the records of the Shipping Board what the loss is or what the cost of anything is. The accounting officers of the Shipping Board have said to your committee that the reason why the accounts of these various voyages have not been audited, in addition to the reason that I have already given, is that on November 1, 1920, the Shipping Board which then existed passed a resolution fixing the conditions under which ships were to be operated, changed the form of the contract to some extent, at least by changing its number from four to three, and they made that retroactive to March 1, 1920, so that all the effort to account for what has been done prior to that time by the accounting department was useless, and they had to begin all over again.

The record is replete with evidences of bad management. There was no chance at any time for the Government to win in the operation of ships under the plan that was in existence and still is in existence. Now, what is proposed? The new board came into existence eight weeks ago. They pretend to no particular knowledge of the condition of the Shipping Board or its finances or its property. Neither do we; and we ask you to believe when we say we have done the best we could to find out the facts, but if there is anybody who has any facts anywhere in connection with the Shipping Board's activities I would like to get his picture. I have not seen him. I think it will be said by every member of our committee that we did everything in our power to come to you with a case that we could justify on the facts. We do not do that. We come to you with a case which we believe can be treated on the basis of the preservation of Government property. We have invested $3,300,000,000 in this property. There is no chance of selling it to-day; you could not give a ship away. There is no chance immediately to modify the contract in the way we would like to have it modified. We would like to see the ships sold. That is the first proposal that the new Shipping Board makes. We realize, as everybody must, that they can not be sold now. Now, then, the question is, Are they to be preserved; are we to preserve the property in which the people of America have invested $3,300,000,000 or are we to destroy it? The next proposal is to make a bare boat charter, which means that the ship would be leased to some responsible person who would pay all the expenses of its operation, maintenance, and the repair, and pay to the Government of the United States through the Shipping Board a fixed compensation per annum per ton of ship, and it must be manifest to everybody that with the present depressed condition of shipping throughout the world, with everybody in the shipping business losing money, that no person of responsibility would enter into a bare boat charter at this time. Then there is another proposal. They are attempting to put them into effect in the order in which I am naming them.

The third proposal is to endeavor to enlist the cooperation of those who are engaged in shipping to take the Shipping Board's ships under a contract, which would require them to furnish half the money and the Shipping Board the other half, and each—the Shipping Board and the operator—to share the profits or losses. Then there is still another proposal. If nothing can be done with either of those proposals, then it must be manifest that you can not continue to operate the ships. The chairman of the Shipping Board is not a shipping man and neither are any of the members of the Shipping Board, but I do not think it is necessary for a man on the Shipping Board to be a shipping man. What I think is that it is necessary for men on the Shipping Board to have a comprehensive knowledge of business and organization. Mr. Lasker has been a successful business man. He is a young man, full of vigor. He is a human dynamo. He has an income of his own that makes him above suspicion in the place that he occupies. He is an organizer; he is a dominating personality. He will be the Shipping Board as far as the head of the Shipping Board can be the Shipping Board. I would prefer to see one man manage this great institution than five, six, or seven, because it takes three or four hours every day for the head of the board to get the approval of the other members of the board to the routine things he has to do when he ought to be doing something more important. Well, he stated that he would not be able to give any facts for six months. He stated that they have drawn a red line on the old books of the old Shipping Board and they have started a new set of books.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MADDEN. Not just yet. I asked not to be interrupted until I make this connected statement. I will be glad to yield in a short time, but I think it will be better for me to make a connected statement at this time. He proposes to liquidate all that the old books show, and whatever may be received through the liquidation to turn it into the Treasury of the United States. He proposes to become responsible for everything that is shown on the new books and he promises your committee that he will at the end of six months have facts to justify his existence. He has started an inventory of all the property, and it will be finished within 60 days or less. He will show on that inventory every piece of property the Shipping Board owns, the cost, the present reasonable market value, and the possible forced-sale price. He will furnish the Committee on Appropriations with all the information which he obtains in this way as fast as he obtains it, and we will be glad to give it to the Members of the House. We realize the complications surrounding this great proposal and we were anxious that every Member of the House should understand in advance just what we were doing. We sent every Member of the House a copy of the hearings. They are replete with lack of information. It was not our fault. It can not be charged to the new Shipping Board, because they have only been there eight weeks—only seven weeks when these hearings were had. We were astonished to find out the number of things they knew by name there in the period in which they have occupied the place. We brought in the chief accounting officer, and he gave the reason I have given you for not having information of the books, and it may be that it was correct; I do not doubt it was. I believe that the Shipping Board—we have had three different Shipping Boards at different times, or three and a half, or something like that [laughter]—were more concerned in getting facilities to win the war—let us put it in the most charitable way we can—than they were in rendering accounts of their stewardships.

At any rate we have no accounting. The Shipping Board asked us for $125,000,000. They said it would take that much to run them for the next six months. That included $25,000,000 which had already been appropriated for ship construction, and by the way I might just as well say here now that ship construction is under way yet.

They are building 19 ships. This is the end of the program. It will be complete on the 1st of April next. These ships are fine passenger ships. Twenty-five million dollars was appropriated to complete that program in the last deficiency act. They say it will cost $29,175,000 to complete the work. The committee thinks with the lowering cost of labor and material $25,000,000 at the disposal of the Shipping Board will do as much work as the $29,000,000 was intended to do when the estimate was made. We found upon investigation that these ships were being built on the cost-plus plan. Cost-plus in these cases, I may say in justice to the Shipping Board of the past, does not mean what the cost-plus plan meant in construction during the war. They have an upset price at which the ship must be built and an upset commission not exceeding $50,000 to the contractor on a 10,000-ton ship. With the lowering of wages and the lowering of material costs I thought, and your subcommittee thought, that the Government ought to save money in the construction cost of these ships, and we inquired as to whether or not the Government was to get the credit for any reduced cost of material or any reduction in wages. And the reply came that the Government divided that saving with the contractor, so that he, in addition to his commission on the cost-plus plan, shared equally with the Government the saving made by lowering prices and lowering wages, a very unfortunate sort of a contract, because it certainly ought all to come to the Government. But it does not, and we are not to blame. We believe that it is not good business, but that it is bad business. It can not be remedied during this construction period when these contracts exist. They will be finished by the 1st of April.

Now, as to the operation of the ships. We have been operating these ships under this so-called operator's contract, under which the Government paid all the expenses and the contractor took 5 per cent of the gross receipts. We ascertained that the income for last year, as far as it was ascertainable, on all of the year's operation was about $297,000,000, and the operation costs about $346,000,000, as I recall. Of course, there are many other things to be added to that, but that is for the mere operation. We divided the number of tons of ships in existence and operating by the number of dollars expended, and we found that it cost the Shipping Board $70 per ton per annum for every dead-weight ton of shipping it operated. Then we made some inquiry as to what the proper cost should be, and we found that the average successful managing ship operator would be able to operate his ships at about $48 a dead-weight ton per annum, and that $60 per dead-weight ton cost would be the dead line; that if he could operate for $48 under present freight rates he could make $12 a ton per annum, or a good dividend on the cost of the equipment. This cost of $48 includes all overhead, all depreciation, all port charges, all repairs, and possible damage.

The present Shipping Board came into possession of the work with which they are charged with a deficit of $16,700,000 facing them. They have no income from any source now, remember, since the 1st of July, 1921. The Jones Act requires all revenue from every source except operation, which, of course, you could not put into the Treasury, because it is to be paid in and out as the ships move, to go into the Treasury of the United States. The sundry civil act passed in the last session of Congress provides that the Shipping Board may use $55,000,000 from the sale of ships and from the sale of material in the payment of their obligations. But the Shipping Board has assured your committee that there is no chance on earth to collect a dollar from that source. They are not selling any ships or any supplies, and they say it would be inadvisable to do it until they have the inventory which I have suggested, so that they will know just what the obligations of the Government may be and how intelligently to treat the subject. So the question before us of appropriating $48,500,000 is one of great importance, not only to the Shipping Board but to the Nation.

You ask how we reached the conclusion that $48,500,000 was the correct sum to appropriate. We reply that we have not any peculiar mind-reading qualifications, but we did the best we could to analyze the figures they presented, and here is the way they came. They asked for $125,000,000. Twenty-five million dollars of that was for ship construction. That had already been provided for, and so we cut it out. They asked for $24,000,000 to pay claims. We did not think they ought to have the right to pay any claims, and so we cut that out. [Applause.] We did not think that any board ought to be charged with the responsibility or given the authority to adjust indefinite claims without limit. And as far as I am concerned, my attitude is this: I do not think any board ought to come and ask for money to pay claims that have not been adjusted and certified. [Applause.] I do not think any claims after they are adjusted ought to be paid until after we have examined them, and I do not know whether they ought to be paid then until they have been litigated and go to final judgment. I think if you litigate these claims and let them go to final judgment, in most cases you will stop graft. However, we refused to allow any appropriation for the payment of claims.

So we have already got to a place where we find ourselves in this situation, with an estimate made up as follows: Claims, $24,000,000; operating loss, $67,000,000—that is for the whole period; administration of the Shipping Board, $9,000,000. That brings us to $100,000,000. There was a deficit of $16,700,000 on the 15th of July, so that would make $116,700,000, if we took both these questions into consideration, but we eliminated $16,700,000, with the hope that out of the $55,000,000 authorized to be used from the sale of material and ships, or from some other source, the Shipping Board might be able to collect enough to pay the deficit.

Then we took all the figures they had and we made a very careful calculation, in the course of which we determined definitely that $13,700,000 could be saved in repairs, and in repairs and wages of crews and subsistence of crews and administration and fuel we figured that $44,300,000 of the proposed losses could be eliminated with the proper management by saving in these items, because the prices have gone down, and we estimated the prices from the present market standard, and they may go down still further. And then we thought that some modification of the ship operation contract would enable a further saving to be made of $5,000,000. That made $54,300,000, and we cut that in two, because we are providing for only six months here, and we have a saving of $27,150,000.

Then the estimate for administration and operation of the ships' loss amounts to $76,000,000, according to our figures, from which we deduct the $27,150,000, and we have a total left which we think ought to be appropriated of $48,850,000.

Now, the question is whether you want to appropriate it or not. The question is, Is there any medium by which they can run this institution unless you do? Do you want the Shipping Board to sacrifice the assets of the Government in order to raise the money to pay the expenses? You have got the equipment. It does not matter whether you run this equipment or whether you tie it up; it costs money. It costs as much money to tie up the equipment as it does to run it. It even costs more, because there is more deterioration in equipment of this sort when it is tied up than when it is active.

They have $500,000,000 of assets, which they call "live assets"; I would not call them very live. They consist of items like this: Past due notes, past due accounts; rents of tenants that occupy whole towns that were created by the Shipping Board during the war, uncollected. They have taken mortgages, some past due, taken on ships that were sold. They have claims for advances for assistance to those who took the contracts to operate ships.

We suggested that it might be possible to raise $200,000,000 of this money within 60 days. One of the expert accountants suggested at one time something that I thought really would lead to that, but when we got him tied in a corner he said he did not mean that. He said that if we forced the liquidation of this $500,000,000 of so-called live assets, we would bankrupt a great many people in the United States and we would dissipate at least $300,000,000 of the $500,000,000 of accounts.

Then the question with us was whether we would conserve the $500,000,000 by appropriating enough money to carry the Shipping Board along and let them work this valuable asset out, rather than force them to liquidate. My own judgment is that the decent thing to do is for us to conserve every dollar of money coming to the United States and to take the time necessary to collect it without destroying its value.

Now, there are a lot of claims against the Government, 3,500 of them. They amount to $350,000,000, as nearly as can be estimated. No one knows what their actual value will be when they are settled. We have 3,500 lawsuits pending against the Government. Nine hundred of these are in State and district courts all over the United States. No preparation has been made for their trial. The legal department of the Shipping Board has laid the foundation of an organization to protect the Government against loss through these suits by defending them. That made it necessary for them to organize a rather expensive institution, but we will get to that later. They have 1,700 admiralty cases pending, with no evidence of record to enable the Government to defend the cases.

Some of these admiralty cases involve as much as $15,000,000, running down to a lower sum. They have all got to be defended. It does not make any difference, gentlemen, whether we want to do these things or not. We are up against it. We are inheriting a problem that must be solved. We have got to have the courage to solve it. We have no desire to charge anybody with bad faith in the past, or with waste. We meet the situation as we find it, and we must have the courage to face it and settle it. That is all there is to it. I am willing to take my share of the responsibility in the settlement of these problems. It takes courage, but what is more, it takes integrity, and I will tell you that if you will sustain the Committee on Appropriations in the recommendation it makes we will do the best we can to preserve the integrity of the situation. [Applause.]

And we are going to demand an accounting of those fellows that are not there. Mr. Lasker promised us that in six months he will give us all the facts that experts can obtain. He promised us that in a year he will give us an organization that will function. He can not do it sooner, so that you have got to have patience. The American people love those who have courage enough to do the thing that must be done. They are not going to run away from an obligation when it confronts them. And, speaking for the American people, it is our duty to-day, gentlemen, to conserve this property. I am not in favor of paying all these fancy salaries that have been indicated by the Shipping Board or the law department of the Shipping Board, and to show you how we have tried to prevent that so far as we could, under the rules of the House, we put a limitation in this bill that compels the Shipping Board to submit every appointment for an attorneyship, whether regular or special, to the Attorney General of the United States, who must pass upon the contract of employment and fix the compensation. Now, we did do that. These men came to us and said they had employed high-priced lawyers; that they had turned over cases that were important to distinguished law firms without fixing the limit of cost for the trial of the cases.

Your committee thought that that was very unwise and uncertain. We wanted to know the cost. We called up the Attorney General and asked what was to be the policy of the Attorney General's office in the matter of the employment of special counsel. He said his office had a regulation under which no man or firm could be employed whose compensation in a given case, no matter how important it is, could exceed the salary of the Attorney General in a given year. [Applause.] And he said, too, that if there was any month in the year when these people were not actively employed on the work, one-twelfth of the annual compensation would be deducted. So we put a proviso in this bill that the Attorney General shall pass upon all employment of attorneys and special counsel for the Shipping Board, and so we are assured that they will not get any more than the compensation fixed by the Attorney General's own office, no matter what the records of the hearings may show.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Does that apply not only to special counsel but to regular counsel, too?

Mr. MADDEN. To regular counsel, too, as the gentleman will discover if he will read.

Now, they say there have been 402 ships sold, amounting to 1,900,000 tons. The sale price of those ships was $260,000,000 and the cost of the ships was $320,000,000, so that we got a fairly good price for the ships.

Mr. SPEAKS. Did they get it?

Mr. MADDEN. They got $130,000,000 of it, and they used that $130,000,000 in building new ships. The mistake that has been made in the whole business, gentlemen, is that we have carried on a wonderful shipbuilding program three years after the armistice was signed.

Now, the Jones Act provides that the Shipping Board must be in the shipping business. It provides that they must establish trade routes. It provides that they must establish trade routes where private individuals or private corporations can not afford to do it. What does that mean? Everybody in the United States seems to think that we want to trade with the Orient, that we want to trade with the East Indies, that we want to trade with the Far East, and that we want to trade with South America. These are the places, they state, where we ought to trade. Well, the Shipping Board take the mandate of the law and construe it to mean that they must establish these routes. They have established them into South America at different places. I see the first ship arrived at Brazil yesterday.

Mr. EDMONDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. I can not yield for a moment. Let me explain this. I want to tell you that you can not run these routes except at a loss. The estimated loss on one ship on the East Indian route will be $300,000 a year. The only way you can stop that is to stop the activity. Everybody who is in business in the country believes that if we get these routes well established, even at the loss that will be sustained, we will have established a business for our people that will aid the industries of America and furnish employment and establish between us and these countries an amity which never existed before, and that in a few years we will be able to sell the routes, including the ships, to private enterprise, and that they will be able to operate them at a profit. Now, the question is, Does the Government desire to pioneer this thing? No private individual can. No corporation could. Are we ready to meet the situation? Are we ready to sustain the Government in its desire to preserve its property, or are we willing to wreck it? It does not matter to me. I am only one Member. I am the servant of the House. I will serve the House to the best of my ability according to the best judgment I have, and when the House decides, it will be my verdict as well as yours. I shall be happy, whatever you do; but my best judgment tells me that the wisdom of the situation demands the appropriation. They promise facts at the end of six months. Are we willing to try the case in the hope that the future will merit the confidence of the country? Are we willing to try the case, so that when the business of the world is restored to normal we will not find ourselves compelled to go to England or to Norway or to any other country to find bottoms in which to ship American products?

Mr. CARTER. Did the gentleman find out in his investigation what was to be the policy of the Shipping Board in the future?

Mr. MADDEN. I have stated all that.

Mr. CARTER. I did not hear it.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman was not here, and I would not want to repeat it.

Mr. CARTER. The thing I wanted to know specifically was whether they expected to keep on running the vessels?

Mr. MADDEN. I have stated all that. I went into that, but I will state it again. What they said was that the first proposition was to try to sell. The next proposition was to try to lease the ships on a bare boat charter. The next one was to lease them on the joint cost of operation between the Government and the operators, and the last one was to tie them up.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I wish to say that I like the spirit in which the gentleman has presented this report to the committee. I expect to vote for this bill; but it seems to me that the testimony, as far as I have read it, is full of indirect reflections, at least, on the competency of the former chairman of the Shipping Board, from the testimony of the present chairman. Did the committee call before them for any explanation or information either Mr. John Barton Payne or Admiral Benson?

Mr. MADDEN. No; and we had no intention to reflect on their integrity. I do not think anybody else has. I know John Barton Payne as well as I know anybody in the world. He is my personal friend.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. The gentleman will admit that the testimony was very reflective on the capacity of the whole organization?

Mr. MADDEN. I think there is no question but what that is so, and there is no question but that the outcome justifies it.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Just one other question: Does not the gentleman think these two men particularly might have been able to give much information which Mr. Lasker said he could not give because he did not know the facts?

Mr. MADDEN. Of course, the gentleman knows that it is impossible for a committee, in hearing a case, to think of everything, and we probably forgot that.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. One other question. I see that there are three employees—Mr. Love, Mr. Smull, and Mr. Frye—that Mr. Lasker speaks of; were those employees of the old Shipping Board?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know whether they were in the old Shipping Board or not. They are new ones now.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. It seems that they come over from the old Shipping Board.

Mr. MADDEN. They probably did.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Have they any functions now that they can perform better than they did under the old Shipping Board?

Mr. MADDEN. Now, the gentleman does not want to lead me into the question of the management. The gentleman does not expect me to build a ship, operate it, and manage it, and then direct it.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. It seems to me that in the reemployment of three men, the highest salaried officers, that is rather commending the old Shipping Board and the employees, and at the same time the testimony seems to reflect on it.

Mr. SWEET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. SWEET. The gentleman has stated that there was a deficit of $16,700,000 when the new board came in.

Mr. MADDEN. I said as of the 15th of July.

Mr. SWEET. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that Mr. Tweedale, the present comptroller, testified that on the 9th of May, 1921, from the beginning of the operation of this fleet May 1, 1919, they paid all expenses of the fleet for the operation of the fleet, and in addition to that cleared a profit of $48,325,000. He allowed $33,000,000 for depreciation, making $81,325,000. From that point, May 1, 1919, down to March 1, 1921, the fleet was operated at a profit of $17,000,000. Now, how does the gentleman explain those statements?

Mr. MADDEN. I am only giving you what was in the record. I simply repeated what the record shows. Of course, when they stated they operated at a profit they did not mean that they were making a profit; they meant that they had more cash in their treasury than they had outgo, and that they used the cash received from selling the ships and supplies amounting to $130,000,000 as a part of the revenue.

Mr. SWEET. This is the comptroller testifying, and he states that it is a profit.

Mr. MADDEN. We do not agree with him.

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Tweedale has kept the books in the past and is still keeping them. It is stated that they have no confidence in the figures.

Mr. MADDEN. They had as much confidence as we had.

Mr. SWEET. As far as the hearings are concerned, the figures that were presented amount to nothing.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know whether they amount to anything or not. As far as our judgment goes, we were not able to analyze them from the standpoint of facts.

Mr. SWEET. One fact on which the bill is predicated is that there is no money in the treasury of the board at the present time to continue operations.

Mr. MADDEN. There is no money in the treasury of the board and no way to get it in because the law now makes it obligatory on the board to turn all money into the Treasury of the United States that may come into its hands.

Mr. SWEET. Has there been any auditing of the Shipping Board's accounts?

Mr. MADDEN. They are doing that now, and it will be completed in 60 days.

Mr. SWEET. Does the gentleman think it possible to complete it in that time?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes; it is being done by a firm of which Mr. Montgomery is the head, and he seems to be a smart fellow and says he will have it.

Mr. SWEET. How does Mr. Tweedale look?

Mr. MADDEN. He is a nice-looking man and a nice fellow.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Does the gentleman know, or have any idea, what the cost of the auditing will be?

Mr. MADDEN. No; the auditing contract provides for payment at the public rates. There is a standard rate provided for the payment of men engaged in that class of work. The Shipping Board has 200 of its own men at work.

Mr. McDUFFIE. I understand these specialists get $50 a day.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know what it is, but whatever is the standard amount we will have to pay.

Mr. McDUFFIE. One other question. It seems that $1,000,000, or over $600,000, was paid to a concern to audit the books of the Bethlehem Co., and they never completed it.

Mr. MADDEN. That was done by the last board, and not by this board. They never did complete the audit.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Why did not they complete it?

Mr. MADDEN. I could not find out, and the other board is not now in existence.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Some of the members of the present board were members of the last board.

Mr. MADDEN. Well, we could not find out the reason.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Does the gentleman from Illinois think that we can get a complete audit account in 60 days by this firm headed by Mr. Montgomery?

Mr. MADDEN. No; but the Shipping Board has 200 of its own men at work making the audit.

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman did not say anything about that.

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, yes. They have been at work for some time, and in addition to these 200 men the audit company has 40 men directing the work, and they assure us absolutely that in less than 60 days from the date when these hearings were held they will have the audit complete.

Mr. WALSH. What audit?

Mr. MADDEN. The audit of the physical equipment, of the property and assets of every kind, name, and nature.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman mean an audit or an inventory?

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman is talking about an inventory.

Mr. MADDEN. It is an audit of the outstanding accounts, of the character of the accounts and all that; and, of course, the other part is an inventory.

Mr. WALSH. If the gentleman will permit me to make the statement, I venture to state here now that they will not have begun in 60 days. It took 8,000 men to audit the voyage accounts, and they did not get them within four months of current, less than a year ago.

Mr. MADDEN. I hope the gentleman from Massachusetts is wrong in his prophecy.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. In respect to the remark of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] about the 6,000 voyages not checked over by the Shipping Board, of course the record of those voyages is obtainable in the offices of the operators of these ships.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. And this force of auditors has gone to work upon the books of these various operators and will bring down to date the record of those 6,000 missing voyages. That will bring the operating expenditures down to approximately the 1st of July.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Illinois yield further?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman from Michigan well recalls the famous audit they had of the voyage accounts, and this audit is simply a continuation of that to bring down some missing accounts. It does not involve the audit of the books of the Fleet Corporation with reference to its transactions arising out of construction and repair.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. The chairman of the committee has reference wholly in this discussion to operation, and there never will be a complete audit of the other.

Mr. BUTLER. Not from the red line down?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Not from any source under heaven.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. I understood my colleague to say that there will be an inventory within 60 days and also an audit within 60 days. If that be the case, why, then, should it take six months for Mr. Lasker to present figures?

Mr. MADDEN. There will be many things for Mr. Lasker to learn and for the records to show before he can make figures. While he might have this audit and inventory complete physically, it might not be made a matter of record so that it could be analyzed and presented. Oh, it will take time, I am sure of that.

Mr. MANN. It would seem to an ignorant man that if he had the figures in hand within 60 days he might be able to submit them in less than six months.

Mr. KOPP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. KOPP. On page 15 of the hearings I find the following statement made by Mr. Lasker:

For 12 days I worked with Mr. Smull to come here and for 12 days in New York he said it was unthinkable, and every night of those 12 days, in his presence, I would return my railroad accommodations and say, "I will see you to-morrow, because only with you can the American marine be saved."

Mr. MADDEN. That is what he said.

Mr. KOPP. Assuming that Mr. Lasker is correct, does not the gentleman think it is a hazardous proposition to make an appropriation of over $48,000,000 for a business that can be saved by only one man? Suppose he should die?

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, when a man is making a speech before a committee, he sometimes uses language which he regrets afterwards.

Mr. KOPP. I am assuming that he told the truth, because he paid this man $35,000 a year.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. KOPP. I understood the gentleman to say that he was making no criticism of the Shipping Board.

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, I did not say that. I think my language speaks for itself. I thought I was rather critical of it.

Mr. KOPP. I thought the gentleman said he was not going to accuse them of waste.

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, no. I said to start with that there was a lot of extravagant waste. I said that I did not accuse anyone of any ulterior motives.

Mr. KOPP. Does the gentleman think this Shipping Board has the ability to run the concern?

Mr. MADDEN. I could not tell that. I do not guarantee anything. I think it is going to be a difficult job at best.

I think Mr. Lasker has organizing ability. I think that he has a determination to make this successful if it can be made successful. I think that in the interest of the Public Treasury in the long run we ought not to hesitate to appropriate this money and give the institution a chance to show whether the property should be destroyed or preserved.

Mr. KOPP. May I ask another question?

Mr. MADDEN. Certainly.

Mr. KOPP. Did not Mr. Lasker testify before the committee that he did not know whether this would be successful or not?

Mr. MADDEN. Of course he did.

Mr. KOPP. Then this whole thing is a guess as to whether we are throwing our money away or are going to get something for it?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes. I will say this, that the gentleman's judgment is as good as anyone. We have $3,000,000,000 of money invested.

Mr. KOPP. We do not have that much now, do we?

Mr. MADDEN. It is invested. It may not be worth that much.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. And one-fifth of the tonnage of the world.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes; and do we want it to rot? Do we want to take the responsibility?

Mr. KOPP. Is there any assurance that it will be better next year than this year?

Mr. MADDEN. No one can tell. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: If the gentleman had the responsibility placed upon him this minute to decide the question, would he be willing to assume the responsibility of destroying the property?

Mr. KOPP. I expect to vote against it and take that responsibility; yes.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. I think my time has expired.

Mr. LITTLE. If we do not do this, it is a cinch it will be a whole lot worse next year.

Mr. MADDEN. Surely. We have to appropriate the money anyway, whether we stop the ships or operate them. I am very much obliged to the committee. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, has made an exceedingly fair, impartial, clear, and comprehensive statement of the details of the Shipping Board, so far as they are known, and the reasons which influenced the committee in making the recommendations are now before you. There is nothing that I could add to what he said, and I do not propose in what I shall say to go into details with reference to this bill. This is the first bill which the gentleman from Illinois has presented to the House in the capacity of chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, to which position he was recently selected, and I wish to congratulate him upon the very able and splendid manner in which he conducted the hearings in the preparation of this bill and the exhaustive way in which he went into the facts. These hearings were conducted with his usual and splendid ability, and every fact that it was possible to obtain has been obtained for the enlightenment of the Congress. It is true, as he states, that it has been impossible for the committee to gather many facts which we would like to have gathered and which the Congress would like to have in the consideration of this bill. The chairman of the Shipping Board, Mr. Lasker, refused or declined to pin himself down to any particular figures or any particular facts, for the reason, as stated by him, that he had been chairman of the board only seven or eight weeks, and he was not willing to accept and stand for or vouch for the figures appearing upon the books of the old board. Before I proceed to discuss this bill in some particulars I want to take a few moments for the purpose of referring to the estimates which have been submitted, and upon which this bill is based, and I do so not for the purpose of offering any captious criticism but rather with a view of preserving the integrity of the budget law which was enacted several months ago.

If you will take these estimates as submitted, you will be driven to the conclusion that the Director of the Budget, a gentleman of splendid ability, has either not carefully read the budget law, which created that bureau and the position which he holds, or that he has purposely disregarded its provisions. You will recall that the fundamental idea of a budget law as proposed in the Congress was that there should be some one in the executive departments who was made officially and personally responsible, if you please, for the estimates submitted. And it was the idea of all those, I am sure, who voted for the law that these estimates before they were sent to the House should be carefully pruned and reduced to such an amount as the official responsible for the estimates thought they could be reduced. The idea then was, as I have said, that they should be sent here by some official who was responsible to the Congress and to the country for those estimates. The House thought proper to make the President of the United States responsible for the estimates. The Senate of the United States thought that the Secretary of the Treasury should continue to send the estimates to the Congress. When that bill was finally passed the opinion of the House prevailed, and there is this provision in the budget law:

SEC. 203. The President from time to time may transmit to Congress supplemental or deficiency estimates for such appropriations or expenditures as in his judgment (1) are necessary on account of laws enacted after the transmission of the budget, or (2) are otherwise in the public interest. He shall accompany such estimates with a statement of the reasons therefor, including the reasons for their omission from the budget.

Now, what are the estimates upon which this bill is based, the first estimates that have been submitted under this new budget system? These estimates are not signed by the President of the United States, as the law contemplated, but they are signed and sent to the Congress, addressed to the Speaker of the House, by Charles G. Dawes, Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

True, he says that he transmits it with the approval of the President, but I submit that that is exactly contrary to the express provisions of the law. It was never intended that the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, who is not a general officer of this Government, so to speak, but was appointed as a personal representative to furnish the President with the information necessary to enable him to transmit the estimates to the Congress, and I hope that when the estimates are submitted in December for the regular supply bills that this budget law will be strictly complied with, because unless it is, then I submit that those of us who supported it might as well have left the old law in force, for I am sure all of Congress would prefer to have the estimates submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, the fiscal officer of the Government, rather than by the Director of the Budget, who, as I have said, is nothing more than the personal representative of the President, and who Congress never intended should arrogate to himself this authority.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will yield.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman cite section 206 of the budget law?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I had it before me.

Mr. MANN. He cited section 203, paragraph a.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Well, I do not think, I submit to the gentleman, that that contradicts what I have said.

Mr. MANN. I did not say that it did, but I thought it well if the gentleman should put it in his remarks or read it to the committee.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am very glad the gentleman has called it to my attention, and I will read it:

SEC. 206. No estimate or request for an appropriation and no request for an increase in an item of any such revenue or request, and no recommendation as to how the revenue needs of the Government should be met, shall be submitted to Congress or any committee thereof by any officer or employee of any department or establishment unless at the request of either House of Congress.

And I am very much obliged to my distinguished friend for calling that to my attention.

Mr. MANN. It is much more to the point than the other was.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I agree with the gentleman. Congress never requested the Director of the Budget, who is not the head of a department, but only of a bureau, to submit this estimate, and I hope he will not only read the law creating his position but will observe it in the future. Now, what more was required? The section to which I first referred provides that there shall be submitted along with these estimates a statement of the reasons therefor, including the reasons for their omission from the budget. Now, I take it that that means the reasons which have influenced the sending of those estimates to the Congress and the request for an appropriation. It can mean nothing else, and, mark you, they must be transmitted by the President, the responsible head of the Government, not by the head of a bureau. That was not complied with, because there is no statement of reasons accompanying these estimates, not even one signed by the Director of the Budget. The only statement presented with these estimates is the statement which is signed or issued, rather, by Mr. A. B. Lasker, chairman of the Shipping Board, not even signed by him, but it is headed, "A statement of Chairman Lasker, of the Shipping Board, to press representatives."

I take it that you gentlemen read that statement when it was published in the press. And yet that statement issued to the press is sent to Congress by the Director of the Budget as a compliance with the section to which I have referred.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will.

Mr. DENISON. What remedy does the gentleman think Congress has when that is not complied with?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I must confess to the gentleman I do not know. Of course, Congress can decline to receive them. I have raised the question, I will say frankly to the gentleman in reference to these estimates, which are the first submitted under the budget law, only—

Mr. DENISON. Does not the gentleman think that the committee itself, to which the matter was referred, should get a remedy by asking that the matter be sent back and a proper estimate sent?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Undoubtedly that could be done, and I hope that is what will be done if the practice is pursued.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will.

Mr. MADDEN. I wish to say for the information of my colleague that no other estimate will be sent up that is not properly signed.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am quite sure the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the committee, will see to it that this law is complied with in the future. I have only called attention to these facts, not so much for the purpose of offering criticism of anyone, as to call public attention to the necessity of compliance with this law. This statement sent here as a reason for asking for this appropriation shows not one reason why any money carried in this bill is needed. It is nothing more nor less than a stump speech which was made by the chairman of the Shipping Board in talking with press correspondents, and which was sent out over the country several weeks ago under impressive headlines.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. I have many times admired the gentleman's fairness. Does not the gentleman think in fairness at this time it should be said that the Director of the Budget is working out a system for the handling of the business entrusted to him, and that at this particular time it may be possible that that system had not been completed and put into operation?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I can not see how any particular system would have to be worked out in order to comply with the plain provisions of the section to which I have referred. One only has to read those sections to understand that the President must sign and send them forward.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. I did not understand that the gentleman's criticism was based entirely on the matter of the signing by the President.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. On that, and the statement furnished here, because there has been no reason given for the estimates submitted to Congress, nothing more than a press statement issued by Mr. Lasker some time after he was made chairman of the Shipping Board, in which he compliments himself, and incidentally the President who appointed him, very highly, and I may say a statement in which he repeatedly reiterates the great difficulty of the position which he holds and the great job which he has undertaken, and so forth. Well, I am not here to defend the past administration of the Shipping Board. There was waste. But I do not think that all the alleged delinquencies of the past boards can be laid wholly at their door. But, as I say, I am not here as their champion or defender. I hope that the statements which have been made in the press and the statements which have been made in the hearings are not influenced by the idea of making the wreck seem all the greater so that the greater will be the glory in saving it or the more sure the alibi in the event it is not saved.

Another thing, I have been much disappointed as a member of the Select Committee on the Budget, which prepared the budget bill and submitted it to Congress, that the Budget Bureau has not functioned as I hoped it would function in this its first activity. We have seen a great deal in the press as to what the Director of the Budget is saving; something like $112,000,000 going to be saved in this department and that department this year, all of which is largely in anticipation, in my opinion, of what the departments would do anyway, because there was never any fiscal year when some of the departments and some of the bureaus of the Government did not cover back money into the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year. But here is the first demonstration to Congress and to the country of the functioning of this bureau. And what happened? These estimates were $125,000,000, but it was stated by the chairman of the Shipping Board that only $100,000,000 was desired, because he already had $25,000,000 for construction. But after a hearing of two days the committee has recommended a reduction to $48,500,000, or less than one-half of the amount which was formally approved by the Director of the Budget, who has been loudly telling the public how he is practicing economy and reducing expenditures, and who, I assume, has been making an investigation into the various departments and various independent establishments of the Government. These estimates were approved by the Director of the Budget and it is a poor tribute to his protests of economy when Congress reduces them more than one-half. The departments made a better showing when they did not have the assistance of the Budget Bureau. I hope that a different record will be made when estimates are submitted for the regular appropriation bills.

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will.

Mr. LONDON. Now, the criticism of the chairman of the Budget Committee would be sound if the Appropriation Committee had based its recommendation on the evidence. But I gathered from your report that $48,000,000 is a mere guess.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will say to the gentleman from New York that it may be in a measure a guess, but I think myself it is a very good guess, if the gentleman chooses to so designate it.

Mr. LONDON. One man guessed $125,000,000 and you guessed $50,000,000.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will say to the gentleman that this recommendation of the committee is not wholly a guess. I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] very clearly showed the reasons which impelled the committee to make this particular recommendation, and also showed in what manner the committee had reduced the estimates submitted.

Mr. LONDON. If the gentleman will permit, the gentleman from Illinois showed clearly why he recommended that not more than $48,000,000 be granted, but did not convince us why the $48,000,000 was granted.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not know that I can succeed any better than the gentleman from Illinois, but I shall try to give the gentleman some information along that line later.

The Shipping Board and its many perplexing problems is an inheritance of the war. Our present merchant fleet had its inception in the act which was passed September 6, 1916, when $50,000,000 were appropriated for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, to build ships and initiate an American merchant marine.

In years that are long past American boats were a familiar sight on the high seas and in the harbors of the world, but for several decades the fleet had very nearly vanished and foreign bottoms were being relied on to carry the products of our farms and factories to foreign markets.

It has been stated that 81 per cent of the imports and exports to and from the United States were carried in American bottoms in 1846, 66 per cent in 1860, 26 per cent in 1875, 11 per cent in 1895, only 8 per cent in 1901, 9.7 per cent in 1914, while as a result of the American merchant marine, commenced during the war, more than 50 per cent of exports and imports to and from the United States are now being carried in American ships, a greater amount than at any time since the Civil War.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SEARS. Do I understand my colleague to say that the estimates were reduced? Did not the committee give exactly what was requested?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I stated that the estimates were reduced 50 per cent.

Mr. SEARS. How could that happen when it was under a Democratic administration, and the only savings that have been had have been when the estimates were reduced? How could that be?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The estimates were reduced because the committee thought they were too large when submitted. My criticism was directed to the Budget Bureau for its failure to economize, and its failure to cut these estimates as they led the country to believe they would cut them before they submitted them to Congress.

But to proceed. The ill effects of a condition of affairs which made the transportation of our commerce secondary to that of other nations was apparent, and there have been those who have constantly urged the importance of a merchant fleet which would be under American registry and owe its first allegiance to our laws and country. Both political parties had repeatedly held out such a promise to the American people, but it was not until the passage of the act to which I refer that there was any real hope of an American merchant marine. In less than a year from the passage of the act of September, 1916, our country was drawn into the war which had been waging for nearly three years in Europe. Our allies were dependent upon our country for the greater part of supplies in both food and certain munitions for their large armies. It was also apparent that if the war continued for any length of time our country would have to send millions of men to the European front with an uninterrupted flow of the immense supplies necessary to maintain them. The German submarines had commenced their threatened raids on shipping, and the merchant fleet of Great Britain was being rapidly diminished and the transportation of supplies to our allies and their troops were seriously threatened.

It was important, therefore, to build a vast number of ships, and build them more quickly than anyone had ever dreamed of; and may I say that after the war began it seemed providential that a Democratic administration had laid the foundation for a merchant marine in peace times, when no one anticipated that we would eventually be involved in war. In June, 1917, an additional appropriation of $405,000,000 was made for this purpose, and this appropriation was followed by others for larger amounts, to complete the ships undertaken, making a total to July 1, 1921, which includes an appropriation of over $36,000,000 in May, of $3,240,053,000. To this should be added appropriations for the Shipping Board for administrative and other purposes and allotments by the President, making a grand total of appropriations of $3,322,248,179.31. In addition, the Shipping Board from its inception to February 28, 1921, received from other sources, such as operations, sales of vessels and ships, housing projects, and sundry other sources, $1,477,011,542.41, or total gross receipts from appropriations and other sources of $4,762,405,089.39 up to February 28, 1921. From this should, of course, be deducted the expenditures for operations, sales, cancellation of contracts for vessels after the war, and so forth. This makes the net proceeds of the Shipping Board by way of appropriations, allotments, and other sources $3,084,060,247.88 up to February 28, 1921.

These figures are taken from the report of Admiral Benson, which was made in response to a Senate resolution on June 1, 1921. They were taken from the books of the board and were confirmed in the recent hearings had before the committee.

It is pertinent to inquire as to the assets which represent this enormous sum. I shall not refer to the value of the plants, dry docks, land, material, notes and accounts receivable, and supplies, which the report values at over $800,000,000, although it should be said that there are claims of over $300,000,000, face value, pending against the board. Mr. Lasker, chairman of the Shipping Board, stated that he had employed a large force of outside accountants who are to make a survey of these properties. He would not estimate or approximate what this survey would cost, although it is safe to say that it will cost at least several hundred thousand dollars.

The Government now owns 1,441 steel ships, 291 wooden ships, 15 composite ships, and 6 concrete ships, or a grand total of 1,753, with a dead net-weight tonnage of 11,028,966. Nineteen ships are now in process of construction, all of which will be completed by April, 1922.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. When was the construction of those 19 vessels begun? I wanted to ask that question of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I can not give the gentleman the date when they were begun, but I can say to the gentleman that when it was decided to build no more ships the work on those particular ships had progressed to such an extent that it was deemed very uneconomical to abandon their construction, because the cost of abandonment of the construction would amount to more than the amount necessary to complete the ships by reason of damages which would have been claimed by contractors.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It was after the armistice was signed?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

It is true that some of these ships, and particularly the wooden ships, are not adapted to peace carrying trade. They were built under the stress and necessity of war conditions, when materials were not only high, but scarce.

The Shipping Board now has 632 ships in operation, nearly all of which are running at a loss. The remainder of the boats are tied up. This is true also of ships of private shipping interests, and is due, of course, to depressed business conditions and high rates of exchange. Admiral Benson, the special agent for the President and in sole charge of the Shipping Board, stated in May that the operating losses were averaging from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 per month, but Mr. Lasker, the new chairman of the Shipping Board, in recent hearings, estimates the total losses for the year at $136,000,000 if present depressed business conditions continue.

But while operating losses are heavy, I believe it to be not altogether just to charge all of these losses to operating expenses. It would seem to me that the cost of boats tied up at the docks and losses incurred through channels not connected with the physical operation of boats actually in use should not be figured as operating expenses of the fleet, although, of course, a charge on the Treasury. If the fleet now has too many ships for existing trade conditions and which were built at excessive costs; if many of these ships are unsuited for present trade; if there are hundreds of claims growing out of cancellation of contracts for the building of vessels and other causes; if there is surplus material which can not now be disposed of and which must inevitably be sacrificed at a loss, these are conditions growing out of war, or, as Mr. Lasker stated, they are conditions which were born in the womb of the war, and they could not have been avoided on account of the imperative necessity for boats at that time. They are conditions with which, of course, no private shipping interests have had to contend.

There has been heretofore some sharp criticism of the past administration of the Shipping Board for its failure to dispose of some of these ships; but in all fairness, gentlemen, it should be said that there has been no time since the present depressed business conditions have existed when there was a market for any of these ships at anything like a reasonable price. Mr. Lasker in the hearings a few days ago emphasized this fact, and stated that no one at the present time would buy the ships at any price if compelled to operate them. There was a time, of course, when the ships could have been sold, but at that time everyone who owned a ship was realizing huge profits, and the board was unwilling to accept the low prices offered because they were far below the cost of construction and not justified by existing conditions; and if the board had sacrificed the ships at that time, I think the critics would have been even louder in their criticism, because no one then anticipated the present depressed conditions.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. McDUFFIE. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman, and I enjoyed his remarks as to the policy of the board, and the fairness with which he dealt with it.

Does not the gentleman think it is a bad policy on the part of the chairman of the Shipping Board to announce to the world that these vessels are absolutely worthless, and that they ought to be sunk or given away, if he has any hope of selling them? I am talking about the wooden vessels.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. It would seem so to me. That was called to the attention of the chairman of the Shipping Board, and if I remember exactly his position was that while awaiting sale, if there was any desire on the part of anybody to buy these ships they should be informed that something was going to be done with them, and that that would serve to attract more bidders than if they were left under the impression that the ships were simply going to be tied up for an indefinite length of time; in other words, that those who wanted to acquire those boats, if there are any such persons, would prefer to wait for a while, expecting to get them at less cost next year than they could be gotten for this year. I state that as the reason which was advanced by the chairman of the Shipping Board, and in fairness to him.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. The gentleman said there was a time when these ships could have been sold. I should like to inject into that part of the gentleman's speech a statement that came before the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries at the time when shipping was in its most prosperous condition, shortly after the armistice. Chairman Payne of the Shipping Board came before us with reference to a policy as to the sale of these ships. In his testimony he stated that there was even then no opportunity, and that there were no offers to buy that would exceed 5 or 6 per cent, as I recollect; certainly not over 10 per cent of our vessels. The truth was that even then prospective shipowners were not seeking to buy, but were holding off with a view of getting lower terms, and there never has been an opportunity to sell these ships for any reasonable prices.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman for that statement. I think he has very clearly expressed the situation which confronted the Shipping Board of the past with reference to the sale of ships.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Right in connection with this I want to state, as the gentleman from Tennessee will remember, that Mr. Lasker in his recent testimony stated that even if these ships had been sold, back in the early stages, it is more than probable that they would have been turned back on the Government because the purchasers would have been unable to pay for them.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That is correct. The criticism which has been made of the old board was unfair and unwarranted. Efforts were made to dispose of the ships when a sale was possible, and as a result quite a number were sold. Up to June 30, 1921, 402 ships costing $319,951,986.96 had been sold for $259,547,579.50.

Mr. LONDON. Were they all steel ships?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No; that included all kinds of ships. One hundred and twelve of these ships were wooden vessels which were sold for $10,701,576.35, of which sum $7,028,783.05 has been paid by the purchasers. After these ships were sold and before they were entirely paid for there was a slump in shipping and only $130,693,191.32 of the sales value has been collected, this sum having been turned into physical operation and construction. The board holds accounts receivable and mortgages for the balance.

Nor is it true that ships have always been run at a loss. There was a time immediately following the war when ships were in demand and big profits were made, but these profits were used to complete the construction program. Private shipping interests are now drawing on the profits of that period to pay the losses of to-day, while obviously the Shipping Board must come to Congress for appropriations to take care of its losses. The report to which I have referred shows that up to February 28, 1921, the receipts from the operation of the vessels were $1,051,893,910.04, whereas for the same time the operation of the vessels, including voyage expenses, maintenance, charter hire, and so forth, amounted to $777,250,380.11. These profits were applied toward the construction of vessels under way and other expenses of the board, and are now represented by capital assets of more or less value. I am not here either to defend or excuse the management of the Shipping Board under the past administration, but it is only fair to say that Congress must accept its share of responsibility for the present condition, on account of the limitations which it has imposed for the past two years. I insisted two years ago that Congress should require all the receipts of the Shipping Board, except those derived from actual operation, to be covered into the Treasury, and then make direct appropriations for whatever amounts might be needed.

Congress, however, pursued a different course. As you will remember, Congress, instead of making a direct appropriation, made available receipts from certain sources up to a limited amount, not only provoking great waste in the public funds, but it has proven by actual developments to have been a serious handicap for reasons which it is not now necessary to state. Mr. Dawes, the Director of the Budget, has recently condemned the policy which has been pursued by Congress for the past two years with reference to its appropriations for the Shipping Board. He has taken the perfectly proper position that the only businesslike method of making appropriations is to make direct appropriations for the various departments and independent establishments and to require all receipts to be covered into the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

In that way only can you keep books and know exactly what the independent establishments are costing from year to year. That fact was emphasized over and over again by Mr. Lasker, chairman of the Shipping Board, in the recent hearings. He said it was a vicious practice, a practice which provoked waste and extravagance and was a temptation to governmental establishments, if they needed money, to sacrifice some assets in order to get the money to operate. He urged the committee and Congress to repeal the provision carried in the sundry civil bill for the present fiscal year, which permits the Shipping Board to use not exceeding $55,000,000 from the receipts received from the sale of ships, plants, and surplus materials. Its repeal has not been recommended in this bill, and I am sorry that it has not been.

It will be recalled that the last Congress with a Republican majority delayed the passage of the shipping act, and it did not finally become a law until June 5, 1920. President Wilson promptly nominated members of the board created under that act, but a Republican majority in the Senate declined to confirm them, and they therefore went out of office on March 4. President Harding named Admiral Benson, who, by the way, was the former chairman of the Shipping Board, appointed by President Wilson, as his special and official agent to take charge of and control this huge business until he could make up his mind as to whom he would nominate to be members of the board, and it was more than three months before he appointed the board.

Mr. EDMONDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. EDMONDS. The gentleman knows that the Jones Act required what Mr. Lasker advocated.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Exactly; and I commend that provision of the law. The objection or criticism I was making is that this House and Congress ran counter to certain provisions of that law. The gentleman will remember in order to put that proposition through so as to permit the Shipping Board to trench on the receipts rather than to make a direct appropriation, they brought in a rule in this House—

Mr. EDMONDS. It was through the gentleman's committee and not ours.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Oh, not the rule. The committee reported it out, but I want to say to the gentleman that while I happened to be a member of the deficiency committee and a member of the general committee, it was put through not with my assent or my vote. I not only opposed it but I opposed the rule.

Mr. Lasker has stated a truism when he said that no business of any kind could be expected to prosper without leadership and some one to define permanent policies. I submit that, due to the delay to which I have referred, for more than a year there was no real leadership in the business, no board which felt itself authorized to define policies. Until the past seven or eight weeks, when the new Shipping Board was appointed and confirmed by the Senate, the business just drifted, held together as best he could by Admiral Benson as the special agent of the President, but without any real authority. That this fault lies at the door of Congress and of the administration no one can deny. The present chairman states that the books are in such a condition that it is impossible to give information as to the financial condition of this business, but he was fair enough to say that this was due to the system which grew up under the extraordinary and compelling conditions of war times, and he has especially absolved the comptroller, Mr. Tweedale, who was in charge of the books and auditing and has been for the past two years, and now retains him in that position.

As a further evidence that criticism of past boards has been unwarranted, President Harding not only put the former chairman of the board in sole charge during more than three months but has reappointed him a member of the new board. I submit that the hearings show that the books present a fairly reliable and accurate statement of the accounts, although it is true that under the system adopted there has been, and is now, a very great deal of information concerning operations which has not been put on the books here in Washington, although entered, it is stated, on the books of the Shipping Board in the offices of the various operators. That is explained by the fact that when this system was put in operation a certain amount of secrecy was insisted upon by the War Department. The War Department did not want the world at large to know just what was being done nor did it want the world to know where the ships were going during the war, and hence it was that much of the information as to operation at that time was kept from the Shipping Board, and therefore it does not appear on the books; but every effort is being made to get this information and it is promised that it will be collected just as rapidly as it is possible to do it.

Now, as a further evidence of some of the handicaps under which the past boards have labored, let me call attention to one incident, that of the ship Leviathan.

She is one of the biggest and the finest of the ships, and was taken from Germany during the war, as everyone will recall. She was converted at the time into a transport ship in order to carry our troops across the ocean. After the war it was necessary if she was to be operated to recondition her and transform her from a transport into a passenger ship. It was stated it would take ten or twelve million dollars to do that. While Congress did not expressly prohibit it, yet speeches were made on this floor criticizing what Members believed at the time to be the intention of the Shipping Board, to recondition those German ships, and money was not made available to enable the Shipping Board to recondition them. What is the result? The Leviathan is tied up now at the dock and is costing the Government $45,000 per month to maintain her. That is not all of the story, because the space she occupies at the dock costs $17,000 per month, or a total of $62,000 per month. Is the Shipping Board or any past administration responsible for that?

Mr. Lasker says it will take ten or twelve million dollars to recondition that ship, but the attitude of Congress I submit has been one of opposition to it, at least in the past. I state that not so much by way of defense of the Shipping Board, because, as I say, there has been waste. Contracts were made which I do not defend; contracts for operation as well as for construction of vessels which may now, looking at it at this time, be called improvident. There were reasons at that time which possibly influenced the officials in making those contracts, but I do think in all justice that these facts should be made clear, because, I repeat, the Shipping Board is not altogether responsible for some of the gross and huge mistakes with which it has been charged in the past.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. I assume that all of these contracts were prepared by a legal force employed by the Shipping Board, were they not?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I presume so. They had a legal force for that purpose.

Mr. McKENZIE. The gentleman has gone into this matter pretty fully. Can he cite one single contract which has been prepared that was in the interest of the Government, a contract presumed to be prepared by Government agents?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am frank to say that I can not cite any such contract. I assume when the contracts were made that the members of the board thought that they were in the interest of the Government.

Mr. McKENZIE. Is it proposed to continue those same attorneys on this pay roll?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Oh, no; I do not think the new board has any intention of doing that, at least so far as I know; and I want to say to the gentleman with reference to the contracts that were made, by way of repetition of some of the things that I have already said, that those contracts were made at a period of time when conditions were totally different from what they are to-day, and looking back at it from to-day we can readily understand and appreciate the fact that they were very improvident, but the gentleman must remember these contracts were made under conditions growing out of the war or, as Mr. Lasker picturesquely expressed it, they were born in the womb of war, and of course the contracts were made hurriedly and with a view of getting the ships started, for the purpose of carrying commerce, and so forth.

Mr. McKENZIE. As I understand it, many of these contracts were made long after the war was over, and in that connection this bill provides an appropriation of $48,500,000 for operations and to take care of the administrative end of this great force. For one, I fear that those attorneys should have been paid by the operators and not by the Government, because they certainly drew every contract in favor of the operators and against the Government, and if that is going to be the practice hereafter I feel that we ought not to give them one dollar.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Of course, the gentleman is referring to ancient history when he talks about what the attorneys did in the past with reference to these particular contracts.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Does the gentleman think it quite fair to lay the responsibility for policies that were adopted upon the attorneys who drew the contracts which expressed those policies?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Oh, clearly not. The policy was established by the Shipping Board, and I presume the gentleman from Illinois had that in mind.

Mr. McKENZIE. It is immaterial to me who is responsible. The Government got the worst of it in every instance.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I think so, I am frank to say to the gentleman. Take the managing-operator contract. I do not think there is any question but that the Government gets the worst of it, because there is a contract which provides that the operator shall have 5 per cent gross of the freight rates, and that the Government shall pay all of the expenses of operation. Of course, if the ship loses, the operators do not lose. There is no incentive on the part of the operators to save money, because they know that under such a contract Uncle Sam will take care of whatever expenses are incurred. The new chairman of the Shipping Board said that he is going to abrogate those contracts just as soon as he can. They are subject to cancellation at any time.

Mr. Lasker stated that there are three plans, one of which would be followed, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] has stated. One is the bare-boat charter, which he says is absolutely impossible at this time on account of trade conditions. The other is a joint or partnership contract of some kind, which he is contemplating making with these operators, whereby the operators will be called upon to share at least a part of the expense. He further says that if this contract can not be made he is going to tie the boats up, or at least that was the announced policy of the board when he was testifying before the committee, and that in the face of his plain statement that to tie them up would cost more than it would to operate them, because, he said, that naturally as long as we are operating them they will bring in some money to help pay for the loss, but when you tie them up and maintain a great force to keep them in repair and in proper condition nothing is coming in to pay those losses. Basing my statement upon what Mr. Lasker has just said, it seems to me it would be a far better policy if no contract of the kind referred to be made for the Government to operate the ships and establish the various trade routes provided for in the Jones Act.

And in saying that I am not speaking for Government operation of these ships because I am opposed to it as a permanent policy. I do not believe the Government can operate these boats successfully in the years to come, but it is a fact, as Mr. Lasker says, that to establish a trade route does require a certain period during which profits can not be made. You have to develop the trade. Now, it seems to me that if he can not make a partnership contract or a bare-boat charter, rather than tie these boats up to the dock, because it will cost more money than to operate them, it would be far better for the time being for the Government to operate them, establish these trade routes and develop trade which will enable it in the future satisfactorily and perhaps profitably to dispose of these ships to ship operators.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the determination of a practical shipping policy, no member of the board being a practical shipping man, who is the employed person who determines the practical policy that should be followed?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin I think that it is very unfortunate, and that seems to be true not only of this board but of past boards, that no man was selected as a member of the board to help determine the policy of the Shipping Board and of our fleet who had practical knowledge of shipping and the operation of ships. Now, Mr. Lasker states that he proposes—

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for a question on that point—

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee (continuing). That he proposes to operate these ships through three vice presidents. He designates them as vice presidents. They are employees of the Shipping Board. The gentleman will recall the United States Government owns all the stock of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and the members of the board are the directors. He names these three men as vice presidents of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and they are expected to operate the ships. Now they are employed, two of them at $35,000 a year each, and one at $25,000 a year, or a total of $95,000 per annum. For my part I agree with the gentleman from Illinois in his statement in reference to the Shipping Board. I think it would be manifestly better to have had one man at the head of this whole shipping fleet. And I think it would have been manifestly more advantageous, and certainly more economical, if only one man had been selected by the Shipping Board to operate this fleet. Undoubtedly it would have saved a great deal of money, because such a man could have been secured at much less than $95,000.

Mr. STAFFORD. These three vice presidents who have been selected are practical shipping men, who have actual knowledge of the maritime business of this and other countries?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. It is so stated. They have been connected with various shipping corporations or interests. They are men who have been connected with that business in the past.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. If the gentleman will allow me, is it not a fact that Mr. J. H. Rossiter was the director of operations, and Mr. Rossiter was one of the best shipping men and one of the ablest shipping men this country ever had for a long time?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I recall that he was director of operations. I do not—

Mr. HARDY of Texas. He was an expert in that line.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Well, I may say—

Mr. WALSH rose.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. For a brief question, then I desire to conclude.

Mr. WALSH. Does the gentleman state that private shipping companies are losing money to-day?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That was the statement made to the committee; not in all cases, but that is the general condition of the shipping trade, so the committee was informed.

Mr. WALSH. Who stated that?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. My recollection is it was stated by Mr. Lasker, and if I mistake not by Mr. Smull.

Mr. WALSH. If so, he knows as much about it as of the affairs of the Shipping Board.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I think Mr. Smull, who is a $35,000 man employed to operate the fleet, made the statement.

Mr. LAZARO. If the gentleman will permit, of the three men selected, Mr. Smull; Mr. Fetterof, of the International Mercantile Marine; and Welding Ring, of the United States & Australian Steamship Co., composed the charter committee of the Shipping Board during the war. Mr. Love was formerly an official of the International Mercantile Marine, and later he was in charge of the American business of the Furness, Withy Co., the largest operating steamship company in the world, which is headed by Sir Frederick Lewis, who was the active head of the British Ministry of Shipping during and after the war, and the other one, Mr. Frey, was for 16 years connected with the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., and for the last year its active manager.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman. And Mr. Smull, who, as the gentleman states, was on the old charter committee, which made these contracts, now so severely criticized, has been employed by the present board at a salary of $35,000 to have charge of the operations of the fleet.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has consumed one hour.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will take a few minutes more and then I expect to conclude. In regard to the salaries of the men I have referred to, the new Shipping Board has started upon a policy of large salaries which has never been followed heretofore in the history of the Government, certainly not in the administration of the last Shipping Board. The salaries of two of those employees is nearly half what the President of the United States receives, and nearly five times as much as a Senator or a Member of the House receives.

It is three times, or nearly so, as much as a member of the Cabinet, the Vice President, or the Speaker of the House draws. It is over two and one-half times as much as a member of the United States Supreme Court draws. I submit that after a reasonable period of time, if the Shipping Board is going to pay these immense salaries, it will be held to a very strict account as to the results shown.

In addition to the three officers to whom I have referred, Mr. Lasker stated at the time of this hearing that he had employed a technical assistant to the chairman of the Shipping Board at a salary of $20,000 a year, and he also stated that a great many more high-priced salaried men would be employed. But the most amazing statement that was made, showing this great extravagance in salaries, was with reference to the attorney personnel of the board. And I want to call your attention very briefly to some of the salaries that have been fixed by the general counsel of the Shipping Board in the payment of the attorneys now employed by this new board. There are three of them who draw $25,000 a year each, nearly twice as much as a member of the United States Supreme Court. There is one of them who draws $20,000 a year; there are four of them who draw $15,000 a year each; there is one who draws $12,000 a year; there is another who draws $9,500 a year; there are four who draw $10,000 a year each; and there are six who draw $7,500 a year each, a total of 20 attorneys at an annual expense of $260,000 a year. And the general counsel stated that he had not half started, because he stated that that was not half the force that he would require in order to complete his attorney personnel. And one of them stated—I think it was the chairman of the Shipping Board—that the attorney expense of this board would amount to between $500,000 and $1,000,000 every year.

But that is not all. These men are employed on regular salaries. They are here. They look after claims under $75,000, I think it is, but when it comes to the other claims—and there are many of them and other cases involving more than that amount—special counsel are to be employed. The general counsel stated that it had been and would be his policy to employ some big firm up here in New York or elsewhere to represent the Shipping Board in particular cases. When asked whether or not he was going to fix the fee and what they would charge, he replied that the big attorneys did not follow that sort of practice; that he would rely on their patriotism, and he was quite sure that their fee would be reasonable. When I tell you that some of these cases involve four or five millions of dollars, and others as much as $8,000,000, and many of them over $500,000—and I am speaking to gentlemen a majority of whom are lawyers—I think some of you can have some idea just what these fees will be at the conclusion of these cases. Now, the committee has sought to remedy that. The committee has put in a provision, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] has stated, which requires the compensation to be approved by the Attorney General of the United States. His policy and the policy of all of the administrations of the Department of Justice in the past has been not to allow any fee during any one year to any one special counsel which will exceed the annual salary of the Attorney General, which is $12,000 a year.

I say, gentlemen, there is no excuse for these big salaries. I say that it is starting upon a policy and setting a precedent which this Government can not stand, because if this precedent is followed by other independent establishments and other departments there will be no limit to what the Government will be paying in salaries. It never has been the custom for the Government to pay salaries to men in the higher positions equal to those paid by private interests.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will.

Mr. McDUFFIE. I notice one attorney, Mr. Gaines, is employed at a salary of $9,500. Will the gentleman inform the House what his duties will be?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will. In order to be absolutely accurate and correct, I will read to the gentleman just what it was stated his duties are to be. And I will say that I know Mr. Gaines. He is a very clever gentleman. He was serving in Congress when I first came here. He is from Charleston, W. Va., and has been out of Congress for a number of years, practicing law, I presume, at Charleston. He has been employed at $9,500 a year. Listen to the statement as to his duties. This is the general counsel's statement:

Then I have Joseph H. Gaines, whom I am paying $9,500 a year. You probably do not realize it, but we have meetings of the Merchant Marine Committees of the House and Senate probably two or three or four times a week. New legislation is coming up every day, and we are called upon to be present at those meetings and to express what we think the legislation ought to be, to draft new bills, to modify bills, and I have gotten Mr. Gaines in charge of that work.

It is the first time, gentleman, I have ever heard of a department or independent establishment paying out of the people's Treasury any sum for an attorney to appear before the committees of Congress in its behalf. And yet that is the statement made to us as to what Mr. Gaines is expected to do.

Mr. WALSH. The man whom Mr. Gaines succeeds they paid $10,000 a year. They have saved $500.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes. I will say to the gentleman that when that statement was made Mr. Lasker was very quick to say this. I asked the question:

Mr. Gaines, of West Virginia?

He was quick to catch the point. He said what the gentleman from Massachusetts has said:

He takes the place of a man who resigned and who, I think, was getting the same salary.

But he never did say, I submit to the gentleman, that the man whom he succeeded was doing that particular kind of work. He was doing strictly legal work.

Mr. OLIVER. Will the gentleman yield in that connection?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will.

Mr. OLIVER. It is quoted on thoroughly reliable authority that Mr. Lloyd, employed by the Department of Justice at one time at a salary of $2,500 a year, has recently been employed by the Shipping Board at a salary of $10,000. I think that is a matter that should be called to the attention of the president of the Shipping Board.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. And furthermore, while I am on this attorney question, and then I am going to close, I wish to state another instance that occurs to me. A former distinguished United States Senator, who until two years ago was sitting at the other end of the Capitol, is now practicing law in Washington, and he is getting $5,000.

To settle any of these various claims? No. But the general counsel says, "I have employed this distinguished former United States Senator at $5,000 a year as advisory counsel to me." In other words, he has this former United States Senator employed at $5,000 to advise the general counsel of the Shipping Board as to his legal duties. [Laughter.]

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SWEET. What salary does the general comptroller, Alonzo Tweedale, receive?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Fifteen thousand dollars, and he is being retained now at that salary.

Mr. SWEET. And he has been in the employ of the board for two years, has he not, or more?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I think two years this month.

Mr. SWEET. And what are his important duties—to furnish misinformation to Congress? [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. His duties are expressed in the title of comptroller. He has charge of all the books of this $3,000,000,000 corporation. He is at the head of the bookkeeping and accounting department, and Mr. Lasker was particular to absolve him from any personal or official responsibility for the condition of the books as they now exist.

Mr. SWEET. And Mr. Lasker also states in his testimony that he had no confidence in his figures?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Oh, no; he did not say he had no confidence in Mr. Tweedale's figures. He said he had no confidence in the books as they have been kept under the system which was adopted in war times. He stated that was under the old system, when it was impossible to get any information. He stated the books did not show all the facts and figures that he had hoped to obtain through this large and expensive auditing force.

Mr. SWEET. He said he was entitled to the salary of $15,000?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. SWEET. And before he went to the Shipping Board I think he was receiving a salary as auditor under the District government here of $2,500?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No. He was receiving a salary of from $4,000 to $4,500; and I will say to the gentleman from Iowa that I took occasion at that time to criticize the action of the board in giving him so large a salary of $15,000 when he was previously drawing so much less. But in comparison with the salaries established by this new board, both as to positions of administration and the attorney personnel, I think the last board was exceedingly modest in fixing the salary of Mr. Tweedale at $15,000.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I should like to inquire of the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee whether or not he does not think that Congress ought to pass some general legislation to prohibit the building up of legal departments in these various executive branches? Is it not time the Attorney General's office handles all the litigation of all these boards and departments?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I think the gentleman is clearly correct, and I hope that the proper legislative committees which have jurisdiction of that subject, either the Committee on the Judiciary or the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, will take up that matter, because I do not know of anything that is more badly needed than the enactment of some legislation along the lines suggested by the gentleman.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I will say to the gentleman that he may be assured and my friend from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] may be certain that such a proposal will be made to the Committee on the Reorganization of the Executive Departments and it will no doubt carefully consider it.

Mr. BYRNS of South Carolina. I am told that the Shipping Board has a publicity man at a salary of $7,900. Has the gentleman any information on that?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not know as to that, but I am fully prepared to believe it. [Laughter.]

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the gentleman sits down, does he know in regard to the basis of the salary of Mr. Cotton, of the Shipping Board, who went into partnership with Mr. McAdoo, the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No; I do not.

Mr. BRIGGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. BRIGGS. Has the gentleman any idea of the comparative salaries of the attorneys employed in the Department of Justice, in the office of the Attorney General of the United States, and those employed by the Shipping Board?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. As I have already stated, it is the policy of the Department of Justice and it has always been its policy, so I have been informed, that in no case will they ever employ special counsel at a salary or on a fee basis which will amount in one year to more than the salary received by the Attorney General, which is $12,000 a year. The highest compensation ever paid is at the rate of $1,000 a month, which is the salary received by the Attorney General.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I think the publicity agent of the old Shipping Board was in my office this morning, and my recollection is that he was getting $4,500 a year. Mr. Lasker talked to him and told him that that was not enough, but he proceeded to install a new man. [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I confess I do not know what a publicity agent has to do. I imagine that his duties are about as much out of place as I think are the duties of this counsel who is employed to appear before the committee of which the gentleman is a member.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion let me say that there should be no politics in the management of this great merchant marine. It has resulted in an outlay of more than $3,000,000,000, and anyone who would attempt to play politics in its past or future management is deserving of the most severe criticism. It is an American enterprise, one which should be administered solely from an American viewpoint and only with the best interest of our country at heart. We all realize that the new board has not had the time to demonstrate just what it will do to perpetuate a great American merchant marine, which everyone so earnestly desires and which is of such supreme importance to the future prosperity of our country. It is quite certain that every honest effort that the new board may make to bring about this happy result will receive the support and commendation of the Congress and the American people, without regard to party affiliations. [Applause.]

Mr. CHAIRMAN, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yielded 15 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Wood].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, never since this Government of ours began was there presented such a conglomeration of incompetency, graft, waste, and corruption as has been presented by the facts giving the history of this Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation. There is nothing in all history that I know of comparable with it, unless it be that situation incident to the attempt made by the French to build the Panama Canal.

A couple of years ago, when I was down there, there was pointed out to me a whole lot of junk that had been shipped over from France and sent to the corporation having that work in hand. Among that junk there were articles discovered which experts in the building of canals and in civil engineering and all the accessories of such an enterprise were absolutely unable to find any application for, and it was developed in the investigation had after that great fiasco of the French at Panama that whenever anybody had anything in France or out of France that they wanted to get rid of at an exorbitant price they sold it to that corporation.

And it seems that this Shipping Board from first to last has been the victim or the agent of plunder and colossal waste from its very inception down to this hour. It is not my purpose, and it would serve no good purpose, to enter into any details as to the specific incidents of that waste. It is well, however, in order that the country may know the situation as it is presented now, that there be a line of demarcation drawn, so that the blame may be cast where it belongs for the past and that correct judgment may be made of the future. The past management of the Shipping Board is to be very severely censured, and will show directly where I think the present board will be censurable if they do not stop the channels of waste that are perfectly apparent. Take the example referred to by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] with reference to that boat, the Leviathan, that has been tied at the dock in New York City almost continuously since the armistice was signed, costing this Government $47,000 a month, if I understand correctly, for the maintenance alone. In addition to this, it is occupying dockage space that is costing the Government $17,000 per month. Now, a far-sighted manager would take that boat out into the bay and anchor it. He could thus get rid of that $17,000 a month dockage; and those who are expert in the management of these affairs tell me that if the boat was anchored out in the bay the expense for attendants would not be one-half what it is when it is up alongside of the dock under the requirements of dockage.

Mr. McDUFFIE. The gentleman has lost sight of the fact that the Shipping Board tried to sell the Leviathan and that they were enjoined from doing so.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. It could be sold just as well anchored out in the bay as it could be tied up alongside of the dock. It is true that the Shipping Board attempted to sell it for $4,000,000 and it ought to have been sold, but they were enjoined by Mr. Hearst from selling it, as I am informed. There are some other things that are perfectly patent.

Mr. OLIVER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. OLIVER. There was also a Senate resolution following the injunction which indorsed the policy of that action and recommended that the boats be retained and also that they be conditioned and put in service. That resolution was passed by a very large vote in the Senate.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. The Shipping Board built towns all over this country, all along the coast wherever they could find a place to build a town. There is one of them outside of Philadelphia, or just at the outskirts of Camden. I went through it the other day. I do not know how many thousands of people it will house.

Many of the buildings are of a permanent character and all of them are occupied by somebody, but nobody is paying any rent or has been paying any rent since activities ceased. They paid $22,000,000 for building this town at Bristol, Pa. There is absolutely nothing being done there. Yet all of these houses have been and are occupied without a cent being paid in rental.

In addition we are spending millions of dollars a year in paying for the upkeep of these institutions. Another concrete example: We have 274 of these wooden vessels down here in the mouth of the James River, tied up in units of seven each, with 40 men to the unit, each of them receiving $100 a month and his keep, costing the Government $50,000 a month, or $600,000 a year, for a lot of boats that are not worth sinking. The Government paid $200,000 to tow them in there, and it would be cheaper to pay $200,000 to tow them out and sink them rather than continue this expense for another six months.

Mr. BURTON. Will the gentleman from Indiana yield for a question right there?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BURTON. Are the boilers and engines and machinery in those wooden vessels—are they equipped to go to sea?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes; they are equipped as well as they can be equipped. Some people say they are not seaworthy, and they will go only about six or seven knots an hour. They are untrustworthy, and a gentleman testified before the committee that you could not get the cost of salvaging those boats, taking into consideration the machinery in them.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I will ask the gentleman, is it not a fact that there were originally 571 of these wooden boats, and that all of them have been disposed of at sale prices except 285, and that the Shipping Board on the recent bids received a bid of $2,100 or $2,200 apiece for the bulk of these boats, which is at least something better than sinking them, and that in the light of the fact that everybody agrees, as the chairman of the committee stated in his speech, that there is absolutely no sale now for ships.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. That is correct, so far as selling them is concerned. There is no sale for ships, but I do not know anything about any offer having been made for them. I do know what it is costing the Government to keep them, and that the cost of their keep is already far more than we can ever hope to get out of them and we would save money if they were sunk.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I can not yield any further. I am just as much opposed to this waste on the part of the Republicans and the present administration and those who are in charge of the Shipping Board now as I was opposed to the waste of the Shipping Board that had charge before the present administration. I sometimes think we are too prone to defend those of our political faith when they are accused of waste and that we go to their assistance too readily, thus encouraging them to go on in their waste. That happened repeatedly during the war and since the war when Members on this side offered constructive objection and criticism for the benefit, as they thought, of the best interests of the Government, only to meet with rebuke and combined opposition from the other side, upon the assumption that it was an unjustifiable attack upon the administration.

Gentlemen who have charge of the administration of this Government ought to welcome constructive criticism; it certainly would be helpful to them. I am criticizing, and will continue to criticize, this board for the exorbitant fees they are proposing to pay—unjustifiable in my opinion. I maintain that instead of paying these men $25,000 and $35,000 a year as expert lawyers they could have gone into the State of Virginia, the State of Indiana, the State of Illinois, or almost any State, into any town of 5,000 inhabitants, and could have gotten men who have never received $10,000 a year in their lives who are as good, if not better, lawyers than any of the high-priced gentlemen who have been selected. They are paying these men simply because they happened to belong to some high-priced firm with an established reputation.

Now, I want to call attention of the committee to an imposition upon those in charge of the legal department of the Shipping Board. I called the attention of Congress two years ago to the same character of graft then being practiced on the Government. At that time, directly after the armistice was signed, there was appointed what was called a War Claims Board, and the Assistant Secretary of War was at the head of the board.

There was a man by the name of Fairbanks, who came from some little town up in Vermont, St. Johnsbury, I think, who testified that he was receiving $1,000 a month for the service he was rendering; that prior to coming here he never earned more than $2,500 a year in the practice of law. He was a lieutenant in the Judge Advocate's office and resigned to take this position paying $1,000 a month. There were 75 of these men getting all the way from $7,500 a year up to $12,000, $15,000, and $17,000 a year. We were given to understand that they would be continued but a short time. I now find that this man Fairbanks was continued in that job until about four months ago, when he was disconnected on the incoming of the present administration. Then he attempted to set up a business in this town for himself, but by some hocus-pocus we find him again as one of the attorneys for the Shipping Board, drawing not $12,000 a year but $15,000 a year. [Laughter.]

If this bill becomes a law, as I hope it will, and I think everybody should vote for it, it has a provision in it that the Attorney General of the United States shall pass upon these contracts for these lawyers, whether special or regular, and if he does this man will never get $15,000 a year or anything like it.

There is another instance that I expect is typical. There is a man who was in the War Risk Bureau that never earned more than $2,000 a year in the practice of law, in my opinion, who got $7,500 a year, and he was not worth 75 cents. He was disconnected from that service, but we find him on the pay roll of the Shipping Board as a lawyer at $7,500 a year. [Laughter.]

These are things that ought to be brought to the light, whether they are of our make or not, and if we are not responsible for it we should bring it to the attention of those who are responsible for it, in order that they may rid themselves of this kind of encumbrances.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I will.

Mr. KINCHELOE. As far as I am concerned, this is a revelation, and it seems to me, as far as the attorneys under the employ of the Shipping Board are concerned, it is stench which stinks to heaven. I want to know if there is any contemplated legislation by Congress.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. We have it in this bill, if the gentleman will read the bill. That is the trouble with the whole thing; it is a stench to heaven. I can comprehend how gentlemen are a little loath to take hold of this stinking thing, I can comprehend that they do not want to get their hands covered with slime, but I want to say that there is such a thing as patriotism in a time of peace as well as in a time of war. [Applause.] It would be an act of real patriotism on the part of some men to come here rendering loyal service to their Government and their country for a fair competency and give their best efforts in the discharge of duties now incumbent on everybody alike. It is not only the business of Congress, it is not only the business of those charged with the administration, but it is the business of each individual citizen to help clean up this dirty mess.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I have only 15 minutes.

Mr. KINCHELOE. I think the gentleman made a statement a while ago that was incorrect. He said if I would read the bill I would find a provision that would cure this defect that we were speaking of. This provision does not do it. It does not take any of these men off the pay roll, and they are going to get the money somewhere.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. They will not be put off the pay roll by this bill, but their salaries will be fixed by the limitation in it. That is as far as we could go; more added would have made it subject to a point of order. But I hope there will be affirmative legislation coming from the proper committee whereby it will be made absolutely impossible in all future time for men to grab the Government by the neck in a time of its distress.

I heard some gentleman say a while ago that he was going to vote against the bill. He may do it, but I think gentlemen should be careful and see that they are not making a greater mistake by voting against the bill than they would by voting for it. We have invested in this thing more than $3,000,000,000. It ought not to be all thrown away and wasted. We ought to save what it is possible to save. If this building should collapse to-day and look like a total ruin, no one would suggest that we should abandon it entirely.

Some one would suggest that we meet in some place where we could get together and make an appropriation sufficient to salvage that which was worth while out of this old hulk. So it is with this masterpiece of profligacy, of waste, or incompetency and corruption. There are millions and millions of dollars in property that is worth while, that must be saved, and, aside from that, it has been the dream of every man here I know, and is now, that some time and in some way we may have a merchant marine of which this country will justly be proud. We have this possibility in embryo in this wreck somewhere. Let us dig it out and save it; let us profit by the example of the past and go on in our march toward that goal where the American flag may be seen in every port in the future, as it was once in the past, respected the world around. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OLIVER].

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, it matters not what individual opinions Members of Congress may hold as to the old Shipping Board and its achievements in the past, we must not forget that we are now considering one of the great assets of the Nation—one absolutely vital to our commercial life, to our industries, to our agriculture, and almost as important to the protection of our country as the Navy itself.

The time is ripe, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] has well said in his very admirable statement of the facts underlying this appropriation, when we should dismiss all politics from the consideration of this great business question, in the hope that we can make known to the American people some salient facts on which they can base a reasonable hope that there will be developed, operated, and maintained a real American merchant marine in the future. [Applause.]

I have no patience with that wild talk of the new chairman of the Shipping Board, as reported in the press, and I think he will soon find occasion to regret it. Let us hope, to borrow his own expression, that he will draw a "red line" from this time on through statements of this character, many of which are erroneous and without the slightest foundation, and apparently made in an effort to seek notoriety through newspaper headlines. The chairman should remember that he is the trustee of a great and valuable property, and that the American people expect this property to be managed in a thoroughly businesslike way. To be continuously discrediting all that has been done, with no announcement as to a constructive program for the future, tends to destroy the value of the property in his hands and to endanger its great possibilities.

The Appropriations Committee has endeavored, in the bill now under consideration, to check some extravagant tendencies of the new chairman, as developed in the hearings recently held. Attention has been directed to the careless manner of employing attorneys at large salaries, and in some instances employing attorneys to represent the Government in litigation involving many millions without even a tentative agreement as to fees. This bill restricts such practice by providing that the salary, compensation, or fees paid to attorneys employed by the Shipping Board must be first approved by the Attorney General of the United States. The Attorney General's office has for some time adhered to the practice of allowing no fee or compensation in excess of the annual salary paid the Attorney General. This House should go further and provide that no fees or compensation for any one year can be paid to any official or employee of the Shipping Board or the Emergency Fleet Corporation in excess of the amount fixed as the annual salary of the commissioners of the Shipping Board. [Applause.] This will correct an extravagant tendency in this direction at its very incipiency. [Applause.]

No explanation can be given for paying Mr. Love, Mr. Smull, and Mr. Frye, recently appointed vice presidents of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, salaries aggregating $95,000. They were formerly employed by the Shipping Board to do the very things they are now reemployed to do by the new board, and their former employment was on a reasonable salary basis—probably one-fourth the amount now fixed. If these gentlemen are unwilling to serve at salaries fixed by Congress for the commissioners of the board, then the chairman of the board should and can find others to perform this work equally as well.

If there be foundation for the criticism which Mr. Lasker is reputed to have so recklessly indulged in, that criticism resolves itself into an indictment of the three gentlemen recently elected as vice presidents. They were the men in charge of the chartering and operation of our ships during the war, and while I do not question their ability, yet they are responsible for the conditions complained of by the new chairman, if those conditions obtained. The reemployment of Smull, Frye, Love, Tweedale, and others by Mr. Lasker is an answer to the extravagant charges he makes.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Does the gentleman know whether or not Mr. Smull is still operating boats of his own?

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that Mr. Smull is interested in an operating company, to wit, the J. H. Winchester Co., and that this company still controls Shipping Board tonnage, operated under the MO-4 contract, condemned by Mr. Lasker as vicious.

Whatever may be said of the Shipping Board, it can not be charged that its control and operation in the past has in any way been partisan. Mr. Piez, a distinguished Republican, was the head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Mr. Franklin, another Republican, was the head of operations, and his successor, Mr. Rossefer, was also a Republican. Among other distinguished Republicans holding important positions with the Shipping Board may be mentioned Charles M. Schwab, H. H. Raymond, Maj. John Cushing, Capt. Paul Foley, Messrs. Smull, Love, and Frye. These are the men who controlled ship operations during the war and for some time thereafter fixed the board's policies and approved the contracts under which ships were leased, allotted, or operated.

The new chairman must understand that Congress is not interested in disparaging statements about individuals, but what we desire to know is, "What have you to propose that promises for the development and maintenance of this great national asset now in your hands to direct, supervise, and operate?" I know that Congress is anxious to cooperate with the Shipping Board in carrying out any constructive program that looks to the safeguarding and ultimate development of a great American merchant marine. [Applause.]

Let me give you a brief inventory of some things we have and see if it does not furnish the basis for substantial hope.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. How can the gentleman claim that this is a great American asset when it has been a liability from the start until the present time and still keeps the Government in business?

Mr. OLIVER. I am very glad the gentleman has asked this question, and I disagree with him wholly in his assumption.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I asked the question for information.

Mr. OLIVER. The gentleman is in error in stating that the Shipping Board has proved a losing proposition from the very first. I question whether any act of Congress met with such unanimous approval as the granting of liberal appropriations during 1917 and 1918 for the building of an American merchant fleet. Public sentiment was behind Congress in the matter and fully recognized, since we had become the great creditor Nation of the world, with a surplus of products from mine, forest, and mills, rapidly accumulating, that we must provide the means for transporting that surplus to the markets of the world in our own bottoms. In the absence of an American-owned ocean delivery we would be at the mercy of those foreign countries who have a merchant marine. Let me say to the gentleman that, as a business man, it would be difficult for him to estimate what our country saved by reason of the Shipping Board's ability to stabilize ocean rates immediately after the armistice. It is true we were not then in possession of many completed ships constructed in our own yards, but we had purchased and taken over under authority from Congress many ships at that time, and this made it possible for the Shipping Board not only to establish reasonable ocean rates to our old-time foreign markets but to establish trade routes to new markets.

But for this action by the Shipping Board ocean rates would have risen to exorbitant figures, and our manufacturers and our farmers, though they had found a foreign market for their products, would have had their profits absorbed in high transportation rates, just as they now find to be the case in reference to rail rates. Let me further say to the gentleman that the Shipping Board, from its surplus earnings, appropriated for ship construction more than $165,000,000 prior to 1921. Can you, then, say that it was a losing proposition from the first? In addition to that we now have a large number of passenger and cargo ships, with many valuable wharves and warehouses. In 1917 there were not exceeding 61 shipyards with 234 ways, where ships of 3,500 tonnage or more could be constructed. This number has been increased to 223 yards and 1,099 ways, capable of caring for the construction of 3,500 tonnage ships and larger. We had then no strong marine insurance companies, and in addition to paying millions of dollars each year to foreign countries for transportation of our products, we were paying many hundred millions to foreign marine insurance companies. Soon we will be able to transport in American bottoms more than 50 per cent of our exports and fully cover both our outgoing and incoming cargoes with American insurance.

Men best versed in shipping business feel that the act of Congress passed in 1920 is a broad, comprehensive shipping law, and if enforced as written will readily enhance the value of the large fleet we now own.

I wish to quote for the information of the House a statement made by Hon. SHERMAN E. BURROUGHS, Representative of New Hampshire, in June, 1920, when discussing the activities of the old Shipping Board:

I have said, and I repeat it, it furnishes a record of which Americans may well be proud—a record, too, that is without parallel in the shipping history of the world. When we consider the manifold difficulties and embarrassments under which this work of tremendous magnitude has been done, too much can not be said in commendation of all those who have been in any way responsible for its accomplishments.

The important question to-day with reference to these ships—the question in which we are all interested—is this: "What are we going to do with them?" They were built to meet an emergency. We had to have that "bridge to France" in order to get our Army and its supplies to the firing line. The cry was for ships and more ships, anything that can sail the sea and get the much-needed men and food supplies to Europe. Of course, the cost has been enormous—many times what it would have been if the same ships had been constructed in prewar times. The 2,286 ships now owned by the Government have cost the taxpayers of this country approximately $3,000,000,000, but the fact that we were able to build them in this record-breaking time was a factor, and I believe a most important factor, in bringing Germany to see the futility of her scheme of world empire and forcing a conclusion of hostilities a year ago. Even if the ships never did another thing or earn another dollar they would, in my view of it, be well worth to America and to the world the full amount they have cost.

To the same effect are statements made in speeches by Senator JONES of Washington, chairman of the Senate committee, and by Senator CALDER, of New York. I have advisedly quoted these three distinguished Republicans in order that the country may know what their testimony has been as to the value of what was accomplished with appropriations made for the building of a merchant marine, and as to what we may hope will be its future value.

Appropos to this same inquiry, I wish to refer the gentleman to the concluding brief of the report from the Select Committee on United States Shipping Board Operations, filed on March 2, 1921. The following composed the membership of the select committee: JAMES WALSH, chairman, PATRICK H. KELLEY, L. H. HADLEY, I. N. FOSTER, H. J. STEELE, TOM CONNALLY.

To stimulate interest in this report, I quote therefrom this excerpt from the concluding page:

Considering the program as a whole, the accomplishments and the number of ships constructed, the tonnage secured and the time within which the ships were completed and delivered, constitute the most remarkable achievement in shipbuilding that the world has ever seen.

I respectfully invite the new chairman of the Shipping Board to read this report, as well as the speeches to which I have heretofore referred, and his press utterance that "it is the greatest commercial wreck in the history of mankind" will need serious revision if he desires to be honest with the American people.

Lest this Congress forget let me call to your mind some glaring omissions in the enforcement of the recent shipping act and urge your cooperation to the end that these important directions and requirements may be carried out at the earliest possible time. Neither the outgoing nor the incoming administration has taken any steps to make effective two of the most important provisions of the shipping act of last year. We have been told by those who have given study to the subject that sections 28 and 34 of the Jones Act must be enforced before we can give any stable value to our merchant marine and insure its future operation on a profitable basis. Mr. Wilson was criticized, both from within and without his circle of political friends, for not having carried out the direction of section 34 of the Jones Act.

If I mistake not, Mr. Harding was one of those who criticized him for not having served notice as provided in section 34 for the annulment or amending of those treaties, containing provisions forbidding the imposition of discriminatory duties on exports and imports when not carried in American bottoms. More than five months have now elapsed since Mr. Harding became President, and we find that he also has neglected to enforce this act of Congress. What more? I speak of this because I feel that we earnestly desire to discuss all questions relating to the development of our merchant marine in a frank, business way. When the recent tariff bill passed the House there was a fatal omission in that bill, not called to our attention when the bill was being considered by the House. Was it an oversight or intentional that there was omitted from the tariff bill the provision carried in the 1913 Underwood bill as to discriminatory duties, and which the Sixty-sixth Congress endeavored to make effective by section 34 of the Jones Act of last year? Members of the Shipping Board, recognizing the importance of this provision, immediately on discovering its omission from the tariff bill unanimously passed a resolution strongly urging the Senate to include this provision in the pending tariff bill. In the resolution they say in effect that if this provision is enforced it will give an immediate value to the large tonnage the Government owns, and stimulate private demand for these ships at a fair price by parties willing to operate the same pursuant to the provisions of the Jones Act. They seem confident that our ships, with this provision enforced, can be sold to advantage and operated at a profit.

Mr. MILLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLIVER. I will be glad to do so.

Mr. MILLS. Does not that cut both ways, and if the foreign countries impose like discriminatory duties, will not the success or failure of that policy depend entirely upon whether our exports exceed our imports or vice versa?

Mr. OLIVER. If we are to shape our policies so as to avoid all fears and apprehensions, such as the gentleman gives expression to, we will never accomplish anything. The chairman of the Appropriations Committee was right when he declared that we must be courageous in the passage of a law like this, and he who takes refuge behind fears and apprehensions, such as the gentleman suggests, forgets the history of his country, and can never write a law that will enable our merchant marine to compete on equal terms with those of foreign countries.

This is no new American doctrine, and suffice it to say it was only when we enforced these discriminatory duties in favor of American bottoms that we were ever able to maintain, build up, and successfully operate a real American merchant marine. You will recall that under Mr. Roosevelt's administration, in 1904, a congressional commission was appointed, who gave about six years' study to this question, and it was their conclusion that the Government must in some way, either by discriminatory duties or by subsidies or subventions, lend aid to our merchant marine before it could ever be successfully operated. A long fight ensued over the choice of these methods, and finally Congress declared in favor of granting preferential rates and duties for cargoes carried in American bottoms rather than subsidies.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes; certainly.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Is the gentleman aware that from 1815 to 1828 the big fight this country had with England was a fight to secure the abolishment of all discriminatory duties?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. This country was united against discriminatory duties, and it has been practically from the beginning of our Government.

Mr. OLIVER. I am sorry to be in disagreement with the gentleman as to that statement. We had this same legislation and enforced this same policy during the time of Washington, and it was not until we abandoned it that our merchant marine began to go down. This Congress has too recently lent its indorsement to this policy for me to take up the time of the House in now discussing it. The gentleman will remember the last Congress just before adjournment, by an overwhelming vote, passed the Jones bill, and provided for preferential rates by sections 28 and 34 for cargoes carried in American bottoms. Section 28 has been temporarily suspended, at the urgent insistence of shippers on the western coast, who represented to the Shipping Board that they had not at that time sufficient American bottoms on the Pacific to carry our imports and exports, and until a sufficient number of American bottoms were available for our western seaports the preferential railroad rates provided for in section 28 should not be put in force.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for one more question?

Mr. OLIVER. I will.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. If the policy has been to get away from discriminatory duties, now why should you want to adopt them?

Mr. OLIVER. Did the gentleman vote for the Underwood bill?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I did, under protest.

Mr. OLIVER. Never mind; did the gentleman vote for the bill?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I did.

Mr. OLIVER. Did the gentleman vote for the Jones Act of last year?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. Then the gentleman can not expect me to help him out of the situation he finds himself in, especially since I think he voted right.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. The gentleman certainly does not blame me for voting for a bill that has one error in it if the rest is what I favor? The gentleman has voted for a bill which had clauses in it he did not approve, I suppose?

Mr. OLIVER. We are unable to correct the errors which the gentleman at this late day undertakes to state are in laws which he voted for. However, all will admit that the discriminatory provision referred to had most excellent indorsement. It was enforced during the administration of President Washington and had the unquestioned approval of Jefferson.

I refer the gentleman from Texas to the history of our country, in order that he may understand that we proposed nothing new and untried in 1913, but simply followed an old, well-understood policy, which alone gave to us a great American merchant marine, capable of competing with foreign ships. [Applause.]

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield to one further proposition?

Mr. OLIVER. I will.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Jefferson and others said they adopted discriminating duties by way of retaliation.

Mr. OLIVER. Even so, and we can truly say the same thing now; but the gentleman from Texas seems unwilling to admit what the undisputed facts disclose. He would let others discriminate against us, while we sit silently by and let this wonderful fleet we now own go to waste rather than be used to deliver our products to foreign markets, pursuant to a sound, sane, and just American policy. What defense can the gentleman from Texas offer to the people of the country, who have indorsed an expenditure of $3,000,000,000 in the construction of this great fleet, if we now omit to do anything to maintain and operate it on a profitable basis? [Applause.]

Mr. EDMONDS. I wish to say that the section in the Jones bill was placed in there as a retaliatory measure on our part for what had been done there to drive us off the sea.

Mr. OLIVER. Unquestionably so.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Can the gentleman tell why section 34 was not made effective in the shipping act?

Mr. OLIVER. I referred to it a few minutes ago and stated that both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Harding, for reasons unknown to me, had failed to make it effective.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. The bill passed with the approval of the former President of the United States, Mr. Wilson.

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. And according to my recollection, that made it a law on the 5th of June, 1920. But he had the authorization from Congress to notify the various Governments, and he failed to do it.

Mr. OLIVER. I did not yield to the gentleman for a speech.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. And I do not know whether he failed under the direction of the Secretary of State or not—

Mr. OLIVER. I am unable to state why Mr. Wilson omitted to carry out the directions contained in the Jones bill, and I am frank to say that I feel he made a mistake in failing to do so. Will the gentleman be equally as frank and answer why Mr. Harding has now refused or failed, for more than five months, to do the very thing which he blames Mr. Wilson for not doing?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I can not.

Mr. OLIVER. Then he should not criticize one Executive without criticizing the other.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I am willing for it to be done.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. OLIVER. Can the gentleman from Tennessee yield me a few minutes?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am sorry that all of my time has been disposed of, but I will yield five additional minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. OLIVER. Now, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, permit me to say that I have no desire to excuse the past mistakes and shortcomings of the Shipping Board, but I am unwilling that criticism of matters, which neither the new Shipping Board nor Congress is now able to change or correct, shall be used to disparage, yea, to destroy, the valuable property the Government now owns.

Some criticize from a desire to have America abandon all hope and plans for a merchant marine; some from a selfish desire to buy our valuable ships and other holdings for a mere song; some to so discredit the value of notes, mortgages, claims, and accounts held by the Shipping Board, amounting in the aggregate to approximately half a billion dollars, that they, the debtors, may settle on a 25 or 30 per cent basis; some for unworthy political reasons; many from ignorance. It behooves Congress to watch with jealous care the management and disposition of this great national asset and to see that it is not dissipated and diverted from those purposes which Congress intended it to serve.

Our wooden ships must not be sunk; they must not be given away to build pontoon bridges or sold for a mere trifle. If the statements from those in charge that these boats are seaworthy and in fair condition are true, they can be sold for far more than the new chairman of the board in his hearings before the committee indicated, and I will add that the chairman has been supplied with reliable information to this effect.

We must not surrender our established trade routes, many of them to new markets; we must not abandon the policy established by the old board, that in the allocation and sale of cargo and passenger ships thought must be had and conditions imposed insuring good service alike on the Atlantic, the Pacific, and the Gulf.

Unless the new board undertakes its work with enthusiasm, hope, and a determined purpose to carefully conserve the valuable property now in their hands and to see that there is evolved therefrom a really great American merchant marine, so distributed, controlled, and operated that it will serve well every coastal section of our country, carrying our products over the new as well as the old trade routes to the world's markets, they will not have met, in even a measurable degree, the opportunities and possibilities now absolutely available to them. [Applause.]

Let the new board remember that while the demands of war may have led their predecessors into extravagance and waste in many ways, yet the old board canceled, after the armistice, contracts for more than 1,000 ships, saving to the Treasury thereby, it is estimated, more than half a billion dollars; they used from surplus earnings from operations, while ocean traffic was good, more than one hundred and sixty-five millions for construction purposes; they established new trade routes to foreign markets, as directed by Congress; built up a marine insurance capable of caring for our immense import and export trade; they acquired valuable docks, yards, warehouses, and so forth; trained thousands of our people for efficient sea service; settled on a fairly satisfactory basis many more claims than are now outstanding, and through their claims department estimated that all outstanding claims, including those in litigation, can and should be settled for less than twenty-five millions; have delivered to the new board obligations due the Government, amounting to several hundred millions; have demonstrated, by confessed mistakes, some policies and methods that are costly and unwise, and which the new board is fortunate in being charged with notice to avoid; have succeeded in having enacted a well-considered, comprehensive, and helpful law, on which, if it is properly enforced, can be built, maintained, and successfully operated a real American merchant marine. [Applause.]

Now and in what way, may I ask the new Shipping Board, will you contribute to the realization of America's hopes for a permanent merchant marine, carrying her products at reasonable rates to every corner of the civilized globe? You must remember that you are the only Shipping Board that the Nation has had since they began building its merchant marine in 1917, which the Senate confirmed and which was given authority to operate under what is claimed to be an efficient and comprehensive shipping law.

Is it asking too much that you now draw a red line through all destructive criticism and direct your energies to formulating some constructive program, to be economically administered, and demanding of the Executive the carrying out of the provision of the Jones law of June, 1920?

You have the property, you have the opportunity to establish, maintain, and provide for the operation of a great American merchant marine. Show the right spirit and I believe you will have the support and cooperation of Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, under special leave granted by the House, I extend my remarks by inserting an excellent paper, written in January, 1921, for the Annalist, by Admiral Benson, who for a time was the acting head of the Shipping Board under appointment by Mr. Wilson, and later continued for a time as the acting head of the board at the urgent request and insistence of Mr. Harding. I commend this paper to the careful reading of the Members of the House:

The shipping act of 1916 was passed for the purpose of encouraging, developing, and creating a naval auxiliary and naval reserve and a merchant marine to meet the requirements of the commerce of the United States with its Territories and possessions and with foreign countries, to regulate carriers by water engaged in the foreign and interstate commerce of the United States, and for other purposes.

Although it is little more than four years since the passage of this law, there seems to be considerable confusion as to just why there is a Shipping Board. If you will turn to the shipping act you will find that the bill was signed by the President September 7, 1916, and that shipping act created the Shipping Board. Just four years ago, on December 21, 1916, the President nominated the first Shipping Board. On January 19, 1917, four of the commissioners were confirmed and four days later the other commissioner, John A. Donald, who is still on the Shipping Board, was also confirmed.

I want to emphasize this, because in the fall of 1916 the strongest kind of peace overtures were being made. All sorts of peace feelers were put out to reach America. And the heart of humanity seemed to dictate that America must play the role of world peacemaker. Yet, no matter where we turned, we found how helpless a maritime country is to play any part in world affairs without ship independence. The World War, while being fought mainly on land, caused heavy loss on the high seas, with this difference, however, that the losses on land were losses the belligerents suffered themselves, while the losses on the high seas also involved the loss of innocent babes, women, and men, and millions of dollars of American property, never to be recovered.

NOW SHIP INDEPENDENT.

I want to repeat what I have often said in Washington, that if through some world menace the governments of this earth should again be thrown into another gigantic struggle, we of America could proclaim to the world that we are now ship independent. And our ships properly manned, as they are, can solve any transportation problem overseas that would result from such a world menace. In the light of the international conditions which faced us in 1914, if there is no other justification for the existence of a Shipping Board, that feeling of elation we may show as the result of ship independence is a sufficient reason, in my judgment, for the Shipping Board. And the best answer to any criticism that may be leveled at those who tried to do their work while serving that board is that no criticism can destroy the fleet we now possess. It may create distrust as to the utility of it for commercial purposes. It may handicap us in the profitable employ of this fleet. It may give ammunition to our trade foes, but destructive criticism can do only this; it can not take from us the ship independence which America certainly should feel happy it now possesses.

Unfortunately, in the years devoted to the development of our railroads and other overland means of communication we lost our ship-mindedness and learned to lean heavily upon ships other than our own in the overseas carrying trade. This, perhaps, may explain why up to a few years ago our merchant marine had dwindled to a point which permitted the carrying of less than 10 per cent of our products in American bottoms. Happily to-day this condition has been so materially changed that we are now in a position to carry approximately 60 per cent of our products and are fast reaching that point in the movement of our exports in American ships.

Congress has shown a splendid evidence of ship-mindedness within the last six months. With the passage of the merchant marine act of 1920 this country began a new era in marine affairs. Up to that time we had the nucleus of a splendid merchant marine, made up of tonnage constructed during the war, plus what little we had at the outbreak of the World War. This rehabilitated merchant marine, the outcome of war preparedness, did not have a real definite policy outlined for it, so far as the Government-owned fleet was concerned, until Congress by its recent legislation determined that the fleet should be privately owned and directed that the ships be sold as soon as possible compatible with good business judgment.

Here and now I desire to go on record as unalterably opposed to Government operation of this fleet. It was, therefore, most encouraging to me that Congress laid down the law of the land that the fleet should be privately owned and controlled. Government ownership and operation at best is under great handicap when commercially opposed by private operation. A Government-owned fleet dies, due to the keen competition it is forced to meet, unless constantly aided by large appropriations from public funds. Fortunately our fleet has been operated, in the main, by able operators, who, in addition to operating their own ships, undertook to act as agents for us. Thus in the allocation of our Government-owned tonnage we were enabled to operate in a semiprivate manner, but always handicapped by the heavy overhead brought about by fiscal regulations considered so essential in the transaction of Government business. My predecessors endeavored to cut off duplication of effort whenever it existed. Mr. Donald and myself, constituting the old board for about five months, made it our business to continue this policy and to eliminate all lost motion. But, of course, in an organization which reaches to all parts of the globe, the task is one that entails months of hard study and business resourcefulness. At the present time we are giving close study to the first reports which have reached us from the committee, which has devoted much time to the study of efficiency of our ship operators. How many of these operators may fall by the wayside due to inefficiency is hard to say, but the new board is determined that the time has arrived when the men acting as our agents must measure up to the task. We have been patient, knowing that many were acting as pioneers in a new calling. The lull in the freight market has afforded an opportunity to speed up the work of this efficiency committee, which has been investigating for several months.

I like to think of the whole-souled support the merchant marine has received from our newspapers and other publications, especially so in the light of recent events in which efforts to effect remedies of existing weakness in our marine development gave opportunity to some honest-intentioned persons to exploit others whose intentions are evident from their records. But this can not be avoided in a public inquiry of such far-reaching character. The sunshine of truth will cure whatever evils are exposed and particularly so if the evidence gathered is sufficient to send the wrongdoers to jail.

GROWTH REALLY AMAZING.

About seven months ago, shortly after I assumed the chairmanship of the Shipping Board, I pointed out that when this country determined to build ships on a scale never before undertaken in the history of the world we found there were only about 61 shipyards, with 234 ways, in which vessels of 3,500 dead-weight tons and upward could be constructed. In November, 1918, when the armistice was signed, we had developed ship construction in this country to a point which increased the shipyards from 61 to 223, and 234 ways were increased to 1,099, each way having a capacity for ships of 3,500 dead-weight tons upward.

In 1910 our total merchant marine amounted to 11,262,123 dead-weight tons, of which 1,173,776 tons were engaged in foreign trade; in 1917 our total tonnage was 13,306,556 tons, of which 3,661,164 tons were engaged in foreign trade. The fiscal year ending 1920 showed our total merchant marine to be 25,027,342 dead-weight tons; of this more than three-fifths engaged in foreign trade, or a total of 15,692,631 tons. In other words, in 10 years' time this country developed a merchant marine engaged in foreign trade from little more than 1,000,000 dead-weight tons to 15,692,631 tons. When you study the development of seagoing tonnage in our merchant marine, the amazing story of the last three years is shown.

At the point of the greatest development of our seagoing tonnage engaged in foreign trade this country had 3,569,094 dead-weight tons of shipping. That was in 1860. From 1860 to 1910 our merchant marine had gradually dropped until it was a mere shell. It may be interesting at this time to refer to a survey of cargo vessels of the United States Shipping Board engaged in foreign trade that entered and cleared in United States customs districts covering the first six months of the year. The volume of carrying trade for the period mentioned, both exports and imports, is shown in the following schedule:

	Ves- sels.	Dead- weight tons.	Cargo tons.
American ships.....	9,550	51,534,620	22,724,217
Other ships.....	6,008	35,397,080	15,273,967
Total.....	15,558	86,931,700	37,998,184

The participation of American bottoms in the total carrying trade as shown in the following analysis indicates a well-balanced use of our ships compared with the utility of foreign vessels in service to this country, with a slight advantage to our ships in the cargo per dead-weight ton:

	American ships.	Foreign ships.
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Number of ships engaged.....	61.4	38.6
Dead-weight tonnage.....	59.3	40.7
Cargo tonnage carried.....	60.8	39.2
Ratio of cargo tonnage to dead-weight tonnage.....	44.1	41.5

An examination of the carrying trade in exports and imports separately shows wide variations from the averages for the total trade. This analysis indicates that while many of the American vessels are carrying return cargoes to United States ports, the foreign vessels during that period were to a large extent entering in ballast and clearing with more cargo in proportion to the number and tonnage of vessels employed. We immediately set out to increase the use of our tonnage, but within the last 90 days, as a result of world conditions, there has been a decreasing employment of seagoing tonnage.

By the end of the fiscal year all but 367,600 dead-weight tons of the ships under construction by the board will have been completed, according to the present program. This tonnage, after June, 1921, will represent principally ships that need fitting out and the installation of interior finish. The war construction program included the building of 3,268 ships of 18,381,276 dead-weight tons, which was cut down to about 2,300 ships. After the armistice all construction was canceled whenever a saving could be effected by doing so. This decreased tonnage about 4,700,000 dead-weight tons, a 25½ per cent reduction and at a saving of ultimate expenditures of at least $650,000,000. At the present time the total number of ships in our merchant marine controlled by the Shipping Board is 1,686 of 10,821,890 dead-weight tons, made up as follows: One thousand three hundred and twenty-eight steel vessels of recent construction, 32 seized German and Austrian vessels, 282 wood and composite, 8 concrete, and 28 purchased steel vessels. Of these 94 are tankers, 20 cargo and passenger ships, 15 refrigerators, and 1,537 cargo vessels.

The total tonnage in the United States merchant marine on June 30, 1920, was 25,027,342 dead-weight tons, of which the Shipping Board had constructed 2,070 of 11,622,361 dead-weight tons. Of these we had sold up to June 30 about 380 ships.

ERRONEOUS IMPRESSIONS SPREAD.

This is a record Americans can take pride in; it is an evidence of what the American shipbuilder contributed in a material way for the $3,000,000,000 which we spent in the construction of ships. There has been so much loose talk, relative to large sums of money spent, that many well-meaning persons have been led to believe that this amount of money appropriated by the United States Government for the building of ships was spent without thought of return and without an effort to control. I do not believe that in the face of the vast accomplishment, for which all Americans can properly take credit, anyone desirous of knowing the facts will deny that we have the physical possessions of the largest single fleet of merchantmen in the history of the world, the direct result of this expenditure of $3,000,000,000. This fleet has been profitably employed in the development of our foreign trade, but primarily with the thought of continuing the humanitarian rôle that has made America stand out as a country willing at all times to give the other fellow a chance. While engaged in vast relief work and in the task of carrying overseas large consignments of supplies destined for war-ridden countries, we piled up a huge amount of charges, for earnings which are still owing and which it will take a long time fully to collect.

Those who are inclined to pick isolated instances of vessels that failed in reaching the high standards we have set for them overlook the splendid rating of vessels obtained both from the British and American Lloyds. They frequently, in a desire to present some controversial phase of the period when this country was in the throes of war, enlarge upon circumstances with which they may be fully acquainted, but which only affect a small part of the big task. These controversial matters, when aired in the public press, are oftentimes, unfortunately, the means of spreading erroneous impressions.

I do not want anyone to misunderstand me. I am not shirking my responsibility. I do not desire to explain away wrongdoing. If I had my way, and I am using every effort in that direction, I would have all wrongdoers who did anything criminal or who took unfair advantage in a commercial way sent to prison, after due conviction. But there is the rub, so often forgotten by those who are earnestly bent on righting wrongs by means of exploitation.

Placed in a position like I am, it is necessary to take responsibility after due judgment. If, in my judgment, it is most essential to build the ship, and in doing so expeditiously increase the cost by meeting labor demands, the methods of contractors for increased compensation, it is after all a matter of judgment. Later developments may show that in the rush for ships men in the Shipping Board depended upon to act as checks upon those who were spending Government funds failed to do their duty. It may develop that men to whom they reported failed to investigate conditions. There is no denying the fact that in an enterprise involving the placing of contracts averaging about $100,000,000 a week during a six months' period men seeking easy money found their opportunity. These men, if they were found out and duly convicted at the time, would have set an example to others likely to fall. Our department of investigation reported 2,500 cases that they investigated from the time we began our ship construction up to the end of this fiscal year. We sent a number of these to the Department of Justice.

I wonder if it ever struck those who have been led to throw up their hands in horror at sensational headlines if the Shipping Board had failed to build ships what would have happened to our exporters shortly after trade was resumed with foreign countries. The fact that we had a fleet of splendid seagoing vessels stabilized ocean freight rates at a time when they were soaring to heights almost unbelievable. For the first time in about 60 years America had a delivery system overseas sailing under the American flag and permitting fast dispatch of our productions to other lands.

This fleet, controlled by the Shipping Board, earned in gross revenue since it began operations more than $1,000,000,000, and while we can not show a profit as large as probably would have been the case if the fleet had been privately owned, the fact remains that this one billion actually stayed in this country, and had we not possessed a fleet of ships built by the Government this one billion would have had to be spent for the use of foreign bottoms plus the added cost that always comes from a monopoly.

We must not forget that had there been no nation able to take up the position Germany occupied when her maritime power was literally wiped out ocean-carrying tonnage would have been monopolized by Great Britain, whose crying trade needs naturally would have come first. Now, as we keep in mind that we possess this fleet of vessels which we built during the war, and that it is profitably employed in spreading out the products of America to all parts of the world, a great deal of dissatisfaction arising from recent developments will disappear, I am sure.

AMERICAN INSURANCE KEPT PACE.

On June 30, 1920, the net return to the Shipping Board, after running expenses had been paid, but not taking into consideration certain bookkeeping items, was $400,000,000. This amount embraced large sums owed us by the Army for transportation charges, cash that had been returned to the Treasury, $96,000,000 in cash funds on hand, about $293,000,000 in accounts receivable. We had total current liabilities of $99,281,000 at that time, with total current assets to meet those liabilities amounting to $638,200,000, which amount did not take into consideration the value of our fleet, the total cost of which as of June 30 was approximately $3,000,000,000, which amount embraced purchases, reconstructive and reconditioning expenditures; owned vessels of about $2,700,000,000. For the first time in more than 60 years, not only is America ship independent, but it can honestly say it is able to carry its own insurance in American insurance concerns.

With the organization of the American marine insurance syndicates completed, the board is directing its attention to legislative disabilities obstructing a healthy development of the marine insurance business. A model insurance for the District of Columbia will probably be the result of legislation under way. It is hoped that, if this legislation passes at the present session, it will serve as a model enactment in part or in whole by our leading marine States. Marine insurance is most important in the development of our commercial independence. An adequate marine insurance free from foreign control or domination is an absolute requirement for the maintenance of a merchant marine and the successful conduct of our foreign trade. Enough instances in recent years come to mind of the use of marine insurance as a commercial weapon against us to warn us and make plain how essential it is for us to have marine insurance independence as well as ship independence.

Excessive taxation, coupled with all the other legislative obstructions, hampers our American companies in the foreign competition they must meet. Existing obstructions greatly increase the adverse cost differential. Marine insurance is more vitally influenced by legislative restrictions than is fire insurance, where rates are mostly non-competitive in character and where excessive taxation and other burdens can thus be easily absorbed. Marine insurance rates are subject to foreign undercutting. The business is essentially international in character and always subject to foreign attack, and legislative burdens therefor can not be shifted to property owners if they are free, as in this case, to seek the cheapest foreign market. The recent marine insurance investigation demonstrated how merchants and vessel owners emphasize the importance of being allowed to use the foreign market, if that is the cheapest. A small difference in the rate will direct the flow of marine insurance.

Excessive obstructions must be removed or modified if American marine insurance companies are to be placed on an approximate basis with foreign competitors in the intense international rivalry for trade. The national welfare requires there be unity of action on the part of all our law-making bodies, with a view of remedying errors of the past and to promoting greater harmony of action in the national interest. The Shipping Board proposes to carry on its reconstructive program in this respect, fully convinced that the immediate situation requires that the legislative policy of the several States should not run counter to the needs of the Nation as a whole.

NO TIME FOR FALTERING.

The World War brought us into prominence as a maritime power. That power we now exercise causes the eyes of the world to be focused upon us, as we daily strive to increase the efficiency of our fleet—the largest one of merchant ships under single control in the world's history. It is encouraging to know that while this huge fleet of vessels made necessary the training of an army of men to man our ships within the last three years, these men have done so well under most discouraging conditions. When the World War broke out America had lost the sense of shipmindedness, so essential if a country means to be a maritime power. We had to go into interior towns and recruit men who knew little of the romance of the sea. But the youth of this country had never failed to respond in time of need, and happily the body of men we were able to get measured up to the mark. I do not hesitate to say that, man for man, no finer body exists than that made up of those we have recruited for our merchant marine. These are times, however, when conservative business men take careful stock of their own resources. We Government officials, in charge of the work of procuring a permanent merchant marine, would be unbusinesslike, to say the least, if we did not, like good business men, frankly face conditions as we find them in the commercial world to-day.

Our operators have suffered. We should not hesitate because of this. We should not falter because foreign competition has become so keen.

We should not lose faith because with deadly persistency our trade foes take advantage of every opportunity to create an impression that American ships are not seaworthy and that an American merchant marine is a mere dream.

The courage and vision of those who assumed the burden of canceling war contracts will never be fully comprehended. It will be when it is made clear that not only was more than $600,000,000 saved the American people by this action, but ships in course of construction were changed materially as a result of our turning from a war-emergency program to a conservative basis in shipbuilding. After all is said and done everything has a relative value. And people who are now prone to look upon ships as burdensome possessions which we unhappily do not know how to use to the fullest measure of profit would change the tune of their song if this country again faced an international situation such as the world saw in the fall of 1914. Those who are inclined to judge matters, taking all sides of the question into consideration, agree that if through some world catastrophe another mad dog of war was set loose America certainly would be in a much more fortunate position, far more secure and better able to handle the problems that would affect her commerce than she found herself in the fall of 1915 and the early spring of 1916, when the air was filled with declarations and demands for ships from many who are now criticizing us because we answered their cry of ships, more ships, and more ships, and, respondent to our appeals, the American shipbuilder exerted himself to the utmost because men like Hurley had the courage to spend large sums of money, the only thought in mind being ships, more ships, and more ships.

The splash made by the 95 ships launched on the Fourth of July, 1918, will never lose its effect. It was the most fitting demonstration of the industrial strength of America when all joined hands in common effort for the common defense.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON].

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Chairman, "It is a condition which confronts us, not a theory," said Grover Cleveland in his annual message in December, 1887. To-day a condition of immensely greater magnitude and far more difficult of solution confronts us. It arises from the organization and the transactions of the United States Shipping Board and its subsidiary, the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Yet that is not all, for the whole future of shipping in the United States is involved.

It is well to state certain prominent facts. Under the authority of the original act creating the Shipping Board of September 7, 1916, and numerous other acts supplementary thereto, approximately $3,500,000,000 has been expended, or is represented by liabilities incurred; ships to the number of 2,066, with an aggregate gross tonnage already of almost 9,000,000, have been acquired for the Government by purchase, requisition, or original construction, about four-fifths in number and tonnage having been obtained by construction.

The Shipping Board now has under its control 1,798 ships, with an aggregate gross tonnage of 8,000,000—7,993,000. Notwithstanding this enormous expenditure, the operations of the Shipping Board have been and now are conducted at a loss, and a recent request was made to the Committee on Appropriations for an allotment of $125,000,000 to pay its debts and to provide for operating expenses; the pending bill carrying a much smaller amount is in response to this request.

The transactions of this board are matters of the past, and it is not profitable in this brief discussion to give more than a passing reference to its activities. It must, however, be said that all the blunders, waste, and extravagance which have brought bankruptcy to men and nations—the wide ramifications of the speculative spirit with the mismanagement which has wrecked so many public and private enterprises—all these rolled into one could not surpass the losses which the Shipping Board and its subsidiaries have brought upon the United States Treasury.

The members of the Shipping Board did not lack ability or patriotism, but a serious situation was created by the appointment of some who were unfamiliar with maritime affairs and by the brief tenure of others to whom control was intrusted. Congress must share the responsibility. Almost unlimited appropriations were made. In the wild enthusiasm "for ships, more ships, yet more ships" the expenses of the Shipping Board were swollen to colossal figures, and the end is not yet. Every principle of sound business management and proper organization was neglected.

One of the worst mistakes was the continuance of a program of ship construction long after the reason for it had ceased.

The total tonnage constructed under the Shipping Board December 1, 1918, 20 days after the armistice and the close of the war was only 706,000 tons, while by July 1, 1921, the construction had reached the enormous total of 6,408,000 tons.

On September 1, 1919—nearly 10 months after the close of the war—there were 194 vessels under contract but not commenced, of dead-weight tonnage amounting to 1,448,000, or approximately 1,000,000 gross tons. There remained to be delivered to complete the program 6,443,000 dead-weight tons.

It thus appears that the larger share of the expenditures for carrying out the plans of the Shipping Board were for ships not commenced, or only partially constructed, at the close of the war, or even later.

Since the creation of the Shipping Board it has built some 289 wooden ships with a tonnage of about 750,000, although this material for ships in ocean-going trade has been universally condemned for many years. Incredible as it may seem, these ships have been constructed at a greater cost per ton than the Lusitania or the Mauretania, which at the time of their construction were planned to be the finest ships the world had ever seen. It is now almost impossible to give them away.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Chairman, would it interrupt the gentleman to yield right there for information?

Mr. BURTON. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. KINCHELOE. How many of these ships had been constructed up to December, 1918?

Mr. BURTON. I am not aware of the exact number. It is given in a bulletin recently issued by Mr. Chamberlain, Commissioner of Navigation, on July 1 last. On referring to the bulletin I find the number of wooden ships constructed by December 1, 1918, was 90 and the gross tonnage was 245,000—just a little less, both in number and tonnage, than one-third of the total completed to date.

If the problem of construction had been solved in accordance with a recognition of the inevitably diminished demand for tonnage at the close of the war, the major part of the expenditure of the Shipping Board would have been saved, even though necessary to compensate those having contracts for loss of profits and for work already done. There was certainly a loud and sufficient warning that there would be a surplus of ships in the very considerable decrease of commercial traffic.

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURTON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LONDON. To what extent has the destruction by submarines been replaced?

Mr. BURTON. It has been more than replaced. I will come to that.

It is important to compare the existing amount of shipping with that prior to the war. I have not the very latest figures, but the total gross tonnage of all nations on June 30, 1914, was 50,231,000 tons, and on June 30, 1920, it was 56,024,000 tons, an increase of almost 6,000,000 tons, or nearly 12 per cent. Let us compare this with the trade between countries as measured by weight of exports and imports. In 1913 the statistics of 19 leading countries, as given by the National Economic Council, showed 74,000,000 tons of imports and 72,000,000 tons of exports; the total freight traffic for 1919, as indicated by the first quarter, had dropped to 34,800,000 tons of imports and 32,500,000 tons of exports, 46 per cent of that of 1919, or less than half. In the first quarter of 1920 the percentage as compared with 1913 had increased to 64½ per cent; thus, while ship tonnage had increased 12 per cent, the freight had decreased 35½ per cent. Undoubtedly 1921 will show a substantial decrease from 1920.

It is not necessary to go further than these figures to explain the depression in the shipping business. Rates on wheat, coal, and some other heavy freights of late have occasionally been fixed by charters at figures below those in 1913 and 1914.

A comparison of world conditions only partly expresses the condition in the United States. The total gross tonnage of British ships diminished about 462,000 tons from 1914 to 1920, amounting to 20,582,000 in the latter year. On the other hand, the gross tonnage of the United States increased in the years mentioned from 6,464,000 tons to 14,707,000 tons. In other words, while the aggregate tonnage in other countries showed a decrease, the United States absorbed more than all of the increase of 6,000,000 tons. This comparison is made much more impressive when it is taken into account that these figures of tonnage in the United States include coastwise as well as overseas or foreign tonnage, and by far the larger part of the increase was in the latter.

Now, what shall be done? Shall we scrap this great fleet of 1,798 boats, or thereabouts? I say no. [Applause.] They are a valuable asset to the people of the United States. There has been a radical change in the situation. Before the war we had far less than the number of ships required for conducting our foreign trade; now we have many more than enough.

The problem of the present is to save as much as possible from the wreck and to inaugurate a policy which shall give to the United States that object of supreme desire—a merchant marine. It is essential that changes should immediately be made in the policy of the Shipping Board. Nothing but drastic measures will answer. The first necessary step is the immediate abandonment of the policy of granting charters under which those to whom Government ships are leased receive a compensation of 5 per cent of the gross receipts from freight, passenger traffic, and so forth, under which it is possible for the managing operators of the ships to obtain unheard-of profits, although the boats may be operated at a loss to the Government. Of this form of contract Mr. Lasker, the recently appointed head of the Shipping Board, said in the hearing before the Committee on Appropriations a few days since:

The contract is the most shameful piece of chicanery, inefficiency, and of looting the Public Treasury that the human mind can devise.

Mr. OLIVER. It will be interesting to the gentleman to know that Mr. Smull, who draws a salary now of $35,000, and is supposed to be the gentleman in charge of the operation of them in the future, is interested in a company that has a contract of the kind that the gentleman has referred to and operates ships under that contract.

Mr. BURTON. Well, reform it altogether. Cut it out.

Contracts of this nature were made with a moving-picture concern, with a mule driver in one instance. The inevitable result of such a system would be to intrust the ships of the Government to persons entirely lacking in financial responsibility and ability to manage the business. Those who took contracts ran no risks and thus the most reckless plungers were invited to undertake the task of developing the country's shipping. If the boats can not be chartered in an ordinary way so that those who manage them take the risks as in the usual transactions between owner and lessee, it is even better for them to lie idle, expensive though that may be.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURTON. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Can the gentleman inform the committee whether the personnel of the Shipping Board employees does not consist of the same men who have been so unwise in the direction of this enterprise?

Mr. BURTON. Among the subordinates I understand that that is true, though I have no reliable information.

In this connection it should be stated that the accounts of some 6,000 voyages since April 1, 1920, under such charters have not been audited. These should be adjusted at the earliest possible date. The board has seemed to take the statement of those who manage the boats without question, thereby leaving an unprecedented opportunity for dishonesty and fraud.

Second, the policy enunciated in the act of June 5, 1920, for transfer to private ownership should be vigorously carried out. We have had enough of Government ownership and management. The object lesson may have been a frightfully expensive one, but its teaching has sunk deep into the popular thought. Possibly for a brief time some boats, in view of the exceptional conditions, might be operated directly by the Shipping Board or some governmental agency, but this is of doubtful expediency.

Third, there should be a careful inventory of the material on hand and steps be taken for its disposition. We should also insist that the Shipping Board with its unnecessary army of expensive employees should reduce its force to a number commensurate with proper and economical administration. An appropriation will be necessary, no doubt, for meeting the emergency of the present situation, but undoubtedly the House will be disposed to scrutinize the estimates of the Shipping Board and reduce the amount to the lowest possible figure.

The question now arises, What is the future policy which should be adopted for the maintenance of a mercantile marine? It is to be noted that in a recent report of July 26 the members of the present Shipping Board, which must not be held responsible for the work of their predecessors, have recommended the policy of discriminating duties. Also, the act of June 5, 1920, in section 34 stated that the judgment of Congress was that treaties or conventions which restrict the right of the United States to impose discriminating duties on goods entering the United States in foreign vessels should be terminated, and the President was authorized and directed within 90 days after the act became a law to give notice to the several Governments for the termination of such treaties. No such notice was given by President Wilson, and as was stated at the time of discussion in the Senate, this provision should be regarded as merely paving a way for such a policy without definite commitment to its adoption.

In the Underwood tariff act of October 3, 1913, there was a provision for a discount of 5 per cent in the duties to be collected on goods imported in vessels of the United States, provided this did not conflict with the provisions of any treaties between the United States and foreign nations. It will be noticed that this is much more limited in its scope than section 34 of the act of June 5, 1920. The allowance of this discount was opposed by the Treasury officials, and their action was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States in March, 1917, in a case known as the "Five per cent discount case." (243 U. S., p. 97.)

The question is then an open one for future consideration whether the attempt shall be made to promote the development of merchant shipping by discriminating duties.

I wish to express vigorous opposition to this method. It is true that under the original act levying tariff, of July 4, 1789, the preamble of which was "for the support of the Government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States, and the encouragement and protection of manufactures," a discount of 10 per cent was allowed to ships of the United States on all duties imposed by the act. There were also discriminations much more substantial on teas imported from China or India. At that time tea was regarded as the most important article of import into the United States.

A later act of August 10, 1790, "An act making further provision for the payment of the debts of the United States," in the second section, levied an additional duty of 10 per cent on all goods which after December 31, 1790, might be imported in ships or vessels not of the United States.

This general policy of discriminating duties was maintained contemporaneously with growth in our merchant marine until 1815. It was supported by men of such prominence as Madison when a Member of the House of Representatives and Jefferson when Secretary of State under Washington.

Beginning, however, with the treaty of London with Great Britain in the year 1815, there was a gradual change in policy in case equal access was given to our ships in the ports of other nations and equal privileges as regards tariff. Discriminating duties were gradually removed.

The President was authorized to see that no discrimination existed and to relieve goods brought in foreign ships from additional duties provided the same privilege was afforded to our ships by foreign nations. The statutes having the most to do with this change were passed in 1824 and 1828. The President still has the authority to impose additional duties in retaliation against countries not giving equal treatment to our ships. Proclamations suspending the extra duties or imposing them were issued in recent years by Presidents Grant, Arthur, and Cleveland. These proclamations made reference to France, Spain, Portugal, and Japan.

It should be noted that this policy was adopted not altogether or primarily as a desirable rule of action, but in a time when there was discrimination against our ships by other countries. It was also a time when our imports exceeded our exports and by reason of an abundance of timber and our skill in shipbuilding the United States occupied a leading position in the building of wooden ships. When discriminations were abolished it was not thought best for us to continue the same policy.

The arguments against the adoption of discriminating duties at this time are based in the first instance upon the desirability of friendly relations with all commercial nations. In his last speech at Buffalo President McKinley said: "Commercial wars are unprofitable." Again, it is a fact that discrimination on our part would inevitably lead to similar retaliatory measures by the countries with which we trade. It should be borne in mind that our exports are far greater than our imports both in bulk and in value, and thus a return to methods of discrimination by all nations would be far more injurious to us than to the others. It should further be stated that a very large share of our imports are on the free list. At no time during the last 30 years have less than 41 per cent of our imports been on the free list, and during the operation of the Payne-Aldrich Act the proportion was more than 50 per cent. Under the Underwood law the proportion has been substantially larger. These free articles include tea, coffee, rubber, and many other commodities brought to the United States from countries with which there are the strongest reasons for developing trade. Under the tariff act of 1789 and for years thereafter practically all imports were subject to duty. In that statute there was a basket clause imposing a 5 per cent duty on all imports not otherwise specified as subject to duties excepting only certain materials such as copper, cotton, wool, and hides.

In a report filed by Senator Gallinger and a majority of his colleagues on a merchant marine commission in 1905, he opposed discriminating duties, and it was stated that 98 per cent of our imports from Brazil and 94 per cent of those from Central America were absolutely free from duty; from China 50 per cent, and from Japan 64 per cent.

In an earlier report by Senator George F. Edmunds, made to the Senate January 12, 1899, Document 59, page 7, he referred to treaties on this subject and advocated elimination of this method as a means for building up our merchant marine.

It is, I think, the predominant opinion of men interested in the business of shipping that such a policy would be unwise at this time and might lead to troublesome reprisals, also that capital would not embark in an industry which had to start out with such threat confronting it; it would require the cancellation of reciprocal equality in the movement of ships now contained in more than 30 treaties with the principal nations of the world.

The next method proposed is to foster shipping by subvention or subsidy. Propositions for a general subsidy on freight and passenger ships have always met with strenuous opposition in Congress, and that policy has never been adopted, though often advocated and in a variety of forms. There is a wide difference in the policies adopted by different countries. The basis of governmental aid is a recognition of the fact that shipping property is ordinarily less profitable than other investments, and that at the same time ships confer an exceptional benefit upon the countries to which they belong.

What are the forms of direct aid in vogue? They may be included under the heads of subsidy and subvention. A subsidy is granted to shipping as such merely for the promotion of navigation or trade without the exaction of any compensation or equivalent by the country involved. A subvention more properly relates to laws granting certain amounts to shipping companies but requiring as an equivalent some service or benefit, such as the carrying mails, the availability of the ships for use in the time of war, to which is frequently added the requirement that the subsidized ships shall be of a type useful to the Government as auxiliaries to its Navy.

England and Germany have adopted this latter policy of subvention on a very considerable scale, but have at no time granted subsidies to cargo ships. The plan was first initiated in Great Britain in the year 1838, when contracts were made with the Peninsular Co., afterwards known as the Peninsular & Oriental, for the carrying of mails to Spain and Portugal, and with the Cunard Steamship Co. for the carrying of mails to the United States. This policy has been continued and compensation is paid to mail steamships plying to outlying British possessions and to the leading countries of the world. This same policy has been adopted by the English Dominions, including Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Canada, with a strict provision in the case of Canada that preference shall be given to Canadian goods and Canadian shippers. Germany granted a subvention to the North German Lloyd Co. for service to the Levant and the Far East, also to the German East Africa Line, but it is to be noted that the principal German company—the Hamburg American Steamship Co.—did not care to give the equivalent demanded and thus declined the subvention.

Besides England, beginning in 1838 and Germany in 1886, Norway, Sweden, Italy, the Netherlands, and Brazil have resorted to the policy of mail subventions.

The granting of subsidies to cargo ships has been the policy of France, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Japan, and Spain. In none of these countries—although in several of them there is a bounty for shipbuilding as well as for the operation of ships—have the results been shown in marked increase of the mercantile marine except in Japan, and the increase in ships in that country has been contemporaneous with an unusual industrial growth. All of the countries last named give compensation for the carrying of mail as well as subsidies for tonnage.

It should be noted that other assistance to shipping has been granted by various countries, such as the repayment of tolls paid by ships going through the Suez Canal, preferential railroad rates as in Germany on goods to be shipped overseas, loans to shipowners at low rates of interest. The British Government in 1903 advanced approximately $13,000,000 for the building of the Lusitania and Mauretania at a rate of interest of 2½ per cent. The same policy of making loans has been tried by Sweden, Russia, and Belgium. Exemption from taxation has been granted by some countries and in the United States by some of the States, as in Massachusetts and California. The laws of the State of New York exempt from taxation American-owned ships engaged in foreign trade. There was a similar law in Alabama passed in 1911, and in the State of Washington. There have also been regulations under which the State itself has owned and operated steamships, as in the case of the line owned by Belgium operating between Ostend and Dover; also in Italy on steamships operating between the mainland and Sardinia and Sicily. The countries in which there has been an ownership of ships are Belgium, Russia, Italy, Rumania, Brazil,

West Australia, Japan, and France. The United States also has owned since the purchase from the French Panama Canal Co. the ships of the Panama Railroad Co.—three in number. Under the regulations of certain Governments the administration has the right to name directors in steamship companies.

The question is still further complicated by regulations in regard to the right to purchase ships built in shipyards other than those of the country in which they are registered. Most countries have allowed purchase anywhere, but this has not been the usual policy of the United States. The Panama Canal act of 1912 allowed the purchase of ships for use in foreign trade if not more than five years old, and the ship registration act of August 8, 1914, removed the restriction as to age.

In the United States and some other countries the coastwise trade is reserved to ships operating under the flag of that country, though in England and Germany and most of the countries of Europe the traffic is open to boats of all nations. Japan has the same rules as the United States.

THE POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The only direct financial aid paid by the United States has been the payment of mail subventions from 1847 to 1857, from 1864 to 1877, and from 1891 to date. Under a contract in pursuance of the law of 1847 the Collins Co., carrying mail between the United States and Great Britain, assumed a front rank among the steamboat lines of the world, though unfortunate in losing two of its ships, one in 1854 and the other in 1856. In 1857 payments were discontinued and the line was afterwards abandoned. A prominent feature in the abandonment of the mail compensation provided for in 1864 was the activity of a corrupt lobby in 1872 in seeking to obtain additional payments for the Pacific Mail Steamship Co.

The act of March 3, 1891, provides that the Postmaster General may make contracts for terms of from 5 to 10 years with American citizens for the carrying of mail on steamships to foreign countries. There are four kinds of contracts, varying with the speed of the vessels and other requirements; those of the first class must have a speed of 20 knots; second class, 16 knots; third class, 14 knots; and the fourth class, 12 knots. Under this law mail contracts have been entered into for boats running from New York to Southampton, Vera Cruz, Habana, and Venezuela; also from San Francisco to Australia. The total cost of contract service in 1915 was $1,096,000.

In some remarks made here May 24 I pointed out some of the disadvantages to which American shipping engaged in foreign trade is subjected; among them is the tendency of capital and effort to engage in enterprises on land which are more attractive and offer greater promise, the earlier adoption on a large scale of iron and steel ships in Great Britain beginning in the early fifties, and the widespread destruction of ships by privateers during the Civil War; also the existence of a seafaring class in other nations in much larger numbers than here.

What shall be the future policy of the United States? How can we utilize this enormous fleet of 1,800 ships built at so great an expense? Unquestionably wooden ships are useless, and many of the steel ships built in the rush under the Shipping Board are not suited for our commerce. There is, however, a widespread desire, almost universal, that the United States should take a leading place among shipping nations. I would suggest, first, as already stated, the earliest possible transfer of the Government-owned ships to private individuals or corporations and the abandonment of Government competition or any participation whatever in the business. Private capital will not engage in shipping where those who embark their funds in shipping enterprises have to meet with competition from the Government while its ships are controlled by those unmindful of profit and loss. There will naturally be some delay in disposing of these ships. We can now realize that a great mistake was made when they were not sold long since; an offer of $4,000,000 was made for the Leviathan, but an injunction was obtained against the sale. This injunction has cost the people of the United States millions of dollars, because the boat has been a great source of expense ever since. It is of exceptional size and a peculiar type and probably could not now be sold for any amount.

Second, contracts similar to those authorized by the act of March 3, 1891, for regulating mail and passenger lines to the leading ports in the outlying portions of the world. This statute will have to be liberalized; the requirements as to speed may have to be diminished. What is most to be desired is regular communication by steamers of the United States with Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other parts of the world with which commerce can and should be developed. There should be lines on both coasts of the United States to the ports of South America. Even if the present expense is much increased, it will result in a most substantial benefit to the people of this country.

Great Britain is spending many times as much as we are for similar service and in one year during the administration of President Taft the profits on foreign postage were $3,000,000.

We next come to the question of a subsidy to cargo steamers. Our cargo ships have been in past years at a disadvantage in comparison with other countries both in original or capital cost and in operating cost. They have been denied equality of opportunity. It has been estimated that a ship which could be constructed in a foreign country for $800,000 would cost in the United States at least $1,200,000. This has been due in part to the standardizing of models in other countries.

It is to be noted the expenses of shipping depend upon two main factors—capital cost and operating cost. In previous years ship companies in the United States have been at a disadvantage in both respects.

The situation presents an opportunity to do away with the disadvantages arising from capital costs; the Shipping Board has ships galore which could be sold at prices below those in foreign countries; this does not mean that they should be sold at a ruinous sacrifice, but the Government is better off without than with them. It is necessary that the larger part of the expenditures for these ships and of the operations of the Shipping Board should be charged to the expenses of the war. In the operating expenses of ships there is a material difference in this country because of the requirements for seamen and officers, as well as higher wages and better quarters, but we must remember that the country is not in favor of doing away with this restriction, though some features in our existing laws should be modified.

Just what should be done with reference to cargo steamers only the future can tell. It may be that diminished capital cost will compensate for the handicap of larger operating cost. It may be necessary to make payments to shipowning companies of the difference in the expenses of operation. If the Government desires to maintain, as it should maintain, a higher standard of wages, living and equipment on board these ships which must compete on the open seas with the whole world, those who operate them have a strong claim for Government aid. If we are to maintain a condition of preparedness a naval reserve is essential, and seamen as well as officers paid by the Government could be located on merchant ships as a source of supply in time of possible war or partial pay could be made to those available for the Navy.

Maybe after all the waste and confusion there will come a restoration of conditions in the early years of the Republic when the American flag was on every sea. But we hope, at least, that our merchant marine will resume its proud place on the ocean for the promotion of American commerce and the greater prestige to our people. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas had leave to extend his remarks.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to my colleague, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I wish to commend the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations for the investigation they have made of Shipping Board matters. I have listened to the speeches they have made with a great deal of interest, largely because of the fact, perhaps, that being a member of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries I have had occasion to devote some time and attention to the same matter. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations made a very fair and impartial speech, and I indorse his position and the position of the ranking Democratic member, my colleague from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS], on the question of the settlement of claims and the employment of attorneys and commend them for the provisions in the bill which they had reported dealing with those matters. While these gentlemen have made very fair and impartial speeches, yet a great deal has been said by others for many months and even years, with regard to the past Shipping Board operations, and Mr. Lasker, the present chairman of the Shipping Board, has had a great deal to say not only in the hearings but in the press about the "very sick patient" that he found and the "shocking conditions" which he inherited. We will all concede—I do not suppose anyone will deny it—that many mistakes have been made by the Shipping Board and those under its employ. I do not rise now for the purpose of presenting any special brief for them except in the interest of fairness to call attention to certain facts and to say that I think the conditions in the past may to a large extent be justified, as they have been by Chairman Lasker himself, who, after detailing in very graphic terms the "shocking conditions," was asked by the chairman of the committee who was to blame for that, when Chairman Lasker replied as follows:

I should say that the blame lay in the womb of the war, in the hurry with which it was started, and in the manner in which it was conducted from the very beginning. Whether it was in the men or the system, or both, I do not know. Of course, you can refuse this appropriation if you want to, but the thing has never had what I would call a Chinaman's chance.

I also call attention to the report of the Select Committee on Shipping Board Operations appointed by this Congress, of which the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] was the chairman and upon which committee were other distinguished and conscientious Members of this House, the committee being composed of four Republicans and two Democrats. After making a very thorough investigation that committee made a unanimous report last March, which I deem well considered, intelligent, and fair. Among other things, this report, in its conclusions, states:

It must be remembered that the Shipping Board in dealing with the war emergency was confronted with many difficulties. The program of construction as well as operation was gigantic. It involved an expenditure of more than three and a half billion dollars, a sum greater than any expended by any corporation in a similar period of time. Many of the officials and board members were without experience in either shipbuilding or operation. No adequate organization existed at the beginning. A complete organization to carry out its large program had to be created. There was a shortage of shipbuilding skill as well as shipbuilding facilities. The need for ships was imperative, and constantly increased during the combat period.

Of necessity, under these conditions and when the time was of the very essence of the problem, waste and extravagance resulted. However, the committee has found no evidence to prove that dishonest or fraudulent motives actuated any members of the Shipping Board or any member of the board of trustees of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

There has been waste and inefficiency and lack of coordination in the tremendous operations of this Government agency. The reason or justification given for this is the stress under the war emergency. No one will deny that there was a great emergency; that time was the most vital factor.

It is apparent, however, from the testimony taken by this committee that in the desire to speed up and accomplish results without counting costs, mistakes of judgment, lack of supervision, and a failure to give careful consideration resulted not in a saving of time but in delays. Considering the program as a whole, the accomplishments in the number of ships constructed, the tonnage secured, and the time within which the ships were completed and delivered constitute the most remarkable achievement in shipbuilding that the world has ever seen.

The said Select Committee on Shipping Board Operations made two definite recommendations—one a change of the contracts under which the Shipping Board vessels are being operated, as to which I shall later have something to say if I have the time, and their other recommendation was as follows:

It is the judgment of the committee that the shipping requirements of the Nation can not be best administered through a board of seven members, and while there may be some parallel along regulatory lines between the Shipping Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission, it is the view of the committee that what is needed is more centralization of administrative authority than can be had by a large board. Until this tremendous fleet is disposed of a competent person of experience should be placed in charge of the operations and a salary commensurate with the responsibility of this position should be paid.

The merchant marine act of 1920, enacted in June, 1920, increased the members of the Shipping Board from five to seven, and no efforts have since been made to reduce that number, in accordance with the recommendation of said committee. Furthermore, instead of selecting one competent person of experience and placing him in charge of the operations, as recommended by the said committee, Chairman Lasker has selected three men at aggregate salaries of $95,000 per annum whom he has designated vice presidents.

It is a conceded fact that the chief losses in the operations of the Shipping Board vessels have occurred during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921. While it is undoubtedly true that business depression, world-wide in nature, naturally played a large part in this result, yet Mr. Smull, one of the experts selected by Chairman Lasker, testified before the Committee on Appropriations that even now the large private ship operators are making money. That which undoubtedly played a large part in the losses referred to was the fact that during the last year our immense Government shipping interests were practically leaderless and rudderless, the business being largely directed by subordinate officials, due to the following situation, to wit: The merchant marine act of 1920 increased the Shipping Board to seven members and directed the appointment of an entirely new board. Congress adjourned the day following the passage of that law. Not even was an appropriation made to pay the salaries of the new board. President Wilson made recess appointments of the new board. When Congress reconvened, the Senate refused to confirm his appointments. President Harding did not appoint the members of the Shipping Board until June 8, 1921, they being sworn in a few days later, so that the largest business in the world's history was permitted to drift from June 5, 1920, to March 4, 1921, without a Shipping Board which had been confirmed by the Senate, and from March 4, 1921, until after June 8, 1921, a period of more than three months, without any Shipping Board whatever. Under those conditions what else could be expected except the result which followed? Of course, Mr. Lasker naturally found the business in a sick and demoralized condition. However, the former Democratic administration can certainly not be held justly responsible for that situation.

Much partisan criticism has been directed at President Wilson and the former Shipping Board because they did not sell the Government-owned ships prior to the slump in prices, when it is claimed they could have been sold at advantageous prices. Our merchant fleet was primarily constructed as a war auxiliary, and the return of our overseas troops, equipment, and supplies was not completed until the late fall of 1919. It is true that some of our ships could have been sold during 1919 and the early part of 1920 at much better prices than they could now be sold for. However, Mr. John Barton Payne, chairman of the Shipping Board during a portion of that period, stated before the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries that the Shipping Board would welcome legislation by Congress definitely defining the policy Congress desired the Shipping Board to pursue; that there was considerable controversy on the Shipping Board as to what should be done and as to the prices at which the ships should be sold.

It will also be recalled that there was very considerable controversy among Members of Congress and in the press upon the same subject, and the Shipping Board was enjoined from selling a number of German ships, at prices which Chairman Payne at the time considered to be advantageous, and subsequent developments have proven that he was correct. Chairman Payne further stated that while they could have sold some of the vessels on liberal terms, yet that they had not had an opportunity to sell any large number of the vessels.

During the recent hearings before the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations there was a discussion as to whether the ships could have been sold prior to the present slump, and Chairman Lasker made the following significant statement:

It is only fair to say that if you had sold them, I think you would have most of them back now.

Chairman Benson has made the same statement in substance. In other words, what ships might have been sold would necessarily have been sold on time, and when the slump came and they were unable to make money or meet the payments, at least most of the purchasers would have turned their ships back to the Shipping Board.

The slump in prices, due to depressed business conditions, commenced perhaps in the spring of 1920, more than a year after the Republicans had come into power in both branches of Congress. If they had not been satisfied with the way things were being conducted, they could at any time have passed a law to carry into effect their views. However, although President Wilson and the Shipping Board had requested Congress to enact legislation defining the policy to be pursued with respect to our merchant marine, yet the Republican Congress enacted no such legislation until June 5, 1920, after which the conditions existed which I have heretofore described.

Instead of directing a change of policy, or the sinking and junking of our immense merchant fleet, section 1 of the merchant marine act, passed June 5, 1920, provides:

Be it enacted, etc., That it is necessary for the national defense and for the proper growth of its foreign and domestic commerce that the United States shall have a merchant marine of the best equipped and most suitable types of vessels sufficient to carry the greater portion of its commerce and serve as a naval or military auxiliary in time of war or national emergency, ultimately to be owned and operated privately by citizens of the United States; and it is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to do whatever may be necessary to develop and encourage the maintenance of such a merchant marine, and, in so far as may not be inconsistent with the express provisions of this act, the United States Shipping Board shall, in the disposition of vessels and shipping property as hereinafter provided, in the making of rules and regulations, and in the administration of the shipping laws keep always in view this purpose and object as the primary end to be attained.

Instead of directing an immediate sale of the ships at whatever price they would bring, as some Members vehemently insist should have been done, section 5 of the said act provides as follows:

That in order to accomplish the declared purposes of this act, and to carry out the policy declared in section 1 hereof, the board is authorized and directed to sell, as soon as practicable, consistent with good business methods and the objects and purposes to be attained by this act, at public or private competitive sale after appraisalment and due advertisement, to persons who are citizens of the United States except as provided in section 6 of this act, all of the vessels referred to in section 4 of this act or otherwise acquired by the board. Such sale shall be made at such prices and on such terms and conditions as the board may prescribe, but the completion of the payment of the purchase price and interest shall not be deferred more than 15 years after the making of the contract of sale. The board in fixing or accepting the sale price of such vessels shall take into consideration the prevailing domestic and foreign market price of, the available supply of, and the demand for vessels, existing freight rates and prospects of their maintenance, the cost of constructing vessels of similar types under prevailing conditions, as well as the cost of the construction or purchase price of the vessels to be sold, and any other facts or conditions that would influence a prudent, solvent business man in the sale of similar vessels or property which he is not forced to sell. All sales made under the authority of this act shall be subject to the limitations and restrictions of section 9 of the "shipping act, 1916," as amended.

Section 6 of said act authorizes the sale of certain ships to aliens upon certain restricted terms and conditions.

Instead of directing the board to stop the construction of ships then being constructed, or any portion of them, section 2 (4) provides as follows:

The board shall have full power and authority to complete or conclude any construction work begun in accordance with the provisions of such acts or parts of acts if in the opinion of the board the completion or conclusion thereof is for the best interests of the United States.

And section 11 of the act provides for entirely new construction as follows:

That during a period of five years from the enactment of this act the board may annually set aside out of the revenues from sales and operations a sum not exceeding $25,000,000, to be known as its construction loan fund, to be used in aid of the construction of vessels of the best and most efficient type for the establishment and maintenance of service on steamship lines deemed desirable and necessary by the board, and such vessels shall be equipped with the most modern, the most efficient, and the most economical machinery and commercial appliances. The board shall use such fund to the extent required upon such terms as the board may prescribe to aid persons, citizens of the United States, in the construction by them in private shipyards in the United States of the foregoing class of vessels.

Attention is called to the remarkable requirement that such construction shall be "in private shipyards."

Instead of directing an abrogation of the contracts under which the ships were being operated, or directing a change in such contracts, or directing that the ships should be tied up, the said act contains provisions directly to the contrary, as follows:

SEC. 2. (1) All contracts or agreements lawfully entered into before the passage of this act under any such act or part of act shall be assumed and carried out by the United States Shipping Board, hereinafter called the board.

SEC. 7. The board is authorized to sell, and if a satisfactory sale can not be made, to charter such of the vessels referred to in section 4 of this act or otherwise acquired by the board, as will meet these requirements to responsible persons who are citizens of the United States who agree to establish and maintain such lines upon such terms of payment and other conditions as the board may deem just and necessary to secure and maintain the service desired; and if any such steamship line is deemed desirable and necessary, and if no such citizen can be secured to supply such service by the purchase or charter of vessels on terms satisfactory to the board, the board shall operate vessels on such line until the business is developed so that such vessels may be sold on satisfactory terms and the service maintained, or unless it shall appear within a reasonable time that such line can not be made self-sustaining.

SEC. 12. That all vessels may be reconditioned and kept in suitable repair and until sold shall be managed and operated by the board or chartered or leased by it on such terms and conditions as the board shall deem wise for the promotion and maintenance of an efficient merchant marine, pursuant to the policy and purposes declared in sections 1 and 5 of this act; and the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation shall continue in existence and have authority to operate vessels, unless otherwise directed by law, until all vessels are sold in accordance with the provisions of this act, the provision in section 11 of the "shipping act, 1916," to the contrary notwithstanding.

As to the character of the ships constructed, we have heard a great deal of comment. A question was propounded this afternoon by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] which, I think, indicates the average view on the part of the people generally, and that is that after we have expended this immense sum of money we really have nothing left. The fact of the business is, according to the testimony of all of the unbiased experts, that we have a very large number of very splendid ships. Mr. James A. Farrell, who could certainly have no selfish motive in praising these ships, which will come into competition with ships constructed in the future by the United States Steel Corporation, of which he is the president, in a recent speech in Cleveland, Ohio, among other things, made this statement with regard to the character of vessels which we have:

Aside from their cost, the steel ships were well constructed, and with a few exceptions compare favorably with the work of the best builders in any country. While we may only surmise what will ultimately become of the wooden ships which were built as a result of the dictates of military necessity, and in response to the appeal from our associates for ships and more ships, the fact remains that our steel ships are fine examples of the skill of American mechanics, and with a broad and enlightened maritime policy should prove useful in shaping the future of American shipping.

Later in the same address Mr. Farrell says:

The claim is made, and justly, that the cost of American ships must reasonably approximate the cost of their competitors, and that capital charges must be substantially equalized with those of our competitors. The fact remains that while a considerable number of ships built abroad have been sold under the stress of necessity at less than half the cost of production, as in the case of ex-enemy ships sold by Great Britain, the great bulk of the world's tonnage built during the war fairly approximates the average cost of our own fleet.

While somewhat aside from the particular phase of the subject I have been discussing, yet, in view of its very great significance, and particularly the source from which it comes, I wish to call attention to the fact that in discussing the future of our merchant marine Mr. Farrell makes the further statement that—of necessity we must have return as well as outward cargoes.

Mr. Farrell is corroborated by Commander Gatewood and numerous other authorities upon the character and quality of our ships.

Notwithstanding the facts recited, Mr. Lasker, the present chairman of the Shipping Board, has devoted most of his time to condemning, disparaging, and advertising to the world what he has pleased to term a very sick and unsuccessful business and a lot of sick ships. He was called to the head of the Shipping Board to build up and dispose of our vast Government shipping interests, but he seems to be determined to destroy the investment. He talks much more about sinking the ships than he does about selling them. He seems infinitely more concerned about "saving his own mutton" than he does in the welfare of the "sick patient" which he says he has inherited. It is understood that he made his reputation and success in the advertising business, but I am sure that he did not make that success by advertising and magnifying the defects and the worthlessness of the goods that he sold or advertised for sale, prior to the time he entered the service of the Government.

In his Cleveland address last May, James A. Farrell made this statement:

While the valuation that must ultimately be placed on the ships will bear no relation to their original cost, it is questionable whether under present conditions any considerable tonnage could be sold except at a sacrifice which is not warranted, pending a revival of business in foreign markets, and considering the nominal cost of maintenance tied up, and further considering that the world is oversupplied with tonnage and that there will be no demand, except for certain special types, until the present supply is absorbed.

Mr. Smull, one of the experts employed by Chairman Lasker, in the recent committee hearings stated: "There is no possibility of selling boats to-day at any price." Chairman Lasker made the same statement in substance. The chairman of the Appropriations Committee [Mr. MADDEN] in his speech to-day stated: "There is no chance to sell the ships now. You could not give a ship away." In spite of this situation, Chairman Lasker proceeded to advertise for sale the remainder of the wooden ships, 285 in number. Not satisfied with the fact that on account of existing conditions there was no sale for the ships, and in order to destroy any possibility of a chance to sell them, Chairman Lasker immediately began to berate the wooden ships in the most violent manner. He stated that, "These boats are absolutely useless," and "should be sunk." He was asked the following question and gave the following reply:

Mr. KELLEY. Of course, this is not the right time to sell any kind of ships. You would have considerable difficulty in selling a steel ship would you not?

Mr. LASKER. I make the prediction that you will never reach the time when you will sell these wooden ships. You can not give a ship away to-day. I mean that literally, if a man must pay the cost of operation.

Later in his testimony Chairman Lasker stated:

I am going to sink the boats if we can not sell them or give them away.

At which point Mr. KELLEY, of the Committee on Appropriations, stated:

Of course, with your declaration to that effect you would not expect to get much of a price for them hereafter.

All of this occurred after the wooden ships had been advertised for sale and before the date on which the bids were to be opened, and Chairman Lasker's testimony was widely quoted in the press.

In spite of the conditions described, when the bids on the wooden ships were opened a few days ago, according to press reports, they received for what Chairman Lasker termed "absolutely worthless ships" a bid of $2,100 each for the bulk of them, and higher prices for ships in smaller numbers, and this at a time when the authorities stated there was not even any sale for steel ships. Even selling them at this figure at this time would be better than sinking them at an estimated cost of $200,000 as advocated by Chairman Lasker. He has much to say about the cost of maintaining these ships. However, it occurs to me that if no attention was paid to them and no expense incurred in connection with them pending the return of more prosperous times, they would not deteriorate much more than they would at the bottom of the sea.

We have heard a good deal said to-day in proper and righteous denunciation of the MO-4 contracts made by the Shipping Board with the operators of the ships. It was an outrageous contract from the standpoint of the Government, and I indorse the criticism that has been made of it. I think that it would have been infinitely better to have tied up the ships than to have entered into that kind of a contract. Chairman Lasker denounced these contracts and among other things stated: "The contract is the most shameful piece of chicanery, inefficiency, and of looting the Public Treasury that the human mind can devise. I am speaking in superlatives when I know that superlatives usually defeat a man's motives. Yet we have to let that contract run on for a time." In reply to a question by a member of the committee, Mr. Lasker admitted that such contracts were subject to cancellation at any time. The chairman and other members of the committee tried to get Chairman Lasker to say that these contracts would be canceled. The most favorable assurance that could be elicited from him was that the contracts would be abrogated "ultimately," when "world conditions change." He stated: "Having inherited this condition, it is not always economical nor efficient to act on it too quickly until you have something better to substitute." This in spite of the fact that he had been at the helm for seven weeks and has the assistance of his three high salaried experts.

It was shown at the hearings that the Shipping Board has about $500,000,000 of liquid assets consisting chiefly of obligations due the Shipping Board from ship operators, from cities and municipalities, and for money advances, and so forth; the accounts and notes receivable are stated to be about $285,000,000. Upon being asked by the chairman of the committee as to whether he could put in the Record a list of the names of the people who owe this money, Chairman Lasker replied: "It should not be done until thoroughly organized because the information might financially injure a lot of people." Upon being further questioned as to the possibility of collecting on some of those assets instead of calling upon Congress for additional appropriations, Chairman Lasker manifested his very great solicitude for these creditors, as shown in the following colloquy:

The CHAIRMAN. Tell us why it should not be done.

Mr. LASKER. It should not be done until it is carefully studied, because we might get a great deal more or less than they are worth, and that might upset a great many people. Then we can not realize on most of them until Congress gives us the resolution which we have asked for.

The CHAIRMAN. Why not?

Mr. LASKER. Because a great deal of it would throw the concerns into bankruptcy and then they would go through the bankruptcy courts, and goodness knows what you would get or when you would get it.

The CHAIRMAN. In the meantime they are drawing on the taxpayers of the United States.

Mr. LASKER. These are taxpayers, too.

Contrasted with his solicitude for these creditors of the Government and his disinclination to disclose their names and obligations for fear it might embarrass or injure them, we have Chairman Lasker's lack of solicitude for the Government interests in vociferously disparaging Government property offered for sale, and in widely advertising what he terms "the greatest commercial wreck in history," which is certainly not calculated to insure either purchasers or operators. Mr. Lasker stated at the hearings:

I am not an expert in shipping, but I take a little pride in being an expert in publicity.

However, his desire to gratify his pride in expert publicity runs in peculiar channels; his pride asserts itself only in spots—when the Government interests are adversely affected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee has only five minutes remaining.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. One of the chief troubles of the Shipping Board business in the past has been that it has been largely managed and operated by its competitors. None of us would be foolish enough to expect a private business enterprise to succeed if managed by its competitors, and yet that is what has been taking place with respect to Shipping Board operations all the time. In saying this I do not intend any reflection upon the integrity of any member of the Shipping Board, past or present. They were not practical shipping men and were compelled to employ many subordinate officials who were acquainted with the shipping business. However, I think that they have made many mistakes of judgment in such appointments.

Alfred W. McCann, writing in the New York Globe and Advertiser, said in part:

It must be remembered that in "the greatest wreck in American history" the officials who have been in charge of the Shipping Board from the beginning have been the picked representatives of the biggest private steamship corporations in America and England.

The truth is that with the exception of the highly successful Panama Steamship Co., which is entirely owned and operated by the Government, though the people are rarely permitted to hear anything about it, the United States has not now and never has had a Government operation of Government-owned ships.

The Shipping Board never lacked shipping brains or business brains at any time since its creation. The very brains which it exhibited while it was being wrecked are the brains that have made tremendous successes of privately owned shipping companies. The Shipping Board never operated a rowboat, though it lost $4,000,000,000 of the people's money by turning its 2,000 ships over to the mercies of the very individuals who sought to prevent the passage of the act that created them.

There is no mystery in the wreck. The men under whose direction it has been accomplished are alive, successful, and rich, though the Shipping Board which they directed is a failure and a bankrupt.

Powerful private interests would be greatly benefited by our Government merchant marine interests being wrecked and the ships sunk. It would materially lessen the competition for private shipping interests and would materially increase the future demand for ship construction. With over 1,700 Government ships afloat, there is not much prospect for a revival of the ship-construction industry any time soon.

I am sorry to say that instead of eliminating the situation to which I have just referred, we are apparently getting "deeper in the mire."

The conference report on the merchant marine act of 1920, containing 36 closely-printed pages, pertaining to a 59-page bill and 149 Senate amendments, was jammed through the House on the last night of the second session of the Sixty-sixth Congress. While the bill contained many excellent provisions, yet in my opinion it contained many vicious and indefensible provisions. Speaking in opposition to the adoption of the conference report, I said in part:

This bill as reported contains provisions adopted at the instance of and for the benefit of certain private shipping and railroad interests, and was written by their representatives. In fact, the tenor, general purport, and apparent purpose of the bill is to take care of the private shipowners and other interests instead of to protect the stupendous interests of the American people.

After dramatically declaring that he had drawn a red line from July 1, 1921, against the past mistakes and record of "the greatest commercial wreck in history," Chairman Lasker has appointed as vice presidents, having supervision over the divisions of operations, and so forth, three men who were important officials in the old Shipping Board organization. According to undenied newspaper reports, these three men were selected for Chairman Lasker by the American Steamship Owners' Association and the United States Ship Operators' Association; in fact, Chairman Lasker is said to have publicly announced that he will be guided by the advice of the officials of the above-named associations. It is stated upon reliable authority that all of the Shipping Board's operators are members of one or the other of those associations.

The names of these three men are J. Barstow Smull, W. J. Love, and E. J. Frey.

According to the testimony of Chairman Lasker at the committee hearing, Mr. Smull is a member and half owner of the firm of Winchester & Co., one of the largest, if not the largest, American shipping brokerage firm, which firm has made as high as $500,000 profit in a year.

Mr. Love was formerly an official of the International Mercantile Marine and was later in charge of the British shipping concern of Furness, Wythe & Co., one of the two largest operators of tramp boats in the world, and said to be the largest British shipping concern in the world, whose head, Sir Frederick Lewis, was the active head of the British ministry of shipping during and after the war. Messrs. Smull and Love, together with P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine, composed the charter committee under the Shipping Board, having full charge of the allocation of all ships used for merchant-marine purposes under the American flag during the war. Messrs. Smull and Love are each to be paid a salary of $35,000 per year by the Shipping Board. There has been no announcement that they have severed their connection with their companies, although competitors of the Shipping Board.

Mr. Frey was formerly vice president of a company operating boats out of Los Angeles, having previously been employed for many years by the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. He served as an official of the Shipping Board, in charge of ship construction in the southern Pacific division, at salaries ranging from $7,500 to $10,000. Leaving the Shipping Board he became chief assistant to the president of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., closely affiliated with the International Mercantile Marine. Chairman Lasker has called Mr. Frey back into the service of the Shipping Board at a salary of $25,000 per year. I presume that Chairman Lasker considers that there is efficacy in letting a man go and then reemploying him at a largely advanced salary. In fact, Mr. Lasker seems to measure the qualifications of men by the salaries they are paid.

While I must say that I am not favorably impressed with the beginning he has made, yet I sincerely trust that Chairman Lasker may find his bearings, acquire the right attitude, and make good in the important position to which he has been assigned.

The solution of our important merchant marine problem should not be treated as a partisan one. It is neither a Democratic nor a Republican proposition. The persistent efforts to hold President Wilson and the Democratic Party responsible for the past mistakes have been misdirected. Democrats and Republicans alike created the Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation and voted the appropriations for the purchase and construction of our merchant marine fleet in accordance with the platform declarations of both parties. If there were, in fact, graft and looting, in addition to waste and extravagance, made possible by the confusion and chaos of war conditions, it must be admitted that the chief looters and beneficiaries were among the high priests of "big business," large contributors to the campaign chest of the Republican Party. A large percentage of those who participated in the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation affairs have been Republican; in fact, President Wilson made no discrimination in this respect. At different times he called to the helm such prominent Republicans as Gen. George W. Goethals, Charles M. Schwab, and Charles Piez, and such Democrats as Edward N. Hurley and John Barton Payne, all with such reputations for ability and integrity as to give assurance that they would measure up to the important duties to which they were called.

The disposition of our tremendous merchant marine investment is of sufficient importance to deserve and have the considerate attention and patriotic assistance of all citizens regardless of party affiliations. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, it is an easy matter sometimes to view from a distance a condition and a situation and to be able to tell how it should be remedied and corrected down to the finest detail, but as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] has well said, the Shipping Board situation presents a condition and not a theory. It does not benefit much in this particular piece of legislation to dwell upon the mistakes and the waste and extravagances of the past, because those matters can be left until we are called upon perhaps to appropriate to pay for some of these claims that will be filed arising out of those conditions. We are here to determine whether we are going to give the present board $48,500,000. And all we have to guide ourselves upon this particular request, all that is specific, is the printed pamphlet of hearings.

Now, I am one of those who is not quite satisfied with the reasons given by the chairman of the Shipping Board. I am not satisfied that the manner in which he has thus far undertaken to carry out the policy is one that will lead to either economy or efficiency or good results. We have seven men and are paying them $12,000 a year each. They were appointed to run the Shipping Board. There is not one of them a competent, experienced shipping man, and yet the first thing is to employ three men at fabulous salaries. I submit that one is sufficient. The next thing, they are employing a number of highly compensated attorneys. Well, if they are to continue that and to discharge the lower priced employees that they have to-day, the result will be in the end that they will not save very much money.

The chairman of the board is pretty strong on promises, but he is pretty weak on facts, according to these hearings which have been held by the Appropriation Committee. And yet the distinguished chairman and other members of that committee are to be complimented upon reducing this estimate in the manner in which they have, although there are not very many facts to substantiate the amount which they have reported. I believe the amount is too high. They have $53,000,000 available, if they will endeavor to get rid of some of the surplus material which they have on hand. The chairman is very solicitous about some of these incompetent operators that they fear might be put into bankruptcy, but I say if this Shipping Board program continues as in the past, even since the armistice, it will present a situation where I fear the National Treasury will go into bankruptcy or some of these operators will do so. I doubt if there is more than half a dozen of them that have met their obligations under this MO-3 agreement, or under contracts under which they are operating these ships. They should be brought to terms. If it means the tying up of these ships, they should be tied up and the Government relieved of the financial responsibility and losses arising out of incompetency in operation.

Mr. OLIVER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALSH. I have only five minutes. I regret I can not yield to the gentleman.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I believe that within seven weeks after the new board has taken charge it is rather astounding that they should walk up and ask for $125,000,000 and include $25,000,000 that they already have available, and present facts and figures to the Appropriations Committee and then say, as the chairman said, "Here are the facts; here are the figures, but I have no confidence in them," and say further, "I do not desire to present any alibi." But that is what he is doing, because he followed it up in every instance with the statement, "I want to be in a position when I come up here next December where you will not be able to confront me with what I have said here as showing any confidence in the facts and figures I have presented."

I believe, sir, it is unnecessary at this time to grant them $48,000,000, and I believe that they could get along with a very much less sum. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES SHIPPING BOARD.

For expenses of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation for losses due to the maintenance and operation of ships and for administrative purposes, $48,500,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be used for the payment of claims other than those resulting from the current maintenance and operation of vessels: Provided further, That no part of this sum shall be used to pay the compensation of any attorney, regular or special, for the United States Shipping Board or the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation unless the contract of employment has been approved by the Attorney General of the United States.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: On page 2, line 2, after the word "sum," insert "or of any other funds in the United States Shipping Board or Emergency Fleet Corporation."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order on that.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I make a point of order against that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MADDEN. That is a change of law. It is not germane to the subject matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I make the further point of order that the amendment proposes a limitation upon an appropriation other than the appropriation carried in this bill, which is not permissible.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] care to be heard?

Mr. MADDEN. I simply wish to repeat what I said. It is a change of law. It does not deal with the subject matter of the bill. It deals with appropriations already passed, and therefore is not in order on the bill.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS].

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I think that if this whole paragraph itself were not subject to a point of order the point of order made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] would be well taken, because it is true that this amendment does apply to appropriations heretofore made or to funds that may come into the possession of the Shipping Board through its operations. I have simply offered this amendment to carry out the idea suggested by my friend from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] when he said that he was opposed to giving the Shipping Board or the Emergency Fleet Corporation any authority to settle any claim in advance, and that he favored, after these awards are made, an opportunity on the part of Congress to investigate them and make an appropriation at that time if Congress approved them. The effect of this particular provision in the bill limits such settlements to $48,500,000, but the Shipping Board has authority to use $55,000,000 if it can collect it from certain sales, and so forth, and it expects to be able to collect some considerable amount on deferred payments in the past, so that there will be a fund not carried in this bill that it can use to settle claims. In addition it has operating receipts that it can use unless a provision of this kind is adopted.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that I am in favor of maintaining the rules of the House with respect to legislation on appropriation bills. I am in favor of limiting the right of the Shipping Board to use any funds for the payment of claims, but I think it should be done by legislation in the proper way, and I shall be glad to cooperate with the proper committee to pass the legislation indicated by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am sure the gentleman agrees with me in principle. But I submit that this amendment is in order, Mr. Chairman, for this reason: This paragraph itself is subject to a point of order.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not concede that.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. But no one has made the point of order. I think I can point it out to the gentleman and he will see it. No point of order has been made, and it is too late now to make it.

This paragraph changes the existing law, increasing the jurisdiction of the Attorney General of the United States. There is no law now that requires the Attorney General of the United States to pass upon the compensation of attorneys or upon contracts made for legal opinions and counsel in other governmental activities. This bill places that duty upon him, and therefore it is clearly subject to a point of order.

The Chair, of course, is familiar with the rule, that where a provision is subject to a point of order, an amendment to that provision which otherwise would be subject to a point of order is in order, if germane, and certainly no question can be made as to the germaneness of this particular amendment.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I think the proposed amendment is very clearly subject to a point of order.

It is subject to the point of order notwithstanding the statement made by the gentleman from Tennessee that the paragraph itself might have been subject to the point of order. I am not conceding that; but whether it would have been subject to a point of order or not has nothing to do with this proposition, because although the paragraph itself were subject to a point of order, yet if an amendment is offered which proposes a new illegality, it is still subject to a point of order. This is a specific appropriation which under the rules of the House would permit of no amendment involving new legislation, except that under the construction of the rules of the House there is permitted a limitation upon that appropriation. Now, it is proposed by the gentleman's amendment, not that there shall be a limitation upon that appropriation—and he does not propose an additional limitation to that appropriation—but he proposes a limitation upon appropriations covered by former legislation. Under the general rule of germaneness it is not at all germane to this legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The general rule, as the Chair understands it, may be found in Hinds' Precedents, section 3927:

A limitation may be attached only to the money of the appropriation under consideration and may not be made applicable to money to be appropriated in other acts.

The Chair thinks that citation is supported by many precedents. This appropriation bill appropriates the sum of $48,500,000 for the use of the Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation. The amendment seeks to place a limitation in the following words:

Or of any other funds of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation.

If this were proper it would place a limitation upon any fund that was in the control of the Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, it matters not from what source it came or from whence it was derived. The Chair does not think the amendment is in order, and therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I ask the Clerk to read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. OLIVER: Amend by adding, after the word "States," page 2, line 10, the following: "Provided further, That no officer or employee of the Shipping Board shall be paid an annual salary or compensation in excess of $12,500."

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I make a point of order against that amendment. That is not a limitation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman on that.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. That is not a limitation on this appropriation. It does not say that this fund shall not be used for that purpose. It is a positive legislative enactment.

Mr. OLIVER. It is a limitation.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. It is not offered as a limitation. It does not purport to be a limitation.

Mr. OLIVER. I think it is a limitation.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. It does not say—

Provided, That these funds shall not be used for this purpose—but it is a specific legislative enactment prohibiting certain things.

Mr. WALSH. It is a limitation that is only good for a year.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Alabama care to be heard on his point of order?

Mr. OLIVER. It is only good for a year.

Mr. STAFFORD. If the Chair will hear me, I have some doubt whether the amendment is not in order under the Holman rule, and I direct the attention of the Chairman to that provision of paragraph 2, Rule XXI, which makes in order amendments when they are for the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States. This amendment, I take it, is for the reduction of a salary paid out of the Treasury of the United States. As the Chairman will note, there are three specific instances in which legislation may be in order under the Holman rule, which relates particularly to provisions carried on appropriation bills:

Nor shall any provision in any such bill or amendment thereto changing existing law be in order, except such as being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States, by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of amounts of money carried by the bill.

The second provision seemingly would justify this amendment as being within the scope of the Holman rule.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. That might be true, if it dealt with this appropriation alone.

Mr. MADDEN. The amendment of the gentleman from Alabama is clearly general legislation seeking to fix the compensation of men employed in a given activity of the Government.

The amounts to be paid the employees of the Shipping Board are not fixed by law; they are fixed by Executive authority. The gentleman from Alabama seeks to legislate and fix compensation. Surely it can not be said that any language proposing to fix compensation of employees is in order on an appropriation bill under the rules of the House.

Mr. DOWELL. I did not hear the reading of the amendment clearly, but is not this a limitation not to exceed a certain amount? Is it not in order under the form of a limitation?

Mr. MADDEN. No; this is legislation.

Mr. DOWELL. I did not quite catch the reading of it.

Mr. MADDEN. I will say to the gentleman from Iowa that the limitation placed on this appropriation in the bill fixed by the committee was placed there with the knowledge of what the Attorney General's policy is. We consulted with the Attorney General about the limitation placed in the bill, and he advised us that the policy of his office is to see that no attorney, no matter how important he may be, no matter how important the case may be, his compensation shall not exceed under any circumstances the salary of the Attorney General.

Mr. GARNER. But he does not control the other employees.

Mr. MADDEN. No; but this is dealing with attorneys. This provision of the bill is dealing with attorneys, and the gentleman from Alabama is seeking to amend that limitation by inserting legislation dealing with another subject.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois insists that the proviso conferring authority on the Attorney General to pass on the compensation and wages of those rendering legal service to the Shipping Board is in order. If that be in order, it follows that it is in order to limit the amount paid other employees. If his argument is sound that while it is a matter purely of administration to determine the pay of Shipping Board employees, yet it is in order to withdraw this authority from the Shipping Board and confer it on the Attorney General, then this amendment limiting the pay of all employees is by the force of that reasoning clearly in order.

Mr. MADDEN. Nobody raised the point of order.

Mr. OLIVER. I understood the gentleman to say that it was not subject to a point of order, and my argument is predicated on that admission. I am frank to say that the amendment I offer was drawn with no idea of limiting it to the appropriation carried in this bill, and for the evident reason that I felt Congress was interested in the passage of laws designed to save the Treasury of the United States, and not simply to write a meaningless and ineffective pretense at economy. The House knows that there is available, under an appropriation or authority carried in the sundry civil bill, about $55,000,000 for the overhead and operating expenses of the Shipping Board, and a mere limitation on the appropriation carried in this bill would not deny authority to pay these excessive salaries out of other appropriations now available. Unless you limit the amount to be paid as salaries, and not simply restrict the use of the pending appropriation, the board will claim the right to pay more than $12,500 as salaries out of another appropriation heretofore made. That is why I drew the amendment in its present form. I think it clearly in order for the reasons given by the gentleman from Wisconsin, namely, that it comes within the Holman rule, and is a limitation on expenditures out of the Treasury.

The CHAIRMAN. This question is not without its difficulties to the Chair. The amendment which is offered is:

Provided further, That no officer or employee of the Shipping Board shall be paid an annual salary or compensation in excess of $12,500.

This plainly is legislation and unless excepted by some rule would not be in order on an appropriation bill. The Chair has not been able in the limited time allowed him to find any precedent, if there be any, on this particular question. However, the so-called Holman rule, section 2 of Rule XXI, seems to give the Chair all the light that is necessary for the Chair to have here. It provides:

No appropriation shall be reported in any general appropriation bill, or be in order as an amendment thereto, for any expenditure not previously authorized by law, unless in continuation of appropriations for such public works and objects as are already in progress. Nor shall any provision in any such bill or amendment thereto changing existing law be in order, except such as being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States, by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of amounts of money covered by the bill.

In the judgment of the Chair this has the effect to reduce the compensation of certain persons paid out of the Treasury of the United States. All the light the Chair has on the subject is gathered from the debate during the discussion on this bill, but it is evident to anyone that there are salaries paid largely in excess of $12,000. The Chair is of the opinion that under the rule cited the amendment is in order, and therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment. While I sympathize entirely with the general principles underlying the amendment, I have grave doubts whether it would be wise just at this particular juncture to limit the salary that could be paid to any officer or employee of the Shipping Board to $12,500 a year, especially in the operating department of the Shipping Board. We have now something over 9,000,000 tons of shipping. It requires a very intimate knowledge of trade routes and an intimate knowledge of world commerce to handle such a tremendous volume of shipping as that. I know very well that if I were a member of the Shipping Board I would not ask any better excuse if I failed in the end to make good than to say that Congress so limited the board in its effort to create an efficient organization that experienced men could not be had to handle this enormous shipping enterprise. Three men have been appointed as operating managers at a salary in excess of the amount named in the amendment. It may be that the salaries paid are excessive. They amount in the aggregate to $95,000 for the three. But we must not forget that last year we lost $200,000,000 in operations; and if these three men—experienced shipping men—can reduce that loss, or, better still, wipe it out entirely, their employment would be a very fine investment. At least, I do not want to take the responsibility of having the Shipping Board say that Congress made it impossible for them to put men in these important positions with experience sufficient to handle the business, and that therefore they failed. I think we had better go a little slow. Let us give this new board six months to see what they can do, and if by paying these salaries for these three operating men the deficit can be decreased by millions the investment will be worth while. I do not pretend to say that I have a great confidence that this much desired result will be realized, but I am willing to make the experiment for that length of time. I believe we had better let this new board have a little latitude for six months. They have talked pretty generously as to what they hope to be able to accomplish. Let us give them a chance. At least, let us not spike the very center of their organization for operations almost before they start.

Practical experienced shipping men to handle the fleet are absolutely necessary if we hope for any measure of success. Such men possibly can not be had for $12,500 per year.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. MILLER. Were these $30,000 men in the employ of the Shipping Board during the time that we sustained this $200,000,000 deficit?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. No; but during the war they were. I think there has been a misapprehension about that. If my memory serves me correctly, during the war these men did serve with the Shipping Board. But not in recent months.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. During the war Mr. Frey—I do not remember about the others—was employed in the Shipping Board at a salary of $7,500 or $8,000 a year, not as an operating man, but as manager of construction in San Francisco, and he made a splendid record. Whether during any other period he could have been obtained for such a salary is not likely, because at the time he was appointed to his present position, so the chairman of the board says, he was drawing a salary of $25,000 a year for operating ships on the Pacific. I know nothing about that personally. The other two gentlemen are successful shipping operators on the Atlantic coast. They have not been employed, as I understand it, recently with the Shipping Board at all, but during the war they were, but at just what salary I do not know. No doubt it was much less than they could be secured for now. The operation of our ships is in a horrible tangle. We must have experienced successful men at the head of operations.

If we do not we will have to stand heavy losses next year, just as we had last year. We can not wait to train men up for the business. Some one must take hold immediately who knows the business. Let us place no obstacles in the path of the board in the matter of employing successful ship operators to handle the fleet.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. How many men are employed at $35,000 a year?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. There are two operating managers at $35,000 a year and one at $25,000 a year, making three men who operate this fleet of nine or ten million tons. If these men make good and wipe out or heavily reduce this tremendous deficit of $200,000,000 sustained last year the investment will be a good one. Personally I do not want Mr. Lasker or anybody else, in the event of failure, to say that the reason he did not succeed was because Congress did not permit him to hire experienced, successful men to handle this great fleet of ships. [Applause.] We must not forget that it is one-fifth of the total tonnage of the world.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. There is also an assistant chairman at $20,000 a year, is there not?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I dare say, and perhaps others. I am not pretending to justify the salaries. In fact, I do not approve of them, but we are in a desperate situation. Last year we sustained a loss of $200,000,000 in operations, largely because of inexperience and incompetence, and if there is incompetence next year I want to know where to put the blame, and I do not want any part of it shouldered onto Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, we may as well have a clear understanding of the situation. There is no use in trying to fool ourselves. This is not the only board that paid high salaries. There is only one difference between what is being done now and what was done in the past. This board is open; it tells you what it is going to do. The high salaries that were paid by former boards were paid to men whose names were not on the pay roll.

They paid them by special voucher on the Treasury of the United States and their names have not been put where people can find them, and in response to a request from me the chairman of the Shipping Board wrote me a letter a day or two ago to this effect—that if he were to be required to furnish me with the names of those who were drawing more than $10,000 a year under the old Shipping Board he would be compelled to hire a force of 20 clerks for six months to go through the vouchers in the Treasury—

Mr. McDUFFIE. That does not make it right.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. MADDEN. Let me make this statement—

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I just want to ask one question.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Does not that very statement the gentleman has just made make it the more apparent that this limitation is necessary?

Mr. MADDEN. Well, whatever is being done now is being done openly and above board. Now, let me simply make this further statement: We need experts to manage these ships. A great deal of the shipping owned by the United States is now idle; it is idle because in many cases they have been unable to make rates. When the ship broker came to American shipping to get a rate under the old board he had to communicate with Washington. The board was called together. It took a week to make a rate, and before the rate was made some British ship was halfway across the Atlantic with the cargo and our ship was tied up at the docks. Now, a plan has been inaugurated. These experts have inaugurated a plan. They are able to make a rate to-day competing for cargoes anywhere in the world. [Applause.]

They do not have to come to the Shipping Board and an American ship can get a cargo in competition with other ships belonging to any nation in the world. We have been told by those who have charge of the active work of making rates and managing ships for the Shipping Board that great shippers, who heretofore have refused to ship their goods on American ships because of uncertainty of conditions, are now willing to give their business to the American ships. Seventy-nine per cent of their business went to other nations' ships and they are giving it to the American ships to-day and will as long as we continue to give them service and are able to act, but you can not act intelligently unless you have men who are qualified.

Mr. ROSENBLOOM. Is it not a fact that the independent shipping concerns are paying men as high as $75,000 a year?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know what they are paying.

Mr. ROSENBLOOM. As a member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries I know that was testified to—

Mr. MADDEN. I want to confirm what my colleague the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] says. I do not want the Shipping Board to come back here six months from now and say that we have hog tied them and because of that they failed. I want to place the responsibility on them. I am not for the payment of any big salaries any more than you are, but I want the Shipping Board to prove whether it is qualified or not. By this amendment, what do you say? You say to the Shipping Board, "You must get mediocre men." You can not expect to get men who are able to get these big salaries somewhere else unless you pay them.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MADDEN. I will.

Mr. DOWELL. Then why does the gentleman place on this bill the proviso at all if you want to leave it entirely in the hands of the board?

Mr. MADDEN. This only applied to three men; the other might apply to 300.

Mr. DOWELL. Then one further question. Has not the gentleman just announced that the Attorney General has an understanding with the chairman of the committee as to the salary fixed for these employees?

Mr. MADDEN. No; just as to the attorneys in the proviso.

Mr. DOWELL. Just as to the attorneys.

Mr. MADDEN. Now, I want to ask the committee to take this under serious consideration and decide for themselves whether they are in favor of giving this new board a chance or whether they want at the outset to say that they do not want this merchant fleet to succeed. You can not make any better argument for the English ship or the English company than say to the American Shipping Board that we do not want you to have men who can function. All you have got to do is to say you do not want an American fleet. [Applause.]

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I am as much interested in the success of the Shipping Board in its efforts to build up our merchant marine as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN]. There has been unanimity of purpose and action on the part of the members of the Appropriation Committee in carrying out what was thought for the best interests of the Shipping Board at this time.

Now, we are met with this strange statement of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] that they are apprehensive that the head of the Shipping Board will later say, "You made my efforts a failure because you failed to give all I demanded and required." In other words, we are to understand that unless we authorize the head of the Shipping Board to employ helpers at salaries in excess of that fixed for the members of the commission, then the whole work of the Shipping Board may be a failure. I wonder if my two friends from Illinois and Michigan had this in mind when they wrote the proviso in this bill which forbids the head of the Shipping Board, or the board itself, from fixing the compensation of lawyers employed to represent the interests of the Government in matters growing out of ship contracts or relating to the business of the Shipping Board.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLIVER. I will be glad to hear the gentleman's explanation.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I had this difference as to those two classes of employees: The matter of claims is a matter that can be taken care of. There is no question about that. But here is a question of operating three billion or four billion dollars' worth of property, the largest undertaking in the world, way and beyond, and I wondered, if possible, we might not make a mistake if we limited the Shipping Board to the employment of men for only $10,000 or $12,000 a year to handle the greatest financial and economic institution in the world, and that at a time when it was absolute chaos, and when we were losing $200,000,000 a year on account of incompetency.

Mr. OLIVER. I gladly yielded sufficient time to the gentleman from Michigan to make a statement, and it may be necessary for me to ask the House for additional time.

I have great respect for the good judgment of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY], but I think he must realize that the premises on which he based his statement are unsound. In the first place, he is in error in stating that we now have ships worth $3,000,000,000. We may have paid approximately this sum for the construction of ships, but certainly no one will now contend that they are worth anywhere near that amount. There seems to be a general agreement that the fleet is not worth exceeding $1,000,000,000. They were built under war conditions and values have greatly dropped since then. We have, however, claims pending against the Government amounting to approximately $300,000,000, and the Shipping Board has been employing counsel to defend these suits, yet the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] was entirely willing to say to the chairman of the Shipping Board that "we will not continue your authority to employ counsel to defend suits or to advise your board, and allow you to fix their pay and compensation, but the authority to fix the pay of any attorneys heretofore or hereafter employed by the Shipping Board must hereafter be exercised by the Attorney General, who has indicated that he will fix no compensation in excess of $12,000. It is interesting to note in this connection that the assistant to the Attorney General, and who, by the proviso carried in the pending bill will probably be designated by the Attorney General to pass on the fees and compensation of the counsel employed by the Shipping Board, is none other than Col. Goff, the former general counsel of the Shipping Board up to a comparatively recent date. This proviso is the direction that the high fees fixed by the Shipping Board or by its present general counsel in the employment of attorneys to defend suits involving millions of dollars will not exceed the limit of $12,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. OLIVER. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I shall have to give notice that after this no extension of time will be granted on this amendment.

Mr. OLIVER. Now, there was some hesitancy at first on the part of the Appropriations Committee to take away from the Shipping Board the power to fix compensation of attorneys employed by the board or under its authority. When, however, the committee came to consider the high schedule of pay which the board was adopting in this matter and the further fact that they were employing counsel in many important cases without any agreement whatever as to fees, I think the committee reached a unanimous conclusion that it was willing to put this check on the authority of the Shipping Board to spend the Government's money.

The House has fixed the salaries of the Shipping Board commissioners at $12,500, and surely men serving as their aides should not be paid an amount in excess thereof. The House, as well as the country, were surprised to learn that the Shipping Board had agreed to pay three men an aggregate salary of $95,000, and especially since it is recalled that these same three men had heretofore served in similar capacities with the Shipping Board at greatly reduced salaries; in fact, one of them, and probably all, did not receive a salary in excess of $7,500. These three men are largely charged with the same duties by the new Shipping Board as they were required to perform under their contract with the old board.

Certainly, it will not be insisted that they can and will now render more efficient service simply because they are reemployed at a higher salary. Yet that is what the Shipping Board or its chairman is seeking to do. We should all be interested in upholding the Shipping Board in its efforts to develop, maintain, and operate an efficient merchant marine, but Congress must not shirk its plain duty of requiring the board to practice sane economy.

The chairman of the committee in his first statement was fair and frank and his statement compelled attention and led you to inevitably conclude that as business men he and the other members of the Appropriations Committee were seeking to provide for and deal with the Shipping Board in a proper, just, and liberal way. The chairman told you in that statement that the Shipping Board had asked for $125,000,000, but that the committee proposed to give them only $48,000,000. The statement as to this economy was applauded by the House. He further told the House that the chairman of the Shipping Board asked for an appropriation to pay claims not yet adjusted and he said the answer of the Appropriations Committee was "No; let the Shipping Board first adjust claims, and make a full detailed report of their recommendations, before any appropriation is made." There was applause to this statement. In other words, the chairman very properly said that Congress proposed to hold a check on the actions of the Shipping Board in these important matters, and to reserve to itself the final authority of approving or allowing amounts recommended by the Shipping Board. Now, since you have restrained them in reference to the employment of attorneys, and have refused them further appropriation to pay claims, when adjusted, and have reduced their demands for money to operate the ships, what sound reason can be fixed for further wisely restraining them, when we learn from the chairman of the board that he favors the payment of excessively large salaries to former employees for directing the operation of ships?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. The gentleman is really not serious when he advocates that there should be a limit of $12,500 in these salaries?

Mr. OLIVER. Certainly I am.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. The gentleman knows that when the director general operated the railroads—and probably with good judgment—he paid 50 to 100 men from forty to fifty thousand dollars a year to act.

Mr. OLIVER. I am glad to say that high salaries paid by private employers or unwisely paid by representatives of the Government have never yet induced the House to adopt a higher schedule of salaries for Government employees, even for Cabinet and judicial officers, of more than $12,500. Take the Interstate Commerce Commission, rendering a most important service, no one in their employ receives a salary, I am informed, of exceeding $10,500. This House would not to-day, by direct vote, authorize the payment of $95,000 to the three men whom we are informed are to receive this amount under an agreement made by the chairman of the Shipping Board. The fact that we would refuse to do it by direct vote should be sufficient reason for our refusing authority to any official of the Government to impose these excessive charges against the Government. We can not afford to pass this responsibility to others and then seek to shield ourselves by saying "they did it." [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has again expired.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto be closed in three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in three minutes. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I am in entire sympathy with the spirit and intent of the amendment offered by my friend from Alabama [Mr. OLIVER]; but frankly, gentlemen, I think it would be very unwise to adopt an amendment of that kind to this bill, and my reasons are these: I am as much opposed to high salaries, and especially to these enormous salaries that have been fixed by the Shipping Board, as any other man in this House. I think some of these salaries which are set forth in these hearings are absolutely indefensible and ought never to have been fixed and ought not to be paid, in the interest of economy.

But here is the situation: We have a Shipping Board; there is not a single member of that board who knows anything whatsoever about the operation of a merchant fleet. That is true of this board and it has been true of past boards. Now, you undertake to say to the board that in the operation and control and maintenance of a fleet of 1,441 steel vessels, the greatest merchant fleet in the world, "We are going to fix a limit on you and say you can not pay a managing operator more than $12,000."

Frankly, gentlemen, I do not know whether they could get an efficient managing operator for $12,000 or not. But for my part, not knowing that they can, I am unwilling to jeopardize the interests of this Government in the management of that great fleet by fixing a maximum salary of $12,000. [Applause.]

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. Do you think you are jeopardizing the interests of the Government in limiting the pay of attorneys to $12,000?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No; I do not. I think it is enough. If the gentleman had offered an amendment which permitted the Shipping Board to pay one or two in excess of $12,000, I think his amendment possibly might not have met with any objection on the part of the House. But what the gentleman's amendment does is to say to the Shipping Board, which has no knowledge itself of operations of a fleet, "You can not pay more than $12,000 for a managing operator." I think, gentlemen, it will be very unwise, and as much as I am opposed to paying high salaries I can not support the amendment. Let us not furnish Mr. Lasker or anyone else with an excuse or an alibi in the event this fleet is not properly managed. [Applause and cries of "vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OLIVER].

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the amendment reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. OLIVER: Amend by adding after the word "States," page 2, line 10, the following: "Provided further, That no officer or employee of the Shipping Board shall be paid an annual salary or compensation in excess of $12,500."

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Is it permissible to offer an amendment to the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I offer to amend the amendment by making it read "not more than one officer."

Mr. OLIVER. I accept that amendment.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. That will give them a manager.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. STAFFORD. May we have it reported so that it will be clear?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HARDY of Texas moves to amend the amendment by striking out the word "no" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "not more than one," so that it will read: "Provided further, That not more than one officer or employee of the Shipping Board shall be paid an annual salary or compensation in excess of $12,500."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY] to the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OLIVER].

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. HARDY of Texas) there were—ayes 44, noes 64.

Accordingly the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment—instead of "one" make it "not more than two officers," and I want to read the recommendation of the Walsh committee.

Mr. STAFFORD. I ask for the regular order, that the amendment may be reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARDY of Texas to the amendment of Mr. OLIVER: Strike out the word "no" and insert in lieu thereof the words "not more than two."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY].

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Does the Chair hold that no debate can be had on this amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], which was agreed to, was that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto be closed.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I did not know that it included all amendments thereto.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

The question being taken; on a division (demanded by Mr. HARDY of Texas) there were—ayes 54, noes 64.

Accordingly the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the amendment by inserting "not more than three" instead of "no."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment to the amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MADDEN to the amendment of Mr. OLIVER: Strike out the word "no" and insert in lieu thereof the words "not more than three," and strike out the word "officer" and insert in lieu thereof the word "officers."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SWEET: Page 2, line 2, strike out the figures "$48,500,000" and insert "$25,000,000."

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to appropriating $48,500,000 at this time for the Shipping Board and I will tell you why:

Because the showing made by the Shipping Board before the Appropriations Committee does not warrant Members of Congress as I view it in voting for $125,000,000, $48,000,000, or any other sum. I offer this amendment as a compromise; $25,000,000 is a substantial sum.

Because Chairman Lasker does not place any dependence upon the reports and figures furnished by the present personnel and officers of the Shipping Board.

Because the present comptroller, Mr. Alonzo Tweedale, stated on May 9, 1921, before the Committee on Appropriations, "That from the beginning of the operation of this fleet to May 1, 1919, we paid all expenses of the fleet, the operations of the fleet, and in addition to that declared a profit of $48,325,000 and also laid up $33,000,000 for depreciation, making a total of $81,325,000. From that point, May 1, 1919, down to March 1, 1921, the fleet was operated at a profit of $17,000,000."

When the new board took over the management on July 15, 1921, there was a deficit of $16,700,000. Tweedale's figures are unreliable, and so admitted by the chairman of the committee and Mr. Lasker.

Because Mr. Lasker, the present chairman, recently made a statement that the Shipping Board should have an appropriation of $300,000,000 based upon statements made by Mr. Tweedale and others in position of trust and confidence under him.

Because Congress will not be warranted in appropriating more money to be handled by practically the same persons—with the exception of the chairman and the members of the present board—who wasted millions and wrecked the Shipping Board.

Because an accurate statement of the property owned by the Shipping Board has not been made, neither has an accurate audit of the books been completed.

Because the treasurer of the Shipping Board, Mr. R. W. Bolling, did not make a statement to the committee as to the financial condition of the Shipping Board.

Because there is no statement made to the committee as to the property now owned by the Shipping Board, no statement is made as to where the property is located, of what it consists, neither do we know its probable value. No statement is made as to bonds, mortgages, contracts, or other obligations. Neither do we know where they can be found.

Because of the unconscionable contracts that they have made.

Because there should be a thorough house cleaning before any money is appropriated. We must get rid of the leeches and parasites which appear to infest almost every branch of the present organization.

Because I am in favor of a great merchant marine, but I do not believe in pouring Government money into a rat hole. That, to my mind, is not economy or horse sense.

Let them worry along for a while. Other people are worrying during this period of reconstruction. They have millions of property under their control and at their disposal. If they get this appropriation too easily I predict that within six months they will be back asking for another $125,000,000.

Because I am quite sure that the ex-soldiers, sailors, and marines of this country will demand when the facts are known, that those who have wasted money, looted and grafted while they were fighting the Nation's battles must be driven from places of honor, power, influence, and responsibility in governmental affairs. In other words, they must be scourged from the temple. [Applause.] The rascals must not go unwhipped of justice.

Because the Shipping Board can not be successfully conducted and operated by men whose ways are devious and whose intrigues are almost past finding out.

Economy is the watchword of this administration. The Shipping Board is a good place to commence operations. Let us begin now, notwithstanding the statements of the Director of the Budget, that prince of inflammatory rhetoric.

Mr. MADDEN. I am glad to know that the gentleman from Iowa is favoring the merchant marine, and he gives evidence of that by saying that he thinks there ought not to be any money appropriated to maintain the fleet that we now have. I hope the House will not adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa, and I move that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto be now closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SWEET].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SWEET) there were—ayes 60, noes 72.

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. MADDEN and Mr. SWEET as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were 52 ayes and 69 noes.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 10, after the word "States," insert the following: "And provided further, That no part of this sum shall be used to pay the compensation of any attorney employed to prepare bills before the committees of Congress on behalf of said United States Shipping Board and United States Shipping Board Fleet Corporation."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas desire to be heard?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BUCHANAN and Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 40, noes 71.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, in the amendment adopted a few moments ago, as perfected by the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois, we omitted to properly designate the United States Shipping Board, and I ask unanimous consent that it be amended by striking out the words "Shipping Board" and inserting "United States Shipping Board or United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to modify the amendment heretofore adopted by the House in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk completed the reading of the bill.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise, report the bill to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to, and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the committee do now rise—

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. There has been absolutely no debate on the last three paragraphs of this bill. The gentleman from Florida is seeking recognition, and the Chair ought to entertain a motion to strike out the last word.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman from Illinois has been recognized.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the motion, and will let the gentleman from Florida be recognized. I have no disposition to prevent the gentleman from being heard.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes out of order.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, Mr. Chairman, I object. It is nearly 6 o'clock and we are all hungry and thirsty. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I renew my motion that the committee do now rise and report the bill to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will confine himself to his amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, I am going to confine myself to the bill.

Mr. CANNON. Not to the bill, but to the striking out of the last word.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, it is the last word on this bill, this $48,000,000 affair. It has not been over a year since your distinguished ex-chairman of this committee, than whom there has been no more able Member of this House, the distinguished gentleman from Iowa, Mr. Good, appeared on this floor and denounced this Shipping Board in every term that he could think of in the English language. He said that as long as he was chairman of the great Committee on Appropriations he never would grant them another nickel. That is what he said.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not in order. His motion was to strike out the last word of the last paragraph of the bill, and the last paragraph of the bill relates to the payment to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HAWES] of $2,000 for expenses incurred in a contested-election case.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained, and the gentleman from Texas will proceed in order.

Mr. BLANTON. I shall confine myself to the payment of $2,000 on an election contest, a matter that comes up here frequently in this Congress. Every time a man wants a little money he will contest the election of some elected Member of the House, and he will come here and have an office assigned to him, and a secretary assigned to him, and a clerk assigned to him, and he will occupy rooms in the House Office Building for two years and spend the money of the people. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. MAPES. I suggest to the gentleman that in this particular case the money is being paid to a man who has proven successfully his right to the seat.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, I am talking about the general principle of spending money foolishly on such matters. [Applause.] Oh, the speech that I am making is worthy of every bit of applause that I am getting, because I am seeking to save the people's money in the Treasury. [Applause.] You fellows are taking it out here in $48,000,000 gobs [applause], and you are violating your pledge which you made to the people of the United States, and you know it, and you ought to be ashamed of it, and Uncle JOE CANNON should set you a better example than this.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill with the amendment with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 8117, an urgent deficiency appropriation bill, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I demand the reading of the engrossed bill.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 14 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, August 13, 1921, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

206. Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, transmitting a tentative draft of a bill entitled "A bill to amend section 1 of the act approved

August 25, 1916 (29 Stat., 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes," was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on the Public Lands.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. MILLER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2192) authorizing the award of the distinguished service cross or distinguished service medal provided for in the act of July 9, 1918, to Army officers brevetted for gallantry during the War with Spain, Philippine insurrection, or China relief expedition, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 341), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. EDMONDS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7912) to provide a method for the settlement of claims arising against the Government of the United States in sums not exceeding $1,000 in any one case, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 342), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HERRICK: A bill (H. R. 8208) prescribing rules and regulations under which newspapers and advertising agencies may hold prize contests, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 8209) to extend the time for the construction of a bridge across the Cumberland River in Montgomery County, Tenn.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SINCLAIR: A bill (H. R. 8210) to establish the Roosevelt National Park in Billings County, N. Dak.; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. KAHN: A bill (H. R. 8211) amending section 1222 of the Revised Statutes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BURTNESS: A bill (H. R. 8212) conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to permit the Yanktonai and Cuthead Bands of Sioux Indians to intervene in the action of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Sioux Indians against the United States (Docket No. 33731), and to hear, determine, and render judgment in said action in claims of Yanktonai and Cuthead Bands of Sioux Indians against the United States; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BUTLER: Resolution (H. Res. 172) directing the Secretary of the Navy to transmit to the House of Representatives the names of all persons who have been retired on account of physical disability incurred in line of duty while serving as temporary officers in the Navy or as officers of the Naval Reserve Force; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KAHN: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 187) authorizing the Secretary of War to obligate funds appropriated for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, to the amount of $236,095, from unexpended balances now in the Treasury; to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BLAND of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 8213) granting an increase of pension to John Welton; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAREW: A bill (H. R. 8214) to compensate the owners of the American steamship Vindal for damages and expenses in repairing the said steamship, and to make an appropriation therefor; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DUNBAR: A bill (H. R. 8215) granting a pension to Mary Rhodes; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EDMONDS: A bill (H. R. 8216) for the relief of the widow of Chang Tsu Tsao, of Hankow, China; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8217) to authorize the payment of $872.96 to the Government of Italy for the relief of the heirs and assigns of N. Ferro; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8218) for the relief of Cyril Burton; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8219) to adjust accounts of Capt. J. S. Carpenter, Supply Corps, United States Navy; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8220) for the relief of Chinese naval officers quartered at the naval proving grounds at Indianhead, Md., for loss of personal property by fire; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8221) for the relief of the Chinese Government; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FOSTER: A bill (H. R. 8222) granting a pension to Kate R. Wolf; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEARNS: A bill (H. R. 8223) granting a pension to John C. Butler; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KINCHELOE: A bill (H. R. 8224) granting a pension to Kate L. Littlepage; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LINTHICUM: A bill (H. R. 8225) granting a pension to F. A. Naille; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MERRITT: A bill (H. R. 8226) granting a pension to Martin Lee, jr.; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PARRISH: A bill (H. R. 8227) granting a pension to Napolian W. Alexander; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. REAVIS: A bill (H. R. 8228) granting a pension to Louis Wise; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROSE: A bill (H. R. 8229) granting an increase of pension to S. Ida C. Lewis; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: A bill (H. R. 8230) granting a pension to Ellen Williams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND: A bill (H. R. 8231) granting a pension to George B. Allard; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VARE: A bill (H. R. 8232) for the relief of Mary C. Meaney; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. VOIGT: A bill (H. R. 8233) granting an increase of pension to Charles Nichols; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WOODYARD: A bill (H. R. 8234) granting a pension to Christopher C. Pratt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WURZBACH: A bill (H. R. 8235) for the relief of R. H. Keene; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2380. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the municipal government of Oras, Province of Samar, P. I., containing excerpts from the minutes of the special session, held at Oras, by the municipal council on the 22d day of June, 1921, urging the granting of the independence of the Philippine Islands by the Government of the United States; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

2381. By Mr. CAREW: Petition of the Friends of Irish Freedom, national headquarters, New York City, demanding immediate payment of foreign debts to the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2382. By Mr. CONNOLLY of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Fraternal Circle Building & Loan Association, of Philadelphia, favoring an exemption from taxation of income received from building and loan association shares in the amount of $500; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2383. By Mr. DRIVER: Petition of the Interstate Grocer Co., of Helena, Ark., for reduction of passenger rates of railroads; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2384. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of the Butterworth-Judson Corporation, 61 Broadway, New York City; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2385. Also, petition of Charles E. Butler, chairman of board of trade, American Booksellers' Association, 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2386. Also, petition of J. H. Schermerhorn, vice president of American Graphite Co., Ticonderoga, N. Y.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2387. By Mr. LINTHICUM: Petition of John L. Dadds, John J. Miller, Oscar Samuels, Cal. J. Zamoiski, the Kenneweg Co., and others, all of Baltimore, Md., favoring Towner-Sterling bill; to the Committee on Education.

2388. Also, petition of Eliason Motor Co., Franklin Motor Car Co., and Noleak O Piston Ring Co., all of Baltimore, in opposition to auto tax. Also, petition of Geo. Blome & Son Co., Baltimore, for lifting of tax on candy. Also petition of Coggins & Owens, Car-Lowry Glass Co., Maass & Kemper, Henry A. Kries & Sons, Autocar Sales & Service Co., North Bros. & Co., the Electro-mechanical Co., Baltimore; Geo. Updegraff & Son, Hagerstown, Md.; C. Read & Co., Baltimore, all for immediate tax revision; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2389. Also, petition of the Religious Liberty Association of Washington, signed by several hundred protesters of Baltimore, Md., against compulsory Sunday observance law; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2390. Also, petition of I. & M. Ottenheimer and Hanline Bros., Baltimore, favoring Kahn and Watson bills for reduced passenger rates via mileage books; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2391. By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: Petition of 134 citizens of Hillsdale County, Mich., protesting against passage of House bill 4388, providing for the regulation of Sunday observance by civil force under penalty for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2392. Also, petition of 89 citizens of Battle Creek, Mich., protesting against passage of House bill 4388, providing for the regulation of Sunday observance by civil force under penalty for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2393. By Mr. TOWNER: Petition of Mr. C. W. Neal and numerous other citizens of Osceola, Iowa, protesting against the passage of House bill 4388, compulsory Sunday observance bill; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2394. By Mr. VARE: Papers accompanying the bill H. R. 8232, for the relief of Mary C. Meaney; to the Committee on Claims.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, August 13, 1921.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Blessed be Thy holy name, O Lord most high, for Thou dost not look down upon us as one who dwells in the supremacy of might, but as a Father who is pleased to abide with His children in redeeming love. We thank Thee for this disclosure of the divine nature. When we are faint, Thy healing balm is near; when we are weary, Thy staff gives support; when we stumble, Thy right hand is high to lift us up. Give wisdom and counsel to the deliberations of this day. May all of our homes be under the wings of divine love. If any have great burdens or sharp cares, if any feel the pressure of a thorn or the weight of a cross, O, minister unto them, by which they shall have great comfort and sweet peace. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the revision of the tax laws.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made yesterday afternoon on the deficiency appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on the bill passed yesterday relative to the creation of the port of New York district through the agreement entered into between the State of New York and the State of New Jersey.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the bill passed yesterday in reference to the agreement between New York and New Jersey. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

KANSAS CITY & MEMPHIS RAILROAD & BRIDGE CO.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call from the Speaker's table the bill S. 1794 and, if permitted, to make this short statement.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will have that opportunity later probably.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, may I prefer a unanimous-consent request? I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that I may be permitted to extend my remarks on the Republican "chicken-feed" legislation.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent—

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

KANSAS CITY & MEMPHIS RAILROAD & BRIDGE CO.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas calls up the bill S. 1794, a House bill of similar tenor having already been reported and on the calendar. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1794) to authorize the Secretary of War to release the Kansas City & Memphis Railroad & Bridge Co. from reconstructing its highway and approaches across its bridge at Memphis, Tenn.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and empowered to release the Kansas City & Memphis Railway & Bridge Co., a corporation, from the duty now imposed upon it by the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved April 24, 1888, and all acts amendatory thereof, to maintain approaches to its bridge at Memphis, Tenn., and a way over and across said bridge for wagons and other vehicles, animals, and foot passengers, upon its payment to the road fund of Crittenden County, Ark., the sum of $12,500.

SEC. 2. That upon the compliance by the said Kansas City & Memphis Railway & Bridge Co., a corporation aforesaid, with the provisions of section 1 of this act the provision hereof shall take effect, and for that purpose an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved April 24, 1888, and all acts amendatory thereof are hereby so amended as to relieve said company of the necessity of maintaining said approaches to and said passageway across said bridge for wagons and other vehicles, animals, and foot passengers.

SEC. 3. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, as I desire to have an explanation from the gentleman.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, I shall be very glad to do that. The bill just read is identical with the bill H. R. 1317, introduced by myself at the beginning of this session, which bill was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. That bill was reported back by said committee the 9th day of June favorably, with a report from the Secretary of War, which was also favorable. I desire to state to the House that under the act of Congress of 1887 the Kansas City & Memphis Railroad & Bridge Co. constructed a bridge across the Mississippi River connecting Tennessee and Arkansas at Memphis, in Tennessee. Under the provisions of the act the bridge company was required to construct and maintain a wooden way for pedestrians and vehicles. This was a toll bridge. The extremely high water in the Mississippi River in the year 1913 destroyed this approach, but at that time the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co. was completing a magnificent bridge just 500 feet north of the location of the bridge mentioned in this bill. Under the provisions of the law the new bridge company was required to construct and maintain approaches on both sides of this new bridge, built into the bridge, and sufficient to accommodate not only all present traffic but, so far as we are able to determine, the future requirements will demand. This is a free bridge, therefore the approach built by the citizens of Crittenden County to the old bridge was abandoned and a new approach has been built to the new bridge. Now the citizens of that county are placing hard surface on the roadway leading to the new bridge. The old bridge company makes the proposition to the citizens of Crittenden County that if they be relieved of the obligation of maintaining this toll bridge, which would require its reconstruction, they will pay into the road fund of that county the sum of $12,500 to enable them to hard surface the approach to the new bridge. That is the proposition in this bill. Just at this time the money is worth more to those people than it will be in six weeks from now, when the rains begin to fall and the dirt-road approach to this bridge becomes wet and remains wet through the fall and winter season.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, I trust that the bill may be passed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time; was read the third time and passed.

A similar House bill was ordered to be laid on the table.

HENRY MARCOTTE AND JOHN H. PARKER.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to prefer a unanimous-consent request. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement relative to services rendered by Capt. Henry Marcotte and Lieut. Parker, of Missouri, during the Spanish-American War. I do this because I have just received a letter from Capt. Marcotte, who is now 82 years of age, who states the official records have left out some very important facts which should be preserved in the interest of perfecting history. This also quotes an extract from the late President Roosevelt, who was then Col. Theodore Roosevelt. I trust there may be no objection to my request for extension, as it is very short.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

First Lieut. Henry Marcotte, brevetted captain in the Regular Army by President Grant for "gallant and meritorious services in the Battle of Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863," while a second lieutenant of volunteers, and in which battle he received the gunshot wound causing his subsequent retirement from active service, feeling it to be his duty to render service in return for his retired pay, he applied to the War Department for permission to go to Cuba. This being denied, Capt. Marcotte requested Col. W. C. Church, editor of the Army and Navy Journal, to extend his zone as correspondent to include Cuba, which resulted in the honorable Secretary of War granting Marcotte permission to join Gen. Shafter's forces during the Cuban campaign. Thus was opened to him the only way to further serve his country, and at his own expense and the forfeiting of his life insurance if killed.

His object in seeking the privilege of joining the Gatling Gun Battery was that he realized that neither the young second lieutenant, whose indomitable perseverance secured to him the command of the machine guns for the first time in the history of our Army, nor any one of the enlisted men of his command had ever heard the death dealing song of hostile shell and rifle ball, and it was this courageous Gatling detachment that proved the great value of machine guns in bloody contest against the entrenched machine guns and trained crews from the Spanish warships in Santiago Harbor.

In proof of the machine guns' efficiency, Gen. Shafter in his official report says:

"In this action on this part of the field most efficient service was rendered by Lieut. John H. Parker, Thirteenth Infantry, and the Gatling gun detachment under his command. The fighting continued at intervals until nightfall, but our men held resolutely to the position gained at the cost of so much blood and toil."

The following extracts from Col. Theodore Roosevelt's letter is further proof of the great service rendered by the Gatling Battery in the battle of Santiago, Cuba:

"On the morning of July 1 the dismounted Cavalry, including my regiment, stormed Kettle Hill, driving the Spaniards from their trenches. After taking the crest I made the men under me turn and begin volley firing at the San Juan blockhouse and intrenchments against which Hawkins's and Kent's Infantry were advancing. While thus firing there suddenly smote on our ears a peculiar drumming sound. One or two of the men cried out, 'The Spanish machine guns!' but after listening a moment I leaped to my feet and called, 'It's the Gatlings, men! It's our Gatlings!' Immediately the men began to cheer lustily, for the sound was most inspiring. Whenever the drumming stopped it was only to open again a little nearer the front, but it was perfectly evident that the Gatlings were troubled by no such consideration, for they were advancing all the while."

"Soon the Infantry took San Juan Hill, and, after one false start, we in turn rushed the next line of blockhouses and intrenchments and then swung to the left and took the chain of hills immediately fronting Santiago. Here I found myself on the extreme front in command of the fragments of all six regiments of the Cavalry division. I received orders to halt where I was, but to hold the hill at all hazards. The Spaniards were heavily reinforced and they opened a tremendous fire upon us from their batteries and trenches. We laid down just behind the gentle crest of the hill, firing as we got the chance, but for the most part taking the fire without responding. As the afternoon wore on, however, the Spaniards became bolder and made an attack upon the position. They did not push it home, but they did advance, their firing being redoubled. We at once ran forward to the crest and opened on them, and as we did so the unmistakable drumming of the Gatlings opened abreast of us, to our right, and the men cheered again. As soon as the attack was definitely repulsed, I stroled over to find out about the Gatlings, and there I found Lieut. Parker with two of his guns right on our left, abreast of our men, who at that time were closer to the Spaniards than any others."

Beyond question this disabled officer—the only officer of the retired list—voluntarily risked his life when the War Department was without authority to order retired officers to active service, greatly distinguished himself during the battle before Santiago Harbor. Lieut. John H. Parker, commanding the Gatling guns, in his official report says:

"I was joined on June 25 by Capt. Henry Marcotte, Seventeenth Infantry, retired, regularly authorized correspondent of the Army and Navy Journal, who has been with me ever since, enduring all the vicissitudes of the season with Spartan fortitude, although equally destitute of cover as myself, and 60 years of age. I desire to express here officially and fully my sincere gratitude for the kindness which permitted him to accompany my command, and the great appreciation of the valuable advice and assistance which he has given continually. His large experience of war, his clear head, and good judgment have always been at hand to aid, and his cool example to myself and men under fire did much to steady us and keep us up to our work when we were first called on to face that ordeal."

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that August 11 they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills and joint resolution:

H. R. 6877. An act to permit a compact or agreement between the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming, respecting the disposition and apportionment of the waters of the Colorado River, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7328. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Pend d'Oreille River, Bonner County, Idaho, at the Newport-Priest River Road crossing, Idaho;

H. R. 7208. An act to extend the time for the construction of a bridge across the Roanoke River in Halifax County, N. C.;

H. R. 6320. An act to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in live stock, live-stock products, dairy products, poultry, poultry products, and eggs, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 112. Joint resolution authorizing the erection on public grounds in the city of Washington, D. C., of a memorial to the employees of the United States Department of Agriculture who died in the war with Germany.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. When the House adjourned last night the previous question had been ordered on the bill H. R. 8117, the deficiency appropriation bill, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8117) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time; was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken and the Speaker announced the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided, and there were—ayes 74, noes 29.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order there is no quorum present. It is clear no quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees. Those in favor of the passage of the bill will, as their names are called, answer "yea," those opposed with answer "nay," and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken, and there were—yeas 159, nays 89, answered "present" 1, not voting 181, as follows:

YEAS—159.

Andrews	Evans	Kraus	Reed, W. Va.
Ansorge	Faust	Lazaro	Rhodes
Arentz	Favrot	Lea, Calif.	Robertson
Aswell	Fenn	Leatherwood	Robison
Atkeson	Focht	Lineberger	Rose
Barbour	Frear	Little	Rosenbloom
Benham	French	Logan	Sanders, Ind.
Bixler	Frothingham	Longworth	Scott, Tenn.
Blakeney	Fulmer	Lubling	Shaw
Bland, Ind.	Gensman	McArthur	Shelton
Bland, Va.	Gerner	McFadden	Sinnott
Bowers	Goodykoontz	McLaughlin, Mich.	Smith, Idaho
Briggs	Gorman	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Smith, Mich.
Brown, Tenn.	Graham, Ill.	McPherson	Smithwick
Buchanan	Green, Iowa	Madden	Sproul
Burton	Greene, Mass.	Magge	Stafford
Butler	Greene, Vt.	Mann	Steenerson
Byrnes, S. C.	Griest	Mapes	Strong, Pa.
Byrns, Tenn.	Griffin	Merritt	Swing
Campbell, Kans.	Hadley	Michener	Tague
Campbell, Pa.	Hardy, Colo.	Miller	Thompson
Cannon	Hardy, Tex.	Mills	Tilson
Carew	Harrison	Mondell	Timberlake
Carter	Hawley	Moore, Ohio	Townner
Chindblom	Hayden	Morgan	Treadway
Cole, Iowa	Hays	Mott	Vestal
Cooper, Wis.	Herrick	Nelson, A. P.	Voigt
Copley	Hersey	Newton, Minn.	Volstead
Coughlin	Hickey	Norton	Walters
Crowther	Hill	O'Connor	Webster
Cullen	Houghton	Oliver	White, Kans.
Curry	Hukriede	Padgett	White, Me.
Dale	Hull	Parker, N. J.	Wilson
Darrow	Ireland	Parker, N. Y.	Winslow
Davis, Minn.	Keller	Pringley	Wood, Ind.
Denison	Kelley, Mich.	Purnell	Woodruff
Dunbar	King	Raker	Wurzbach
Dupré	Kinkaid	Ramseyer	Wyant
Echols	Kissel	Reavis	Young
Elliott	Kline, Pa.	Reece

NAYS—89.

Ackerman	Collier	Hammer	Lowrey
Almon	Collins	Hoch	Lyon
Appleby	Connally, Tex.	Huddleston	McClintic
Beck	Connell	Jacaway	McDuffie
Begg	Crisp	Jeffers, Nebr.	MacGregor
Bell	Davis, Tenn.	Johnson, Ky.	Millsbaugh
Bird	Deal	Johnson, Miss.	Moore, Va.
Black	Dowell	Jones, Pa.	Nelson, J. M.
Blanton	Drewry	Jones, Tex.	Oldfield
Bowling	Driver	Kincheloe	Overstreet
Box	Fairfield	Kopp	Park, Ga.
Brand	Fisher	Lanham	Parks, Ark.
Bulwinkle	Foster	Lankford	Parrish
Cable	Garner	Lawrence	Patterson, Mo.
Clague	Garrett, Tenn.	Lee, Ga.	Quin
Clouse	Garrett, Tex.	London	Rankin

Rayburn	Sandlin	Summers, T.	Ward, N. C.
Ricketts	Sears	Swank	Wingo
Riddick	Speaks	Sweet	Wise
Roach	Stegall	Thomas	Wright
Rogers	Stedman	Tillman
Rouse	Strong, Kans.	Vinson
Sanders, Tex.	Summers, Wash.	Walsh

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Fuller

NOT VOTING—181.

Anderson	Fields	Larsen, Ga.	Rucker
Anthony	Fish	Larson, Minn.	Ryan
Bacharach	Fitzgerald	Layton	Sabath
Bankhead	Flood	Lee, N. Y.	Sanders, N. Y.
Barkley	Fordney	Leibach	Schall
Beedy	Free	Linthicum	Scott, Mich.
Boies	Freeman	Luce	Shreve
Bond	Funk	McCormick	Siegel
Brennan	Gahn	McKenzie	Sinclair
Brinson	Gallivan	McLaughlin, Pa.	Sisson
Britten	Gilbert	McSwain	Slomp
Brooks, Ill.	Glynn	Maloney	Snell
Brooks, Pa.	Goldsborough	Mansfield	Snyder
Browne, Wis.	Gould	Martin	Stephens
Burdick	Graham, Pa.	Mead	Stevenson
Burke	Haugen	Michaelson	Stiness
Burroughs	Hawes	Montague	Stoll
Burtess	Hicks	Montoya	Sullivan
Cantrill	Himes	Moore, Ill.	Taylor, Ark.
Chalmers	Hogan	Moore, Ind.	Taylor, Colo.
Chandler, N. Y.	Hudspeth	Morin	Taylor, N. J.
Chandler, Okla.	Humphreys	Mudd	Taylor, Tenn.
Christopherson	Husted	Murphy	Temple
Clark, Fla.	Hutchinson	Newton, Mo.	Ten Eyck
Clarke, N. Y.	James	Nolan	Tincher
Classon	Jeffers, Ala.	O'Brien	Tinkham
Cockran	Johnson, S. Dak.	Ogden	Tyson
Codd	Johnson, Wash.	Olpp	Underhill
Cole, Ohio	Kahn	Osborne	Upshaw
Colton	Kearns	Paige	Valle
Connolly, Pa.	Kelly, Pa.	Patterson, N. J.	Vare
Cooper, Ohio	Kendall	Perkins	Volk
Cramton	Kennedy	Perlman	Ward, N. Y.
Dallinger	Ketcham	Peters	Wason
Dempsey	Kless	Petersen	Watson
Dickinson	Kindred	Porter	Weaver
Dominick	Kirkpatrick	Pou	Wheeler
Doughton	Kitchin	Radcliffe	Williams
Drane	Klecza	Rainey, Ala.	Williamson
Dunn	Kline, N. Y.	Rainey, Ill.	Woods, Va.
Dyer	Knight	Ransley	Woodyard
Edmonds	Knutson	Reber	Yates
Ellis	Kreider	Reed, N. Y.	Zihlman
Elston	Kunz	Riordan
Vairchild	Lampert	Rodenberg
Fess	Langley	Rossdale

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. OSBORNE with Mr. MARTIN.
 Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota with Mr. KITCHIN.
 Mr. SHREVE with Mr. DOMINICK.
 Mr. FISH with Mr. DOUGHTON.
 Mr. BROOKS of Pennsylvania with Mr. DRANE.
 Mr. EDMONDS with Mr. COCKRAN.
 Mr. FREE with Mr. RIORDAN.
 Mr. STEPHENS with Mr. BANKHEAD.
 Mr. LANGLEY with Mr. CLARK of Florida.
 Mr. OLPP with Mr. RAINEY of Illinois.
 Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. WOODS of Virginia.
 Mr. NEWTON of Missouri with Mr. HAWES.
 Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin with Mr. SULLIVAN.
 Mr. BROOKS of Illinois with Mr. MONTAGUE.
 Mr. BACHARACH with Mr. COLLINS.
 Mr. DUNN with Mr. JONES of Texas.
 Mr. KAHN with Mr. TYSON.
 Mr. LUCE with Mr. SISSON.
 Mr. HICKS with Mr. CANTRILL.
 Mr. FULLER with Mr. KUNZ.
 Mr. COLTON with Mr. MCSWAIN.
 Mr. RANSLEY with Mr. WEAVER.
 Mr. PATTERSON of New Jersey with Mr. UPSHAW.
 Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. STEVENSON.
 Mr. TINCHER with Mr. FLOOD.
 Mr. MORIN with Mr. POU.
 Mr. ELSTON with Mr. SABATH.
 Mr. PORTER with Mr. MEAD.
 Mr. REBER with Mr. O'BRIEN.
 Mr. VOLK with Mr. BARKLEY.
 Mr. KNUTSON with Mr. FIELDS.
 Mr. JOHNSON of Washington with Mr. STOLL.
 Mr. WHEELER with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas.
 Mr. SIEGEL with Mr. HUMPHREYS.
 Mr. TAYLOR of New Jersey with Mr. BRINSON.
 Mr. WASON with Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama.
 Mr. RADCLIFFE with Mr. GALLIVAN.
 Mr. LAYTON with Mr. MANSFIELD.

Mr. HOGAN with Mr. KINDRED.
 Mr. BURROUGHS with Mr. LINTHICUM.
 Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.
 Mr. BOIES with Mr. GILBERT.
 Mr. CONNOLLY of Pennsylvania with Mr. RAINEY of Alabama.
 Mr. MONTOKA with Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH.
 Mr. STINESS with Mr. RUCKER.
 Mr. HUTCHINSON with Mr. LARSEN of Georgia.
 Mr. PERKINS with Mr. HUDSPETH.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

On motion of Mr. MADDEN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF WAR FINANCE CORPORATION ACT.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 1915) to provide for the purchase of farm products in the United States, to sell the same in foreign countries, and for other purposes; and, pending that, I would like to ascertain from the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. WINGO] if we can make an agreement as to time.

Mr. WINGO. I will state to the gentleman that I have requests for considerable more than I think we shall be able to meet. What is the suggestion of the gentleman? Five hours?

Mr. McFADDEN. Three hours, if we can get through in that time. I will say frankly to the gentleman that I have demands here for considerably more than that time. I would suggest, if it is agreeable to the gentleman, to make it four hours, and confine the debate to the bill.

Mr. WINGO. That would make the general debate close at about 5 o'clock?

Mr. McFADDEN. I would say at about that time.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman would not feel like giving five hours?

Mr. McFADDEN. No. That is a pretty long time. It seems to me we ought to conclude the general debate to-day.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, may I suggest to the gentleman, why not enter into an agreement to have general debate throughout the day and then adjourn at whatever hour the committee might see proper?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit me, if you are to make the kind of an agreement that is suggested by my colleague, after the New York and Boston and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia delegations get off this afternoon, you would not have a quorum about 2 or 3 o'clock.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman is mistaken. We can easily command a quorum.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the debate be limited to the bill for four hours, two hours to be controlled by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. WINGO] and two hours by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the debate, confined to the bill, be limited to four hours, two hours to be controlled by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. WINGO] and two hours by himself. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 1915.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] will please take the chair.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 1915, with Mr. STAFFORD in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 1915, which the Clerk will read by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1915) to amend the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, to provide relief for producers of and dealers in agricultural products, and for other purposes.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Mississippi objects. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when used in this act the term "person" includes partnerships, corporations, and associations, as well as individuals.

SEC. 2. That section 1 of the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and four additional persons (who shall be the directors first appointed as hereinafter provided) are hereby created a body corporate and politic in deed and in law by the name, style, and title of the War Finance Corporation (herein called the corporation), and shall have succession for a period of 10 years: Provided, That except as otherwise provided by this amendatory act the corporation shall not exercise any of the powers conferred by this act except such as are incidental to the liquidation of its assets and the winding up of its affairs, after six months after the termination of the war, the date of such termination to be fixed by proclamation of the President of the United States."

SEC. 3. The War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, is amended by adding after section 21 thereof the following new sections:

"SEC. 22. Whenever the board of directors of the corporation shall be of the opinion that conditions arising out of the war, or out of the disruption of foreign trade created by the war, have resulted in or may result in an abnormal surplus accumulation of any staple agricultural product of the United States and that the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable producers of or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the corporation shall thereupon be empowered to make advances, for periods not exceeding one year from the respective dates of such advances, upon such terms, not inconsistent with this act, as it may determine;

"(a) To any person engaged in the United States in dealing in or marketing any such products, or to any association composed of persons engaged in producing such products, for the purpose of assisting such person or association to carry such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner. Any such advance shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding 1½ per cent in excess of the rate of discount for 90-day commercial paper prevailing at the Federal reserve bank of the district in which the borrower is located at the time when such advance is made;

"(b) To any person without the United States purchasing such products, but in no case shall any of the money so advanced be expended without the United States. Every such advance shall be secured by adequate security of such character as shall be prescribed by the board of directors of the corporation. The rate of interest charged on any such advance shall be determined by the board of directors. The corporation shall retain power to recall an advance or require additional security at any time.

"(c) To any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States which makes or has made an advance or advances to any such person as is described in paragraph (a) of this section for the purpose therein set forth or which makes or has made an advance or advances to any producer for the purpose set forth in paragraph (a). The aggregate of advances made to any bank, banker, or trust company shall not exceed the amount remaining unpaid of the advances made by such bank, banker, or trust company for purposes herein described. Such advances shall bear interest at the rates fixed by the corporation.

"SEC. 23. Notwithstanding the limitation of section 1, the advances provided for by section 21 and section 22 of this act may be made until July 1, 1922. The corporation may from time to time extend the time of payment of any such advance or advances through renewals, substitution of new obligations, or otherwise, but the time for the payment of any advance made under authority of section 21 shall not be extended beyond five years from the date upon which such advance was originally made, and the time for the payment of any advance made under authority of section 22 shall not be extended beyond two years from the date upon which such advance was originally made.

"All advances made under section 21 or under section 22 of this act shall be made against the promissory note or notes, or other instrument or instruments in writing imposing on the borrower a primary and unconditional obligation to repay the advance at maturity, with interest as stipulated therein, with full and adequate security in each instance by indorsement, guaranty, pledge, or otherwise. The corporation shall retain the power to require additional security at any time.

"SEC. 24. Whenever in the opinion of the board of directors of the corporation the public interest may require it, the corporation shall be authorized and empowered to make advances upon such terms not inconsistent with this act as it may determine to any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States which may have made advances for agricultural purposes, including the breeding, raising, fattening, and marketing of live stock. Such advance or advances may be made upon the promissory note or notes, or other instrument or instruments in such form as to impose on the borrowing bank, banker, or trust company a primary and unconditional obligation to repay the advance at maturity with interest as stipulated therein, and shall be fully and adequately secured in each instance by indorsement, guaranty, pledge, or otherwise. Such advances may be made for a period not exceeding one year and the corporation may from time to time extend the time of payment of any such advance through renewals, substitution of new obligations or otherwise, but the time for the payment of any such advance shall not be extended beyond two years from the date upon which such advance was originally made. The aggregate of advances made to any bank, banker, or trust company shall not exceed the amount remaining unpaid of the advances made by such bank, banker, or trust company for purposes herein described.

"The corporation may, in exceptional cases, upon such terms not inconsistent with this act as it may determine, purchase from domestic banks, bankers, or trust companies, notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or other instruments of indebtedness secured by chattel mortgages, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, or other instruments in writing conveying or securing marketable title to staple agricultural products, including live stock. The corporation may from time to time, upon like security, extend the time of payment of any note, draft, bill of exchange, or other instrument acquired under this section, but the time for the payment of any such note, draft, bill of exchange, or other instrument shall not be extended beyond two years from the date upon which such note, draft, bill of exchange, or other instrument was acquired by the corporation. The corporation is further authorized, upon such terms as it may prescribe, to purchase, sell, or otherwise deal in debentures, promissory notes, or other obligations, adequately secured, issued by banking corporations organized under section 25 (a) of the Federal reserve act: Provided, That no purchase of debentures, promissory notes, or other obligations of the said banking corporations shall be made nor any loan or advance be made to said banking corporations except for the purpose of assisting the said banking corporations in financing the exportation of agricultural and manufactured products from the United States to foreign countries. No such promissory notes, debentures, or other obligations shall be purchased which have a maturity at the time of such purchase of more than five years.

"Advances or purchases may be made under this section at any time prior to July 1, 1922.

"SEC. 25. (a) The corporation shall have power and is authorized and empowered upon request therefor by the Federal Farm Loan Board created by the Federal farm loan act approved July 17, 1916, as amended, to make advances to Federal land banks, at a rate of interest not exceeding the rate of interest charged by Federal land banks for loans under the provisions of such Federal farm loan act, as amended, and to accept as security therefor farm loan bonds issued by such Federal land banks maturing within five years of the date of issue, or to purchase such bonds from the capital, earnings, reserve fund, or other assets of such corporation to the amount of $100,000,000 during the calendar year ending December 31, 1921, and $100,000,000 during the calendar year ending December 31, 1922.

"(b) Every Federal land bank shall have power, subject to the provisions, limitations, and requirements of the Federal farm loan act approved July 17, 1916, as amended, and of this section, to receive and pay interest upon such advances, to issue farm loan bonds as security therefor, to issue and sell farm loan bonds, to buy the same for its own account at any time, and to retire any or all of such bonds at or before maturity.

"SEC. 26. The aggregate amount of all advances made under sections 21, 22, and 24, and of all notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or other securities purchased under section 24 remaining unpaid, shall not at any one time exceed $1,000,000,000.

"SEC. 27. The corporation is empowered and authorized to investigate upon its own initiative or in cooperation with other governmental agencies foreign market conditions and to advise where disposition may be advantageously made of such agricultural products.

"SEC. 28. Whenever in this act the words 'bank, banker, or trust company' are used, they shall be deemed to include any reputable and responsible financing institution with resources adequate to the undertaking contemplated.

"SEC. 29. In order to enable the corporation to carry out the purposes of this act, the Comptroller of the Currency is hereby authorized to furnish to the corporation for its confidential use such reports, records, or other information as he may have available relating to financial condition of national banks to which the corporation has made or contemplates making advances, and to make through his examiners for the confidential use of the corporation examinations of banks, bankers, or trust companies other than national banks to which the corporation has made or contemplates making advances: Provided, That no such examination shall be made without the consent of such bank, banker, or trust company.

"SEC. 30. No person, bank, banker, or trust company receiving money under the provisions of this act shall loan such money at a rate of interest greater than 2 per cent per annum in excess of the rate of interest charged or received by the corporation upon such money.

SEC. 4. Section 21 of the War Finance Corporation act is hereby amended by striking out paragraphs (b) and (c) thereof, and by striking out at the beginning of the first paragraph the letter (a).

SEC. 5. The first paragraph of section 12 of the War Finance Corporation act is hereby amended and reenacted to read as follows:

"SEC. 12. That the corporation shall be empowered and authorized to issue and have outstanding at any one time its notes or bonds in an amount aggregating not more than four times its paid-in capital, such notes or bonds to mature not less than six months nor more than five years from the respective dates of issue, and may be redeemable before maturity at the option of the corporation, as may be stipulated in such notes or bonds, and to bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the board of directors, but such rate or rates of interest shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such notes or bonds shall have a first and paramount floating charge on all the assets of the corporation, and the corporation shall not at any time mortgage or pledge any of its assets. Such notes or bonds may be issued at not less than par in payment of any advances authorized by this title, or may be offered for sale publicly or to any individual, firm, corporation, or association, at such price or prices as the board of directors, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may determine.

"The power of the corporation to issue notes or bonds may be exercised at any time prior to January 1, 1927, but no notes or bonds shall mature later than July 1, 1927."

SEC. 6. Paragraph 1 of section 13 of the War Finance Corporation act is hereby amended and reenacted to read as follows:

"That the Federal reserve banks shall be authorized, subject to the maturity limitations of the Federal reserve act and to regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, to discount the direct obligations of member banks secured by such notes or bonds of the corporation and to rediscount notes or other negotiable instruments secured by such notes or bonds and indorsed by a member bank. Discounts or rediscounts under this section shall be at an interest rate equal to the prevailing rate for eligible commercial paper or corresponding maturities."

With committee amendments, as follows:

On page 1, line 6, after the figure "1," insert "of Title I."
On page 2, line 9, after the word "after," strike out down to and including the word "States" and insert "July 1, 1922."
On page 2, line 15, after the figures "21," insert "of Title I."
On page 2, line 21, strike out "and" and insert "or lack of a market for the sale of same or."
On page 3, commencing with line 16, strike out paragraph (b) down to and including line 24 of same page.
On page 4, line 1, strike out "(c)" and insert "(b)."
On page 4, line 18, after the figures "21," insert "and section 22."
On page 4, line 19, strike out "five" and insert "three."
On page 4, line 20, after the word "made," strike out down to and including the word "made" in line 23 of same page.
On page 5, line 16, strike out "the."
On page 6, line 2, strike out "two" and insert "three."
On page 6, line 20, strike out "two" and insert "three."
On page 7, line 10, strike out "five" and insert "three."
On page 7, commencing with line 14, strike out all of section 25 down to and including line 10 on page 8.

On page 8, line 11, strike out "26" and insert "25."
On page 8, commencing with line 16, strike out section 27 down to and including line 20 of same page.

On page 8, line 21, strike out "28" and insert "26."
On page 8, line 24, after the word "institution," insert "incorporated under the laws of any State or of the United States."

On page 9, line 3, strike out "29" and insert "27."
On page 9, commencing with line 16, strike out section 30, down to and including line 10 of same page and insert the following:

"SEC. 28. No bank, banker, or trust company, or other firm, corporation, or association receiving an advance under the provisions of this act shall loan such money at a rate of interest greater than 2 per centum per annum in excess of the rate of interest charged or received by the corporation upon such advance, nor shall any such bank, banker, or trust company charge any commission in connection with any such loan except as reasonable compensation for any special services or risks undertaken by such bank, banker, or trust company, or other firm, corporation, or association. The limitation contained in this section shall not apply where the loan is made by the bank, banker, or trust company, or other firm, corporation, or association, without recourse against any domestic borrower."

On page 10, line 10, after the figures "21," insert "of Title I."
On page 10, line 14, after the figure "5," strike out "The first paragraph of."

On page 10, line 14, after the figures "12," insert "of Title I."
On page 10, line 19, strike out "four" and insert "three."
On page 11, line 9, after the word "prices," insert "at not less than par."

On page 11, line 15, after the figures "13," insert "of Title I."
On page 12, line 1, after the word "paper," strike out the word "or" and insert the word "of" in lieu thereof.

On page 12, at the end of the bill, add a new section to read as follows:

"SEC. 7. That section 15 of Title I of the War Finance Corporation act be amended and reenacted to read as follows:

"SEC. 15. That all moneys of the corporation not otherwise employed may be kept on deposit, subject to check, with the Treasurer of the United States, or in any of the Federal reserve banks, or may, upon the direction of the board of directors of the corporation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, be invested in bonds or other obligations of the United States, issued or converted after September 24, 1917, or upon like direction and approval, may be used from time to time in the purchase or redemption of any bonds issued by the corporation."

"The Federal reserve banks are hereby authorized to act as depositories for and as fiscal agents of the corporation in the general performance of the powers conferred by this title."

"Beginning July 1, 1922, the directors of the corporation shall proceed to liquidate its assets and wind up its affairs, except as specifically provided in this title; but the directors of the corporation, in their discretion, may from time to time, prior to such liquidation, sell and dispose of any securities or other property acquired by the corporation."

"After July 1, 1922, the corporation may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, deposit with the Treasurer of the United States, as a special deposit, out of money belonging to the corporation, or from time to time received by it in the course of liquidation or otherwise, an amount equal to the aggregate amount of all outstanding bonds or notes of the corporation, including principal and interest to maturity. Moneys so deposited shall constitute a special fund for the payment of principal and interest of such bonds or notes, or for the purchase or redemption of such bonds or notes at not more than par and accrued interest, and may be drawn upon or paid out for no other purpose."

"Whenever there shall have been deposited in such special fund an amount equal to the aggregate amount of all bonds or notes of the corporation then outstanding, including principal and interest to maturity, the corporation may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, pay into the Treasury of the United States, as miscellaneous receipts, any moneys belonging to the corporation, or received from time to time in the course of liquidation or otherwise, in excess of a reasonable reserve to meet all liabilities and expenses during liquidation. Whenever any such payment is made, an amount of capital stock of the corporation equal in par value to the amount so paid in shall be canceled and retired."

"All net earnings of the corporation not required for its operations shall be accumulated as a reserve fund until such time as the corporation liquidates under the terms of this title."

"Any balance remaining after the payment of all the corporation's debts, and after the retirement of all its capital stock as herein provided, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts, and thereupon the corporation shall stand dissolved."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for two hours.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the Chair to notify me after I have consumed 15 minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, this is an important bill, which comes to us from the Senate—Senate bill 1915—a bill to amend the War Finance Corporation act. This bill should properly be called a bill for the relief of the agricultural interests, the railroads, and the bankers of the United States.

I want to go back and review, for the benefit of members of the committee, this legislation. The history of this legislation is that it was conceived under the stress of war conditions in 1918.

The bill was prepared at a time when great financial stress prevailed everywhere, when this country was straining every nerve and using every bit of its industry to win the war, and the financial institutions of the country were being urged to finance the tremendous financial obligations of the Government. So, as I say, this law was conceived under great stress. Owing to plans which had been put into operation for the financing of the war, principally through inflation, the financial institutions of the country were wondering how and where they were going to get the necessary relief under these demands and also to buy from the Treasury of the United States the tremendous amounts of loans which the Government was offering and forcing the banks to buy from time to time. This corporation was created with a capital of $500,000,000, which was subscribed for and paid by the United States. It originally had expansive powers to the extent of $4,000,000,000 through the authority vested in the act to permit it to issue its notes or debentures to that amount. The greatest good and help that came as a result of this legislation was probably psychological, because it gave to the financial and business interests of this country confidence that should they have to go to this institution for relief the institution was there and could function properly. There was grave doubt in the minds of a great many people as to the wisdom of passing such legislation as this, and I, for one, strenuously opposed it when it was first proposed, because I saw in it an institution that would promote inflation and increase costs throughout the country, and if it was used to its fullest extent, with the rediscount privileges which were given to the instruments which it issued, could clog the Federal reserve system and possibly stop its effective work in relief to the member financial institutions which the Federal reserve act provided.

But, as I say, the great help that came from the enactment of this legislation was psychological. The demands upon the institution were comparatively light. It only advanced, as I remember, something like $46,000,000 for the relief of industry during the first year of its operation. It was conceived largely by the people who were interested in public utilities. They felt the great need of financial assistance, and they got together and prepared the first plan which was finally worked out in the War Finance Corporation act. The great financial interests of the country finally, however, really took the organization away from the public utility interests of the country and made it an instrument which would relieve the banking institutions of the United States which had the responsibility of financing war industry and of financing the Government under its trying conditions, so that when the war ended, as I say, this corporation had done very little except in a psychological way. But on March 3, 1919, the Congress amended this law and provided that its resources should be used for the purpose of expediting and aiding in the financing of international trade, and section 21 was then added to the bill. Under this authority the corporation has gone along, and from time to time has rendered some assistance, with the limitations that were provided in the law, in the financing of banks that have financed traders and dealers in goods for export. They were limited, however, by the law in the scope of their aid, and they did not advance large amounts of money for this purpose. They did, however, render aid to a considerable extent to the cattle interests of the Southwest and the West. They made advances to some of the large business concerns of the country like the Baldwin Locomotive Works and the Bethlehem Steel Co., but they felt all along that they could not go into that class of business or render the aid that they should without amendments to the law. So during May of 1920 the Secretary of the Treasury felt that the War Finance Corporation should cease operations, and accordingly under authority given him by the act, which was confirmed by an opinion received by him from the Attorney General, the board of directors passed resolutions declaring the business of the War Finance Corporation at an end.

You will all remember, I think, what directly ensued from that order. About that time also the Federal reserve system came under considerable criticism because we were in the midst of declining prices in this country, and there was a great demand from the agricultural interests of the South and West for relief from the Government. Many of these people through their organizations were coming to Washington and demanding a revival of the War Finance Corporation and its activities, seeing that they could not get the relief which was necessary from the Federal reserve system and that the conditions were such that they demanded relief. Accordingly, on January 4, 1921, the War Finance Corporation was revived, and since that time it has been able to function to a considerable extent. At the present time the War Finance Corporation has made loans as follows—this information was furnished me by the War Finance Corporation: They have approved loans to the cotton interests of the country for $16,560,000; to the tobacco interests for $1,848,000; condensed milk, $8,500,000; canned fruits and vegetables, $250,000; meat products, $2,000,000; railroad equipment, $2,925,000; copper, $145,000; sheet steel, $180,000; sugar mill machinery, $287,500; making a total of approved loans of $32,696,700.

Mr. RAMSEYER. Is that for the purpose of aiding exports?

Mr. McFADDEN. That is in the aid of exports. They have under negotiations loans to the cotton interests amounting to $15,225,000; to the wheat interests, $17,500,000; to the tobacco interests, $6,500,000; to canned fruits and vegetable interests, $550,000; and to railroad equipment interests, $1,000,000; or a total of $40,775,000 of loans under negotiations and subject to approval, making a grand total of $73,471,700.

Mr. FOCHT. By tobacco and cotton interests does the gentleman mean the growers and producers?

Mr. McFADDEN. No; these loans are made particularly under section 21 of the law to those engaged in the export trade.

Mr. FOCHT. Surely not to the Tobacco Trust or any institution of that kind?

Mr. McFADDEN. I could not say to whom the loans were made, but they were made for the purpose of exporting tobacco, and my recollection is that it was tobacco from the producing sections of Kentucky.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Were the negotiations carried on directly with the firms, or through the Federal reserve bank, or the local bank, or how were they carried on?

Mr. McFADDEN. Directly through the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. That has its headquarters here?

Mr. McFADDEN. That has its headquarters in Washington. They have in some instances worked through the Federal reserve banks in the consummation of the negotiations looking toward payment, and so forth.

Mr. ROSE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. McFADDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. ROSE. What kind of collateral is taken to secure a loan?

Mr. McFADDEN. The kind of collateral is pretty well set forth in section 21 of the War Finance Corporation act. It must be gilt edge.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. How much of the present working capital of the War Finance Corporation is Government funds?

Mr. McFADDEN. All but the surplus.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Have they not sold bonds?

Mr. McFADDEN. Two hundred million dollars' worth of bonds running less than a year have all been redeemed.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The War Finance Corporation has a credit of $400,000,000 in the Treasury and a working cash capital of $100,000,000 and the power to issue bonds?

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman is correct.

The War Finance Corporation has on hand a cash credit with the Treasurer of the United States of $403,827,771.29.

It has outstanding loans amounting to $99,903,839.39, of which $65,856,479.59 represent loans made under its war powers.

Its outstanding loans made under its export finance authority total $34,047,359.80.

Total loans heretofore made under its war and post-war powers aggregate $359,586,049.58.

The repayments aggregate $259,682,210.19.

Repayments of loans made under its export financing authority total $18,820,034.01.

Repayments of loans granted under the war power total $240,862,176.18.

Now, the War Finance Corporation, of course, has the right at the present time to call upon the Treasury of the United States for this total of $403,000,000. The Treasury of the United States would have to pay that if the War Finance Corporation should demand it at a moment's notice. Of course, the corporation will not make the demand until they find it absolutely necessary in order to function and meet its demands in an orderly manner.

Mr. EVANS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Certainly.

Mr. EVANS. What is the source from which the credit of $403,000,000 comes?

Mr. McFADDEN. The act of Congress of 1918 giving them $500,000,000 capital. The corporation is only using now $93,000,000 of the Government's money, and the balance of $403,000,000 is a credit subject to call.

Mr. EVANS. The present bill increases that, if necessary, to over a billion.

Mr. McFADDEN. In cash requirement?

Mr. EVANS. How does the cash come by which they can secure $1,000,000,000 credit?

Mr. McFADDEN. The War Finance Corporation has the power to issue its notes and securities and sell them in the open market to the amount of $3,000,000,000, but this bill reduces that authority to one billion and a half. The gentleman has in his mind that provision of the bill which allows them to advance to agricultural interests to the amount of $1,000,000,000; that can be provided out of the capital and sale of its own debentures and securities.

Mr. EVANS. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. McFADDEN. Certainly.

Mr. EVANS. In the Treasury statement there is $403,000,000 to the credit of the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. McFADDEN. It is a book credit to the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. EVANS. Is it subtracted from the currency in the Treasury?

Mr. McFADDEN. No; nor does it require any appropriation from Congress.

Mr. EVANS. It is carried on the books as a credit?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes. During the functioning of the corporation it did use the greater portion of the $500,000,000 capital, but during 1920 Secretary of the Treasury Houston caused the corporation to discontinue its operations, and there was a return to the Public Treasury of $380,000,000 of that capital which was used by the Treasury of the United States under authority given it for the reduction of the public debt, but it stands as a credit to the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will.

Mr. MILLER. What proportion of the $500,000,000 securities was sold in the public market?

Mr. McFADDEN. Two hundred million dollars.

Mr. MILLER. What was the rate?

Mr. McFADDEN. Five per cent, and they sold at 99½, I think.

Mr. MILLER. It drew 5 per cent interest?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. MILLER. What proportion is outstanding now?

Mr. McFADDEN. None of it; it has been entirely retired. So the assets of the corporation, in addition to its capital, are the earnings amounting to about $40,000,000. Now, very briefly, I want to refer to the bill and what it proposes to do.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Did the gentleman say that some railroad company was an applicant for a loan of a million dollars?

Mr. McFADDEN. No; I made no such statement.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. The War Finance Corporation has no power at the present time to make any loan to a railroad.

Mr. McFADDEN. No; although they did loan to some roads during the war period.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. It has been specifically held that they have no such authority now.

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes; and I understand there is pending before the gentleman's committee legislation which will enlarge the power and permit it to purchase from the Treasury and the Director General of Railroads certain railroad securities. In that connection I want to point out, because this other legislation is coming right along, the fact that this bill provides authority to the War Finance Corporation to issue $500,000,000 of securities, if necessary, to take care of the railroad finances in addition to the billion dollars which is required for advancing the agricultural interests provided for in this bill.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. Under the present law the War Finance Corporation can issue bonds to six times the capital stock, or $3,000,000,000?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. And you are repealing that law and by this act authorizing them to issue these bonds or debentures to the extent of three times the capital stock?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. So that if this becomes a law, as reported by the House, they can issue $1,500,000,000 of bonds.

Mr. MADDEN. In addition to their capital stock of $500,000,000.

Mr. DENISON. They are authorized by this act to issue credits to the agricultural or exporting interests to the amount of $1,000,000,000.

Mr. McFADDEN. That is correct.

Mr. DENISON. That will leave them a possible working capital of an additional billion dollars.

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. The indications are that at one time or another, as far as we can tell now, there will probably be $700,000,000 needed in connection with the pending railroad legislation.

Mr. McFADDEN. Director General Davis, of the Railroad Administration, says it will be under $500,000,000 in the statement which was sent up here in the memorandum in connection with the President's message on July 26.

Mr. DENISON. I believe there is a limitation in the bill.

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes; $500,000,000.

Mr. DENISON. I had in mind the amount of the securities which the Railroad Administration has on hand.

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes, Mr. Chairman, the Treasury now holds some $700,000,000 of bonds representing advances by the Government under various acts of Congress. This legislation is the result largely of the message of the President delivered to Congress on July 25, 1921, and from that message I quote as follows:

Pending proposals for relief and their discussion have already brought to the attention of Congress the very promising possibilities of broadening the powers of the War Finance Corporation for the further relief of agriculture and live-stock production. This corporation has proven itself so helpful in the relief thus far undertaken that I can not help but believe that its broadened powers as have been proposed to meet agricultural needs will enable it wholly to meet the nation-wide emergency. This is an impelling moral obligation to American farming in all its larger aspects, and it will be most gratifying to have your early sanction.

In the case of the railroads there is a moral and contractual obligation, and your favorable action is no less urgent and will no less appeal to public approval. Railway solvency and efficiency are essential to our healthful industrial, commercial, and agricultural life. Everything hinges on transportation.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there with reference to section 1?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman state to us if he can what powers the War Finance Corporation will have after the enactment of this legislation after July 1, 1922.

Mr. McFADDEN. It will have powers to renew loans for a period of three years, and it must be liquidated entirely within a period of 10 years. In that connection we have added a section to this bill which makes very clear the process of liquidation. The old act was not very clear in that particular. Had it been as clear as we have made it in this last section of this bill, when the Secretary of the Treasury in May, 1920, ordered the War Finance Corporation to cease operations, the money that he put into the public Treasury would have been used in cancellation of the stock which the Treasury held of the corporation. Therefore the capital stock at that time might have been reduced. Our amendment provides specifically that when the money is paid into the Treasury after July 1, 1922, a like amount of stock shall be canceled. That to my mind is one of the strong things about this bill. It provides definitely a date for the termination of this emergency legislation.

Mr. DENISON. I think that is a very wise provision, but I do not think the language used in the first section is very accurate in carrying out that intention.

Mr. McFADDEN. Has the gentleman a copy of the amended bill?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. Page 2, section 1, provides a definite date after which the corporation shall not exercise any of the powers conferred by the act, except such as are incidental to the liquidation of its assets and the winding up of its affairs, which shall be July 1, 1922.

Mr. DENISON. But it says "except as otherwise provided by this amendatory act," and that is the phrase that I could not understand. I was wondering if that would not authorize the performances of the privileges granted by this act after July 1, 1922.

Mr. McFADDEN. That applies only to renewals of advances.

Mr. WINGO. If the gentleman will permit, he suggested they might do business for 10 years, and while the gentleman is technically correct, I fear it would not convey to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON] a correct impression. If he will look at the bill he will find that they can not do any new business after July 1, 1922, either under the present existing section 21, or under the sections of this law.

Mr. DENISON. Where is that?

Mr. WINGO. That is in the second section of the bill, and it runs all the way through. The gentleman will find they can not issue notes after five years, and all their notes and bonds have to be matured not later than July 1, 1927.

Mr. McFADDEN. I find that I am using more time than I intended, and I will ask the indulgence of members of the committee not to interrupt me further. I think it is important for members of the committee to get, so far as possible, an understanding of this measure, and very briefly I want to refer minutely to the different sections of the bill.

Section 2 of the bill provides for the adding of the Secretary of Agriculture to the board of directors of the War Finance Corporation. My own personal opinion of that is that it is entirely unnecessary. It is a yielding to the popular clamor of having members of the Cabinet serve on practically all of these Government boards. There has been an insistent demand that the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of Commerce serve on the Federal Reserve Board. That agitation has been going on for some little time. Here it is represented in the demand for the Secretary of Agriculture to serve on the War Finance Board. The managing director of the War Finance Corporation told the committee that frequently in the discharge of their duties it is necessary for them to have four and five meetings of the board a day; that as fast as the demands come in they try to act promptly, appreciating the great need of the people who are engaged in the various lines of industry. They have available for the uses of the corporation all of the data which the Secretary of Agriculture has, and the Director of the War Finance Corporation believes it is unnecessary, and I believe it is unnecessary, and I think many members of the committee feel the same way. The members of the Cabinet are all busy men, and without doubt it would require his substituting some subordinate to sit in the meeting of the War Finance Corporation and keep him advised.

Section 22 adds a new section to the War Finance Corporation act. The present authority given under section 1 probably gives the War Finance Corporation broader powers than they are given under this bill.

And it seems to me this does provide a manner in which relief can be furnished to certain agricultural interests which are not now being relieved; and as we progress with the bill I am going to suggest two or three additional amendments which have not been approved by the committee because it has not been together since the reporting of the bill, but which, I believe, will answer many of the criticisms which are being brought forward as regards the extension of credits to the producers of agricultural products in the United States. I will say to the gentlemen here that I have an amendment here which, I believe, will give that additional relief which the agricultural interests and cattle interests of the country feel they are entitled to, not fully covered in the Senate bill.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the gentleman yield for a short question right there?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will it be necessary for another committee further to amend this in order to reach the railroad situation?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will say to the gentleman that the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce are now working on the bill introduced by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WINSLOW], which provides necessary relief for the financing of the railroads.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. It is a part of this eventually?

Mr. McFADDEN. It is an amendment to the war finance law creating section 22 (a), while this bill creates section 22 (b).

Mr. REED of West Virginia. When does the gentleman—

Mr. McFADDEN. In a moment. I would like, if I had time, to read a letter which I have here from the Secretary of the Treasury, which covers that phase of the legislation, but, owing to the limited amount of time I have, I am compelled to insert this in the RECORD, and I would like to have it go in at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks by inserting the matter indicated at this point. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The letter is as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, August 9, 1921.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I received your letter of July 29, 1921, with the inclosed copy of H. R. 7994, being the bill introduced by Mr. WINSLOW to amend the transportation act, 1920, and the War Finance Corporation act in order to provide for the financing of settlements between the Government and the railroads on account of Federal control. As you know, the bill is intended to carry out the recommendations made by the President in his message of July 26, 1921, a copy of which, together with the accompanying statement from the Director General of Railroads, is inclosed herewith for your convenient reference. The director general's statement explains the existing state of the accounts between the Government and the railroads as to matters growing out of Federal control, and my understanding is that the total amount of obligations on account of additions and betterments which it is proposed to fund if the pending legislation is adopted will not exceed $500,000,000. The bill does not involve any new advances to the railroads, but it does propose a financial plan under which it would be possible for the Government to fund already existing indebtedness owing by the railroads to the Government on account of additions and betterments during Federal control, which in ordinary circumstances would have been treated by the railroads as capital expenditure and financed by the sale of securities rather than out of current revenues.

The War Finance Corporation has no available funds at the present time except a credit balance of about $400,000,000 with the Treasurer of the United States. Withdrawals by the War Finance Corporation would therefore involve cash expenditures by the Treasury, but it is the understanding between the War Finance Corporation and the Treasury that the corporation will finance its proposed purchases from the Director General of Railroads by the sale of railroad securities to the public, or, if necessary, by the sale of the corporation's own bonds to the public. Under this plan withdrawals by the War Finance Corporation would result temporarily in a corresponding draft on the Treasury, but the balance would be replenished by the deposit of proceeds of sale of railroad securities or the corporation's own bonds. I understand that the railroad securities which it is proposed that the War Finance Corporation purchase from the Director General of Railroads and subsequently sell to the public would consist not only of securities resulting from the funding of additions and betterments but also railroad securities already acquired by the Director General of Railroads under authority of the Federal control act, the act approved November 19, 1919, which provides for the reimbursement of the United States for equipment, and section 207 of the transportation act as amended. For your information in this connection I inclose a copy of the public debt statement for May 31, 1921, on the back of which will be found a statement of railroad securities owned by the United States Government. The bill itself limits the amount of securities which the corporation may purchase to an aggregate purchase price not exceeding $500,000,000.

I believe that in the circumstances the bill offers a helpful and practicable plan for financing the settlement of matters growing out of Federal control, and I hope that it may have the early and favorable consideration of Congress.

Very truly, yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary.

Hon. LOUIS T. McFADDEN,
Chairman Committee on Banking and Currency,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Will the gentleman care to take the time to read the amendments he proposes to introduce, so that the committee may have the benefit of it?

Mr. McFADDEN. I shall be very glad to do it.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the gentleman complete my inquiry? You have reduced the gross business by 50 per cent that this corporation may be doing?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will that cover the railroad activities contemplated?

Mr. McFADDEN. Contemplated by the railroad bill authorization is $500,000,000. This bill carries an authorization of a billion and a half dollars. When the bill came over from the Senate it had $500,000,000 additional, or $2,000,000,000, and we struck that out, feeling that it was not necessary to appropriate more money for the uses of these activities than they had the right to expend. Now, the amendments which I am going to suggest later on are these, and if those of you who have the bill will turn to page 2, line 6, I will mention these amendments so you will have them before you. On page 2, line 6, strike out the word "amendatory." That is simply a technical amendment. Page 5, line 13, section 24, after the word "States," insert a comma and the words "or to any corporation, association, or producers in the United States." That is the relief to which I have just referred, and a corresponding amendment will be made to conform to that in other parts of the bill where that is referred to, and I believe there will be one or two other amendments made which will be acceptable to the committee which will limit some advances made to other corporations. Now, under that section the War Finance Corporation is authorized to make advances to dealers engaged in the export business, and to banks and financial institutions, and under section 24 we provide this other amendment which will permit advances to be made to those engaged in production, such as in the producing sections of the country of cotton and the cattle-growing interests.

These loans can be made in exceptional cases to those associations formed for the purpose of financing those operations or through the banks. And I will say we struck out of the Senate bill that provision which permitted loans to be made to people outside of the United States. Our reason for doing that was prompted largely by the fact that the whole situation in regard to international trade has been changed. For instance, years ago the people from the mills in Manchester, England, and continental Europe practically all came to the United States once or twice a year to make purchases of supplies of cotton to run them the whole year, and they would make their financial arrangements through their banks in their own countries. That situation has changed now and the market for our cotton goes on by these purchasers coming here and buying from time to time, from hand to mouth, and settling for their purchases. This requires us to furnish financial arrangements for holding the cotton and other materials which we propose to export to the other side. They can not afford to make arrangements on the other side now because of the fluctuations of the price and the uncertainty which exists in regard to banking facilities, and in addition they can not afford to take the chance of a sudden change in the rate of exchange, so we felt it was a good deal better for us to permit our credit to be used in this country for the purpose of assisting our own people who are engaged in production and the export trade than to deliver it to the foreigners, who would then use our credit facilities to set the price which they will pay us for our product. But we believed if we financed American interests they will get nearer what they ought to get for their products than to give the advantage to the foreigner.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. While the gentleman is on this section I would like to have him explain to us who are not members of the committee why the Senate amendment was stricken from the bill; that is, that part which authorized the War Finance Corporation to purchase $200,000,000 worth of bonds from the bond loans.

Mr. McFADDEN. I would be glad to explain that to the gentleman.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. That is section 25.

Mr. McFADDEN. The committee did strike out section 25 from the bill because they felt it was unnecessary in this class of legislation to have that kind of authority. Congress has just recently given authority to the Federal Farm Loan Board to call upon the Treasury of the United States to furnish working capital up to $50,000,000, which is the amount of money which the Federal farm loan system has told Congress they should have in order to function properly, to take mortgages to sell to the investing public. I have in that connection here a letter from the Farm Loan Board which I would like to have read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise the gentleman that he has used an additional 10 minutes.

Mr. McFADDEN. Very well. I would like to have this letter read in my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the letter will be read.

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
FEDERAL FARM LOAN BUREAU,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

DEAR CHAIRMAN McFADDEN: In response to telephone conversation this morning, asking for an expression from the Farm Loan Board as to the provision in S. 1915 authorizing the extension of certain credits to the Federal land banks by the War Finance Corporation and the purchase by that corporation under conditions therein stated of Federal farm loan bonds, permit me to state: The Farm Loan Board is on record in a hearing before your committee and elsewhere as believing that the enlargement of the depository privilege given by the Curtis-Nelson bill is the maximum of Government support to which the Federal land banks having already free Government capital and absolute tax exemption are reasonably entitled. To that position we adhere.

That position is based upon the theory that the farm loan system is intended to be a self-sustaining and self-operating branch of our financial organization, and the board has no doubt that with the depository privilege the system will meet this anticipation. Of course it can not, as was stated to your committee, expect to take over all of the farm mortgage business of the country in a single year, as that, if it were desirable, would be a physical impossibility; but it is capable as now equipped of steady and continuous operation.

During the month of July it placed $9,000,000 in farm mortgages, during the present month it will place in excess of $12,000,000, and this will be continued and probably increased during September and October, with funds now available—and the board sees no reason why this rate of activity shall not permanently continue. This rate of progress, gratifying as it is, is not at all commensurate with the extraordinary demand on the system at this time. This demand we believe to be extraordinary and arising from three distinct causes:

First. The 14 months of suspension by the banks owing to litigation.

Second. The general stringency in the money market and a lack of funds available for long-time mortgage credit.

Third. The fact that the Federal land banks are loaning money on more favorable terms and at a rate of interest averaging 2 per cent per annum less than that charged by other farm mortgage organizations.

This much for the provision upon the premises stated, and upon the theory that it is contemplated that the War Finance Corporation would use its capital provided by the Federal Treasury for the purchase of such farm loan bonds as it might acquire. If it is to be anticipated that the Finance Corporation shall acquire funds for the purposes stated by the sale of its own bonds, then the board ventures the suggestion that it sees no reason for imposing this task upon the Finance Corporation which must sell its bonds on the open market precisely as the Federal land banks do.

If it be the policy of Congress to place the Government in the farm loan business and provide funds for that enterprise from the Public Treasury, that is entirely a question for Congress, but if such be the congressional desire, it should be clearly expressed and the farm loan system should be remodeled accordingly that those entrusted with its administration may proceed in harmony with such desire.

Aside from the proposition as stated, the board is forced to the conclusion that even if the assistance contemplated should be the policy of Congress, the proposed measure does not afford it in a manner of which the Federal land banks could with prudence avail themselves. The first provision is that of a direct loan to the banks at a rate of interest not exceeding their loaning rate. Certainly no prudent business man would expect a Federal land bank to borrow money on a short-time note bearing a rate of interest equal to its loaning rate and use that money to make 20 and 30 year farm mortgage loans.

The second provision is for the purchase of farm loan bonds without mention of rate, such bonds to mature within five years. The same objection suggested above would apply to the issue of a 5-year bond. Manifestly such a bond could not be paid from the proceeds of a 20 or 30 year loan, and the banks would find themselves under the necessity of refunding at the end of that period, and the fact that these banks had out $200,000,000 of paper which they must pay in five years, without a corresponding accrual, would, in the judgment of the board, detract from their credit in the general market and interfere with their stable and orderly operation much beyond the value of any immediate impetus.

For the reasons stated the board is unable to conclude that the proposed measure would helpfully facilitate the operations of the farm loan system or be of any permanent benefit to the agricultural interests of the country.

In conclusion permit me to urgently suggest that in this time of stress patience, sound judgment, and courage are essential on the part of all of the friends of the farm loan system lest in our anxiety for greater accomplishments we "kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

Respectfully, yours,

CHAS. G. LOBDELL,
Farm Loan Commissioner.

Hon. L. T. McFADDEN,
Chairman Banking and Currency Committee,
House of Representatives.

Mr. RANKIN. What was the object in reducing the money available under this law 50 per cent?

Mr. McFADDEN. The reason the bill was cut down from some $3,000,000,000, as the gentleman suggests, is that there is provided in this bill that there is no need of giving authorization for more than appropriated, namely, $1,000,000,000 to the agricultural interests, and not to exceed $500,000,000 to the railroad companies.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. The gentleman said "appropriation." It is an authorization for the issuance of bonds rather than an appropriation?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes; and if the corporation sells the bonds that are now in the Treasury of the United States they may never issue any war finance bonds for the use of the railroads at all.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Why do you limit it to associations rather than making it to the producer himself?

Mr. McFADDEN. We felt it was practically an impossible proposition for the War Finance Corporation to make advances direct to the producers as individuals.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. You do it to dealers.

Mr. McFADDEN. To dealers in exports.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. No; not dealers in exports, but dealers in all of these products.

Mr. McFADDEN. They are supposed to be much larger aggregations of business than the average dealer. I will say that in the bill originally we did not attempt to extend it that far, but we have tried to go just as far as we can go for the relief of the individual producer.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CARTER. Is not one of the reasons the gentleman did that on account of the additional security that might come about by an association rather than an individual?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes. It will be impossible for the War Finance Corporation to set up machinery and meet demands now for the agricultural interests if they make loans to the individual producers.

Mr. CARTER. I notice that in the previous section, No. 22 of this bill, it provides to take care of conditions that have grown out of the war or out of the disruption of foreign trade created by the war, and that ordinary banking facilities could not handle. As a matter of fact, if the Reserve Bank Board would reduce the rate of interest and stop the restriction of credits, which, it seems to me, has run riot, would not that take care of a large part of this rather than to pass this special bill for it?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will say to the gentleman in that connection that the Federal reserve system has increased its loans to the agricultural interests of the country. Recent statistics prove that. There is something to what the gentleman says. There might be considerable relief through more favorable loaning facilities, but they, the Federal reserve banks, can not make these loans direct to the individuals. They must make them through the member banks, and if the banks avail themselves of the privilege of rediscounting, the Federal reserve banks are helpless.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman remembers that last fall the Federal board started on a program of deflation, which was perhaps correct at that time, but that program seems to still be going on, and so far as my part of the country is concerned, there has been no reduction whatever in the rediscount rate.

Mr. McFADDEN. I will say to the gentleman in that connection, that I believe the business interests of the country now should have the benefit of the lowest possible rates. I do feel, however, that the Federal reserve system should restrict the credit extended so far as they can do it, or the Federal reserve banks should, to absolutely necessary operations and not to speculators.

In section 26 the committee saw fit to limit these advances to reputable institutions, and we provided a clause:

Incorporated under the laws of any State or of the United States.

We felt that was a necessary safeguard.

Now, as regards section 28, there has been a great deal of discussion in regard to that, and I am going to say to the committee here that at the proper time I am going to suggest an amendment to the committee amendment, modifying that amendment somewhat, by striking out, on page 10, after the word "advance," in line 1, all of that line, and all of the other lines down to and including line 5. That, I believe, will answer the objection of those who feel that we were putting an instrument in the hands of the banks where they could fleece operators. Of course, there was no intention on the part of the committee to do anything like that. There are certain contingencies where a bank should have additional compensation, because there are great risks involved frequently, and they should be paid an additional amount. They should also have the right occasionally to make an exchange charge, especially on this export business where great risks are entailed.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. I will.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I understood the gentleman to say that he proposed to strike out all after the word "advance," in line 1, and down to and including line 5, on page 10?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Why does the gentleman propose to leave in lines 6, 7, 8, and 9? What is the object of putting that particular language in the bill if the other is stricken out?

Mr. McFADDEN. That has to do with international trade. There is a great risk involved in that, and at times it is only right that the bank making advances should have the right to make reasonable arrangements and receive a reasonable compensation.

I want to call attention to the last section of this bill.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Would not that allow the bank to charge anything that it pleased, make an unlimited charge?

Mr. McFADDEN. The committee did not so construe it.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Well, but there is no limit as to what the commission may be.

Mr. McFADDEN. It says that no rate in excess of 2 per cent per annum.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes; but if you leave in the words in lines 6, 7, 8, and 9, on page 10, it expressly provides that that limitation shall not hold in certain cases. That means the bank shall determine what the extra charge shall be.

Mr. McFADDEN. To a certain extent I think it desirable that the War Finance Corporation law should leave some latitude in that respect.

Section 15 provides for the liquidation of this corporation, beginning on July 1, 1922. The committee felt we should have some definite limit fixed, and that when the concern begins to liquidate it should go along in an orderly manner. That is the section which provides when the money is returned to the Treasury a like amount of stock shall be canceled. I believe it assures us beyond all question that when this corporation does cease functioning in 1922 and begins to liquidate we will be at the end of this kind of legislation. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has consumed 48 minutes. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Wingo] is recognized for two hours.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the gentlemen who are opposed to the bill are entitled to recognition. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield some time to those who are opposed to the bill?

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. DALE].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Vermont is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. DALE. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, you recall very well in the spring of 1918 the conditions that existed in this country. The German Army had broken through the western front, and we were under the greatest stress—I should say, the strain of doubt and perplexity to the limit—at that time of any during the war; and under these unprecedented conditions Congress passed an act which required legislators to abandon common lines of reasoning and to think only of using every resource—even the Treasury of the United States—to spur producers in this country to put out their products. What for? For national defense, for national security, to prosecute the war.

That is all we did it for. Congress put together what was intended to be merely the machinery to make loans to concerns whose products contributed to the prosecution of the war. It was a corporation furnished from the Treasury of the United States, if it were necessary, with $500,000,000 in capital stock, with the authority to issue its bonds, as the chairman of the committee has told you, to the limit of $4,000,000,000—tax-exempt bonds. In fact, it was a temporary framework with which to do what could not be performed by a substantial structure—a corporation to meet in time of war what the banks would not meet—and it was composed, as you know, of the Secretary of the Treasury and four others. It was empowered and authorized to advance on notes of banks, bankers, and trust companies which would loan to any firm, corporation, or person whose operations were necessary or contributory to the prosecution of the war, and even under these circumstances the value of the collateral to these loans was restricted to 75 per cent of its face value, and we specifically restricted the time when this extraordinary corporation should stop operations and begin to liquidate to six months after the President proclaimed the end of the war.

Now, when the distinguished leader of the Democratic side [Mr. KIRCHIN] at that time presented this kind of legislation, even for that purpose in time of war, he said it was so radical, so unprecedented, so economically revolutionary that the mind of even the most radical would hesitate to indorse it. Nobody took issue with him on his statement. It was given general reiteration at the time.

There were two predictions made respecting that bill, three and a half years ago, to which I want to call your attention to-day. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] said "It will not end with the conclusion of the war. It will come up a year after the conclusion of the war. It is dangerous," and so forth, and so on. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] said that in his candid opinion the real purpose of the bill was ultimately to furnish money to railroads. That is what he said about it three and one-half years ago.

Well, this War Finance Corporation fulfilled its mission, and if it had stopped when it was intended that it should stop, though extraordinary, it would have proved valuable as a war auxiliary. But when that time came Congress had become somewhat accustomed to this economically revolutionary method of raising money, and we extended the time, and we empowered and authorized the corporation to make advances to any firm or corporation engaged in the business in the United States of exporting domestic products who were unable to obtain funds upon reasonable terms through banking channels, or to any bank, banker, or trust company who loaned funds to those concerns.

What was the excuse? Not the excuse that was submitted for creating this abnormal institution in the first place, namely, the prosecution of the war. No. We had long since passed that necessity by reason of our Army, victoriously. It was in order to promote commerce with foreign nations through the extension of credits. See how we had gotten away from our original purpose. And mark me, gentlemen, there lies the danger to-day. Not half so much is it by the inflation of currency as by the inflation of credit that this Nation is imperiled at the present time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DALE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. I agree with the gentleman in his statement. I wish to call his attention to this fact—

Mr. DALE. I hope the gentleman will be brief.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. That there is pending another bill for the War Finance Corporation—

Mr. DALE. Yes, I know; I am coming to that. I can not yield. When, with our magnificent Federal reserve banking system—

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Will not the gentleman yield?

Mr. DALE. No; I can not yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. DALE. When, with our new and powerful Federal land bank system, when with all other kinds of financial institutions, you have to empower a corporation to advance funds furnished by the National Treasury to bankers, firms, corporations, and associations who can not obtain them through any banking channels, in order to do what? To inflate credit. There, I say, lies the danger. It may be avoided. It may be one or two or three years before we come to it, but the risk is beyond the taking by a safe pilot.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] said this bill would come up a year after the war to trouble us. A year after the war? Two years and more after the war, after any demand for the prosecution of the war, by joint resolution this Congress revives, rehabilitates the bill.

Notice the language. The purposes of the bill had all been fulfilled—the original purposes. They were all completed. This resolution directs the Secretary of the Treasury and the members of the corporation to revive its activities that it may at once be rehabilitated, instead of expiring six months after the war; to revive and rehabilitate it two years and more after the war, and for what purpose? For one never contemplated, far more radical and revolutionary than the prosecution of the war.

Now, almost three years after the war, we come here to revive and rehabilitate this old procedure again. What is the purpose of this new and extended power that is being asked for? Whenever, in the opinion of the directors, conditions arising out of the war—and all financial conditions now where there is perplexity have arisen out of the war, of course—when such conditions have resulted or when they may result, when it is even imagined that they are coming, and that an abnormal surplus has accumulated of any staple agricultural product in the United States, or there is a lack of a market for the same even, what then? And the ordinary facilities are inadequate—that is, the banking facilities, of course—to enable producers or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold in an orderly manner; then this corporation is thereupon empowered to make advances to any firm, corporation, and so on. Gentlemen, look at it. That is the limit of loose grammatical construction and unbiased authority. When dealers can not sell in an ordinary orderly manner—what does that mean? When they can not sell with gentility? When they can not sell without a riot? Is that what it means? No; that is the only language that they could devise to cover up the purpose of it. When they can not get their price! That is the reason for it; and when by any banking methods they can not do that and can not hold their products until they can do it, then the money to enable them to do it shall be furnished by the Treasury of the United States out of taxes paid by men in other lines of business until they can get their price.

What security is given for this? Bonds? No. Notes, full, adequate, they say; notes indorsed, guaranteed by pledge or otherwise, any old way. Backed by collateral taken at 75 per cent as in the original act? No; face value. Again, under this bill the finance corporation may purchase notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or other instruments of indebtedness, secured by chattel mortgages, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, or other instruments in writing conveying title to agricultural products, including live stock. The doors are wide open. The Treasury of the United States is financing a concern to go into the business of taking chattel mortgages on hogs.

Mr. WINGO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DALE. No; I will have to finish this.

Mr. WINGO. Where in the bill do the words "face value" appear? They are not there.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. DALE. Ah, but there is a limit here. They say that under this bill you can use for this purpose only $1,000,000,000. It is limited to $1,000,000,000 for the preceding purposes; and this is what we have come to since the days when men who were accustomed to debate in this House said they had to forget all normal reasoning in order to vote for this bill in its original form when its sole purpose was to prosecute the war, a purpose now wholly submerged in these other purposes. But you are going to pass this bill. I know by the temper of this House that you are going to pass it. And then what are you going to do? Why, in a few days, having so completely met the prediction of the gentleman from Ohio, you are going to meet the prediction of the gentleman from Michigan when the bill comes in from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with this provision: The War Finance Corporation act is further amended, and so forth and so forth, so that the corporation will be empowered to purchase railroad bonds or notes or other securities at an aggregate purchase price not to exceed $500,000,000. In that way you are going to carry out the second prediction.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. That was what I wished to call attention to.

Mr. DALE. I knew that was what the gentleman referred to. Now, gentlemen, I realize that we are going through that period of business depression which always follows war, and that you hope by this extraordinary procedure to extend credit from the National Treasury to pass more securely this critical time, but the method adopted is so out of harmony with my ideas of government and finance that I can not bring myself to its indorsement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Just one word there. The Government now has $700,000,000 worth of securities in these railroads that it can not realize upon at all.

Mr. DALE. I understand that.

Mr. ARENTZ. Will the gentleman from Mississippi be perfectly willing to give the railroads $500,000,000 in cash?

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. No, sir.

Mr. ARENTZ. Or have a deficit and increased taxes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. No; I would not give them a penny.

Mr. DALE. This fact is apparent, gentlemen. We must continue to furnish credit in this way to the railroads, to manufacturers, to producers, to firms, to individuals, as a part of our Government policy, or before long we must put a complete check on this procedure which we have now been following and extending for more than three years. I can not yet think it probable that we shall adopt such a policy as this as a permanent part of our financial system, but we have gone so far in that direction that it will take years, and almost impossible endeavor to get back to sound principles of finance. Some time conditions will have to become adjusted by natural, regular, permanent principles. In the adjustment after a great crisis a banking system may be strained to its limit. Concerns and individuals may meet loss and perhaps some of them fail, but there is one institution back of them all that you must maintain, and that is the Treasury of the United States. That should be kept distinct and inviolate from individual business. To break the Treasury down too far in this way invites discontent, revolution, disaster. If you are going toward a panic now you can not check it by dragging the Federal Treasury into the mess. Perhaps the financial and transportation problems are greater than they have ever been before in this country.

If so, they can not be met by any artificial system resting on the Public Treasury to inflate credits. You can not meet them that way. They can be successfully met only by laying aside all paternalistic notions and all partisan influences and going straight at them in the old sound American fashion. That is the only way you can meet that condition if it exists. [Applause.]

Moreover, as suggested by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] a little while ago, if we spent more time seeing what we could do with the Federal reserve system it could meet the conditions to-day, the finest system in all the world as a banking system. If the loans to be made by the War Finance Corporation are not absolutely good, it is most iniquitous to use it for the proposed purpose, and if they are absolutely good there are banking methods by which they can be taken care of.

There is plenty of money available for speculation. If we would put a little less thought on how we can make certain interests think we are attempting to aid them by artificial methods and a little more energy into improving our Federal reserve system to meet present conditions, it would be more reasonable and more in line with common duty.

Now, because I consider the proposed legislation so vital in its nature, because I am so deeply convinced that it is not based on sound judgment and may lead to deplorable results, I venture to dissent from the general opinion of the eminent financiers, my associates on the banking and Currency Committee, and express my opposition to the granting of longer life and broader powers to this abnormal corporation that was created solely for the purpose of meeting the stress of war. [Applause.]

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman, other gentlemen who have preceded me in this debate have explained the important details of the bill, and so I will not go over these same matters again, but will address my remarks more particularly to the general purposes which the bill is intended to accomplish and the reasons why its enactment appears necessary at this time. In considering how to deal with a situation such as the country is wrestling with at the present time it is important to inquire (1) what is it? (2) why is it? (3) what can be done about it?

Now, what is this situation we are trying to remedy? The disturbed economic conditions following the war have dislocated the ordinary customs and practices heretofore prevailing in our export trade, and instead of these exports flowing freely during the usual marketing season, they now drag through the entire period of 12 months. The reason for it is that our foreign customers are only able to buy as they can arrange credits for their purchases, and a large amount of this arranging for cash or credit has to be done in the United States. Such was not the case prior to the war. This new situation which we face makes it necessary that either the producer must hold back a large part of his crop and not place it on the market during the usual marketing season, or the middleman, who purchases it from him, must hold it back, and in either event the holder of these products must be financed to enable him to do it. The failure to provide adequate financial assistance in either case results disastrously to the market. If the producer is unable to get adequate help he must dump his crop on the market regardless of price, or if the middleman is also the holder and is unable to arrange for adequate finance, he suffers like consequence. If, however, both the producer and the middleman have assurance that adequate finances will be furnished upon fair and satisfactory terms as to security and time of payment, then fear and panic is banished from the market and orderly marketing can proceed with the law of supply and demand governing the price.

The producers of our great staple agricultural crops, including live stock, are in no condition to stand any further disastrous declines in their prices, and certainly such further declines are a menacing prospect if no method is provided for taking care of surplus until it is needed in the ordinary channels of consumption. These staple crops, including live stock, have already been flattened out by deflation about all they can stand. Take cotton—and I speak of cotton not because I am asking any special favors for it but because I know more about that crop than possibly any other agricultural product. I read from the August, 1921, bulletin issued by the National City Bank of New York City. It says:

Only a year ago, July 22, 1920, spot cotton sold in New York at 43.75 cents per pound. In June of this year the price had dropped to the low market of 10.85, or to less than 25 per cent of last summer's level.

Think of it, a great basic industry suffering a deflation of 75 per cent in its price during a period of 12 months. The wonder to me is not that there is financial distress in the South but that anybody at all is left solvent. This precipitate decline would have been bad enough even if all other goods and commodities and services had declined in equal proportion with it, for even then the cotton farmer and the local merchant would have had to pay debts contracted when cotton was 40 cents per pound, but, as a matter of fact, many other things have not declined in proportion, and so the cotton farmer not only has to take his bale of cotton which was deflated 75 per cent in value in so short a time and pay debts with it contracted when cotton was selling at 40 cents per pound, but he must also take it and purchase what few things he is able to buy at a much higher general level than he is receiving for his own product. What other industry could have withstood such a radical deflation as has overtaken farming within so short a time? None that I know of. Take the railroad industry. Deflate its rates 75 per cent in 12 months, and there probably would not be a railroad in the United States left out of the hands of a receiver.

Deflate steel prices 75 per cent in 12 months, and the sheriff will tack up an insolvent notice in front of the door of every steel mill in the United States. Deflate the pay roll of railroad labor 75 per cent in 12 months, and I would not like to think what would happen. We are having trouble enough as it is to deflate the small 12 per cent reduction in wages which the Railroad Labor Board ordered in July, 1921. Referendums have been taken as to whether the employees would strike, and all that kind of business.

Then how does it happen that the farmers have been able to stand such a heavy and rapid deflation without all having to go into bankruptcy? The only explanation that I can see is that the farmers of the United States, taken as a whole, run their business on capital 85 per cent of which they furnish themselves, and only about 15 per cent of which they borrow. Therefore in this time of stress they are simply having to draw on their capital either in the form of cash or putting it up for credit to make up the deficit resulting from loss in the cost of production. This condition presents a dangerous situation, and it is the duty of the Government to do everything that it reasonably can to solve the difficulty.

Now, I have briefly discussed "what" the situation is. As to the "why" of it, there is a wide difference of opinion. Some attribute it to the so-called deflation policies of the Federal Reserve Board set in motion in 1920. Others attribute it to chaotic financial conditions in Europe attended by violent disturbances in exchange rates. Still others attribute a large part of the depression to the buyers' strike here in the United States, while yet others attribute it to all of these causes combined, but I do not consider it very important at this time that we debate the causes. The important thing is: What can be done about it? This bill represents one step in an effort to solve the problem. Now, let us thoroughly understand at the outset that the object of this bill is not to encourage holding for speculative purposes. The holding of a commodity for orderly marketing is not speculation, and whoever denominates it so shows his ignorance.

I realize perfectly well that crops produced in one year should be sold for consumption during that year, unless there is more than the ordinary amount of surplus, in which case arrangements should be made to finance it, either in the hands of the producer or the dealer. It is dangerous by any artificial process to hold back products that should be consumed in any one year and carry them over into another year, for, like water piling up behind a dam, when they are released great damage may result. This bill recognizes that truth and provides that these loans and advances which are authorized to firms dealing in or marketing agricultural products or to associations of producers of such crops or to banks and bankers who have made advances for such productive purposes shall not be made for a longer period than 12 months. In other words, the important purpose of the bill is to help out a moving movement. It is not a holding movement that the farmer wants. He is fed up on that. When he produces commodities he wants to sell them during the course of the marketing season, and, for the most part, he will sell them if he can get the cost of production and a fair margin of profit. We should never lose sight of the fact that it is the movement of commodities and the exchange of goods which starts the wheels of commerce to moving, and is not the piling of them up in warehouses like piling up water behind a dam? Of course, the bill does recognize that all these staple agricultural products, including live stock, can not be marketed in one month or two months, and so it very wisely provides for financial assistance in orderly marketing, but let no one get the impression that the object of this bill is to merely start a holding movement. It has no such purpose, and I have no idea that the managers of the War Finance Corporation will allow it to be so used. The purpose of the bill is to help get these products in the channels of commerce and to countries where they are most needed and where the fairest and best price can be obtained.

Some gentlemen may hesitate to support this bill upon the ground that it is paternalistic, and it must be admitted that it is paternalistic in the sense that the capital stock of the War Finance Corporation is owned by the United States Government. But if the Government can aid these industries and agriculture and live stock to get back upon their feet again by resort to a method no more paternalistic than this, we had far better do it than to risk the danger of the kind of paternalistic and socialistic legislation which might follow as a consequence of letting the situation drift and go from bad to worse. [Applause.]

Now, it is quite clear to me that there is one of three things which must happen before we can possibly have any return to normal prosperity in this country, and these things are: (1) Either farm products must advance to the present level of other goods, commodities, and services; or (2) these other goods, commodities, and services must be deflated to the low level of farm products; or (3) they both must approach each other, so as to reach a more intermediate level, farm products advancing from their present low levels and manufactured goods and wages and services declining wherever they are now too high.

Now, the first of these things which I have mentioned will not likely take place. Farm products will not likely again in this generation advance to the high peak which they reached during the war. Conditions which brought about such a world demand, when 20,000,000 or 30,000,000 men were under arms and taken out of the channels of production, are not likely to occur again within the lifetime of the present generation. But it is within the range of possibilities that the second thing which I mentioned might happen, but it would be very unfortunate for the country if it did happen. If those in financial and Government authority make no effort to relieve the present situation along sane and proper lines, then it is very probable that there will be little or no advance in price of farm products. In fact, with a stagnated market, they might go very much lower. If such a thing does happen, then it is very certain that manufactured goods and services and wages will go right on down to the low level of farm products, in which case it would seem we would be in for a long period of business depression. The reason that I say we would be in for a long period of business depression under such circumstances is because of the fact that the country is heavily in debt. These debts were contracted when cotton was 40 cents per pound and wheat $2.50 per bushel and hogs 16 and 18 cents per pound, and other prices in proportion, and during this same time when the people were contracting their private debts the Government, under the stress of war expenses, contracted debts aggregating $25,000,000,000. The annual interest on said indebtedness amounts to more than $1,000,000,000. We must arrange to pay that amount every year, and also create a sinking fund of about $500,000,000 per year in order that the debt may be retired within a reasonable term of years. Now, if all of these debts, both governmental and private, have got to be paid in an appreciated dollar, which must be raised by the sale of depreciated farm products and manufactured goods, then the country is in for a period of hard times, and there is no telling how long the depression will last. I received a letter from a country banker of mine, Mr. Gibbons Poteet, cashier of the First National Bank at Roxton, Tex., in which he very clearly stated the situation to which I have just referred. In his letter, among other things, Mr. Poteet said:

We can not change the value of the dollar from the 40-cent dollar to a 100-cent dollar or a 150-cent dollar within a space of 12 or 18 months without tearing the business machine all to pieces. If it were only a matter of a few speculators that took big chances and got caught, it would not make so much difference; or if it were only a matter of a few thousand foolish people who strained their credit too far for foolishness and got caught, it would not matter. But the fact is that we, the people, issued all the billions of bonds and flooded the country with money and credit and we caused inflation. We did it, and the people had to do business on that basis. They couldn't help it. Naturally their bills and debts of every kind were very high. Those debts are still unpaid. The grand total is enormous and every single debt carried over has been doubled—yes; more than doubled. I will pause here long enough to remark that this statement is undoubtedly correct as to the man who produces and sells the commodities which have suffered such a heavy decline in price. Of course, it would not work out that way to the man who has a fixed income either from salary, wages, or investment.

Many billions of these bonds were paid for with 40-cent dollars. Now we are letting things run so that we are asked to pay them back in great big dollars. It does not make any difference how much the people "produce" if you call a bale of cotton $40 to $50 and a cow $25 to $30 and corn 30 to 40 cents a bushel and wool 15 to 20 cents a pound; the sum total of all these products will not add up enough to pay all these doubled debts. If it would work, it would be all right; but the trouble is, I am much afraid it will not work. Why, good gosh, man, the total value of all the farms in the United States, according to the census of 1920, the land and improvements and farm property, was estimated on the January, 1920, basis of prices at $77,000,000,000. If a census were taken now and the land were estimated at what would be considered a fair present-day valuation, you would cut the total about one-half, and you would have the total value of all farms, including improvements and farm property, not very far from the aggregate of the national debt. Then add to the national debt all the State and municipal and corporate debts, and then the individual debts, then you will have some debt that the people of this Nation owe, and the biggest part of all these debts were contracted on the 40 or 50 cent dollar. Is it right, then, that we deflate and contract till we try to force these debts paid back in dollars worth two to three times what the dollars that went into the debt were worth?

Mr. Poteet calls attention to a very grave and important phase of the situation, and it is one to which Congress and our administration leaders should give heed. If we did not owe all of these debts, public and private, the harm which would result from a general deflation of all prices, wages, salaries, and commodities to the present low level of farm products would probably not be so serious, provided, of course, the deflation is carried clear on down the line and is made to apply equally to all.

But in view of the heavy indebtedness which the people owe, both privately and through their Government, it is the part of wisdom, if it is possible to do so, to bring all these prices to a more intermediate level. That would mean that the prices of farm products would have to be lifted out of the slough of despond in which they are now mired down and get them on a level where they will pay the cost of production and yield a fair profit to the producer. On the other hand, where goods and services and wages are still on the inflated war basis, they must come down to a more intermediate level, which will bring them more into harmony with prices of farm products. Of course, I realize that a perfect equilibrium and balanced condition of industry is only an ideal and is never reached, because various factors and influences play their part, and hence there is necessarily some fluctuation up and down, but the present lopsided adjustment between agriculture and many of the other industries is unnatural and exceedingly harmful, and the sooner it is ended the better it will be.

The purpose of this bill is to lend a helping hand to correct the situation, and I think if it is properly administered it should go a long way toward accomplishing that purpose. By the enactment of this bill Congress will give the War Finance Corporation broad and adequate powers to extend credit relief and furnish the machinery by which the money needed to do it may be obtained. Of course, Congress can not administer the law. Its effectiveness to fulfill the purposes for which it is enacted will depend upon the method of its administration by the directors of the War Finance Corporation. I am convinced that these directors intend to approach their task with a view of administering the act in accordance with the spirit which prompts Congress to pass it.

If they do, then I think we may well look for hopeful and beneficial results to follow. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MacGREGOR].

Mr. MacGREGOR. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I want to take a minute or two to express my opposition to this legislation. My friend, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Sisson], a few days ago said to our socialistic friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. London], "Meyer, I suppose that the legislation that is being enacted over here is as socialistic and sending the country toward socialism as rapidly as you could desire." Mr. London said "Yes."

This is one of the most forward steps toward socialism that has come under my observation. Our Government was formed not for the purpose of conducting a commercial business, but simply to regulate the relations of our citizens one to another. Here we undertake to help people, our citizens, who are in financial distress; that is supposed to be the basis of the proposition. We, of course, all sympathize with and are sorry for those in financial distress, but it is not the part or the province of the Government of this country to go into the business of relieving its citizens from financial distress. This bill proposes that the Government shall aid those who have or may have goods that are held in storage to the end that they may be held until a price shall be reached that will make it profitable for the holder to sell.

Mr. CABLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MacGREGOR. No; I can not. I have only 10 minutes. Do we propose that those who have corners on grain, corners on meat and live stock, or agricultural products shall use the Government of the United States for the purpose of getting a high price for their products? The people of the country have been clamoring about the high cost of living. Here the Government of the United States proposes to go in and help maintain the high cost of living by using its bonds and credit. We intend to go further, and under this bill we propose to take the bankers out of a hole and take their paper that they can not realize on; take it out of their hands, so that they can lend more money and get more frozen credits. We intend also to go into the business of buying chattel mortgages, notes based upon agricultural products, and live stock.

Pretty soon we will have the "royal keeper of the sheep," and the "cow tender," the "cowboys" on the official pay roll, who take care of the cows, and the sheep, and the hogs, and possibly some of the Angora goats from Texas [laughter] that will be owned by the United States of America, because it has been compelled to foreclose the chattel mortgages which it holds. [Laughter.]

My God, gentlemen, Members of Congress, see where you are going. Wake up before it is too late and stop this trend toward socialism and paternalism that is sought to be placed upon the statute books of our country. [Applause.]

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN].

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I have secured this time in order to make some suggestions that I think good ones not only for the Committee on Banking and Currency but for the membership of this House, and to suggest some amendments to this bill which I think are necessary to make it effective and efficient. I want these amendments to appear in the RECORD, so that the Members who read the RECORD may see them and study them to-morrow. If I did not think that some good results might flow from a careful study of the idea suggested by these amendments, I would not appear on the floor of this House, because I do not believe in talking to constituents 2,000 miles away from the floor of the House.

The first amendment I shall offer will be to add to the directors of this corporation the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Commerce, as follows:

Amendment to be offered by Mr. BUCHANAN: Page 1, line 9, strike out all of line 9 and the word "agriculture" on line 10 and insert the following: "That the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce."

The second amendment I shall offer will be to extend credit to any foreign Government or foreign corporation or person who has actually purchased our surplus exportable products. If the last amendment be adopted, the first one is very essential, because it will provide that the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of State, who are engaged as a primary duty in the promotion of foreign commerce, can use their foreign employees to investigate the financial credit and the conditions that would favor markets for our surplus exportable products. They have over 3,100 employees now in foreign countries already on the Government pay roll, well organized and ready for action, and supposed to be good men.

The next amendment I shall offer will be practically the Senate amendment, which the House has excluded, and which is subsection (b), as follows:

Amendment to be offered by Mr. BUCHANAN: On page 3, line 16, insert the following:

"(b) To any foreign Government or person without the United States purchasing the products of any essential industry of the United States, but in no case shall any of the money so advanced be expended without the United States. Every such advance shall be secured by adequate security of such character as shall be prescribed by the board of directors of the corporation. The rate of interest charged on any such advance shall be determined by the board of directors. The corporation shall retain power to recall an advance or require additional security at any time."

Amendment to be offered by Mr. BUCHANAN: On page 8, line 16, insert the following:

"SEC. 27. The corporation is empowered and authorized to investigate upon its own initiative or in conjunction with other Government agencies the financial condition of any foreign purchasers and foreign market conditions and of securities offered as a basis for credit, and the several secretaries above designated shall have the power to direct any of their appointees in foreign countries to obtain such information for the use of the corporation as will better enable it to perform the duties herein imposed on it."

Mark those words—essential industry of the United States. It is not confined to agriculture, but applies to every product of every essential industry. It includes, within broad scope, all products produced from where the wild Atlantic hurls its foam-crested waves against the rockbound coast of New England to where the mild Pacific washes the Golden Gate, from where the mighty Lakes spread out their vast expanse to where the gentle breezes fan the regions of eternal spring.

That, gentlemen, should be the position of Congressmen here. We are elected not to represent the confines of one little district or a State but to come here as representatives of the national interest and the Nation. I assert that your Banking and Currency Committee has not properly diagnosed the condition that confronts us at all to-day. As far as the bill goes, it may be a good one, and I shall vote for it, but it does not go far enough. But what does it do? It enables those who have surplus exportable products to hold them. To hold them until when? To hold the cotton crop of last year until the cotton crop of this year comes upon the market, to hold the corn crop of last year until the corn crop of this year comes upon the market, and then the corn crop of last year will rot in the bins and the cotton will be damaged by the weather. What we want is to provide a method by which the surplus products can be started moving. The manufacturing industries are more favorably situated, because when they see they are going to have an overproduction of manufactured articles they cut the labor off, they run on half time, they curtail their production. What is the result? We now have within the United States 5,000,000 people, according to the Department of Labor, who are out of employment. Pass some measure that will encourage exports, that will start them moving now, and the wheels of industry throughout the United States will start to moving and prosperity will come to the American people. [Applause.] What is the condition in Europe, in the old countries? Many of them are half starved, half naked, unemployment is increasing by leaps and bounds, and governments are now considering problems to get employment for labor. Yet they have not the raw materials to start the wheels of industry. We have the raw material, we have the foodstuffs to feed the starving, we have the cotton, and we have the clothes, yet Congress is here impotent, so much so that it must confess its inability to pass a law that would give a little line of foreign credit upon good security, that our surplus products may be sold and shipped over there to their benefit and to ours.

I state to the Republicans of this House that I am not making this speech from a partisan standpoint. I am here to represent as far as I can the interests of the American people, regardless of party politics. In my humble judgment, the Republicans of this House have an opportunity to pass a great constructive measure that would do something, that would not only benefit us in this crisis but would be a lasting monument to their party service. Will you rise to and meet the demands of the hour? What is that something? To start the machinery whereby we can give a line of foreign credit for our exportable manufactured and agricultural products without discrimination in favor of one class or against another, and, in my humble judgment, these amendments to the Senate bill will possibly accomplish that.

Let me show you thinking men the great philosophy of the Banking and Currency Committee. I quote from their report on this bill:

Credit is a weapon of great value to the person who is able to command it.

That is true.

A seller who has credit at his command can carry his products until the market warrants their sale; a seller without credit must buy whether the market is good or bad.

That may be true.

A buyer with credit can buy whenever the market is at its lowest and carry the products until he is ready to use them; a buyer without credit must buy when he needs the goods whether the market is high or low.

That is not true. A buyer without credit is a buyer without money. A buyer without money and a buyer without credit can not buy a molehill. Why did not the committee go on and say that the ideal condition for any people in any country is to have sellers with the ability to hold and buyers with the ability to buy, and then have the price regulated in the competitive markets of the world, all being and all having the ability to buy and the ability to hold.

That is the condition I want to see brought about. What is England doing—long-headed England? She is guaranteeing 85 per cent of the price of all essential products exported from her country to certain foreign countries, and what are we doing? Absolutely nothing except providing a means for us to hold our surplus products and let them accumulate, and when we do get a chance to sell we will have two years' or three years' production on the market at one time.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. The gentleman is speaking of England guaranteeing the credits. Of course, they do that upon certain securities being put up. In this bill I think the gentleman has overlooked the fact that we are proposing to finance exporters so as to enable them to grant credits to foreigners.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Sure.

Mr. BLACK. Well, I take it—

Mr. BUCHANAN. I want to finance the foreigners who purchase our commodities.

Mr. BLACK. That is what it is intended to do.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But the House struck out that provision of the Senate bill.

Mr. BLACK. Oh, no; we struck out the provision to make loans to foreign importers, but we still make loans to the American exporter in order that he may make loans to his customers.

Mr. BUCHANAN. You do that and you put the whole export business of the United States in the hands of a few men who can combine and dictate the price, and to make the vice worse the Government will be financing this monopoly which may extract the lifeblood from our producer of wealth, the farmer.

Mr. BLACK. I will say to the gentleman I was opposed to striking that out, and a number of us on the committee intend to make an effort to keep it in the bill, and we hope we will have the gentleman's help.

Mr. BUCHANAN. You certainly will. It strikes me from what I have said you know you will have my help. [Laughter and applause.] Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want to impress this one fact upon your minds which runs through all history. No nation ever was or ever has been or ever will be great that does not maintain or does not have a foreign commerce. No nation ever has been or ever will be great that does not maintain an efficient merchant marine to carry that commerce. Take the United States of America, one of the greatest producing nations, the greatest in the world. It is bound to export American products or else our laboring element will starve and our agricultural interest will suffer irreparable injury. Suppose you provide these means resulting in starting this commerce. What will result? The agriculture interest of the country will prosper. Take cotton—we now have 6,500,000 surplus bales on hand, while the ordinary carry over is about 2,000,000, with another crop coming on of 8,500,000, according to the estimate, making 15,000,000 bales of cotton on hand to be dumped on the market next fall. The producers of that cotton will not get one-half the actual cost of production. There are 250,000,000 bushels of corn in Iowa alone and another crop coming on—and I take it the surplus of other corn States will be along the same proportion—the new crop will come along and the old crop will rot in its bins. Oh, what a short-sighted policy, instead of enlarging and strengthening that which may do something constructive and serviceable to our country. Provide for export credit, provide credit for the foreigner who actually buys our cotton or corn or machinery or our manufactured goods, and I made my amendment broad enough to include all essential exportable products; provide that and start the stream of commerce moving across the sea, and immediately our factories will start on full time; immediately your farmers, having sold their products, will get the cash with which to purchase goods and patronize your manufacturers, and it will reach through the whole system. The five million of men who are not now employed will be given employment and it will redound to the everlasting benefit of the whole country. A short-sighted policy I say, although I regret to say it.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. I would like to get the gentleman's views upon this proposition. Does not the gentleman from Texas think that credit to the foreigner ought to be extended by the American exporter and let the American Government extend its credit to the American exporter?

Mr. BUCHANAN. My dear sir, there are some things that are too big for individual enterprise. Again, the American exporter is not armed with those equipments that the Government is to investigate and pass upon those credits. I have just stated now that the State Department and Commerce Department have more than 3,000 employees in foreign countries, and paid by the Government, who are supposed to be trained along business lines. There are some things that are too big for any one firm of exporters.

Mr. DENISON. Is not the information that is in the possession of those departments accessible to the American exporter?

Mr. BUCHANAN. The information is not in the department.

Mr. DENISON. Where is the information?

Mr. BUCHANAN. The information has not been obtained and will not be obtained unless we enact this bill and amendments and give it the power to obtain it by the use of its employees.

Mr. DENISON. Then the gentleman thinks it is better, as a matter of policy, for the Government to get the information and furnish it to our own exporters rather than the Government should go in the business itself?

Mr. BUCHANAN. There is no distinction, or if there is a distinction it is a distinction without a difference, loaning the money to our exporters who purchase from our producers and loaning the money to the foreigner who with it purchases our products from our producers.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I thank you, gentlemen. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER].

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I sometimes wonder whether everybody now agrees with the old song that I remember as a boy, "For Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm." This bill provides for the use of United States money. I had expected that something would be said about the War Finance Corporation as being a separate corporation. It is technically a separate corporation, but its stock is owned to the amount of $500,000,000 by the United States Government, who have paid in about $100,000,000 which have been loaned out by the War Finance Corporation and who are still debtors on the books of the company for $403,000,000 on that stock, so that every dollar which the War Finance Corporation loans on the faith of that credit has to be paid to them by the Government from the Treasury of the United States and raised by taxes. Four hundred millions of dollars! If the United States had a surplus I should feel differently. They owe $8,000,000,000 of short-term bonds and credit notes, which must be paid or refunded in about two years. They are borrowing money on short-term notes at 5½ or 5¾ per cent, a thing heretofore unknown since the days of the Civil War. The amount raised by taxation is failing from day to day. As was said by my colleague from New Jersey, if we depend on the income tax—and income means profits, and there are no profits—you will get no tax. And we need money, $475,000,000 a year, simply for pensions to the War Risk Bureau.

Mr. GERNERD. That does not cover it.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. It may not cover it. And we need other large sums. One billion nine hundred million dollars goes to interest every year. I need not add all this up. The United States is troubled to get money to pay its debts, and now it is asked to pay money to maintain the price of agricultural products. Is it safe business?

I remember that in 1880 hops had gone down a great deal, and the farmers in the central part of New York were holding their hops and borrowing money on them, and everyone who did that failed. Cotton has gone down in a year from 40 cents to 12 or 13 cents, and they say that at one time it went down to 10—last June. It is better now. But there are 10,000,000 bales of surplus now, and seven or eight millions of bales are expected this year; and what is going to be the price of cotton whether you carry it or not? Wheat is in much the same condition. Can the Government afford to guarantee present prices?

And, then, another thing has come in. In ordinary times you can borrow on cotton or wheat, because the price is supposed to be stable, but people will not lend upon cotton or wheat now, because the price may fall, and yet people say the United States should furnish money to give credit to a man abroad with which to buy cotton. A curious fact has developed in this last year—that the people abroad are buying a great deal of cotton, but they are buying it from hand to mouth, because they dare not buy large quantities for a year's supply and agree to pay a price that may not hold. There is foreign capital, but it will not buy futures in these times.

I hate to speak of this matter with the seriousness that it deserves. I hate to think that prices may go lower. Our mills are generally stopped and our laborers are out of work. Travel on the railroads has fallen off so that the railroads do not pay. Agricultural products are unsalable except from hand to mouth, in small quantities, and at prices which are low. During the Civil War cotton went up to over a dollar a pound. In 1873 it maintained a fair price of 20 to 30 cents a pound. It stuck between 1880 and 1890 at a price of 5 to 10 cents a pound—and some of the older men here will remember it—not as a mere single fall, but as a continuous thing, and which about ruined the cotton people. Wheat had been at $3.25 in New York in 1867.

In the year 1880 it had gotten down to about $1 a bushel, and it stayed at or under $1 a bushel for about 10 years. I will put the exact figures, with the leave of the House, in the RECORD. I am speaking from memory, and I have not the book with me that I expected to have.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, is the United States of America to put its Treasury at the service of a speculation in maintaining and holding and carrying stocks, whether they are stocks of railroads or stocks of corn or stocks of wheat? Are we to authorize any corporation to use the moneys of the United States in loans of that sort and to tie the United States up to speculation in the wheat pit or cotton exchange?

I will not vote for this bill because I believe as an American—while I will do everything as a man and while capitalists must do all that they can to support the trade of the country—that the capital of the country is not in the Treasury of the United States; it is in the hands of the merchants and bankers of the United States. It is their duty, and upon their heads the duty must fall. The Treasury of the United States shall not be used by me or by you, for we are not financial experts, nor by any person who is a mere appointee in a semi-political office. The credit of the United States, so far as I am concerned, shall not be used to carry on the business of the people, but it shall go back to its people. [Applause.]

APPENDIX.

From the Senate Report, 1894, second session of the Fifty-second Congress, it appears—

That cotton sold under 9 cents in January, 1858;
At 11 cents in April, 1860;
One dollar and fifty-four cents in July, 1864;
Fifty-one cents in January, 1866;
Twenty cents in April, 1873;
Seventeen cents in the following April;
Less than 10 cents in January, 1879; and Less than 9 cents in October, 1891, which is the last date given.
Wheat in Chicago in April, 1864, was $2.24 a bushel;
By January, 1870, it had fallen to 77 cents a bushel;
In 1873 it was $1.20, but in 1874, 90 cents, and between 1883 to 1888 it was never above 96½ cents and was sometimes under 70 cents.
By Burton's "Century of Prices" it appears that between the years 1885 and 1895 cotton was almost continuously below 10 cents and sometimes as low as 5 cents.
Wheat in Chicago in 1883 to 1887 and from 1890 to 1896 and from 1900 to 1904 was continuously below $1, generally as low as 80 cents, and once as low as 50 cents.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BRAND], a member of the committee.

Mr. BRAND. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am going to vote for this bill, though I do not approve and shall oppose some of its provisions. While the members of the Banking and Currency Committee have conscientiously and honestly considered every section of it and have done the best they could under the circumstances to take care of and relieve the acute and perilous condition which confronts the agricultural interests, it does not wholly do so.

I am opposed to some of the amendments which our committee adopted and am in favor of some of the amendments which the committee rejected, and I propose during the consideration of the bill under the five-minute rule to offer amendments which I think will materially improve it.

One of my objections to the bill is that it does not sufficiently and adequately take care of the cotton grower.

Another objection which I have to the bill is, under the interpretation which may be put upon it by the Treasury officials, including the manager of the War Finance Corporation, the railroads will get $500,000,000 from the Government when at the present time they owe the Government $700,000,000.

Referring to the first objection, I remind the committee that this bill as introduced in the Senate is a substitute to the Norris bill. The administration did not approve of the Norris bill, which was purely in the interest of the agricultural classes, while this bill has in view also the granting of privileges to the railroads, which I do not approve. I voted against the Esch-Cummins bill, which turned over the Treasury to the railroads for a period of time, and shall likewise vote against the section in this bill which further protects the railroads. All of us remember the severe indictment which Senator NORRIS brought against the administration when this bill, a product of the administration, was substituted for his bill. The bill now under consideration is purely an administration bill prepared, according to press reports, by Mr. Hoover, Mr. Meyer, manager of the War Finance Corporation, and with advice and consent of the Secretary of the Treasury, with the exception of section 25, which is an amendment proposed by Senator HARRISON, making available, if necessary, $200,000,000 for the Federal Farm Loan Board.

It can not be disputed that the farmers of the West, all of whom voted the Republican ticket last year, have been taken care of, and to their entire satisfaction, and, so far as I am concerned, I am glad this is so. What I protest against is making ample provision for the farmers of the West when little has been done or proposed to be done for the farmers of the South. I protest against the failure of those in authority to exercise the same patriotism and the same generosity toward the cotton grower which has been shown the western farmer.

The administration has provided for the western farmer—

First. By enacting the emergency tariff bill.

Second. By the House passing the permanent tariff bill.

Third. By the Senate passing what is known as the Capper-Tincher bill, the purpose of which is to protect the wheat grower against illegal operations of the exchanges.

Fourth. By the passage of an amendment to the Federal Farm Loan Board whereby its capital stock was increased in which the western farmer will get his full share.

Fifth. By the procurement of $50,000,000 under an arrangement made with bankers through the operations and influence of the Secretary of the Treasury and manager of the War Finance Corporation.

It will thus be seen that everything humanly possible in the way of legislation has been done by this Republican Congress for and in behalf of the farmers of the West, to which I am making no complaint, as they have suffered like the farmers of the South have suffered, provided the southern farmer is dealt with with the same liberality.

I hope I am mistaken, but I do not believe the provisions of this bill are adequate to relieve the condition which prevails among the cotton-growing farmers. In my section of Georgia, and particularly in my district, there are three classes of people who need speedy and substantial relief.

First. The farmer who owns land and wants to borrow money.

Second. The farmer who does not own land and wants to borrow money.

Third. An extension of loans to the farmer, who has borrowed money from the banks, until he can sell his cotton at the cost of production plus a reasonable profit.

All this involves a market for the farmer's cotton.

The first class of farmers need money to pay their last year's obligation to the banks and merchants and to take care of the great loss they have sustained by the unprecedented slump in the price of cotton. The second and third classes of farmers want to borrow money in order to be able to hold their cotton until they can get a market for the same.

The provisions of this bill as amended do not sufficiently and satisfactorily take care of either one of these classes of farmers.

It is made clear under this bill that the railroads are going to get what they want. It is also clear to any unbiased mind that the western farmers are getting all that they want, and what I insist upon in common justice and fairness to a great section of our common country is that the cotton grower be taken care of and be given what he needs. This bill does not do it. I concede it will help some, but it will not bring that substantial and permanent relief which the cotton grower is entitled to, and which I insist that he should have.

Under the operations of this bill not a dollar will be loaned to any single individual. Not a dollar will be loaned to any single farmer or farm producer. For this reason I decided to offer the amendments referred to in sections 1 and 24 of the pending bill, the former defining the word "person" to include among other things organizations of farm producers not less than 10, and the latter making it obligatory upon the directors of the War Finance Corporation to advance money not only to any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States but also to any organization of farm producers not less than 10.

In addition to this, I contend that striking out paragraph (b) of section 22, on page 3, curtails a market for our cotton. It absolutely places an embargo against the purchase of our cotton directly by any European nation.

It unconditionally provides that no person outside of the United States can purchase any of our agricultural products, even though the purchase money thereof is expended within the United States. This closes the door to all the countries of Europe who have heretofore been large buyers of American cotton. This is the first attempt on the part of the Congress in time of peace to prevent European nations through their own agents and representatives in this country negotiating for and purchasing our cotton. The reasons given by the distinguished chairman of our committee and the argument made against this stricken provision of the bill by the manager of the War Finance Corporation do not appeal to me. With this provision stricken out, not a soul in any portion of the world outside of the United States can buy a bale of our cotton except through the exporters of this country and the bankers of the country who are backing the exporters. This is due to the inability to buy on the part of Europe, except on long-time credit.

The next and last amendment which I propose at this time to notice is striking from the bill the Senate amendment which authorizes the War Finance Corporation upon request therefor by the Federal Farm Loan Board to make available $100,000,000 to loan to farmers during the calendar year ending December 31, 1921, and $100,000,000 ending December 31, 1922. It is said that the Federal Farm Loan Board is opposed to this amendment because the farmers do not need the money.

With all due respect to each and every member of this board, I know this conviction is not true so far as my district is concerned. There are 12 or 14 farm-loan associations in the 13 counties of my district, and up to date they have not received over $100,000, according to my information, whereas applications have been made for seven hundred and fifty or eight hundred thousand dollars. On its face Judge Lobdell's letter would appear to be a sufficient answer to striking this amendment out, because it would be unwise for the farm-loan banks to make loans for 30 years when they would have to pay the money back inside of five years. This objection could be easily taken care of, if the real opponents of this amendment were willing to do so, by amending the Federal farm loan act so that the loans made by money received from the War Finance Corporation should not be for a period longer than five years.

It is a very strange and inexplicable thing to me that this Government is not willing to provide for the necessities of the farmers of the country and let them have money on gilt-edge securities which they offer when they are virtually loaning millions of dollars every day to the European nations. Everybody knows that this country loaned our allies in the war with Germany $10,000,000,000, not a dollar of which has been paid back. They not only owe us the principal, but there is a billion dollars of interest accrued on these loans, not a dollar of which has been paid back. Some one has said that every dollar of interest which these countries default has to be made up in taxes by the people of this country. It simply amounts to a new loan to these countries from the pockets of the American taxpayers.

A short while ago Senator BORAH, of the United States Senate, took the same view of this matter by saying that we are virtually loaning foreign countries $1,000,000 per day through failure to collect our debts.

If this is a correct view of these loans, why in the name of common sense can this Republican Congress and administration refuse to loan the agricultural people a sufficiency of money to save them from bankruptcy and ruin when they offer good security for loans and will repay, while the European countries to whom this money was loaned gave no security and will not pay, and can only be made to pay at the mouth of a cannon.

If you Republicans expect to break the solid South and the Democratic State of Georgia you must do something more than let Link Johnson control the patronage of Georgia by displacing Democratic postmasters and replacing them by Republicans. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KING].

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. KING. And on account of the limit of time I ask not to be interrupted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks, in view of the limitation of time, that he be not interrupted.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, let it be understood that no individual farmer can get a single dollar under this bill if it becomes a law.

The title of the bill, which is mere surplusage in the way of propaganda, tells us that it has two objects—"the relief of the producer" and "for other purposes"—a fifty-fifty proposition, no doubt. But on an examination of the bill itself one is reminded of the old story of that famous Milwaukee maker of rabbit sausage, who upon being twitted on the question as to whether or not he did not put a little horse meat in with the rabbit admitted that he did. On being pressed for the proportion of one to the other, replied the combination was fifty-fifty, and upon further question as to what he meant by that he replied that it was his practice to use one horse to one rabbit, and so this bill provides one rabbit for the producer and one horse for other purposes. [Laughter.]

THE MAN WITH THE HOE.

This bill, of which nothing new remains but the number, when first reported to the Senate by Mr. NORRIS contained within it real relief for the producer. The man with the hoe—the tiller of the soil who nourishes all—then seemed about to come into his own. He was personified in the bill. He, figuratively, walked the floor of the Senate in his demand for recognition. For days his rugged form and honest countenance commanded the admiration and evoked the praises of the place. Yes, yes, something had to be done for the farmer—at least in the name of the farmer. This bill was passed.

And one day a man with a hoe entered the Banking and Currency Committee room of the House demanding a hearing upon the bill. There seemed to be no doubt of his identity, for the habiliments which he wore were certainly those of one who had so excited the high opinion of the north end of the Capitol. Some member of the committee whose suspicions were aroused dropped the remark that the voice of the person sounded like Jacob's all right, but when he shook hands with him he thought he detected the hairy hand of Esau. [Laughter.] Well, to use a slang phrase, "nothing can be put over" on this committee, and remembering how Charles XII, the lion of the north, captured so many Russian prisoners in his Riga campaign that he could not care for them in that winter climate, hit upon the device of turning them all loose after cutting their clothes vertically in two parts, so that they were unable to do anything with their hands except to hold their clothing together to protect them from the bitter cold as they fled into the interior. [Laughter.] The committee with a long pair of shears in the same manner cut the stranger's clothes fore and aft, from neck to crotch. They fell from him to the floor. [Laughter.] Disclosing what—the producer? Not at all. But, still holding the hoe aloft, with all investitures removed, the anatomy of the international banker. [Laughter.]

This bill in its present unamended form constitutes nothing more or less than a contract of copartnership between the Government and organized money.

A few years ago John D. Rockefeller, jr., put out a book called "The Brotherhood of Government and Business." Big business is the business he meant, of course. His idea was that in a brotherhood of this kind big business would naturally control the Government. Indeed, if it can not do so under any given arrangement or legislation it immediately sets up a cry about Government interference in business. If time permitted, many instances could be named where the Government in good faith endeavored to regulate powerful organizations, but in the end fell a victim to superior intrigue and strength. Witness the Railroad Administration and the Shipping Board. Certain recent legislation, in good faith instituted and passed for some sort of control of certain interests, will soon, and as quickly as Carpentier fell in the unequal struggle with Dempsey, succumb to the strangle hold of those compact and powerful agencies which were sought to be held in check. Man is mortal. Legislation is mortal. Money is immortal. Government control by big business is called a brotherhood, but the converse of this is called governmental interference.

Organized money seems to put an interpretation on the action of the voters at the last presidential election as to an indorsement of its past course and interprets the election registers as letters of marque for its further uncurtailed encroachments on the simple privileges of the middle classes, while, as a matter of fact, the people attempted to register their condemnation of its control of affairs in the preceding four years. It is therefore with deep regret that some prominent leaders have given voice to the brotherhood idea. They have given the public press interviews which support headlines that in Congress "Big business now to get fairer deal," "Lessons taught by the World War have been taken to heart by Nation's lawmakers," "Concentration and control is the new slogan for business legislation," and "Encouragement of cumulative capital, under hard-headed business management, toward monopolistic development of essential industries and new public service agencies. More careful control legislation which, instead of hobbling or hamstringing big business with interference by incompetent Federal agents, will place the safeguarding of the people's interests in the hands of experts in those special commodities or utilities, thus allowing private capital en masse to upbuild industry and commerce so that it can carry on comparably with the growing size of the Nation."

All of which means that new men, trained by organized money and with the monopolistic viewpoint, shall be injected into high governmental positions where they may exercise a tender and benign sway over their benefactors.

Said one leader: "It is inevitable that single organizations in a variety of lines should control a large amount of capital, employ a great number of people, and transact an enormous volume of business," which in its interpretation means that small business men must soon expect to become mere distributors and the door to individual ambition closed.

Another leader, more bold, says: "Modern progress demands greater concentration of effort both in greater efficiency and less lost motion of enterprise," whatever that means. It is clear that his plan means the ruin of small enterprises, which would be swept aside in order to make room for the great combinations. He stands for the survival of the strongest, not the fittest. Men in both parties are giving vent to such loose talk as though there was no hereafter.

The Members of the House, I think, are entirely devoted to the interests of the people; and no leader or leaders on either side, I am sure, or a combination of leaders on both sides, can long advocate the putting on foot of plans designed to inculcate or foster the recognition of the principle of carrying on a people's Government by a brotherhood of Government and organized money. The people will overthrow such leaders. The House will overthrow them. Should such arise there are at least 150 men on both Republican and Democratic sides—and they can be called by name—who would arise as one man and join hands, irrespective of all past differences, to overthrow such ideas.

Although there may be some little temporary good in this bill to banks carrying congested credits and indirectly permit them to loan a little more to the farmers, yet I am sure that unamended as it now is there is so much evil that even the farmer himself, when he comes to get a chance to see its operations upon his own business and upon others, will not be a champion of it. There are a number of paragraphs which should be eliminated. Different members of the committee have amendments which will be offered. The objectionable part to me is that part of section 24, pages 6 and 7, beginning on line 15, which enables Edge banks to sell their debentures to the Government, reading as follows, to wit:

The corporation is further authorized, upon such terms as it may prescribe, to purchase, sell, or otherwise deal in debentures, promissory notes, or other obligations, adequately secured, issued by banking corporations organized under section 25 (a) of the Federal reserve act: Provided, That no purchase of debentures, promissory notes, or other obligations of the said banking corporations shall be made, nor any loan or advance be made, to said banking corporations except for the purpose of assisting the said banking corporations in financing the exportation of agricultural and manufactured products from the United States to foreign countries. No such promissory notes, debentures, or other obligations shall be purchased which have a maturity at the time of such purchase of more than five years.

This provides for the resurrection of the Edge banks or corporations of the debenture-issuing type by the uses of Uncle Sam's pulmotor—the Treasury. Money coming from the War Finance Corporation is money coming from the people's Treasury. The peculiar method of organizing corporations within the Government in order to pass to international bankers, railroads, and other favored interests the people's money without their detecting it ought to be condemned. No other class of our citizens are so favored. We have done everything the promoters of the Edge corporations have asked us to do, and yet they have failed to function, simply because the people failed to invest in the scheme. The people refused to buy Edge stocks or invest in Edge debentures. The promoters would not back the plan with their own money, but now, through the instrumentality of this bill, if it is not amended, a chance is given them to sell their debentures to the Government. This is what they have long yearned for, to get Uncle Sam to underwrite and guarantee their debentures; and this bill, if it becomes a law as it now is, would permit Uncle Sam to purchase the same. As this bill was conceived by those who "think internationally," it will be administered by those who act internationally, not by the bolsheviks in "rags and shags," but by the bolsheviks in "velvet gowns." [Laughter.]

As one of the main effects of this bill as it stands now is to "sting" Uncle Sam for these debentures—the farmer getting a penny and the international banker a pound—let us see the plan under which the Edge bank will work, as described by our distinguished chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, Mr. McEADEN, in addressing the House at the time of the passage of the Edge law. He said:

"The Edge law is nothing more than a hopper into which will pour long-time credits, which may be in the form of notes, which may be in the form of bonds of municipalities, or bonds or stocks issued by companies in France, England, or other parts of the world, which may be guaranteed or secured by the Governments or municipalities. Into this hopper they will flow and out of this hopper will flow obligations of this company in a suitable form, a desirable form for our people to invest their savings in."

The debentures are unguaranteed by the Edge banks themselves. They are repudiable by foreign nations on change of control and subject to sovietization and taxation to elimination. Who doubts that the very first foreign national obligations to go into this hopper will be the old Russian bonds, the principal of which, without figuring interest, is about $122,000,000? They will form, perhaps alone, or scrambled with other bonds and stocks of foreign factories and enterprises, the basis of an issue of Edge debentures.

The process of the United States, in the name of one of its bureaus, the War Finance Corporation, in purchasing a debenture from the hopper of an Edge bank is not a buying proposition at all, but one of lending money to some person somewhere in Europe and taking his plain note of hand in so far as his obligation being secured by any property in America against which the process of any American court might issue. Evidently in case of inability or refusal to pay collection of our money could only be made by using our Army and Navy as a collection agency, and even now the collection of money due our Government can only be made by force of arms, according to Col. House, who in his new book says relative to the amounts owed us by European nations:

As it is we are owed a nominal sum of $10,000,000,000, the value of which is exceedingly doubtful, and upon it no interest has as yet been paid. Sooner or later some adjustment must be brought about. * * * Even now they (our people) should understand that these debts can not be collected except by process of war, unless, indeed, the debtors chose otherwise.

Before loaning money to an individual in our own community we usually make some investigation as to his financial standing. We want to know his age, his moral standing, his ability to earn, the extent of his personal indebtedness, and before loaning money abroad it becomes necessary to take into consideration certain national credit factors, such as the general standing of a country among the nations of the world, its military position, stability of the Government, risk of revolution, history and character of the people, assets, protection by other nations, liabilities, risk of war, boundary and territorial disputes, treaties with other nations, financial record of the Government, natural resources, and economic position.

Yet it is proposed that the Treasury purchase debentures based upon such securities. In turn, the War Finance Corporation, having a hopper of its own, will on these Edge debentures grind out some debentures over the signature of Uncle Sam, who is made up of the people, who will be expected after a campaign of advertising and bulldozing to purchase these war finance debentures, the proceeds of which will be used to loan to foreigners so that they may pay the international bankers of Europe and their American cousins the bad debts created by their participation in the European war long before America entered into it.

The American people may have to submit to the plan of the international bankers in order to get a few dimes for the American farmer who is suffering from a diabolical deflation of his credits by a governmental agency, and to assist the manufacturing interests which have suffered through that damnable process known as "graduated and progressive discounts."

It is indeed a terrible price to pay for the acts of "willful men." When the bill is reached under the 5-minute rule I shall offer an amendment to the Edge debenture part of this bill, now favored by the Banking and Currency Committee, which, if adopted, will permit us to vote for it without tying the Nation hand and foot in the hands of the international banking group.

All these things must be considered in relation not only to the securities offered us by nations but by the enterprises and industries located in those countries. Into this hopper of Edge banks will be thrown such a scramble of securities that no living lawyer will be able to examine with intelligence the multitudinous foreign laws affecting them, and as they are sold to the masses unguaranteed by anyone, they will have to buy blindfolded as the debentures based upon the securities are ground out of the hopper. The ingredients of this hopper will be made up to suit the taste of the international banker, and may include financial paper, governmental and private, from Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, France, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Rumania, Russia, Serbia, Armenia, Esthonia, Finland, Poland, the Serbs, the Croats, and Slovenes, cities of Paris, Bordeaux, Marseille, Vienna, Berlin, Warsaw, Prague, Constantinople, and Moscow.

No such conglomerate and cosmopolitan dish as is represented by this bill is known to have been prepared since Shakespeare's witches in Macbeth sang:

Round about the cauldron go;
In the poison'd entrails throw.
Toad, that under cold stone
Days and nights has thirty-one
Swelter'd venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first! 'the charmed pot.

Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt and toe of frog,
Wool of bat and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg and howlet's wing,
For a charm of pow'rful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I ask for one-half minute.

Mr. WINGO. I give the gentleman one minute more to end the story. [Laughter.]

Mr. KING. For the benefit of the Members I will finish it:

Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witch's mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark,
Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Silver'd in the moon's eclipse,
Nose of Turk and Tartar's lips,
Finger of birth-strangled babe
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab:
Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

[Applause and laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, it is a late time in life to raise the question involved in the fundamental principles of this bill. It has been a long time since that bridge was crossed, and we should have a long journey and a tiresome one should we undertake to go back to it. Every principle involved in this bill is embodied in the existing War Finance Corporation legislation enacted by Congress. There is not even a dollar of appropriation carried in this bill. The appropriation providing for the subscription by the Government to the capital stock of the War Finance Corporation to the extent of $500,000,000 is carried in the law as it already exists. So we are not dealing now with the question of whether or not the Government shall embark on that sort of undertaking. Not only is this true, but we passed an amendment to the War Finance Corporation act the specific object of which was to accomplish, in large part, the identical things sought to be brought about by the enactment of the bill now before us.

It is idle talk to debate seriously at this time the principles involved in this legislation. As I remember, the original legislation encountered practically no opposition on the part of the gentlemen who protest against directing the activities of the corporation in the channels mapped out in the bill now under consideration.

Members who have no hesitancy in voting for tariff laws and regulations interfering with the natural flow of commerce, gentlemen who voted for the railroad bill involving the Government in continued liability to the railroads and tying up the Government indefinitely with the business of the railroads and giving guaranties and favors to them, are shocked at this bill because it proposes something in the way of what they term favoritism to the great agricultural interests of this country which lie at the basis of all prosperity. This bill gives some promise; it furnishes some hope of accomplishing the things that have been more talked about during the present extra session than anything else, and that is relief to the farming interests of the country. [Applause.]

We have passed several measures that I think have been helpful, but none of them has accomplished what we should like to see. I do not hope that this bill will accomplish all that is predicted for it, but if it helps a little, if it saves a few farmers from bankruptcy, if it saves a few banks in the agricultural sections of the country whose business in the main is done with farmers, our efforts will have been amply justified.

There has been considerable misapprehension about the provisions of this bill. It does not enlarge the scope of the original War Finance Corporation act, as some Members seem to apprehend, but in many respects limits it. It has been said that this bill authorizes an issue of $500,000,000 bonds to take care of loans to the railroads under legislation now in process of appropriation, but such is not the fact. The bill has no connection whatever with that legislation and carries no authorization for the use of the capital stock of the corporation or the use of its securities in financing the railroads. The fact is this act limits the issuance of bonds by the War Finance Corporation to one and one-half billions, whereas the War Finance Corporation is authorized to issue $3,000,000,000.

Mr. DALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I regret I have not time to yield. I have only a few minutes left.

Mr. DALE. I want to ask the gentleman just one question.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. STEAGALL. I will say to the gentleman that we will deal with the railroad question when we get to the bill which deals with that question. When that legislation is reached I have no doubt we shall find many gentlemen who are horrified over the principles involved in the provisions of this bill not hesitating to vote to extend the operations of the War Finance Corporation to the further aid of the railroads of this country. [Applause.]

I wish to say also in this connection that one of the chief difficulties confronting the farmers in this country, as well as every other legitimate interest, is the exorbitant charges being imposed upon industry and commerce by the railroads, and we are going to be forced to deal with the question of transportation. Something will have to be done to save the railroads from the folly of their own management, if nothing else, because they are destroying their own interest by the methods and policies now being pursued.

The farmers of the country sell a large portion of their crops for export, and ordinarily export prices practically determine the domestic price for farm products. The foreign market has been upset by conditions growing out of the war and the disturbances to industry and consumption throughout the world.

Ordinarily purchasers abroad, especially manufacturers who purchase raw materials in this country, make their financial arrangements to purchase their supplies in large quantities and at stated times, keeping on hand stores far in advance of their use. The conditions now are such that not only is the demand necessarily vastly reduced but those who continue to buy are not in position to make purchases as formerly and in large stores at one time, but they are able to finance their purchases only as needed and in small quantities.

The farmers of this country have suffered on account of this situation, and they will suffer more and more unless financial relief is extended to enable them to carry their products long enough to market them by gradual processes instead of throwing them on the market as soon as prepared at stated seasons of the year. The interest of the farmers of the country and an intelligent regard for the welfare of all classes and all interests demand that farmers be provided with credit sufficient to cope with the situation which faces them. They have suffered billions and billions already because of the slump in prices during the past year, and their loss has affected all classes of our population.

The bill before us undertakes to take care of the situation temporarily and to enable farmers, as well as exporters, to finance their transactions and carry on their business with an intelligent regard for conditions throughout the world. It is not thought practicable to extend relief by direct transactions with the vast number of individuals involved. The bill under consideration attempts to supply indirect aid by enlarging credit facilities which are available to the producers of the country. Many banks are overdone and can not afford to borrow further through ordinary channels to meet the demands upon them. Practically half of the national banks are not availing themselves of the opportunities offered by the Federal reserve banks.

Conservative bankers naturally seek to avoid the risks and embarrassments in which they see that others find themselves. The bill undertakes to meet this situation by granting extraordinary accommodations by making loans to bankers who desire to assist in affording relief. The purpose is to make farm products available as security in order that they may be marketed in a normal way and along independent and intelligent lines. The legislation, if properly administered, as I do not question it will be, is bound to have a wholesome and helpful effect in the agricultural section of the country and a result beneficial among all sections and classes.

The directors of the War Finance Corporation are prudent, sagacious, safe men. They have managed the affairs of the corporation with conservatism and rare judgment. Not a loss of any consequence has been sustained, but already they have rendered splendid service in dealing with the difficult situation in which the commerce of the country has been involved since the termination of the war. I want to say to the gentleman who has just preceded me, Mr. KING, of Illinois, that his dire predictions no longer frighten us. The gentleman indulged in the same line of predictions with reference to the Edge corporations at the time the bill authorizing their organization was before the House. The gentleman thought they were going to gobble up about all the honestly earned money in the country and operate as blood-sucking institutions to overrun and outrage honest men. The fact is, that only two such corporations have been organized, and they have found it so difficult to do business that one of the purposes of the bill before us is to authorize the War Finance Corporation to extend credit to them. The bill makes the securities of the War Finance Corporation eligible for discount with the Federal reserve banks, but it does not extend these privileges to the securities of the Edge corporations.

But I wanted especially to discuss the provision of the bill which authorizes the War Finance Corporation to make loans on the bonds of the Federal land banks or to purchase such bonds. I see, however, I am not going to have time now to go into that question. I hope to do so later on in the discussion. But this much I will say, we shall be most unwise if we fail to use the Federal land banks as agencies through which to extend the relief contemplated by this bill. The Federal land banks are permanent institutions and the Government is going to stand back of them. They are in touch with the farmers of the country, and have their 12 branches scattered throughout the land. Their bonds are the best securities to be found, and we should put them to doing business and furnish sufficient capital to enable them to meet the demands upon them. This is the quickest way to relieve the Government of responsibility in connection with the Federal land banks, because as the loans of the banks are enlarged their capital stock is automatically increased, and in this way the system can soon be made to stand on its feet with its capital stock owned by the borrowers. It is the practicable thing to do, both from the standpoint of the Government as well as in accomplishing the purposes of this bill.

I wish to urge every friend of the farm loan system to insist that the amendment striking out the provision authorizing the War Finance Corporation to buy farm loan bonds or make loans on them for two years to the extent of $100,000,000 a year be voted down and the provision retained as a part of this legislation. I regard it as the most practicable as well as the safest and most helpful provision of the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MILLSPAUGH].

Mr. MILLSPAUGH. Mr. Chairman, for more than 20 years I have been a country banker, and for several years preceding that time was engaged in the business of buying and shipping of grain and other agricultural products.

The farmers have been my daily associates. I have spent many hours in my banking office counseling with and advising them, and not only have they confided to me their business cares but I have also been accorded the rare privilege of counseling and advising with them in regard to their personal and family affairs.

I therefore feel it is peculiarly appropriate that the first time my voice is raised in the halls of Congress it should be in behalf of these, my lifelong friends and intimate associates.

Mr. Chairman, if the gentlemen of this body could for one moment realize the financial condition of the American farmer and stockman and could realize how indissolubly our welfare and prosperity are interwoven with theirs, all measures for the relief of the agricultural interests of our country which are meritorious would have our first care and attention.

I personally know farmers who are worth from twenty-five to fifty thousand dollars who are unable to borrow $500 with which to raise a crop or to purchase feed for their cattle; not because their banker does not desire to make the loan but because their banker has not the funds to loan to them and because his bills payable account is now top-heavy.

Until 1917, when we entered the great World War, there were comparatively few in the agricultural districts of our country who knew what a bond really was; they had heard of them in an indefinite sort of way when it was necessary to build a schoolhouse or a courthouse, but had no intimate knowledge of them.

When we took our place in the conflict, when our country was in peril, the country banker, who is the personification of patriotism, took up the suicidal task of educating his customers as to the safety and attractiveness of Liberty bonds.

Until this time there was usually sufficient local capital in each agricultural community to finance that particular community, except in cases of unusual demand, and the local capitalist was content to either leave his funds on time deposit with his local banker or to invest them in local securities, of which real estate mortgages and chattel mortgages formed the chief part.

After, however, learning of the attractiveness of Liberty bonds and incidentally the lure of the all too many other tax-exempt securities, the local capitalist in these agricultural communities has eschewed his erstwhile favorites and has put his trust in strange gods.

The result is that the safe-deposit boxes of the country banks as well as the city banks are choked with these frozen credits and the farmers of the Nation stare ruin in the face.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think this is the wisest measure for the relief of the farmer that could have been reported out of the committee, for I do not think that any measure that relies upon the sale of bonds in an already gorged market is the best policy, but inasmuch as I believe it will furnish at least a modicum of relief and will pave the way for more meritorious measures, I shall support it, and I trust it may have the undivided support of all of the friends of the American farmer.

This whole matter has been so close to my heart and I have thought it to be of such vital importance to the recovery of our financial equilibrium that I have spent many hours on its consideration since my entry into this great body and have introduced a rural credits bill which I believe will go very far toward alleviating the financial distress which now pervades our agricultural districts.

This bill provides for the use of Liberty bonds, which now constitute our frozen credits, as an agency to overcome the unfortunate and distressing conditions which they caused.

I trust it may at a not distant date receive the serious consideration of this House and, if found acceptable, that it may be enacted into law. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I append as a part of my remarks the following bill introduced by me:

A bill (H. R. 6503) to amend the Federal reserve act and to provide rural credits by the issuing of Federal reserve notes against deposits of Liberty and Victory bonds.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Federal reserve act is hereby amended as follows:

First. Whenever the word "bank" is used in this amendment the word shall be held to include only national bank, State bank, bank association, and trust company under Federal or State supervision, except where such construction would be unreasonable.

Second. Wherever the words "owner of bonds" are used in this amendment the said words shall be held to include any person, corporation, or firm owning or controlling Liberty or Victory bonds, except where such construction would be unreasonable.

Third. Wherever the word "applicant" is used in this amendment the word shall be held to include any person, corporation, or firm applying for a loan under the provisions of this amendment, except where such construction would be unreasonable.

Fourth. Wherever the word "bonds" is used in this amendment the word shall be held to include only bonds issued by the United States of America commonly known as Liberty and Victory bonds, except where such construction would be unreasonable.

Fifth. Words importing the singular number shall be held to include the plural, and vice versa, except where such construction would be unreasonable.

SEC. 2. That any owner of bonds may deposit said bonds for rural credit purposes under the terms of this amendment with the Federal reserve bank in the Federal reserve district in which said owner of bonds may reside or have his place of residence and receive therefor the receipt for said bonds of said Federal reserve bank with the guaranty on said receipt of said Federal reserve bank that the identical said bonds shall be returned to the legal holder of said receipt if demanded by said legal holder of said receipt at the end of a period of either 6 or 12 months after date of said receipt.

SEC. 3. That for the purpose of making effective the provisions of this amendment, any bank may act as the credit agent of the Federal reserve bank in which Federal reserve district said bank may be situated, to receive the bonds heretofore mentioned, and shall forward same to said Federal reserve bank for the said owner of bonds and deliver to said owner of bonds the receipt of said Federal reserve bank therefor. The Federal reserve bank receiving the deposit of bonds as heretofore described shall, for the purpose of this amendment, enter upon its books the par value of such bonds so deposited to the credit account of the bank through which said Federal reserve bank received said bonds, for the purposes authorized and described in this amendment, and none other.

SEC. 4. That any bank which has deposited bonds in a Federal reserve bank as aforesaid may receive applications for loans for strictly agricultural purposes, to be made through said Federal reserve bank in the following manner, to wit:

SEC. 5. That the applicant for a loan under the provisions of this amendment shall file with the bank through which said loan is desired an affidavit that the proceeds of said loan are to be used for strictly agricultural purposes.

SEC. 6. That an applicant for a loan under the provisions of this amendment shall file with any bank described in paragraph 1 of section 1 a written application for said desired loan together with the sworn statement of said applicant of the net worth of said applicant, the form of said sworn property statement to be determined by the Federal reserve bank through which said loan is to be applied for, and for the purposes of this amendment the said sworn statement shall show the net value of said applicant's real and personal property after deducting all indebtedness of said applicant of any nature whatsoever, to be at least double the amount of the loan so applied for, and after effecting a loan of this kind the applicant shall not be granted any further loans under the provisions of this amendment until all previous loans effected by him under this amendment shall have been fully paid.

SEC. 7. That the applicant, in lieu of the above-described property statement, may pledge to said bank collateral security which shall be acceptable to said Federal reserve bank, the true value of which collateral security shall be at least 50 per cent in excess of the amount of the loan so applied for.

SEC. 8. That the bank receiving applications for loans under the provisions of this amendment shall forward said applications, together with the property statement or a full description of the collateral security offered, as the case may be, heretofore described, with the aforementioned affidavit, to said Federal reserve bank.

SEC. 9. That upon receiving such applications and other documents incident thereto the Federal reserve bank shall, after same are found to be satisfactory and offered through a bank in good standing, notify such bank of the acceptance of said loans and shall forward to said bank the necessary documents for perfecting such loans, and said bank on the receipt of said documents shall promptly cause them to be properly executed and returned to said Federal reserve bank, indorsed by the said bank through which the applications were forwarded to said Federal reserve bank.

SEC. 10. That upon the return of said notes and other accompanying documents the said Federal reserve bank shall issue Federal reserve notes to said bank: Provided, That at no time shall any Federal reserve bank issue to any bank Federal reserve notes in an amount exceeding 80 per cent of the par value of bonds deposited under the terms of this amendment.

SEC. 11. That the loan limit to which any bank may effect loans for an applicant under the terms of this amendment shall be the loan limit fixed for said bank by the Federal or State laws under which said bank is incorporated.

SEC. 12. That if at any time it shall become apparent to any bank or to any Federal reserve bank through or by which any such loans as heretofore described have been effected that the financial condition of the applicant has become impaired or that the collateral security deposited for any loan has depreciated to the extent that the safety of the loan is impaired, the said Federal reserve bank or bank shall notify the maker of said loan to deposit security or additional security with said Federal reserve bank satisfactory to said Federal reserve bank within 10 days from the date of issuing said notice. And in the event said security or additional security is not so deposited then in that event said loan shall become immediately due and payable and the necessary steps shall be taken to collect said loan.

SEC. 13. That the rate of interest charged by any Federal reserve bank on loans effected under this amendment shall not exceed 6½ per cent per annum: Provided, That a lower rate of interest may be fixed by any Federal reserve bank when in the judgment of the directors of any said Federal reserve bank it may seem advisable.

SEC. 14. That there shall be created in each Federal reserve bank a fund known as the rural credits guaranty fund for the purpose of meeting any default which may be made on any loans effected by said Federal reserve bank under the terms of this amendment.

SEC. 15. That when in the judgment of the directors of any Federal reserve bank the sum set aside as a rural-credits guaranty fund shall accumulate to an amount which exceeds the necessities for which said fund was created the said directors shall then cause to be transferred any excess in said rural-credits guaranty fund to the general earnings of said Federal reserve bank.

SEC. 16. That the interest collected on loans effected under this amendment shall be applied pro rata, as follows, to wit:

First. To the Federal reserve bank through which said loan is made 3 per cent per annum of the principal sum of each loan.

Second. To the rural-credits guaranty fund one-half of 1 per cent per annum of the principal sum of each loan.

Third. To the bank through which said loans were effected 3 per cent per annum of the principal sum of each loan.

SEC. 17. That in case the rate of interest shall be decreased by any Federal reserve bank, as provided for in section 13 of this amendment, the amounts specified in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of section 16 shall be decreased in proportion.

SEC. 18. That any bank which shall avail itself of the provisions of this amendment shall pay to the owner of bonds deposited through said bank under the terms of this amendment the sum of one-fourth of 1 per cent per annum of the principal sum of bonds so deposited by said owner of bonds in full payment for the use of said bonds during the actual period such bonds are deposited through said bank under the provisions of this amendment.

SEC. 19. That any owner of bonds deposited under the provisions of this amendment may allow the interest coupons to remain attached to said bonds or may at his option have said interest coupons clipped from said bonds when due by the Federal reserve bank in which said bonds are deposited and placed to the credit of the bank through which said bonds were deposited for the use of the said owner of bonds.

SEC. 20. That when for any reason any bank which has received and forwarded bonds under the terms of this amendment may determine that it is to its best interests to retire all or any part of the loans effected by it under this amendment it may retire said loans or part of said loans, thereby giving the owner of the bond 10 days' notice thereof and cease to allow to any such owner of bonds the one-fourth of 1 per cent per annum provided for in section 18 of this amendment; the said owner of bonds may then withdraw said bonds or allow them to remain on deposit with the Federal reserve bank where deposited at his option without any compensation unless said bank shall decide to again avail itself of the use of said bonds.

SEC. 21. That whenever any bank shall retire any loans as described in section 20 by payment to said Federal reserve bank the said Federal reserve bank shall withdraw from circulation and cancel as provided by law an equal amount of Federal reserve notes.

SEC. 22. That any owner of bonds deposited under the provisions of this amendment may withdraw said bonds from deposit by giving six months' notice thereof in writing, one copy of said notice to be delivered to the bank through which said deposit was made and one copy to be forwarded to the Federal reserve bank which issued said certificate of deposit, both notices to bear the number of the certificate of deposit and the amount of bonds to be withdrawn: Provided, That with the consent of the bank through which said deposit of bonds was made the said owner of bonds may withdraw said bonds on 10 days' notice as above described.

SEC. 23. That when a withdrawal of bonds deposited under the provisions of this amendment may be desired by the owner of bonds as provided for in section 22, the bank which has effected loans under this amendment shall deposit a like amount of bonds in substitution for the bonds so withdrawn or shall retire the equivalent amount of loans outstanding against said bonds.

SEC. 24. That in the event any of the bonds deposited under the terms of this amendment are registered bonds the owner of bonds shall assign said bonds to the Federal reserve bank in which they are to be deposited.

SEC. 25. That this amendment shall be in force and effect immediately after its passage and approval.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LANKFORD].

Mr. LANKFORD. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am sure this bill will be helpful to the farmers of the Nation. Yet I fear it will not do as much as we hope to have it do. I wish at the proper time to offer some amendments which I think will be helpful to the bill. I realize that I can not get those amendments through unless the Committee on Banking and Currency favor them. I want to use the time which I have in merely mentioning to the committee the amendments which I wish to offer and in urging the committee to agree to their adoption.

In section 24, on page 5, you will find that the section provides, in lines 13 and 14, for advances to be made "for agricultural purposes." Now, I should like to insert before these words the words "to farmers or," so that the clause will read "advances to farmers or for agricultural purposes." In other words, the phrase "for agricultural purposes" is a very limited phrase. Suppose a farmer owes a lot of money because of the fact that he got a very small price for his cotton last year. Would an advance made to him to take care of that deficiency be for agricultural purposes? I fear it would not. Suppose he owes money as interest on a long-term loan, could he borrow money to care for this interest under the phrase "for agricultural purposes"? I fear he could not under a strict construction of that phrase. The phrase "for agricultural purposes" by a strict construction could be construed to mean only such advances as are made to pay for labor on the farm, for fertilizers, and for supplies necessary in the operation of a farm in the future. I can think of many obligations which a farmer is called upon to meet which it might be held not strictly included in the phrase "for agricultural purposes." I do not want there to be any doubt about this bill giving relief to the farmers of my district and the Nation. I want the bill to help the banks and others that are helping the farmers and thus benefit all.

The time to make a contract is before it is signed and the time to make the terms of a law clear is when it is up for consideration here and not after some lawyer or official construes it against what we really intended.

Mr. McFADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANKFORD. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. McFADDEN. I will say to the gentleman that it is my purpose to offer to amend, page 5, line 13, after the word "States," by adding the words "or to any cooperative association of producers in the United States." That will permit of loans directly to organizations of farmers, which I think will cover to a very great extent what the gentleman wishes to reach.

Mr. LANKFORD. That would help; but this bill authorizes loans only to those banks which have made advances for agricultural purposes. I want the loans to be made to those banks which have made advances to farmers, regardless of whether those advances were made strictly for agricultural purposes or to pay debts caused by loss on cotton last year or by reason of sickness in a farmer's family, and so I want to add before the words "for agricultural purposes" the words "to farmers or." I hope the committee will have no objection to that amendment.

Let me say just here that I am very glad that the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency intends to offer an amendment authorizing loans directly to any cooperative association of producers. I believe much good is to come from activities of cooperative associations of producers. I think that our marketing problems will eventually to a large extent be solved by cooperative marketing, and I am very glad to see this bill so amended as to take care of the cooperative associations of producers.

But, Mr. Chairman, there are many farmers in this country who do not belong to any cooperative association of producers, and I am especially anxious for every farmer to be taken care of by this Congress. It is my purpose to get this bill so amended, if possible, as to help the farmers who are now very much in need of financial assistance, and I want the bill so amended as to leave no doubt about their rights under the bill when it reaches final passage.

There is another amendment which I shall offer at the proper time, and that is this: The bill provides for help to those banks which have made advances for agricultural purposes. Well, there are a great many people engaged in selling supplies to farmers, selling mules to farmers, selling fertilizer to farmers, and carrying the farmer through the year. These men have made advances "for agricultural purposes," if we give that phrase a liberal construction, and yet under this bill if an advance is made by the bank to one of these men it might be construed as an advance for business purposes and not for agricultural purposes. Yet if you help the man who helps the farmer you help the farmer, and I hope the amendment will be agreeable to the committee. It will take care of the man who is carrying the farmer, and better enables that man to carry the farmer regardless of whether that man is a banker or some supply man, and this helps the farmer.

This is what we must do in this time of financial stress. We must help every man, firm, or corporation who is carrying the farmers' obligations and thus help the farmer.

Last week I introduced a bill having for its purpose the purchase of $500,000,000 worth of farmers' papers from the banks of the country by the War Finance Corporation. That bill is now before the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House and I hope that it is reported favorably and passed. If, however, this bill can be so amended as to give the farmer the relief which I am seeking to give by my bill, then there will be no necessity for further insistence upon the passage of that measure. I certainly hope this bill can be so amended as to do what my bill seeks to do and give the farmers relief, and that speedily.

There is one phrase in the paragraph which I wish to move to strike out. That is this—

Whenever in the opinion of the board of directors of the corporation the public interest may require it.

I think we should strike out those words and let this Congress determine as a Congress that the public interest requires that these advances be made in behalf of the farmer. We leave too much to be done by other people. Now, if there was some legislation coming up which provided for the board of directors doing a certain thing whenever an emergency arises in future, then it would be well for us to pass a law giving them the right to determine when that emergency arises, but that is not the case here. We have here an emergency which we know exists. We know that the public interest requires that this Congress legislate for the farmers and help the farmers of our country. Then why say "whenever the public interest may require it" help may be extended? Have you ever tried to convince a man what is required by the public interest? I saw a proposition come up a few days ago where a railroad, over 200 miles long, in my State, was about to be torn up. The question arose as to whether or not that railroad was to the public interest, and I heard it argued that you might tear up that railroad, with its little towns along the line, with their brick stores, and the people in those towns left out in the country without railroad transportation, and that the public interest would not suffer at all.

It might equally be urged that it is not to the "public interest" to protect any farmer who is in financial distress or to help any number of farmers who are about to lose their homes. It may be urged that these are purely local matters and that the public generally is not concerned with them.

It will be observed that the bill provides that—whenever, in the opinion of the board of directors of the corporation the public interest may require it, the corporation shall be authorized and empowered to make advances.

And so forth. I want the bill so amended as to not only authorize and empower the advances to be made but so as to direct that they shall be made.

Mr. Chairman, I shall offer amendments at the proper time along all these lines, and I want to call the attention of the committee to these proposed amendments so that they may be duly considered by the Members of Congress before they are offered.

I shall offer one other amendment calling for a liberal construction of this act instead of a strict construction, so as to aid the farmer wherever necessary.

Of course, Mr. Chairman, if the friends of the farmer were allowed to construe this act there would be no necessity for the bill to be so carefully drawn in an effort to help him, for it would be construed in his favor. The bill will be construed, though, by the enemies of the farmer as well as by his friends. I can not select those who are to construe this act, and therefore I want to do the only thing which I and the other friends of the farmers here can do, and that is make the bill so definite in its terms as to leave no doubt about what it means. The bill has been called "the farmers' relief bill." Let us amend it so that it will be all its name claims for it. [Applause.]

Mr. WINGO. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Chairman, in view of what has been said during this discussion about the provisions of this bill, and especially by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KING] respecting the changes from the original Norris bill made in the Senate and by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, I wish to make a statement as to what it does provide in its present form and to give my reasons for urging its passage.

The War Finance Corporation as reorganized by this act consists of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and four other persons named by the President, and is a Government agency. Its active operations are extended until July 1, 1922, and for 10 years for the purpose of liquidation with the power of extension and renewal. Its capital stock is $500,000,000 with authority to issue and have outstanding obligations amounting to three times this sum or $1,500,000,000. Therefore, its resources for all purposes will be $2,000,000,000.

With the increased powers, facilities, and resources given the corporation by this act it can make loans, advances, or purchase securities for substantially the following purposes:

(a) To assist by loans and advances in financing exports of surplus staple agricultural products and in holding and carrying such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner. Those to whom such loans and advances may be made for these purposes are enumerated as follows: Individuals, partnerships, corporations, and associations engaged within the United States in dealing in or marketing such products, and to associations of persons engaged in producing such products.

(b) To any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States that makes or has made an advance or advances to individuals, partnerships, corporations, or associations dealing in or marketing such products, and to associations composed of persons engaged in producing the same: Provided, That such advance or advances shall not exceed the unpaid balance against the product.

(c) To any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States which may have made advances for agricultural purposes, including the breeding, raising, fattening, and marketing of live stock: Provided, That such advances shall not exceed the unpaid balance against such products or live stock.

(d) To purchase from any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States instruments of indebtedness and securities carrying marketable title to staple agricultural products, including live stock.

(e) To purchase, sell, or otherwise deal in debentures, promissory notes, or other obligations issued by banking corporations organized under what is known as the Edge Act: Provided, That the assistance thus given shall be only for use in financing the export of agricultural and manufactured products.

(f) To discount or rediscount its paper or securities with the Federal reserve banks, subject to the limitations of the Federal reserve act and regulations prescribed by the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Chairman, the prosperity of America depends largely upon her ability to export and sell profitably her surplus products. Generally speaking, our surplus production is about 35 per cent of the whole. In some industries and in respect to some commodities the surplus is much greater; for instance, with cotton it is more than 60 per cent.

This bill makes it possible for the War Finance Corporation to come to the relief of the producer, the banker, the merchant, and the manufacturer in handling and disposing of the surplus products of this country in an orderly manner. Its passage should insure ample credit resources for all legitimate purposes of the country, provided the Federal Reserve Board will make the proper use of its available resources and function in the manner contemplated by Congress when the Federal Reserve Act was passed.

The War Finance Corporation will have potential resources for a credit extension of $2,000,000,000. The Federal reserve system now has an excess free gold reserve of $1,076,000,000, which makes possible the issuance, on a perfectly safe basis, of additional currency to the amount of $2,300,000,000. By a recent act of Congress the Federal Farm Loan Board will have available for the extension of agricultural credit more than $200,000,000 a year. All of this makes possible total additional credit facilities of $4,500,000,000. With such available resources and facilities and with a banking system admittedly sound there is no valid reason why business of every kind should not go ahead unafraid.

The present business depression throughout the country affects every interest and every occupation, every calling, and every industry, and it is not due to any one cause. In my judgment the principal causes may be stated as the war waste; the economic disruption of Europe; our inability to export and sell advantageously an abnormally large surplus of home products; a system of frozen credits resulting from the contraction and deflation policy inaugurated by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board in the fall of 1920; but just at this time to more than any other cause, the frozen nerves of American financiers and captains of industry.

Since we have passed the crisis and our financial system is recognized as fundamentally sound, with ample resources for business extension, no man can give a patriotic reason for being in possession of an idle dollar.

If the hoarded capital in this country, driven to cover either for hope of greater gain or the fear of taxes, was turned loose for investment and business enterprise the 5,000,000 unemployed could go to work at good wages and they and their families would become customers for the products of the farms and factories, and the home market we hear so much about would be extended and broadened and home consumption would materially reduce the next year's surplus. Also the million American homes so greatly needed in order to provide the ordinary comforts of life and proper living conditions for millions of our people could be constructed.

This would serve to bring about a much better and more substantial business revival than will ever be produced by glowing headlines in Sunday newspapers, published interviews by financiers, and speeches outlining the wonderful achievements of the present Congress. Just at this time we need something more substantial than psychological prosperity.

No one is more anxious than myself to see the Government get out of private business and to keep private business out of the Government, but under present conditions I believe the pending legislation is necessary and important.

In my judgment it is fortunate that this work of aiding in the exportation of our surplus products is to continue in the hands of the War Finance Corporation, which is an existing organization with all the necessary machinery in working order and actively functioning at the present time. It has already rendered conspicuous service and its present directing officers are in full sympathy with the object and purposes of this legislation. The advances for aiding exports under consideration and already made by the corporation amount in round numbers to $64,000,000, 93 per cent of which covers agricultural products. Of this $32,000,000 is for the purpose of assisting in the exportation and selling abroad of approximately 1,000,000 bales of our chief export commodity—cotton.

According to the best data obtainable the surplus cotton now held in the United States for export is 6,125,000 bales. This is about 4,000,000 bales above the normal surplus at this season. The orderly exportation and sale of this abnormal surplus is vital to the economic recovery and prosperity of the Southern States. The passage of this act will materially aid in effecting that result and in a great measure remove one of the chief causes of business depression in that section.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Strong].

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, before the entry of this Nation into the World War we were a debtor nation. The exportation of our surplus crops and manufactured products, the financing of many of our railroads, public utilities, and industries was made possible by the money of European nations. The World War forced us to depend upon our own resources. The War Finance Corporation was created to assist in the financing of our activities necessary to carry on the war. We emerged from the war the world's greatest creditor. European nations owed us $10,000,000,000, which they could not pay. They immediately started to try to refinance their own industries and to rebuild their world's trade. It was necessary for this Nation to finance its own exportations if we were to successfully dispose of our surplus agricultural and industrial products. We discovered that we had but few international banking institutions capable of financing such foreign trade, so early in the Sixty-sixth Congress we passed what is known as the Edge Act, the purpose of which was to permit the organization of corporations to assist in financing the exportations of our surplus products. But two corporations resulted from that act, one in New Orleans and one in New York. They have not produced the results that were expected and needed.

European nations wanted our products but could only offer securities—they did not have the cash to buy with. We had the money in this country, but we did not have the institutions to collect and convert it into credits to the end that our surplus products could be exported and sold to the nations wanting them. Consequently, it was necessary in such emergency for this Government to have some organization through which it could assist the exporting of the surplus agricultural and industrial products which this Nation has and must dispose of. So the revival of the War Finance Corporation was proposed, and in the last Congress we reported out of the Banking and Currency Committee a bill for that purpose after considerable objection and over the protest of most of the ranking and eastern members of the committee, which caused to be assigned the duty to myself of reporting the bill to the House and to have charge of it both when it passed the House and when it was passed over President Wilson's veto. It has much good. It has assisted the bank in New Orleans, formed under the Edge Act, to export great quantities of cotton and has assisted in the exportation of large quantities of wheat.

It was therefore with considerable satisfaction to me when President Harding, after consultation with the financial agencies of the Government, recommended that the War Finance Corporation be made the organization through which the marketing, transportation, and the exportation of the surplus products of the Nation are to be financed.

This bill, following the President's suggestion and having the indorsement of our committee, in a sense limits the War Finance Corporation to assistance in the marketing and exportation of agricultural products and the rendering of financial assistance to both those organizations and institutions which are or may be created to engage in the marketing and exportation of our surplus products.

The first section of the bill adds the Secretary of Agriculture to the board of directors and limits the time when the corporation will cease new operations to the 1st of July, 1922.

The second section provides that—

Whenever the board of directors of the corporation shall be of the opinion that conditions arising out of the war, or out of the disruption of foreign trade created by the war, have resulted in or may result in an abnormal surplus accumulation of any staple agricultural product of the United States or lack of a market for the sale of same, or that the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable producers of or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the corporation shall thereupon be empowered to make advances, for periods not exceeding one year from the respective dates of such advances, upon such terms, not inconsistent with this act, as it may determine:

(a) To any person engaged in the United States in dealing in or marketing any such products, or to any association composed of persons engaged in producing such products, for the purpose of assisting such person or association to carry such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner;

(b) To any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States which makes or has made an advance or advances to any such person as is described in paragraph (a) of this section for the purpose therein set forth or which makes or has made an advance or advances to any producer for the purpose set forth in paragraph (a).

The next section provides for the extension of these one-year loans up to three years.

Section 24 provides that "wherever in the opinion of the board of directors of the corporation the public interests may require it, the corporation shall be authorized and empowered to make advances upon such terms not inconsistent with this act as it may determine to any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States which may have made advances for agricultural purposes, including the breeding, raising, fattening, and marketing of live stock." And provides how they shall be made. The clear purpose is to assist in the marketing and exportation of agricultural products.

Mr. CABLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. CABLE. Does the gentleman think that the farmer producer will get a better price for his product, and will the gentleman explain how he will?

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. The farmers produced a surplus last year, a great crop has just been harvested, and there will be a still greater surplus in this country, and that will flood our markets and bring reduced prices unless that surplus can be exported.

Mr. CABLE. The bill provides for holding the products until they are exported, and he can hold them up for an entire year.

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Only until they can be "marketed in an orderly manner."

Mr. CABLE. Will the gentleman define what an "orderly manner" is?

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. That will be defined by the directors of the War Finance Corporation—such a manner as they believe to be for the protection of the market.

Mr. CABLE. Protection of the exporter or the producer?

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Both. If they protect the market, that will protect the producer and the exporter.

Mr. CABLE. Under the bill the time can be extended as much as four years. Is not that true?

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Its funds will be loaned for one year and may be extended for three years.

Mr. CABLE. But it can make a loan for a year after the 1st of July next year, and then it can be extended for three years more.

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Yes. If the loan was made at the end of June, 1922.

Mr. CABLE. So naturally this business could be carried on for four more years from the present time?

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. But at the end of July 21, 1922, no more new loans or new business could be taken. After that time they may extend for three years until the winding up of the business operations of the corporation.

The purpose of the bill is to help in the orderly marketing and exportations of our surplus products. The purpose also is to help build up in this country organizations and corporations that will be able to export our surplus after the War Finance Corporation shall have gone out of business.

If that is not done, when this corporation goes out of business on July 1 next we will be in the same position we are in now, and we will have no organizations ready to extend credit to exporters to export our surplus products. America must now take care of the exportation of her own surplus. We will no longer have assistance from the European countries. They owe us, and not only the ten-billion-dollar debt but a billion dollars in interest that they can not pay. We have the money, and we must build up corporations and associations to extend credit, in order to export our surplus products. [Applause.]

This bill will both assist in the orderly marketing of our agricultural surplus and will assist to build associations and corporations to continue to market them. It will give to agriculture the help it now needs and the help it is entitled to. It will help bring prosperity to our Nation by providing for the exportation and sale to other nations of that which we need to sell and they long to possess. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. A. P. NELSON].

Mr. A. P. NELSON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this bill, Senate bill 1915, a bill to amend the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, in order to provide relief for producers and dealers in agricultural products, is a bill that is very far-reaching in its operations, and should have our very careful and conscientious consideration.

I am free to confess that when I first read this bill I was somewhat in doubt as to whether we ought to adopt a bill of this character, but the more I study the bill and the more I consider the dire need of the farmers which exists in our country to-day, the more I am convinced that this bill is justified, because it will help to relieve the very severe financial depression which exists to-day among the farmers in the production, distribution, and orderly marketing of agricultural products.

It is an emergency measure, as its provisions extend only to July 1, 1922, or less than a year, although provisions are made for extending loans already made by renewing from time to time, but in no case beyond the period of three years from the date on which such advances were originally made.

As was stated by my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. DALE], in his most excellent and eloquent address before the committee to-day, the original War Finance Corporation act was drafted as an emergency war measure to meet the extraordinary situation created by the war. He indicated in his speech that it should not be revived or continued under peace-time conditions. I wish to say in reply to the gentleman and to those of the committee who may be opposed to this measure for the same reasons that we are to-day in even a more serious condition economically than we were during the war. As a result of the Great War, in its awful destruction of life, money, and property, we have a broken-down and chaotic social and economic condition in Europe and the world generally. We have a very serious economic condition confronting us in the United States, a condition that is even more serious than during the war; and it is this extraordinary depressed economic situation in our country that we wish to relieve by this legislation.

This bill has been urged by the administration as an aid to agricultural production and marketing and as a relief to the farmers of our country. Section 2 of this bill makes provision for adding the Secretary of Agriculture on the board of directors of the War Finance Corporation. This is done with the idea that the Secretary of Agriculture, having a broad and fundamental knowledge of the peculiar needs of the farmers, will be in position to contribute much in the administration of the law for the aid of agriculture and the farmer, as provided for in this bill. Section 2 also fixes July 1, 1922, as the date when liquidation of the assets and the winding up of the affairs of the corporation shall begin.

Section 22 makes provision that where conditions arising as a result of the war or out of disruption of foreign trade created by the war abnormal surplus accumulation of staple agricultural products in the United States has resulted, or lack of market for the sale of same, or where the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable the producers or the dealers to carry such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the corporation shall be empowered to finance such producers and dealers. This is, in my opinion, a very wise provision, because we can not hope to have a revival of business and prosperity until we have a proper production, distribution, and marketing of our products. The producer of agricultural products to-day is practically unable, because of inadequate financial aid, to produce and properly market his products.

This bill is framed to relieve the awful stagnation and depression which to-day threaten the very social and economic life of our country, and the administration and your committee believe that by the provisions of this bill we can put in force and operation the combined wisdom and strength of the machinery of our Government and our financial institutions in order to make it possible for the farmer, the laborer, the manufacturer, and the mill owner to unite in bringing about prosperity and contentment again in our land. [Applause.]

It is clear that the financial, economic, and social conditions of Europe have stopped to a large degree the free exchange of goods. Both imports and exports have been reduced. During the fiscal year 1921 as compared with the fiscal year 1920, the slump in foreign trade has been dropped from $13,347,000,000 to $10,171,000,000 in 1921, or a decrease of 23.8 per cent. Imports dropped from $5,238,000,000 to $3,654,000,000, or a decrease of 32.2 per cent, and exports dropped from $8,109,000,000 to $6,516,000,000, or 19.6 per cent loss. Much of this slump is, no doubt, due to the lower prices and not altogether to reduced quantities.

This bill is an attempt to help restore normal trade and industrial relations. In the United States about 55 per cent of the people are engaged in producing agricultural products and raw materials, and a certain percentage of these products must be sold in world markets to relieve home congestion and encourage continued production. In my judgment it is idle, however, to hope that this bill or any bill will do more than to aid restoration of agricultural, commercial, and industrial activities. Through too rapid inflation and unwarranted speculation in many quarters during the war period, which should have been stopped at the close of 1918 and the beginning of 1919 by a gradual deflation rather than by the sudden and too rapid deflation applied in 1920, we find ourselves to-day in a situation that demands the best thought for constructive relief and readjustment.

I have proposed an amendment to section 24 so as to include the general provisions of this bill to not only banks, bankers, and trust companies but to cooperative associations of producers as well. As I understand it, there are several thousand of these cooperative associations of farmers in the United States, including cotton producers, wheat growers, potato growers, dairy associations, cattle raisers, and so forth. By this amendment it will be possible for the War Finance Corporation to not only deal with the organized local banks and trust companies but with the officers of these cooperative associations of producers and farmers as well, and I am very much pleased that this amendment will be accepted by the chairman of the committee and offered as a committee amendment, which should be promptly adopted.

I deem this amendment very vital to the bill in order that the cooperative association of farmers shall be able to deal directly with the War Finance Corporation through their official channels, and not be compelled to rely entirely for their aid through the War Finance Corporation on the banks, bankers, or trust companies of their respective communities.

I have a great deal of sympathy with those who urge that the War Finance Corporation should deal directly with the individual farmers throughout the country, but when you consider that this bill is purely an emergency measure and only for one year, it becomes evident that it would be unwise, if not impossible, to arrange the machinery for thousands of clerks and officers in the corporation itself and throughout the various parts of the country to deal directly with over 5,000,000 individual farmers. The administration and the committee believe that we must utilize the organized machinery already provided, such as the local banks, trust companies, and cooperative farmers' associations.

Even this provision will mean a large clerical force on the part of the War Finance Corporation, if it is to come in contact with the thousands of country banks and farmers' cooperative associations. From the interpretation placed by the Director of the War Finance Corporation and its counsel, it is understood by your committee that the same advances will be made to the farmers and agricultural producers for our domestic trade and needs under section 24 as is provided for the export trade under section 22.

I believe that my amendment is absolutely correct, because if money is to be loaned to banks or trust companies and by them to the producers, it should also be loaned to cooperative organizations of farm producers direct. My amendment recognizes that if it is fundamentally right to permit the War Finance Corporation to encourage the orderly marketing of agricultural products for foreign export trade, it is equally fundamentally correct and important to assist them in their domestic conditions, which to-day are so dire, distressing, and acute as to almost completely disarm the farmer in some sections of our country.

It is also my opinion that both banks and cooperative associations are needed to make this law properly function, because in many localities the banks are too small and already too overloaned to extend further credits or to guarantee or secure further advances, as is necessary under the provisions of this act. In such cases the farmers' cooperative associations, where they put up the proper collateral and securities, may secure funds direct from the War Finance Corporation.

In this connection, permit me to call your attention to the thought that was expressed by Gov. Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, in the hearings before the committee, that the local banks, already extended in their loans to farmers and farm organizations, may turn over their paper to the War Finance Corporation, as provided for under the bill, and then extend further credit locally to the farmers by taking short-time paper, which can be rediscounted at the Federal reserve banks in their respective districts. He stated to the committee that the guaranty of proper paper to the War Finance Corporation by the local banks would not in any way mitigate against the banks receiving continued rediscount privileges at the Federal reserve banks upon adequately secured short-time paper eligible for rediscount.

For example, if a bank had $100,000 of agricultural paper in its portfolio, it could turn this over to the War Finance Corporation, with its guaranty and proper collateral security, which the War Finance Corporation would in turn sell to the investing public and turn over in cash to the local bank $100,000. Such a transaction would make it possible for the bank to be relieved of its frozen credits and obtain free capital to loan to the farmers of the community by taking short-time paper, which would be eligible for rediscount at the Federal reserve banks. Multiply such a transaction by thousands of instances throughout the entire Nation and you will begin to realize what the War Finance Corporation will be in position to do to relieve our distressed conditions which exist to-day. You would immediately set in motion liquid capital which will make possible the orderly functioning of our agricultural, manufacturing, and industrial interests and change the present stagnant and depressed situation into one of progress, prosperity, and contentment.

I also have an amendment to offer to the committee amendment, section 28, striking out after the word "advance," on page 10, line 1, all of lines 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, thus making it impossible for any local bank or trust company to charge any commission or other compensation for services in connection with these loans except the straight 2 per cent per annum provided for by the original draft in the Senate. I think that this provision is absolutely essential in order to protect the farmers from any charges of any kind by bankers or trust companies in excess of the 2 per cent provided for by the section. The bank or trust company, when it takes the farmer's paper and guarantees it over to the War Finance Corporation, putting up the bonds and securities therefore, would naturally be entitled to a fair remuneration for such guaranty and service, but it should be limited to a fair percentage and not be left wide open for profiteering. The farmer should be protected in this case, and my amendment has been accepted by the chairman of the committee and will be offered as a committee amendment, which, I think, makes this section acceptable to everyone and vouchsafes the best interest of the farmer and makes it impossible for any advantage being taken of him in his extreme financial distress.

The committee amended the bill by striking out section 25a, which makes provision for the purchase of farm loan bonds by the War Finance Corporation under certain conditions. As a friend of the farm loan system, I would naturally desire to extend every possible facility and aid to the farmers through the Federal Farm Loan Bureau, but this section was eliminated after consultation with the Federal Farm Loan Board, which, I understand, was a unit in believing that the provisions of this section would not be of any real assistance to them. Commissioner Lobdell, in a letter to the chairman of the committee, makes the following statement:

Aside from the proposition as stated, the board is forced to the conclusion that even if the assistance contemplated should be the policy of Congress, the proposed measure does not afford it in a manner of which the Federal land banks could with prudence avail themselves. The first provision is that of a direct loan to the banks at a rate of interest not exceeding their loaning rate. Certainly no prudent business man would expect a Federal land bank to borrow money on a short-time note bearing a rate of interest equal to its loaning rate and use that money to make 20 and 30 year farm mortgage loans. The second provision is for the purchase of farm loan bonds without mention of rate, such bonds to mature within five years. The same objection suggested above would apply to the issue of a five-year bond. Manifestly, such a bond could not be paid from the proceeds of a 20 or 30 year loan, and the banks would find themselves under the necessity of refunding at the end of that period, and the fact that these banks had out $200,000,000 of paper which they must pay in five years, without a corresponding accrual, would, in the judgment of the board, detract from their credit in the general market and interfere with their stable and orderly operation much beyond the value of any immediate impetus.

For the reasons stated, the board is unable to conclude that the proposed measure would helpfully facilitate the operations of the farm loan system or be of any permanent benefit to the agricultural interests of the country.

In addition to the statements made by the commissioner as quoted, it might be added that the War Finance Corporation would have to sell these bonds in the market, or it would be a direct loan from the Treasury to the Federal land banks through the War Finance Corporation. The Treasury has already advanced $183,000,000 to the Federal land banks.

It is clear that it would not be good business to set up two selling agencies by the Government for these Federal land bank bonds, and it is probably true that the Federal Farm Loan Board is able to sell these bonds in the market at as good an advantage as the War Finance Corporation. To place two competing Government agencies in the field in selling the same bonds would hardly seem to be the prudent or businesslike thing to do.

It seems evident, therefore, that no advantage to the Federal land banks would be gained by retaining this section. Through the depository privilege of the Curtis-Nelson bill, the Federal land banks now have the means by which they can function and provide the necessary loans to the farmers of the country.

As amended by the House committee, the War Finance Corporation will have the authority to issue and have outstanding at any one time its notes and bonds in an amount aggregating not more than three times its paid-up capital. This would place a limitation on the corporation in its total financial operations to $2,000,000,000, one-half of which, or $1,000,000,000, can be advanced to agricultural interests.

In closing I wish to say that the great need of our Nation to-day is economy and cooperation. This bill, properly administered, together with a spirit of economy, business efficiency, and cooperation by all the people, will help to give new life to our present stagnant and depressed conditions and assure us of future growth and development. We must unite in going forward, carrying optimistic brows and determined hearts, in a program of national revival of agriculture, commerce, and industry. By so doing we shall soon reach again a place of prosperity, contentment, and happiness. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I do not recall a single bill that has been before the Congress during my term of service about which there seems to be so much misapprehension. Those who have favored this bill, I fear, are carried by a false hope as to certain measures of relief that will come to the American farmer under it, and which hope will not be justified, I fear, by the workings of the act. On the other hand, those who have opposed this bill have magnified what we did, but, as a matter of fact, they have only examined the bill hurriedly, as indicated by their statements, and overlooked the fact that there is really just one new proposition in the bill, and that is section 24; the rest of it is the present existing law, except that it repeats; it cuts down the time and makes definite and certain the time of the operation, liquidation, and so forth. So if the committee now will be patient with me, at least that fraction of the committee which is not elsewhere, I want to take up the bill and undertake to analyze it and show what this bill does.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, does the gentleman think it is proper to proceed with but 25 or 30 Members on the floor, all the balance being somewhere else, and nobody to find out anything about this bill? I make the point of order, Mr. Chairman, that we have not got a quorum, as we ought to have somebody here to hear this discussion.

Mr. ARENTZ. The gentleman from Texas just arrived himself, he has been absent all day.

Mr. BLANTON. That is not the fact. The gentleman from Texas was absent only long enough to eat a lunch. I have been in the cloak room and Speaker's lobby working hard on some legislation, and on the job constantly, with that exception.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is in his right when he comes on the floor, no matter how long he may have been absent, to make the point of no quorum. The Chair will count.

Mr. BLANTON. I am not going to let the gentleman get in a facetious remark of that kind.

The CHAIRMAN. [After counting.] Fifty-six gentlemen are present, not a quorum.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Anderson	Dallinger	Hill	McCormick
Anthony	Davis, Minn.	Himes	McKenzie
Appleby	Dempsey	Houghton	McLaughlin, Nebr.
Bacharach	Dickinson	Hudspeth	McLaughlin, Pa.
Bankhead	Dominick	Humphreys	McSwain
Barbour	Doughton	Husted	Madden
Barkley	Drane	Hutchinson	Magee
Beedy	Dunbar	James	Maloney
Blakeney	Dunn	Jeffers, Ala.	Mann
Bland, Ind.	Dyer	Johnson, S. Dak.	Mansfield
Boies	Echols	Johnson, Wash.	Martin
Bond	Edmonds	Jones, Pa.	Mead
Brennan	Elliott	Jones, Tex.	Merritt
Brinson	Ellis	Kahn	Michaelson
Britten	Elston	Kearns	Mills
Brooks, Ill.	Fairchild	Kelley, Mich.	Montague
Brooks, Penn.	Fairfield	Kelly, Pa.	Montoya
Brown, Tenn.	Faust	Kendall	Moore, Ill.
Browne, Wis.	Fess	Kennedy	Moore, Ohio
Burdick	Fields	Ketcham	Moore, Ind.
Burke	Fish	Kless	Morin
Burroughs	Fitzgerald	Kincheloe	Mudd
Butler	Flood	Kindred	Murphy
Byrnes, S. C.	Frear	Kirkpatrick	Nelson, J. M.
Campbell, Kans.	Free	Kitchin	Newton, Minn.
Cannon	Freeman	Klecza	Newton, Mo.
Cantrill	Frothingham	Kline, N. Y.	Nolan
Carter	Funk	Knight	O'Brien
Chalmers	Gahn, Ohio	Knutson	Ogden
Chandler, N. Y.	Gallivan	Kopp	Olp
Chandler, Okla.	Garrett, Tex.	Kreider	Osborne
Christopherson	Gilbert	Kunz	Padgett
Clague	Glynn	Langley	Palge
Clark, Fla.	Goldsbrough	Lanham	Parker, N. Y.
Clarke, N. Y.	Goodykoontz	Larsen, Ga.	Patterson, N. J.
Classon	Gould	Larson, Minn.	Perkins
Clouse	Graham, Ill.	Layton	Perlman
Cockran	Graham, Pa.	Lee, Ga.	Peters
Codd	Griest	Lee, N. Y.	Petersen
Cole, Iowa	Griffin	Leibach	Porter
Cole, Ohio	Haugen	Linthicum	Pou
Colton	Hawes	Longworth	Pringey
Connolly, Pa.	Hays	Luce	Purnell
Cooper, Ohio	Herrick	Luhning	Radcliffe
Cooper, Wis.	Hersey	Lyon	Rainey, Ala.
Cramton	Hickey	McArthur	Rainey, Ill.
Crowther	Hicks	McClintic	Ramseyer

Ransley	Scott, Tenn.	Taylor, N. J.	Ward, N. Y.
Reavis	Sears	Taylor, Tenn.	Wason
Reber	Shreve	Temple	Watson
Reed, N. Y.	Siegel	Ten Eyck	Weaver
Riordan	Sisson	Thomas	Webster
Rodenberg	Slemp	Tincher	Wheeler
Rogers	Snell	Tinkham	Williams
Rose	Snyder	Trudway	Williamson
Rosenbloom	Stephens	Tyson	Winslow
Rossdale	Stevenson	Underhill	Wood, Ind.
Rucker	Stiness	Upshaw	Woods, Va.
Ryan	Stoll	Vale	Wright
Sabath	Sullivan	Vare	Wurzbach
Sanders, Ind.	Tague	Volk	Yates
Sanders, N. Y.	Taylor, Ark.	Volstead	Zihlman
Scott, Mich.	Taylor, Colo.	Walsh

Thereupon the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. STAFFORD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having under consideration the bill (S. 1915) to provide for the purchase of farm products in the United States, to sell the same in foreign countries, and for other purposes, finding itself without a quorum, he had caused the roll to be called and that 179 Members had answered to their names—a quorum.

The SPEAKER. The committee will resume its session.

The committee resumed its session, with Mr. STAFFORD in the chair.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. NORTON].

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, in this short time I will confine myself to two or three sections of the bill.

This bill purports to provide relief for the producers of and dealers in agricultural products, and for other purposes. In fact in my judgment it is one of the worst financial schemes ever suggested. It provides for loans to the amount of $1,000,000,000 by the Government by its agent on chattel mortgages upon agricultural products, including live stock, and those loans are in part for the purposes of enabling the producers or dealers in carrying the products or live stock until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner. In other words, it is for the purpose of enabling certain dealers and bankers to bull the market, raising the cost of the articles to the consumer, and advancing the cost of living. It asks the Government to assist in what is condemned by the cold-storage plants—the holding of the necessities of life from the market to advance the cost—to assist in the boycott by the speculators and bankers of the consumer, and this you ask the Government to do through a tax that the consumer has to pay.

Have I misstated the facts? What do sections 22 and 24 say? Section 22 says:

Whenever the board of directors of the corporation shall be of the opinion that conditions arising out of the war, or out of the disruption of foreign trade created by the war, have resulted in or may result in an abnormal surplus accumulation of any staple agricultural product of the United States or lack of a market for the sale of same, or that the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable producers of or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the corporation shall thereupon be empowered to make advances for periods not exceeding one year from the respective dates of such advances upon such terms, not inconsistent with this act, as it may determine.

(a) To any person engaged in the United States in dealing in or marketing any such products, or to any association composed of persons engaged in producing such products, for the purpose of assisting such person or association to carry such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner.

And section 24 says:

Whenever in the opinion of the board of directors of the corporation the public interest may require it, the corporation shall be authorized and empowered to make advances upon such terms, not inconsistent with this act, as it may determine to any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States which may have made advances for agricultural purposes, including the breeding, raising, fattening, and marketing of live stock, etc.

The chairman of the committee in speaking of the original War Finance Corporation act stated—

The bill was prepared at a time when great financial stress prevailed everywhere, when this country was straining every nerve and using every bit of its industry to win the war, and the financial institutions of the country were being urged to finance the tremendous financial obligations of the Government. So, as I say, this law was conceived under great stress * * *

He further said:

There was grave doubt in the minds of a great many people as to the wisdom of passing such legislation as this, and I, for one, strenuously opposed it when it was first proposed, because I saw in it an institution that would promote inflation and increase costs throughout the country, etc.

The war has been over for more than two years, and now it is proposed to reenact it in a far worse form than anyone proposed even under the stress of war. This bill authorizes the directors of the War Finance Corporation to loan $1,000,000,000 whenever the board of directors of the corporation shall be of the opinion that conditions arising out of the war have resulted in or may result in an abnormal surplus accumulation of any staple agricultural product of the United States or lack of a market for the sale of same, or that the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable producers of or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the corporation shall thereupon be empowered to make advances for periods not exceeding one year from the respective dates of such advances, upon such terms, not inconsistent with this act, as it may determine, and so forth.

In other words, it enables the Government to assist in holding up the necessities of life from the market; instead of individuals furnishing the money for cold storage, the Government is to furnish it; and instead of labor or contractors boycotting or striking, the Government is to assist in the great boycott. Government in business! No. But Government is in business as it is to furnish all the money and take all the risk of the returns. Why do I say so? Because the bill further provides that the loan should be made on securities that no sensible banker would accept, except as a gamble with an exorbitant interest—a chattel mortgage on herds of cattle, or flocks of sheep, or droves or hogs, or crops of cotton possibly ruined by the boll weevil—not only that but on collateral already taken and practically worthless.

You say this is a bold statement. Let us see what section 24 says:

The corporation may, in exceptional cases, upon such terms not inconsistent with this act as it may determine, purchase from domestic banks, bankers, or trust companies notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or other instruments of indebtedness secured by chattel mortgages, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, or other instruments in writing conveying or securing marketable title to staple agricultural products, including live stock.

The corporation is thus to relieve the bankers from the chattel mortgages they hold on growing or matured crops and live stock. Would any legitimate banker take such mortgage on such collateral without pay for the great risk assumed? How many such banks do you suppose will fail during the next three years and more for which the loan is made and renewed? And yet the Republican platform provided for the divorcing of business from government.

This bill seeks to distribute Government funds among the banks to be safely kept by them as Jackson distributed money among the banks of the various States, and all these moneys will be paid back to the United States Government at the same time. Not since the days when the Greenback Party flourished in some of the Western States has anyone proposed such a wild scheme of finance. At that time the war had been fought and had ended. The country was in an unsettled state. Gold and silver were at a premium. Cyclones, droughts, and grasshoppers had ruined the crops. In fact, starvation and great suffering were felt in many parts of the country, but especially in Kansas and Nebraska. The farms being heavily mortgaged, many thought relief would be had in the issuing of paper money. The Republican Party was in power and such men as John Sherman in charge of finance, and they agreed that such a course would only make a bad matter worse. Sherman said we will resume specie payments, as a sound financial system is essential; and he did resume, and now all agree that it was the wise course to pursue. Lands rose in value until now those States are the "garden of the world."

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 11 minutes.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentlemen of the House that after I consume the 11 minutes it is my purpose to move that the committee rise. Has the gentleman from Arkansas used all of his time?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas has used all of his time.

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, in reference to what the gentleman from Arkansas said as to the authorization for the Federal land banks for $200,000,000, it seems to me that we should not do that. I think it is better to permit the Federal land bank system to function in an orderly manner. If, as the gentleman has said, orders have been issued not to permit the Federal land banks to function, those orders should be withdrawn. I do not believe that any such orders have ever been issued. I believe that the Federal land bank system will be able to function to its capacity. It is a physical impossibility to have the machinery to loan $200,000,000 within the period that is proposed under this authorization.

They have a limited organization. There is a lot of detail in connection with the making of these loans. The property must be investigated and all details gone through. The loans must be approved, and it takes time to do those things. There is a limit to the capacity of the Federal farm loan system in that respect. In view of what the gentleman has also said in regard to loaning money to foreigners to advance their operations in this country, I think it is well for me to repeat here what I said in the report of the committee, because I do not believe that all of the members of the committee have read this report.

It is simply a question as to whether or not Americans are to control the price of their products or we are to loan our money to foreigners and let them set the price on our own products. That is the question pure and simple. I quote from the report:

Credit is a weapon of great value to the person who is able to command it. A seller who has credit at his command can carry his products until the market warrants their sale; a seller without credit must sell whether the market is good or bad. A buyer with credit can buy whenever the market is at its lowest and carry the products until he is ready to use them; a buyer without credit must buy when he needs the goods, whether the market is high or low. As between buyer and seller, the man that commands credit will dictate the price.

Before the war the sources of credit for our agricultural export movement were largely controlled from abroad. Foreign bankers advanced funds to foreign buyers so that they could take advantage of the necessities of the American farmer and buy the greater part of the year's crop in the months immediately following the harvest. American farmers had no adequate credit facilities, so that they were forced to sell whenever the foreign purchaser was willing to buy.

To-day the foreign financier of our export crops has broken down. Owing to risk of exchange fluctuations, the foreign purchaser and the foreign buyer do not dare to pay dollars to the American farmer in August for farm products which they may have to sell in December in depreciated francs or marks or lire. They are compelled to wait until they need the products for immediate resale or manufacture, although they well know that by waiting they may be compelled later to pay a higher price to the American farmer.

As already stated, the committee has eliminated from the Senate bill the provision authorizing loans to foreigners, because it believes it to be unwise to place any part of the large financial resources of our Government at the disposal of foreigners, thus again giving the control of credit to the foreign buyer instead of to the American seller. On the contrary, the situation presents a great opportunity to the United States to reverse the usual process, place adequate credit machinery in the hands of the American seller, and enable him to carry his products until they can be marketed in an orderly manner. That, in brief, is the purpose of the present bill. Recognizing that the situation has come upon us abruptly and acutely, it authorizes the War Finance Corporation to give temporary assistance, so far as possible through existing banking channels, in the hope that after a short time permanent credit machinery will have been established adequate to meet the situation without governmental assistance.

This legislation furnishes money to the American producer and the American trader, and permits him to finance his own crop and thereby control the price on that product. I submit to you that that is a pretty practical proposition, and much better when you take into consideration the present international trade situation. The United States Government and its people have loaned practically $20,000,000,000 to the countries of the world to-day, and it is a serious problem now as to whether or not we are going to be able to do very much business with the foreigners on account of that. Only just the other day, before a committee of this House, the governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in his testimony recommended the cancellation of this debt upon the ground that it was a trade impediment, that it was better for the American people to have a market for their goods than it was to collect this money. Are we going to extend still further credits over there and have them put in the same class as the twenty billion, or are we going to loan money to our own people to finance our own products? I think that question answers itself in the mind of any conservative American.

Mr. Meyer, the managing director of the War Finance Corporation, recently said with respect to both agricultural and railroad finance that it was to help the agricultural situation further that the very purpose of this legislation is to extend the powers of the War Finance Corporation with respect to both agricultural and railroad finance. To help the agricultural situation further, it is clear that the legislation must meet a different condition from that contemplated by the original amendment to the War Finance Corporation act by which, in March, 1919, it was given power in connection with the financing of foreign trade. Foreign credit is not the critical factor at the present time. I want to emphasize that.

It is of the utmost importance now to recognize a new condition in our foreign trade. This condition has less to do with credits to foreigners and more with credits to Americans. We must now realize the necessity to sell our agricultural products more gradually than we did in former years, and therefore a corresponding necessity to carry our commodities here in America in larger quantities for a longer period of marketing.

This is strikingly illustrated in the export of our cotton. In the cotton year 1910-11, 81 per cent of the exports for the entire year were concentrated in the six months from September to February, inclusive. In 1919-20 only 51 per cent of the exports for the entire cotton year were forwarded during the same months.

This means that we must carry forward into the second six months of the crop year one and one-half to two million bales that formerly were exported in the first six months.

The same conditions govern our other commodities, and for this reason financing must be provided to carry our products in this country.

The reason I say that foreign credits are not in great demand is because we have investigated the possibilities through representative bankers and business men in Europe, and they report that the demand for credit is not there. Europe prefers to take our commodities gradually instead of in a short period, but it does not want to buy largely for future shipment, even if credit is offered; the exchange risks are too large. The fluctuations in exchange during the past year were greater than the present fluctuations in cotton. If the foreigner has to take a chance on one or the other, he prefers to take the chance on the cotton or other commodity fluctuations rather than on the much wider fluctuations of exchange.

Not recognizing the situation last fall, this country undertook to force upon our European customers a year's supply in a few months. This not only broke down the prices of our commodities but also broke down the foreign exchanges, and this interfered not only with the exports of our agricultural products but also with all our other business. The price of sterling in July, 1920, before the crop movement began was 3.96; the price in November, 1920, was 3.34. The continental exchanges declined even more.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Do I understand the gentleman to say that by what he calls the attempt to force on foreign countries our productions the rate of exchange was affected?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes; it affected the price of exchange. Our attempts to force exports abroad last year affected the rate of exchange.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I understood the gentleman to say that it was responsible for it entirely.

Mr. McFADDEN. I did not mean to infer that. I say that it had a large part to do with it.

If we provide financing to hold our commodities for more gradual marketing over a longer period, we will be doing only what any sensible merchant should do to handle his business. It is not a question of holding for speculative purposes; conditions compel us to hold for gradual marketing if we do not want to cause disaster to ourselves and to those that buy from us. Merchants and manufacturers want a reasonably stabilized market, and we, as producers, must control our goods in a way to meet the financial conditions of the buying market. They can no longer buy, as they did before the war, almost a whole year's supply in the six months following the maturing of our crops. American producers and dealers must carry our commodities for more gradual marketing through their banks.

If we are able to market our commodities more gradually, we shall accomplish more toward the stabilization of the international exchanges than can be brought about by any of the many artificial schemes now being proposed.

This legislation with regard to advances to agricultural interests, and so forth, and to the railroads, authorizes the purchase by the War Finance Corporation of bonds which the Director General of Railroads may have occasion to take from the railroads, in connection with capital expenditures for improvements and betterments made during the period of Federal control.

The importance of the agricultural interest is paramount in our national economic structure. It is evident that the merchants and bankers can not pull themselves out of the hole without pulling the farmer out of the hole. It is equally true that the market for the farmers' commodities depends to a great extent upon a fully employed and prosperous commerce and industry. Commerce in this country not only depends upon the railroads for the vital element of efficient transportation, but normal operation of the railroads involves the consumption of lumber, coal, iron and steel, and other great basic commodities. When the railroads are out of the consuming market, as they are at present, industry is inevitably stagnant and unemployment prevails. If they are in possession of funds and functioning in a normal way, they are directly among our greatest consumers, and indirectly through the large numbers of industrial labor affected.

An additional reason why this legislation should pass is that it is a means of financing the cotton crop, which is one of the big export crops. We must provide the necessary financial machinery to carry those crops until they can be marketed in an orderly manner. That is evident to those people who are producing cotton, because I have heard them argue continually before our committee that the present banking facilities of the country will not permit the financing of this crop and the holding of it until we can have an orderly marketing. I submit that if these advances are made it is a great deal better to make them on products which we control here in our own country rather than to have them stored in Europe and take the uncertain European credits which are available to-day.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired. All time has expired, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when used in this act the term "person" includes partnerships, corporations, and associations, as well as individuals.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. STAFFORD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the bill S. 1915, had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 1940. An act for the relief of the Southern Iron & Metal Co., Jacksonville, Fla.;

H. R. 1269. An act to make a preliminary survey of the Calaveras River, in California, with a view to the control of its floods; and

H. R. 1475. An act providing for a grant of land to the State of Washington for a biological station and general research purposes.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, August 15, 1921, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. VESTAL, from the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6119) for the coinage of a Grant souvenir gold dollar in commemoration of the centenary of the birth of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, late President of the United States, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 343), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. VOLSTEAD, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7294) supplemental to the national prohibition act, with Senate amendments thereto, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 344), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CABLE: A bill (H. R. 8236) to reduce the quota of the United States Naval Academy to a prewar basis; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8237) to reduce the quota of the United States Military Academy at West Point, in the State of New York, to a prewar basis; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WARD of North Carolina: A bill (H. R. 8238) to authorize the erection of a public building at Farmville, N. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8239) to authorize a survey of Yeopim River, Chowan County, N. C.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FULMER: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 27) urging the Federal Reserve Board to lower promptly the rediscount interest rate on Liberty bonds to 4 per cent and on agricultural and commercial paper to 5 per cent and to increase the credits and circulation of the system; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: Resolution (H. Res. 173) for the immediate consideration of House bill 7294; to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LEA of California: A bill (H. R. 8240) granting a pension to Frances A. Brown; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SPEAKS: A bill (H. R. 8241) granting a pension to Ada C. Figley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 8242) granting a pension to Sarah J. Duncan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8243) granting a pension to Phoebe Webb; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TIMBERLAKE: A bill (H. R. 8244) permitting Frances Mack Mann to purchase certain public lands; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2395. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of M. G. Sperry and E. L. Seal, relating to the American Legion; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2396. By Mr. CANNON: Petition of citizens of Danville, Ill., protesting against legislation restricting the freedom of worship (H. R. 4388); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2397. By Mr. CULLEN: Resolution by Friends of Irish Freedom, relative to taxation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2398. By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Zion Lutheran Church, of Millbrook, Ill., for disarmament; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2399. Also, petition of the Durison Co., of Chicago, Ill., for extension of the dye control act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2400. Also, petition of Greenlee Bros. & Co., of Rockford, Ill., favoring early enactment of the Winslow-Townsend bill for relief of the railways; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2401. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of the Noll Chemical & Color Works (Inc.), 152 West One hundred and eighth Street, New York City; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2402. Also, petition of J. B. Pitcher, president of the Nitro Products Corporation, 120 Broadway, New York City; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2403. Also, petition of Jacob Meurer, president of the Meurer Steel Barrel Co. (Inc.), 23-31 West Forty-third Street, New York City; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2404. By Mr. LINEBERGER: Petition of C. A. Buffum, Whittier Chamber of Commerce, Retail Dry Goods Merchants' Association of Los Angeles, Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, and the Produce Exchange of Los Angeles, protesting against the failure of the Ways and Means Committee to withdraw the war tax on express charges as well as on freight and passenger charges; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2405. Also, telegram from Frank Nazaro, president of the Produce Exchange of Los Angeles, Calif., urging the cancellation of the tax on express; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2406. By Mr. NEWTON of Missouri: Petition of 25 citizens of St. Louis, Mo., urging an immediate tax revision; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2407. By Mr. PATTERSON of Missouri: Petition of Jobbers and Manufacturers' Association, of Springfield, Mo., for the elimination of the proposed tax on express business; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2408. By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: Petition of 61 citizens of Battle Creek, Mich., protesting against passage of House bill 4388, providing for regulation of Sunday observance by civil force under penalty for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2409. By Mr. SPEAKS: Telegrams from the Musical Industries Association, the Goldsmith Music Store Co., and the Wilkin Redman Co., of Columbus, Ohio, protesting against the excise tax on musical instruments; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2410. By Mr. SWING: Petition of citizens of Santa Ana, Calif., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2411. Also, petition of citizens of San Bernardino, Calif., protesting against the passage of House bill 4388; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2412. Also, petition of citizens of San Diego, Calif., protesting against the passage of Senate bill 1948; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2413. By Mr. YATES: Petition of Fay Lewis & Bros. Co., of Rockford, Ill., protesting against increase in internal-revenue taxes on tobacco products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2414. Also, petition of Mr. A. J. Clark, 812 Steger Building, Chicago, Ill., protesting against the so-called Sunday blue law; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2415. Also, petition of Judge Henry Neil, of Hinsdale, Ill., urging that only mothers be employed to instruct mothers in the care of their own children, and urging that a provision to this effect be inserted in the Sheppard-Towner bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE.

MONDAY, August 15, 1921.

The Chaplain, Rev. J. J. Muir, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father, we recognize Thy hand in the blessings of life continued unto us. As each day witnesseth that Thy mercies never fail, as the recipient of those mercies we want to turn our thoughts to the duties which command attention, and ask the guidance of Thy wisdom in all the plans and all the exercises of this day. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

NAMING A PRESIDING OFFICER.

The Secretary, George A. Sanderson, read the following communication:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, D. C., August 15, 1921.

To the SENATE:

Being temporarily absent from the Senate, I appoint Hon. REED SMOOT, a Senator from the State of Utah, to perform the duties of the Chair this legislative day.

ALBERT B. CUMMINS,
President pro Tempore.

Mr. SMOOT thereupon took the chair as Presiding Officer.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday last, when, on request of Mr. CURTIS and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

LIMITATION OF ARMAMENTS (S. DOC. NO. 65).

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following communication from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 15, 1921.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress an estimate of appropriation in the sum of $200,000, required by the State Department to defray the expenses of the Conference on the Limitation of Armament, which is to assemble in Washington on November 11, 1921.

There is enclosed herewith for the information of Congress copy of a letter from the Undersecretary of State of the 15th instant, explaining the necessity for this appropriation. In the statement of reasons set forth by the Undersecretary of State, I concur, and recommend the appropriation as being in the public interest.

There is also enclosed copy of the formal invitation to Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan to participate in the conference.

Respectfully,

WARREN G. HARDING.

SCHEDULES OF CLAIMS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT (S. DOC. NO. 64).

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following communication from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, in compliance with section 2 of the act of July 7, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 254), schedules of claims amounting to $790,994.43 allowed by the several accounting officers of the Treasury Department, and the various divisions of the General Accounting Office subsequent to July 1, 1921, when the General Accounting Office was established, as covered by certificates of settlement, the numbers of which are shown in the first column of said schedules, under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 110), and for the service of the following departments and independent offices:

Legislative	557.58
Executive	772.77
Department of State	191,862.24
Treasury Department	23,063.60
Independent offices	1,234.46
District of Columbia	1,800.52
War Department	327,545.35
Navy Department	134,420.66
Interior Department	3,977.93
Department of Agriculture	393.98
Department of Commerce	40,999.73
Department of Labor	321.45
Department of Justice	2,087.13
Postal Service	62,957.03
Total	790,994.43

The appropriations necessary to provide for payment of these claims are required in order to meet outstanding obligations of the Government heretofore authorized by Congress, the balances of appropriations concerned having been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund prior to the allowance of the claims by the proper accounting officers.

These claims are debts of the Government, the validity of which has been approved, including an appropriation heretofore made by Congress to meet them. Since their status has not been altered except in so far as the appropriation has lapsed, an explanatory statement of their necessity to accord with section 203 (a) of the budget and accounting act seems unnecessary.

Respectfully,

WARREN G. HARDING.

JUDGMENTS RENDERED BY THE COURT OF CLAIMS (S. DOC. NO. 63).

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following communication from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress, in compliance with the provisions contained in the act of September 30, 1890 (26 Stat., 537), and the deficiency act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stat., 422), a list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims, amounting to $292,528.06, which have been submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury and require an appropriation for their payment, as follows:

Under the Treasury Department	$166,523.02
Under the War Department	126,005.04
Total	292,528.06

The foregoing are obligations of the Government lawfully imposed and (subject to the reserved right of appeal) must be paid. For this reason and because they could not have been anticipated in the regular appropriation bills no further explanation under section 203 (a) of the budget and accounting act seems necessary.

Respectfully,

WARREN G. HARDING.

CLAIMS RENDERED AGAINST GOVERNMENT BY DISTRICT COURTS (S. DOC. NO. 61).

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following communication from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress, in accordance with the provisions contained in the deficiency act of April 27, 1904 (33 Stat., 422), a list of judgments rendered against the Government by the district courts of the United States, under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat., 505), as amended by section 297 of the act of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat., 1168), as submitted by the Attorney General through the Secretary of the Treasury, which requires an appropriation for their payment, together with such additional sum as may be necessary to pay interest on said judgments at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date thereof until the time the appropriation is made, with the proviso that the judgments herein provided for shall not be paid until the right of appeal shall have expired, as follows:

Under the War Department	$8,385.15
Under the Navy Department	7,233.50
Total	15,618.65

The foregoing are obligations of the Government lawfully imposed and (subject to the reserved right of appeal) must be paid. For this reason and because they could not have been anticipated in the regular appropriation bills, no further explanation under section 203 (a) of the budget and accounting act seems necessary.

Respectfully,

WARREN G. HARDING.

BALTIMORE DRY DOCKS & SHIPBUILDING CO. (S. DOC. NO. 62.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following communication from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress, in accordance with the provisions contained in the deficiency act of April 17, 1904 (33 Stat., 422), the record of a judgment rendered against the United States by the district court of the United States for the district of Maryland, sitting in admiralty, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the relief of the Baltimore Dry Docks & Shipbuilding Co., owner of a dry dock at Baltimore, Md.," approved December 26, 1920 (Private act No. 74, Private Laws of the Sixty-sixth Congress, 3d sess., 41 Stat., 75), which requires an appropriation for its payment, with a proviso that this judgment shall not be paid until the right of appeal shall have expired.

Under the Navy Department: Baltimore Dry Docks & Shipbuilding Co., $1,848.70.

The Attorney General in his letter of July 22, 1921, submitting the estimate for an appropriation required for the payment of this judgment, does not report any interest as due on same, nor is the payment of interest provided for in the jurisdictional act.

Payment of interest on judgments of United States courts ordinarily is provided for by section 10 of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat., 507), and applies only to judgments rendered in suits instituted under that act.

The foregoing is an obligation of the Government lawfully imposed and (subject to the reserved right of appeal) must be paid. For this reason and because it could not have been anticipated in the regular appropriation bills no further explanation under section 203 (a) of the budget and accounting act seems necessary.

Respectfully,

WARREN G. HARDING.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhues, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5676) taxing contracts for the sale of grain for future delivery and options for such contracts, and providing for the regulation of boards of trade, and for other purposes, had agreed to the conference requested by the Senate, and that Mr. HAUGEN, Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan, Mr. TINCER, Mr. RAINEY of Illinois, and Mr. ASWELL were appointed managers of the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed without amendment the following Senate bill and joint resolution:

A bill (S. 1794) to authorize the Secretary of War to release the Kansas City & Memphis Railroad & Bridge Co. from reconstructing its highway and approaches across its bridge at Memphis, Tenn.; and

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 88) granting consent of Congress to an agreement or compact entered into between the State of New York and the State of New Jersey for the creation of the port of New York district and the establishment of the port of New York authority for the comprehensive development of the port of New York.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1475) providing for a grant of land to the State of Washington for a biological station and general research purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 8107. An act to control importations of dyes and chemicals;

H. R. 8117. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 183. A joint resolution imposing a duty of 90 per cent on all goods exported from the United States for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces and its allied forces and which have been sold to any foreign Government or person when reimported into the United States.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and they were thereupon signed by the Presiding Officer [Mr. Smoot] as Acting President pro tempore:

S. 1934. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Huntington & Ohio Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a highway and street railway bridge across the Ohio River between the city of Huntington, W. Va., and a point opposite in the State of Ohio;

H. R. 1269. An act to make a preliminary survey of the Calaveras River, in California, with a view to the control of its floods;

H. R. 1475. An act providing for a grant of land to the State of Washington for a biological station and general research purposes; and

H. R. 1940. An act for the relief of the Southern Iron & Metal Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

EXPORTATION OF WOOD PULP FROM CANADA.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to announce that the enrolled joint resolution (S. J. Res. 36) authorizing the appointment of a commission to confer with the Dominion Government or the provincial governments thereof as to certain restrictive orders in council of the said Provinces relative to the exportation of pulp wood and paper therefrom to the United States, has heretofore been signed by the President pro tempore.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a petition of the Private Soldiers' and Sailors' Legion of the United States of America, requesting Congress to repeal the charter of the American Legion. It will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is that a petition?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a petition.

Mr. BORAH. I ask that the petition part of it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask by whom that is signed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By Marvin G. Sperry, national chairman of the Private Soldiers' and Sailors' Legion.

Mr. BORAH. A matter of such importance ought to be published in the RECORD, I think. It seems to be a rather serious matter, and all concerned should have it where they can read it rather than to have it received and difficult to reach.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The petition is as follows:

Petition.
NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS
PRIVATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' LEGION
OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Washington, D. C., August 10, 1921.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

On September 16, 1919, the Congress, by special enactment, granted a charter to a group of men and their successors empowering them to organize an association of veterans of the World War under the name of the American Legion.

By reason of the possession of this special charter, and because the organizers had been furnished by interests which have never been revealed with practically unlimited funds, the American Legion has come to be considered by the general public as an organization voicing the spirit and aspiration of all former service men. Ever since its organization the men in control of the American Legion have wrongfully assumed to represent the great body of veterans of the World War in matters of legislation, of public policy, and in many questions in which those leaders are personally interested, but about which the body of veterans as a whole care nothing. These leaders have become so overbearing and insolent in their assumptions that they are now, and for some time have been, presuming to give voice to the opinions of all former service men—those who do not belong to the American Legion as well as those who do. Their conduct in this regard has gone to such lengths that we feel that it has become incumbent on us to acquaint you, as the chartering power, with the actual facts.

The real situation is this: A group of silk-stockinged officers met in France and determined on the formation of an association of veterans. Shortly thereafter, at a time when the Army was rapidly returning to the United States, a committee of hand-picked, self-constituted former officers, carrying out the line of action which had been determined on at the preliminary meeting in France, opened offices in New York and procured from unknown sources some hundreds of thousands of dollars, to be used in furtherance of their ends. This committee prepared the constitution and by-laws for the proposed organization, which was to be known as the American Legion, and arranged for a meeting in St. Louis, at which the constitution and by-laws were to be adopted and the American Legion launched. This same New York committee supervised the selection of delegates to the St. Louis meeting by calling on the draft boards throughout the United States to hold meetings of former service men at which the delegates were to be selected. In each instance these meetings were restricted in their choice of delegates to officers of the rank specified by the New York committee.

By the terms of the charter of the American Legion and its constitution and by-laws its first officers were selected by the organizers, and the successors of these officers are still chosen by the same self-constituted interests on a self-perpetuating basis.

We charge:

1. That the organizers and present officers of the American Legion organized it with tainted money, for the purpose of giving the men who placed themselves in its control an opportunity of misrepresenting the wishes and desires of former service men wherever such wishes and desires clashed with those of the unknown men who had furnished the money, and who are the real power behind the Legion.

2. That the present officers of the American Legion have no authority to speak for the rank and file of veterans, either within or without the Legion.

3. That the present officers of the Legion are receiving and paying out to themselves vast sums of money in salaries and expenses, ostensibly because of the services they are rendering to former service men, when, in truth, their services and activities are not in the interest of the veterans but of the hidden group of men who furnished the secret funds for its organization.

4. That notwithstanding a clear and unequivocal provision in the law granting the American Legion its charter to the effect that a financial statement must be annually filed with Congress, no such statement has ever yet been filed.

5. That in carrying out the orders of the unknown interests who furnished the funds for its organization the present officers of the American Legion have instigated and incited lawlessness in numerous instances. An examination of the facts in the cases of Arthur Clark, Carpenteria, Calif.; Frederick Reis, Jr., Cincinnati; Kate O'Hare, Minot, N. Dak.; former Senator J. Ralph Burton and Prof. Wilson, at Ellinwood, Kans.—to mention only a few of these instances—will convince all fair-minded men that the perpetrators of these outrages should not be permitted to hide their offenses behind a Federal charter.

6. That the leaders of the American Legion have pursued the settled, uniform policy of interfering with and dictating to public schools and colleges, churches, newspapers, public meetings, political assemblies, officers charged with the preservation of the public peace, and all persons and all activities which in any way threatened to endanger the interests of the secret financial backers of the Legion, and they still pursue this policy under the cloak of their Federal charter and without any authorization from the body of their members.

7. That from the day of its organization the attitude of the officers of the American Legion toward labor, and especially toward organized labor, has been so virulent and hostile as to justify the inference that the secret funds secretly furnished for its organization were contributed for the express purpose of opposing the welfare of all men who work for wages, under the specious guise of patriotism.

We have no quarrel with our buddies who were induced by false pretenses to join the Legion. Our criticism is directed solely against the men who have misrepresented and exploited not only the rank and file of the American Legion but ourselves and all other veterans as well; and we respectfully petition the Congress, in the interest of all former service men, to appoint a committee to examine into this matter, with the view of repealing the charter of the American Legion, so that it may cease to cloak the scandalous and disgraceful conduct of a small coterie of self-constituted, self-perpetuating officials.

Respectfully submitted.

[SEAL.]

NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
PRIVATE SOLDIERS AND SAILORS LEGION,
MARVIN GATES SPERRY, National Chairman,
EARL L. SEAL, National Secretary.

Mr. NELSON presented a resolution adopted by citizens of De Graff, Minn., protesting against the enactment of Senate bill 2135, to enable the refunding of obligations of foreign Governments owing to the United States of America, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a memorial of Klearflax Linen Rug Co., of Duluth, Minn., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation imposing a tariff on flax straw, flax tow, noils, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a petition of the Buzza Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the enactment of legislation imposing a tariff on tally cards and place cards for table use, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented telegrams in the nature of memorials of the Cold Springs Brewing Co., of Cold Springs; Gluek Brewing Co. and Minneapolis Brewing Co., of Minneapolis; Jacob Schmidt Brewing Co. and Theo. Hamm Brewing Co., of St. Paul; and Kiewel Associated Products Co., of Little Falls, all in the State of Minnesota, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation imposing a tariff of 15 cents per gallon on cereal beverages, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution of sundry citizens of Barnesville, Minn., favoring the enactment of Senate bill 1452, providing for establishing shooting grounds for the public, for establishing game refuges and breeding grounds, for protecting migratory birds, and requiring a Federal license to hunt them, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WILLIS presented resolutions adopted by sundry Chautauquans of Marysville, Ohio, August 3, 1921, favoring the intervention by the United States Government on behalf of Korea and China against alleged aggressions of Japan, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Toledo, Ohio, remonstrating against the enactment of Senate bill 1948, providing for compulsory Sunday observance, etc., which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE presented sundry petitions signed by the following-named citizens of California, praying for the passage of the so-called La Follette and Norris resolutions relative to Ireland, and also praying for the recognition of the independence of the republic of Ireland by the Government of the United States; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Richard Mangan, resolution Terence MacSwiney Branch, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, by secretary; Patrick Murphy, Elizabeth Buckley, Eileen M. O'Reilly, Frank Donohue, Mrs. J. Donohue, James A. Feeny, Patrick J. Daley, Michael Riordan, Daniel O'Connor, Robert J. Smith, Patrick O'Connell, Hannah O'Connor, Jeremiah Sullivan, John Murphy, J. W. Fryer, Thomas McCartney, George J. Nichols, John McPake, John J. Murphy, Mrs. Annie Driscoll, Dorothy A. Griffith, John C. Healy, Marie Bailie, John Norton, Mrs. A. Tronin, Mrs. Margaret Healy, Ella Delehanty, George Tronin, Mary Delehanty, Mrs. D. W. Healy, E. Delehanty, secretary Branch 77, A. A. R. I. R.; Mrs. Jennie Hughes, Marian C. Stack, Mrs. E. H. Sandahl, Dora J. Cussen, Alice Teresa Cussen, Cornelius Lynch, Virginia Fay, Nora McCarthy, Michael J. Fitzgerald, J. Cotton, Miss Mary Crowley, Mrs. Thomas Fay, James J. Bailey, Helen M. Stack, Miss Margaret Stack, Frank C. Tracey, all of San Francisco.

Patrick Leary, Albert J. Riley, Mrs. Louis E. Braun, Franklin Branch, A. A. R. I. R.; J. J. Kreig, all of Oakland.

Mrs. C. Myatt, Mary A. Woods, Rev. P. M. Griffin, Mr. Martin Glynn, Edward O'Hara, Thomas F. Keene, secretary Richmond Branch, Home Insurance Co. of New York, also secretary Branch No. 159, A. A. R. I. R.; P. J. Connor, all of Richmond.

Mary E. Redmond, Catharine Redmond, M. J. Calhan, P. J. Winters, M. H. Ryan, all of Alameda.

E. C. McDonough, Josephine C. Diehl, Basil J. Nettleton, Mrs. Annie Nettleton, Geraldine Nettleton, Josephine Nettleton, Anna R., W. E., and M. Kelly, Michael F. Campbell, Mrs. M. J. Firsick, Matthew J. Firsick, jr., Lucile A. M. Brennan, Mrs. Margaret Barrett, Joseph S. Derrick, M. D., Mary Ramsey, Edward B. Nicoll, Mrs. C. Duerbeck, John Studer, M. F. Dillon, Mary Hennessey, John Hennessey, V. Ramsey, N. M. Mullins, M. T. Collins, Lottie Trave, Joseph Trave, Josie Trave, J. J. O'Regan, E. C. McDonough, all of Los Angeles.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. STERLING, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 2228) to amend certain sections of the Judicial Code relating to the Court of Claims, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 256) thereon.

Mr. JONES of Washington, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2391) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 257) thereon.

Mr. NEW (for Mr. STANFIELD), from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1408) authorizing the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. to sue the United States to recover damages resulting from collisions, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 258) thereon.

INTERSTATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

Mr. STERLING (for Mr. TOWNSEND), from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which was referred the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1072) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from South Dakota what bill that is?

Mr. STERLING. It is the good roads bill; the House amendment reported with an amendment.

In connection with the report I present in behalf of the chairman of the committee a concurrent resolution relating to the title, which I suppose should lie on the table.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understood the chairman was to submit the report to me before it was handed in, but if the Senator chooses to take that course I shall offer no objection.

Mr. STERLING. I was just handed the report by the clerk of the committee.

Mr. STERLING (for Mr. TOWNSEND) submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 9), which was ordered to lie on the table:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That in the enrollment of the bill (S. 1072) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes, the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to amend the title of the said bill so as to read as follows:

"An act to provide for the establishment, construction, and maintenance of a post roads and interstate and intercounty highway system, to create a post roads and Federal highway commission, and for other purposes."

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval and signature the following enrolled bill and joint resolution:

On August 11, 1921:

S. 1811. An act to amend the Federal farm loan act, as amended.

On August 13, 1921:

S. J. Res. 36. Joint resolution authorizing the appointment of a commission to confer with the Dominion Government or the provincial governments thereof as to certain restrictive orders in council of the said Provinces relative to the exportation of pulp wood and paper therefrom to the United States.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. POINDEXTER:

A bill (S. 2394) to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to adjudicate the claims of the legal representative of Robert Dillon, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHORTRIDGE:

A bill (S. 2395) granting an increase of pension to James M. Taylor;

A bill (S. 2396) granting a pension to John J. Rogers;

A bill (S. 2397) granting a pension to Harry J. Martin; and

A bill (S. 2398) granting a pension to Katie Kensinger; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 2399) granting an increase of pension to Eleanor L. Curtiss;

A bill (S. 2400) granting an increase of pension to Samuel S. Householder;

A bill (S. 2401) granting a pension to Mrs. Stephen Fennell;

A bill (S. 2402) granting a pension to Charles A. Pettit; and

A bill (S. 2403) granting an increase of pension to Mollie M. Wilkerson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 2404) granting a pension to Anna E. Shoemaker (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND:

A bill (S. 2405) supplemental to an act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes" (Public, No. 215, 66th Cong.), approved May 22, 1920; to the Committee on Civil Service.

A bill (S. 2406) granting a pension to teamsters, bridge builders, and railroad repairers who were in the service of the United States during the Civil War; and

A bill (S. 2407) granting an increase of pension to William J. Gimm; to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 2408) for the relief of Mary L. Spring; and

A bill (S. 2409) for the relief of W. L. Spring; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McCORMICK:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 99) providing a site upon public grounds in the city of Washington, D. C., for the erection of a statue of Dante; to the Committee on the Library.

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 100) providing for the appointment of a commissioner to serve on the Interstate Harbor Commission of Illinois and Indiana; to the Committee on Commerce.

FOREIGN TRADE ZONE.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I intend to propose to the tariff bill and ask that it may be printed and referred to the Committee on Finance.

I will say that the amendment embodies the bill that was reported this morning from the Committee on Commerce providing for foreign trade zones. I think it is a matter which very properly comes up for consideration in connection with the tariff bill. It was the sense of the committee that if the bill was reported it should then be put in the form of an amendment to the tariff bill and referred to the Committee on Finance for consideration in connection with the tariff bill.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee on Finance.

AMENDMENT TO TRANSPORTATION ACT, 1920.

Mr. PITTMAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2337) to amend the transportation act, 1920, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed.

PROPOSED RECESS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I offer the following concurrent resolution to lie on the table and I give notice that I shall call it up to-morrow.

The Assistant Secretary read the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 8), as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the two Houses adjourn on Saturday, the 20th day of August, 1921, they stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, the 19th day of September, 1921.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The concurrent resolution will lie on the table.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, my attention was diverted for the moment. Was a resolution presented with reference to a recess or adjournment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts submitted a concurrent resolution, which will lie upon the table.

Mr. ASHURST. I ask that the resolution be again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again read the resolution.

The Assistant Secretary again read the concurrent resolution.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, respecting the concurrent resolution—

Mr. LODGE. I may say to the Senator that we are not going to call it up to-day. It lies on the table until to-morrow.

Mr. ASHURST. I have no desire to inject my personal views into the views of the majority, but I feel that we should not adjourn or take a recess until some matters that I conceive to be important are disposed of. I realize that within our own sphere we each think that certain matters are important, but I submit for the information of Senators the following observations upon certain bills, with the view that we should not adjourn or take a recess until they are disposed of.

First, there is a bill pending, introduced by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], which proposes to extend for one year the time within which payment of construction charges may be made on reclamation projects. That bill ought to be passed.

Then there is a bill which provides that lands in reclamation projects shall be eligible for Federal farm loans. That bill ought to be passed before we adjourn.

I have this morning a dispatch from the State engineer of Arizona, which reads as follows:

PHOENIX, ARIZ., August 13, 1921.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Delay in Federal aid road legislation greatly inconveniencing Arizona program. We sincerely hope that appropriation will be made immediately. If this is impossible, definite information that Congress has abandoned Federal aid would assist us in planning our work. We would appreciate your endeavoring to secure action before Congress takes recess.

STATE ENGINEER.

Then there is also the McNary bill, which has passed the Senate as a substitute for the Norris bill. This bill should extend some relief to the farmers and stockmen. It will permit advancements to be made through the War Finance Corporation.

I ask that a petition in the form of a letter addressed to me and a resolution of the Salt River Valley Water Users' Association be printed in the Record as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter and resolution were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

ARIZONA CATTLE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION,
PHOENIX, ARIZ., August 8, 1921.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR ASHURST: It has been brought to our attention that there has been introduced in the United States Senate a bill providing that the date of payment of grazing fees on the national forests be extended from September 1 until December 1, 1921.

Conditions among the cattlemen of the State of Arizona are such that the passage of this proposed legislation is absolutely necessary. As you are aware, the cattle-growing industry of this State is passing through the most critical stage in a great many years. There has been no market for the cattle produced here, and therefore there has been, practically speaking, no cattle sold in this State for almost 12 months, and very few in the last two years, thus depriving the cattlemen of any income and straining their credit facilities to the limit, or almost to the breaking point. In addition to these conditions, the most severe drought in 20 years has existed in this State during the first part of this year and lasting until the middle of last month. This drought has caused enormous additional expenditures in the way of feed and pasture bills and has also put cattle in a condition where they will not be in marketable shape until at least six weeks hence.

It will be impossible for any sales of cattle to be made until the latter part of September, and, as you can readily see, the cattlemen will have no money for the payment of grazing fees and other expenses until they are able to receive money from the sale of cattle through the months of October and November, as further credit is unavailable.

In view of these conditions, we earnestly urge that you use your efforts to secure the passage of such legislation as is necessary to have the postponement of the date of payment for grazing fees on the national forests to December 1, 1921.

Very truly, yours,

ARIZONA CATTLE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION,
By HENRY G. BOICE,
Acting President.

SALT RIVER VALLEY WATER USERS' ASSOCIATION,
OPERATING SALT RIVER PROJECT,
PHOENIX, ARIZ., July 19, 1921.

Resolution.

"Whereas on account of the very low price of farm products and live stock payments due December 1, 1920, for construction and to become due in December, 1921, can not be met by the water users, although they are economizing in every way in an endeavor to make such payment: Therefore be it

"Resolved by the board of governors of the Salt River Valley Water Users' Association, That we indorse the provisions of Senate bill 1728, by Senator BORAH, by the terms of which it is proposed to defer payment of the 1921 construction charge for a period of one year, and for the deferment of all subsequent charges for the same time, without penalty; be it further

"Resolved, That we request the Members of Congress from the State of Arizona to support the said bill, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to all members of the Arizona delegation, and, further, that they be urged to use their best efforts to secure an amendment to said act so as to provide for an extension of said construction charges for a period of two years instead of one year."

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of a resolution adopted by the board of governors of the Salt River Valley Water Users' Association at a meeting held on July 16, 1921.

[SEAL.]

F. C. HENSHAW,
Secretary Salt River Valley Water Users' Association.
FEDERAL PATRONAGE IN TENNESSEE.

Mr. MCKELLAR submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 131), which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads:

Resolved, That the Post Office Committee of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized and instructed to investigate the alleged violations of the civil service act and the alleged selling of or trafficking in Federal offices in Tennessee by John W. Overall, Republican national committeeman and alleged referee in patronage matters in that State.

REPORT OF BOARD OF VISITORS TO NAVAL ACADEMY.

Mr. POMERENE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 132), which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate the report of the Board of Visitors to the United States Naval Academy for the year 1921, and to include therewith the reports for the years 1917, 1918, 1919, and 1920, respectively.

REPORT OF ALASKAN ENGINEERING COMMISSION, 1917.

On motion of Mr. NEW, it was Ordered, That the Secretary of the Senate be directed to transmit to the Secretary of the Interior the report of the Alaskan Engineering Commission for 1917, transmitted to the Senate on April 22, 1918, by the President of the United States.

PROPOSED NATIONAL SUNDAY LAW.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, on July 13 there was printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article proposing a national Sunday law. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record an answer to that appeal by C. S. Longacre, general secretary of the Religious Liberty Association of America.

There being no objection, the communication was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

COUNTERPETITION TO PROPOSED NATIONAL SUNDAY LAWS.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The Religious Liberty Association respectfully presents a counterpetition to Congress relative to the "proposed national Sunday law," which was printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 13, 1921, at the request of the central committee of the nineteen conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. It is not our purpose to impugn the motives and high ideals of our worthy coreligionists. We do not question their sincerity. But we do question the means and methods they are seeking to employ to bring about certain spiritual reformations.

We, too, believe in the binding claims of the Holy Bible upon the individual. We believe that every man, woman, and child ought to observe the Sabbath day of divine appointment—the fourth commandment of the decalogue. With our Methodist brethren, we believe that God wrote the Ten Commandments, and that God has never repealed any of the Ten Commandments. We go a step further, and we do not believe that God ever designed to alter or change any of these commandments of the eternal ten. We not only believe that all men ought to accept all the divine institutions of the Lord's planning, but they ought to accept the Savior of the world Himself, because such an acceptance means their eternal welfare.

But while we believe all this, we do not believe that any of these divine institutions and religious obligations which we owe exclusively to God should ever be enforced under duress of civil law. Religious obligations rest entirely upon individual faith, piety, and soul conviction, and should never be enforced by the civil magistrate.

HEART RELIGION ALONE ACCEPTABLE.

Religion has no value unless the conscience is left free to accept it. God made the conscience free and He never intended that any man should enslave it. When religious obligations and observances become a matter of compulsion, the conscience is shackled, and the profession of religion becomes a cloak of hypocrisy. A man's duties toward God and religion must be voluntary and emanate from the heart in free-will service in order to be acceptable in the sight of God. Only the power of love has a right to dominate the heart and life in religious matters. Heart religion alone is of value to God. Christianity, with all its divine obligations toward God, is founded on faith, hope, and love, as revealed in the teachings and life of Christ. As the Scripture saith: "Hath thou faith? Have it unto thyself before God." No man has the divine sanction to make his conscience the criterion for another man. As Lincoln said: "He that governs himself is a man, but he that governs himself and another man without his consent is a tyrant."

NO RIGHT TO JUDGE IN SPIRITUAL REALM.

Paul taught very emphatically and clearly that no man had any right to judge another man in matters of faith and conscience in the spiritual realm. "He that judges me is the Lord," says Paul. "Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts."

There is no man great enough, wise enough, nor good enough to sit in judgment upon the motives of another man's heart and judge him in matters of conscience and belief concerning religious and theological questions. As long as a man conducts himself as a good, moral citizen the civil authorities should protect him in all his civil rights, no matter whether he makes a profession of religion or not. It is not the business of the state to see that its citizens are religious or that they conform to the regulations and obligations of a church ritual. Nor is it the business of the civil magistrate to enforce the rules of a church discipline upon the members of society, who may or may not agree with the church creed. "But why dost thou judge thy brother?" says Paul. "Or, why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." The state has no authority to judge any man for the offenses he has committed against God or his own conscience, so long as he has not invaded the rights of his fellow man. God Himself has appointed a day of judgment when He will judge and punish all men who have sinned against Him. The state can only punish a man for the offenses he has committed against his fellow men. If the state could punish a man for the offenses he has committed against God, then there would be no necessity for God to have a future judgment day. Every man must answer to God for his own sins against God and against his own soul. As Paul says: "So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Let us not therefore judge one another any more * * * for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14:10-13, 23.)

If any man compels another man to perform a religious act in which he has no faith, according to Paul's gospel, he compels that man to commit a sin, "for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." The individual who attempts to dictate his neighbor's religious conduct by law shows thereby that he is not of Christ, but of anti-Christ. The teachings of Christ are utterly opposed to the use of force in the advancement of his cause. Christ never appeared before the rulers of the land asking them to enact laws to reform the people. He made no alliance with the civil government. He loved His way into the hearts of sinners. His plan was to draw and win men instead of driving them into the kingdom. The doctrines and teachings of Christ were not to be advanced by the force of civil law or at the point of the policeman's baton. The political preacher who favors a legal religion and the force of law instead of the power of love is substituting the policeman's club for the cross of Christ. Christ never appealed to the use of the sword, and he can never be conquered by the sword.

CHRIST'S POSITION ON INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY.

Christ said:

If any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not; for I am not come to judge the world, but to save the world. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. (John 12:47-8.)

Christ never delegated to any man or set of men the right to judge their fellow men in matters of religious belief and doctrine. In these matters every man was expected, in harmony with the divine plan, to give an account of himself to God "in the last day." Men were only to be judged in civil matters at Caesar's judgment bar now. But in matters of divine concern the Lord saith: "Vengeance is mine; I will repay." The man who attempts to judge men in spiritual matters now frustrates the plan of God and assumes to exercise the divine prerogatives before the time.

POLITICAL RELIGION A FAILURE.

Since the dawn of history every attempt to make men better and to inspire them with faith toward God by the force of law has been a failure, and every future attempt must of necessity be a failure, because it is based on a wrong premise and a false conception of Christianity. The spirit back of such movements emanates from the wrong source and is based on the egotistical concept that the promoters of the movement are absolutely right and their interpretations of truth infallible, and that their opponents must be wrong and consequently should not be tolerated. Such pharisaical movements are destined to lead to the inquisition, if the religious fanatics are permitted to go on unchecked in their mad career. They can find justification through their specious reasoning to inflict the severest penalties on those who dare to assert their right of dissent from the legally established views.

FAILURE TO DISTINGUISH BETWEEN DIVINE AND HUMAN LAWS.

The petition of our Methodist brethren fails to draw a line of distinction between the duties we owe to God and the duties we owe to our fellow men. The petition states:

"As a Nation we have put God's commandments against stealing, lying, adultery, and murder into our laws. Now we must go further and put into our national laws God's command against working on the Sabbath. * * * Our Nation licenses our interstate commerce—the biggest in the world—to run its Sunday trains, newspapers, and other business for profit in open violation of God's commandment."

Here is a clear failure to make a distinction between the divine and the human government, between the proper functions of the church and the specific functions of the state, or between divine and human relations and obligations. In order that all men might know and recognize the distinction between the duties we owe to God and the duties we owe to men, God purposely wrote the Ten Commandments upon two separate and distinct tables of stone. God did not throw the Ten Commandments together promiscuously. Nor was He limited in the selection of stone, and unable to find a stone long enough to write all ten on one table. He could just as easily have written all ten on one table of stone as upon two tables. But God intentionally and designedly wrote those commandments which define man's true and proper relationship with God upon the first table, and those which define man's proper and equitable relationship with his fellow men upon the second table. The first four commandments of the decalogue, written upon the first table, deal exclusively with our duties and relations toward God, while the last six on the second table refer only to man's obligations to his neighbor. When Jesus Christ came into this world He referred to these two tables and stated explicitly that upon the first table was written man's duties to God, and likewise, on the second table, man's obligations to his neighbor.

FIRST TABLE EXCLUSIVELY GOD'S.

The state, which is supposed to exercise civil functions and deal only with man's proper relationship with man, has no right to enact and enforce any of the first four commandments of the decalogue, because these commandments prescribe man's exclusive duty toward God, and pertain to acts which, in their very nature are purely devotional and religious. A violation of these four commandments is a sin, but not a crime. They have nothing whatever to do with man's relationship with the state or with man. The state can not properly or rightfully function in this realm without invading the domain of God and the citadel of the soul of man. If a man chooses to reject the true God, to worship images, to blaspheme the name of God, or to work on "the Sabbath of the Lord," he is accountable to God alone for these specific offenses and must appear and answer before His judgment seat in the last day, but not at Caesar's judgment bar now.

MUST SEGREGATE DUTIES ON SECOND TABLE.

The duties set forth on the second table can not be enforced by the civil authorities as the commandments of God in our relations to God, but only in our relations to man. The last six commandments on the second table pertain to the duties between man and man in all his relations of life with man and are purely civil obligations. And while a violation of these commandments is an offense against our neighbor they are also an offense against God. The commandments which prohibit stealing, killing, and adultery set forth our duties both toward God and toward man, and when broken are offenses both against God and man, when their interests are common. For instance, the commandments that say: "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not commit adultery," cover more than our duty toward man. The Scripture says: "Will a man rob God? Yea; ye have robbed Me in tithes and offerings, saith the Lord." But the civil authorities do not punish Christians, much less non-Christians, for refusing to pay their tithes and offerings to the Lord. Yet the Scriptures saith: "The tithe is holy unto the Lord," the same as it saith: "The Sabbath is holy unto the Lord." Both are duties which believers owe exclusively to God and not to man, and neither ought to be enforced by the state, although in the past both have been enforced by the civil magistrate.

"Thou shalt not kill" can not be enforced as the commandment of God relative to our duty toward Him. The commandment of God is exceedingly broad and enters into the motives and thoughts of man. Christ said: "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." But the civil magistrate does not hang or execute or imprison men for hating their brethren. He does not enter into the thoughts and motives of man. He only punishes the man who commits the overt act of injuring his fellow man, but not for the offense against God, which deals with the motive even if the overt act is not performed. Likewise Christ said: "Whosoever looketh after a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." But here again the civil government does not endeavor to punish the offense against God, but only the overt act of man when he invades the proper relationship with his fellow men.

It is very evident even when we consider the last six commandments of the decalogue that those duties can only be enforced by the civil government which pertains exclusively to man's proper relationship with man concerning his overt acts which are actual invasions of the rights of man, but the civil magistrate can not by right punish any man for invading or disregarding the claims of God upon the soul.

METHODS OF DIVINE AND HUMAN GOVERNMENT DISSIMILAR.

The government of God and the civil government rest entirely upon different foundations in their methods of operation. God's government rests and operates upon the divine ideal of the principle of love, while the civil government functions upon the principle of force. Love is the fulfilling of the law of God in the divine government, while force and the exaction of stern justice are the requirements of the civil authority. In God's government the offender who acknowledges his offense and confesses his guilt to God obtains mercy and justification before God the same as though he had never sinned, if he trusts in the atoning blood of Christ for his salvation.

How often can the offender come to God and receive mercy? "Seven times?" asked Peter. "Yea, seventy times seven" answered Christ. But it is not so with the magistrate of the civil government. He must punish the criminal for his offense even though he is sorry and begs for mercy. The more often he commits offenses the greater will be his punishment with the civil magistrate. But in God's government and plan, where sin did abound grace did much more abound. It is a serious mistake to confuse God's government, which is heavenly and spiritual, with the governments of earth.

"My kingdom is not of this world," said Christ, when He answered the question, whether he was the King of the Jews. A failure to draw the distinction between the divine and the human government, between divine laws and civil statutes, between divine and secular institutions, and between the obligations we owe to God and the duties we owe to man, has been the primary cause of all the religious persecutions in the past. In fact, the failure to draw the line of demarcation has been the root cause for the institution of the old régime of a church and state union, and the only hope of avoiding its baneful fruitage is an absolute separation of church and state, not only in theory but in practice.

STATE DEALS WITH CRIME, NOT SIN.

The state can only deal with crime, not with sin. It is a civil institution and can only deal with civil matters. Sabbath observance is a religious duty and not a civil duty. What is civil on Monday is civil on Sunday, and what is criminal on Sunday is criminal on Monday. To prohibit and penalize legitimate business and innocent amusements on a civil holiday is not in harmony with civil legislation respecting the Fourth of July or Washington's Birthday. We do not penalize men for working or amusing themselves on these civil holidays. Why should they be punished for doing the same things on Sunday, if all are merely legal and civil holidays? An act is criminal because of the nature of the act, that is malum in se.

The only reason that can be given for making voluntary legitimate business and innocent amusement criminal on Sunday and not on Monday is a religious reason. But the civil government can not step into the domain of religion without passing its legitimate bounds and usurping the divine prerogative as well as infringing upon the rights of conscience and the guaranties of religious liberty. The claim that compulsory Sunday observance is not religious but civil is an utterly false claim and contrary to all the facts of history and sound reasoning. Back of every Sunday law is the Sunday Sabbath institution, and this institution both in its origin and history has been cradled and fostered in religion and advocated by religionists for purely religious purposes. It came into existence by the decision of church councils more than three centuries after Christ, and was not instituted and enacted into law for any economic or civil reason, but for the purpose of commemorating a religious event, namely, the resurrection of Christ. Its status was altogether religious and its observance was optional until the church and state were fully united, and then it became compulsory and was established in law as a legal precedent and justification for all the subsequent religious legislation.

If it is argued that civility must be maintained on the first day of the week, and therefore Sunday laws are necessary, we answer that no such special legislation is needed, because the laws which guarantee police protection and require civility on other days of the week are adequate to do the same on Sunday. Religious services are protected from disturbance by civil laws upon every day of the week, and there is absolutely no more need for extra legislation along this line on Sunday than there is to protect the midweek prayer meeting or funeral service from being disturbed.

SHEER IDLENESS A CURSE.

Enforced idleness is all that a Sunday law stands for, since we are no longer compelled to go to church, but enforced idleness never tends to civility. Idleness is one of the greatest curses that has afflicted this world. It is the breeder of vice and crime, of dissipation and disorder. Enforced idleness for the nonreligious and ungodly opens the door of temptation to many evils, and does more to lead men to prison and the gallows than honest labor or innocent amusements. The sincere believer needs no law, aside from the divine law, to induce him to observe the Sabbath day, and the unbeliever and godless can not be made to observe it if 10,000 laws are enacted.

NOT NECESSARY FOR PHYSICAL WELFARE.

The Japanese and Chinamen are physically the two strongest races in the world. Their physical endurance is without a rival, according to reliable statistics, and yet neither of these people for centuries knew anything of a Sabbath day. Every day was alike to them, and this proves that the Sabbath was never made for the purpose of sitting all day in an easy-chair or lying in bed recuperating the physical energies, as is so often asserted. The Sabbath is spiritual, and its rest is the rest of the soul and not necessarily of the body. Christ was more active bodily and mentally on the Sabbath ministering to the needs of suffering humanity than on the other days of the week, according to the accounts of the New Testament. The Sabbath was not made to leisurely twiddle our thumbs, but to do the works of God for the good of humanity. God made the night for the physical rest of the body, and eight to nine hours of rest at night is sufficient to recuperate the wasted energies of the normal man. Spiritual and physical things ought not to be confused.

THE DANGER OF CHURCH DICTATION IN POLITICS.

The petition of our Methodist brethren shows the real danger that is incipient in their movement for religious legislation and in their demands upon Congress for a national Sunday law. In the last paragraph of their proposed bill for a national Sunday law they actually advocate the confiscation of property and forfeiture of business, and in their petition they advocate the extreme penalty of death for all those who refuse to observe Sunday in harmony with their ideas. Moreover, every misfortune, accident, crime, and calamity in the world that has absolutely no connection with the subject under consideration is, nevertheless, laid at the door of their opponents who do not agree with them and whom they call "Sabbath breakers." Every ill of life is charged to the guilt of "the Sabbath breaker." This is exactly the old argument that the Puritan set up against the Sabbath breaker of colonial times. It is the same argument the religious legalist set up against his enemies under the old régime of a church and state union in medieval Europe. Under this specious line of reasoning men felt justified to mete out the extreme penalty upon men, women, and children who were perfectly innocent of any crime, but who dared to assert their own convictions in the face of legal religious precedents in which they had no faith. Such reasoning is destructive of the ends of justice and the rights of all men before God and under the Constitution. In it are couched all the horrors and persecutions of former days. If it is to prevail again, it would endanger the most sacred rights and the very life of the noblest of men.

"Murdering the Sabbath is worse than murdering men," says the petition. We hang and execute men for murdering men, and if murdering the Sabbath is worse than murdering men, there can be no punishment too severe for the violator of their drastic national Sunday law. If the logic of this kind of reasoning is to be taken at its face value, if these men ever got in control of the Government, it would not be long until the streams of America would flow crimson with the blood of martyrs as they once did in medieval Europe under the church and state régime.

Again, the petition asserts without qualification that "the Sabbath breaker is digging the grave of his * * * nation." It can be readily seen, if a man is charged with the guilt of destroying "the Nation" and digging its grave, that the violation of a Sunday law on this premise can be made a treasonable charge, and when convicted of violating a national Sunday law the death sentence is the logical penalty for the offender. This is the way the old-time Puritans reasoned when Roger Williams was put on trial for protesting against their drastic Sunday laws in New England, when they decided to send him into exile. Such reasoning can find justification for any penalty that bigots have the ingenuity to invent, and at the same time feel the assurance that they have done the will of God.

MISSTATEMENT OF FACTS.

The petition asserts that—

Congress has passed some Sunday laws; why not pass a Sunday law for all? Congress enacted a law to close the World's Fair, at the St. Louis Fair, and the Norfolk Fair on Sunday.

Again—

Our Federal Constitution (Art. 1, Sec. 7) expressly secures (Sunday) as a day of rest for our President.

Again—

Congress, our legislatures, and our court officials do not do business on Sunday. If all these stop on Sunday, why should trains and newspapers run on Sunday?

It is true that Congress passed laws that these various national fairs and exhibitions should close their doors on Sunday. This was done to be in harmony with the local laws, and not because the Federal Government favored a Sunday law. When the World's Fair was held in San Francisco, Calif., a few years ago, no such Sunday closing provision was attached because California had no Sunday law.

Again, our Federal Constitution does not compel the President to observe Sunday as a day of rest, but simply provides that—

If any bill shall not be returned by the President within 10 days (Sunday excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it.

But Congress did not intend by this act to make Sunday observance mandatory under penalty. There is a vast difference between a privilege and a command. It is true that Congress, our legislatures, and our courts are not in session on Sunday as a general rule, but there is no law preventing them from being in session and doing business on Sunday. Frequently they are in session all day Sunday, and no one is penalized for such conduct. It is a voluntary custom to regard Sunday as an unofficial day or a day known in law as non dies—no day at all.

But this is far from what the proposed national Sunday law is to be. It has the most drastic penalties for nonobservance of Sunday attached to it that have ever been suggested since the days of the Puritans.

The petition further states that the "United States Supreme Court sustains laws against Sunday trains," and then quotes the case of Hennington against State of Georgia, in One hundred and sixty-third United States, page 304. Also, the New York Supreme Court is cited holding that the printing and selling of newspapers on Sunday is illegal.

There would have been just as much logic if the petitioners had quoted the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the Dred Scott case, and stated that the Supreme Court still sanctioned slavery, and that the Negro had "no rights which the white man was bound to respect," as for them to quote these obsolete decisions of the past concerning the illegality of Sunday trains and Sunday newspapers. Another mistake is made by the petitioners in quoting obiter dictum statements as valid court decisions on this question. This is misleading and confusing so far as the layman is concerned, but should not be to the legal mind.

THE REAL DANGER.

We are not fearful that this proposed Sunday bill will become a law in this session of Congress. Its drastic features are sufficient to defeat the proposed bill for the present. But the real danger lies in a compromise bill and the pending Sunday bills before Congress which are less drastic. If these milder compulsory Sunday observance bills are enacted into law, the entering wedge has been driven between the folds of the legislative doors of Congress, and that is exactly what the "professional reformers" and "Christian lobbyist" are waiting for. These mild Sunday measures for the District are merely to serve the purpose of establishing a legal precedent which the reformers will follow up to their advantage for more stringent legislation later on. We therefore petition your honorable body not to pass any of the pending compulsory Sunday observance measures, such as S. 1948 and H. R. 4388.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE RELIGIOUS, NOT CIVIL.

Legislation to compel people to observe Sunday, or to regulate their conduct on Sunday in harmony with the ideals of certain religionists, is not civil but religious legislation. Sunday is a religious institution, and for fifteen hundred years Sunday laws under the old order of things were recognized as purely religious, and it is a mistake to presume that these same laws are civil now simply because the State enacts them and the civil magistrate enforces them. Merely calling the Sabbath or Lord's Day a civil institution and its observance a civil obligation does not make it so. Calling a spade a crowbar does not make it such. When civil law is employed to enforce any of the divine or church institutions, it is done in violation of the true principles of Christianity and is a commingling of civil and religious functions which ought to remain forever separate. The civil government when it exercises its legitimate powers can only deal with civil affairs.

God ordained the civil government to protect the equal rights of all men, but not to deprive any man of his natural rights, so long as he respects the equal rights of his neighbor. The functions of the state are purely secular and the functions of the church are spiritual, and Christ drew a sharp line of demarcation between these two when He said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things which are God's." (Matt. 22:21.)

No greater misfortune could possibly happen to the cause of Christ on earth than for the professed representatives of the church to seek an alliance with the state. If there is one lesson that the Christian church ought to learn from the ecclesiastical history of the past, it is that a religio-political church is predestined for ultimate sorrow and desolation. The political church may have her triumphs, but just as sure as the night follows the day her carnal and earthly glory will be turned into retributive shame and bitter humiliation.

The church in politics has progressed beyond the stage of experimentation. She need not try the experiment over again to find out how it works. It has been tried a hundred times since the day that Nebuchadnezzar cast the worthies into the fiery furnace and Darius, the Mede, threw Daniel into the den of lions, and each time the experiment has failed. Persecution is not any sweeter when it comes from a bigoted Christian than from a fanatical pagan. The evil results of a union of church and state have always been the same, no matter who the votaries or how sincere the purpose. There can be no religious liberty when the government is made custodian of religion and the soul of man is shackled with civil incapacities in matters of faith.

CHURCH AND STATE BOTH SUFFER.

The church gains nothing by appealing to force in religion and the state loses much of its stability by making hypocrites out of its citizens in attempting to make them act as though they were religious when they are not. It is for the good of religion and the state that the conscience should be left free, and that the Sabbath day should not be turned into a curse and crime producer through compulsory idleness and the ship of state wrecked upon the old rock of a union with the church by seeking to protect and foster some form of religion by civil law. For this reason we call attention to these fundamental principles and earnestly protest against all Sunday bills pending before Congress and against governmental interference in religious matters.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY A BOON TO THE WORLD.

Religious liberty is the beacon light which dispelled the gloom of the Dark Ages and emerged men from the despotism of the Middle Ages into the freedom, progress, and enlightenment of modern times. Religious freedom has made America great and prosperous. Religious liberty is the political hope of the world, and if this precious heritage is to perish from the earth this old world is doomed. If this world turns back to the old times of tyranny over the souls of men, the God of heaven will write "Tekel" on the walls of every legislative hall, and He will arise to avenge His injured name and to vindicate His suffering cause. In the name of those who made the Declaration of Independence possible and wrote the guarantees of civil and religious liberty into our fundamental law, we ask your honorable body not to pass any religious compulsory Sunday observance measures, that the great purpose of our Government may be maintained to "establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." The principles of the founders of our great Republic are our principles.

Respectfully submitted.

C. S. LONGACRE,
General Secretary of the Religious Liberty Association of America.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by title and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 8107. An act to control importations of dyes and chemicals; to the Committee on Finance.

H. R. 8117. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

H. J. Res. 183. A joint resolution imposing a duty of 90 per cent on all goods exported from the United States for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces and its allied forces and which have been sold to any foreign Government or person when reimported into the United States; to the Committee on Finance.

COMMISSIONED PERSONNEL OF THE ARMY.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I beg the indulgence of the Senate for just a moment. A few days ago I called attention to the fact that at the present time we have some 14,000 commissioned officers in the Army, with an Army now of only 150,000 men. I read in the press dispatches that upon the 22d of August there will be an examination with the hope of securing a thousand more commissioned officers. I have gone over the military law which we passed here some time ago to see if there was anything in it mandatory, compelling the Secretary of War to hold such examinations and to issue further commissions, but I do not find anything in the law to that effect.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that in view of the present condition of the Treasury, of our campaign for economy, and of the fact that we now have 14,000 commissioned officers in an Army of only 150,000 men, unless it is mandatory that further examinations for commissioned officers shall be held, it ought not to be done; and that if it is mandatory, and the Military Affairs Committee so understands, it is our first duty to repeal or modify the law so as to prevent any such examinations. It is almost unthinkable that we shall add a thousand more to the commissioned officers of the Army, with an Army of only 150,000 men.

I call attention to this matter this morning, Mr. President, for the reason that unless some suggestion is made by the Military Affairs Committee itself, I shall be disposed to offer a resolution designed to cover the situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

AFFAIRS IN MEXICO.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, on the 9th instant the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] presented a resolution passed by the Legislature of Texas favoring the recognition of the present Government of Mexico. The resolution, among other things, declared in favor of "the immediate favorable recognition on the part of the Government of the United States of the Government of Mexico as administered by President Obregon." It further declared that copies of the resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to "his excellency the honorable Alvarado Obregon, President of the Republic of Mexico."

I shall not comment upon the action of the legislature of the Lone Star State nor shall I comment upon the propriety of its action in recognizing Mr. Obregon as President and in ordering a copy of the resolution forwarded to "his excellency the honorable Alvarado Obregon, President of the Republic of Mexico." Of course, it was known that the United States had not recognized the Obregon régime and that recognition can only be accorded by the General Government. There are some who may feel that this resolution was ill-timed and perhaps in contravention of the principles and rules which should govern in diplomatic affairs.

I have received a number of communications protesting against the recognition of the so-called Obregon government until that government shall accede to the suggestions made by the Secretary of State, Hon. Charles E. Hughes.

Senators are familiar with the position taken by the former administration as that position was declared in the letter or paper of former Secretary Colby to the representative of Mexico. Secretary Hughes has announced with precision and clarity the attitude of the present administration and the steps to be taken by Mexico if she desires recognition at the hands of the United States. I desire to express my approval of the action of Mr. Colby and of the position taken by the present administration in relation to this matter. Secretary Hughes by his wise and statesmanlike course in the high position which he occupies has commanded the confidence of the American people. His admirable state papers and his treatment of the important questions brought to his attention have demonstrated his preeminent qualifications for the responsible position to which he has been called. In dealing with Mexico he has sought to protect the honor of his country as well as the interests of the American people. In so doing he has been considerate of the Mexican people and observed the highest principles of international morality which should obtain among nations, and he has evinced profound interest in Mexico and manifested deep solicitude for the welfare, happiness, and prosperity of the Mexican people. I feel sure that both President Harding and Secretary Hughes would welcome a situation which would remove every impediment to the most cordial relations between Mexico and her people and this Republic and the American people.

The United States desires now, as it has always desired, the happiness and peace and prosperity of our neighboring Republic. The American people entertain the kindest feelings for Mexico and regret the tragic pages which record the latter's internal confusions and her international misunderstandings.

The terms indicated by Secretary Hughes as conditions for the recognition of the Obregon government involve no humiliation to Mexico or her people and, indeed, are consistent with the most fastidious standard that might be adopted by the most punctilious nation. The American people have interests in Mexico—interests which were acquired under law and with the approval of the Mexican people. They have property within the Mexican Republic worth more than $1,000,000,000. The capital invested profited Mexico and was of material advantage to the Mexican people.

Many Americans have been murdered by the agents, officers, and soldiers of the Mexican Government, and also by Mexican nationals. Thousands have been driven from Mexico and large numbers have been subjected to indignities and outrages which call for redress. Hundreds and perhaps thousands of Americans who have been driven from their property and homes in Mexico are scattered along the Mexican border for 1,500 miles, and their appeals for redress are unanswered. Not only personal property but real property has been seized by the Mexican Government and by many of the Mexican people; and property of the value of millions, if not hundreds of millions, of dollars has been confiscated. For years attempts have been made to secure redress and to obtain compensation for the thousands of Americans whose claims are so appealing.

I am opposed to recognizing the Obregon government or any government in Mexico until reparation has been made and guaranties have been given for the protection of American rights and American property.

Either the Mexican Government or States within the Mexican Government are now confiscating, under agrarian laws which have been enacted, lands which have been owned by Americans for many years and which have cost them in toil and in treasure thousands and indeed millions of dollars. Some of the Mexican States are now seizing lands owned by Americans and dividing them among Mexicans. No compensation is made to the American owners. Worthless paper is given them or promised them under the terms of which the State within which the property is located will make compensation. But most of the States of Mexico are bankrupt, and the Mexican Government is unable to meet its obligations.

The plain fact is that American property is being expropriated and Americans are daily being robbed and despoiled of valuable property which they have acquired in an honest and legitimate manner. A Government that will not protect those who are lawfully within its borders, which robs them of their property and refuses to make reparations for wrongs done, can not expect recognition from a Government whose nationals are the victims of injustice and exploitation.

If the present régime in Mexico will agree to the appointment of an international commission to ascertain the damages to which Americans are entitled and will agree to satisfy the awards made, and will further agree to stipulate treaty provisions for the protection of American lives and American property, there will be no obstacle to its prompt recognition.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Mr. President—

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. It was not with any purpose of antagonizing at all the view expressed by my friend, the Senator from Utah, that I rose; I concur with him in the high compliment which he has paid to our Secretary of State, one of the finest figures in the public life of the world; but I should like to suggest to the Senator that both President Taft and President Wilson refused to recognize Huerta because his hands were dripping with the lifeblood of President Madero. Do not the hands of President Obregon drip with the blood of President Carranza; and is not this the highest moral stand which we can take when we refuse to recognize this accomplice in murder?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. I know that the Senator from Georgia desires the facts. Mr. President, the State of Arizona last January, through her legislature, unanimously petitioned the Congress to urge recognition of the Obregon government. If any State in this Union has suffered through the revolutions and disorders in Mexico it has been Arizona; indeed, hundreds of her citizens who went into Mexico were killed, millions of dollars worth of property of our nationals in Mexico, honestly acquired, have been confiscated and destroyed, and some citizens of the United States while in the United States were killed by Mexican bandits, who fired guns across the border and into Arizona. If there be a State that understands the "Mexican situation" it is Arizona. Yet, I repeat, through her legislature she unanimously petitioned the Secretary of State to extend recognition to the Obregon government. The State of Texas only 15 days ago took similar action. Texas is a border State and fully understands the Mexican question. The State of Michigan, through her legislature, petitioned for the recognition of the Obregon government; the State of Illinois has done likewise, as has also the State of Oklahoma and California.

Now, to come to the question as to whether or not the hands of President Obregon are clean, these States would never urge the recognition of a man with unclean hands. I believe President Obregon is a man of character. The Senator from Georgia will remember that when President Carranza, fleeing from the City of Mexico and whilst near a little village called Tlaxcalantongo, in the fastness of a tropical jungle, was slain, Gen. Obregon sent out a message that was worthy of a Washington or a Caesar. He denounced those persons who were expected and supposed to guard Gen. Carranza and give him safe conduct, and said—and I am only giving the substance of his message—"What is your excuse for living? It was your duty as a soldier to defend Gen. Carranza to the last. Had you defended him and died with him, you would have escaped the imputation of cowardice, and would have at least been at peace with your conscience." No message ever written by a Mexican attracted attention to that nation as did those brave words of Obregon in condemning those who were supposed to guard Carranza, but who, through carelessness or treachery, allowed him to be slain.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. With the permission of the Senator from Utah, will the Senator from Arizona allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. ASHURST. I have not the floor. I am speaking merely by the courtesy of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Has Obregon punished anybody for the murder of Carranza?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, to be direct, I do not know, but I feel—in fact, I believe—that he has made every effort within his power to punish the perpetrators of the murder of Gen. Carranza. I join with the Senator from Georgia in denouncing the killing of Gen. Carranza as a brutal, unwarranted killing.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. It was a most cowardly crime.

Mr. ASHURST. It was a brutal, cowardly crime, and stains the annals of Mexico, as it would stain the annals of any country.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. But Obregon has done nothing to avenge it.

Mr. ASHURST. So far as I know, he used every effort in his power to do so; but since he took charge of the executive branch of the Government of Mexico he has labored under some difficulties; criminals must be apprehended before they are punished. No recognition has been extended to him by our Government so far, and yet he has set up a government that provides a tolerably fair system of law and order. Pullman palace cars go safely from the border to the City of Mexico and return, and only last year we imported from Sinaloa, in Mexico, several hundred carloads of tomatoes and other vegetables, testifying to the fact that peace, order, and tranquillity prevail in many portions if not in all portions of Mexico.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Perhaps that is true where the other fellows have been killed.

Mr. ASHURST. I am not especially interested in Gen. Obregon. It so happens that I have known him for years. He is a man of high impulses, and I believe a man of integrity.

I do not believe that Congress should attempt to force the hand of the State Department on this subject, however, for, although I presented to the Senate the resolution adopted by the Arizona Legislature, I recognize that the question of extending recognition to the Obregon government is the function and duty of the State Department.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. KING. I will be through in a moment.

Mr. McNARY. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the calendar under Rule VIII. Without objection, the Secretary will begin with Order of Business 183.

Mr. KING. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	McCumber	Pomerene
Ball	Hale	McKellar	Sheppard
Borah	Harrell	McLean	Shortridge
Brandeggee	Harrison	McNary	Simmons
Calder	Heflin	Nelson	Smoot
Cameron	Jones, Wash.	New	Sterling
Capper	Kellogg	Norbeck	Sutherland
Culberson	King	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Curtis	La Follette	Overman	Watson, Ga.
Dillingham	Lenroot	Pittman	Willis
Fletcher	Lodge	Polindexter

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to announce that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] is detained from the Senate by illness.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the absence of the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] on account of a death in his family. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-three Senators having answered to their names, there is not a quorum present. The Secretary will call the names of the absentees.

The reading clerk called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. JONES of New Mexico, Mr. WARREN, Mr. WATSON of Indiana, and Mr. WILLIAMS answered to their names when called.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] on official business. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. BROUSSARD, Mr. MCCORMICK, Mr. ERNST, Mr. CARAWAY, Mr. SWANSON, Mr. JOHNSON, and Mr. STANLEY entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-four Senators having answered to the roll call, there is a quorum present.

CONTRACTS FOR THE FUTURE DELIVERY OF GRAIN.

Mr. CAPPER. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON], who was appointed a member of the conference committee on H. R. 5676, known as the future trading bill, is out of the city, and will not be here for a week or more. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] be substituted for him on that conference committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

FREE TRANSIT THROUGH PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, before we take up the calendar under Rule VIII I wish to make a request in regard to Senate bill 665, Order of Business 121. That has been made the unfinished business, but a number of Senators have expressed a desire for more time in which to consider the bill. Under the circumstances I do not feel that I ought to force it to speedy action, even if I could, and I am going to ask for unanimous consent for a time to vote. If I can get that, the Senators can have as much time to discuss it as they choose.

I ask unanimous consent that upon the 3d day of October, at 4 o'clock p. m., or upon the first day thereafter on which the Senate is in session, the Senate shall proceed to vote upon this bill and all amendments thereto without further debate.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What bill is it?

Mr. BORAH. The free tolls bill.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, why does the Senator desire to defer a vote upon this matter until after the proposed recess?

Mr. BORAH. To be frank about it, in the first place a number of Senators have insisted upon it, claiming that they have not had the time to prepare. The second proposition is that I do not know whether I can keep a quorum here. I do not want to be left without a quorum and at the same time be insisting that Senators shall prepare. I am perfectly willing myself, of course, to fix this vote for next Friday, but Senators are not ready to debate the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Mississippi will not object, and I want to thank the Senator from Idaho for the request which he has made. Speaking for myself and for several other Senators, we are not ready for a vote now. I was one of the number who requested the Senator from Idaho not to ask for a vote before the recess, and I sincerely hope the Senator from Mississippi will not object to the request of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. HARRISON. I am glad the Senator from Utah has made that statement, because, perhaps, that is the reason why the vote is put off. The other day, when a motion was made to take up this matter for immediate consideration, I was somewhat surprised, because I had read in the papers that President Harding was very much opposed to having the bill considered at this time; that he desired to have it come up after the recess and after the disarmament conference; that he wanted to take up diplomatic negotiations and try to settle these differences in that way. But when all of the Senators on the other side of the aisle voted for the motion I thought, perhaps, the President had changed his mind and had no objection to its immediate consideration.

So I was a little curious when the Senator from Idaho this morning made the motion for a vote to be taken on October 3. But I presume it is because the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] requested it of the Senator from Idaho, and that is the reason why it is to be placed over until October and not because he wants to comply with the President's wishes in the matter.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I can say with the utmost sincerity to the Senator from Mississippi that it was upon the request of the Senator from Utah and other Senators, some upon the other side and some upon this side, that I consented to this proposition, and in view of the fact that I know we can not finish the consideration of it between now and Friday—and I do not expect a quorum here after Friday—

Mr. HARRISON. I am not going to object.

Mr. BORAH. Furthermore, Mr. President, I think I ought to say, in justice to the President, that the President assured me he had no objection to the consideration of the bill and that he favors free tolls. That was some time ago, however. I do not intend to postpone it until after the disarmament conference; neither do I intend to consent that the question as to what we shall do with our domestic trade shall be taken up for consideration with foreign nations. That is a business of our own. I take the position that our domestic trade is a matter for the consideration of this Government and that we are under no obligations—treaty obligation, courtesy, comity, or any other obligation—to consult foreign powers.

Mr. KING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. KING. I should have been very glad, Mr. President, if the paramount reason prompting the Senator from Idaho to consent to a postponement of a vote upon this measure was bottomed upon the fact that the President of the United States is negotiating with Great Britain, as I hope he is, with reference to the matter. A discussion will reveal the fact that there is sharp controversy as to whether or not the bill of the Senator from Idaho, if passed, would contravene a treaty existing between the United States and Great Britain. I hope that the President of the United States is considering this matter, and I feel, Mr. President, that so long as it is the subject of negotiation between the Executive of the United States and the Government of Great Britain, Congress could afford to defer consideration of it. Speaking for myself, I should be glad if we could postpone the consideration of the bill until the President of the United States indicated there was no diplomatic situation which should occasion any postponement of action by the Senate and by Congress.

I again thank the Senator, however, for his courtesy in postponing consideration until October.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I have submitted a request for unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRANDEGEE in the chair). The Secretary will state the request.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from Idaho asks unanimous consent that at not later than 4 o'clock p. m. on the calendar day of Monday, October 3, 1921, or at not later than the said named hour on the first calendar day thereafter on which the Senate may be in session, the Senate will proceed to vote without further debate upon any amendment that may be pending, any amendment that may be offered, and upon the bill (S. 665) to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

Mr. SIMMONS. I would like to inquire of the Senator from Idaho if he knows when we are expected to take a recess, and for what length of time?

Mr. BORAH. The resolution which has been introduced provides that the recess shall run to the 19th of September.

Mr. SIMMONS. Is it the Senator's idea to make the bill the unfinished business as soon as we reassemble after the recess?

Mr. BORAH. It is my idea to have it discussed, but I do not expect to keep it the unfinished business and keep it before the Senate, because we will have the tariff bill and the tax bill for consideration. I am simply fixing a day for a vote. Of course, Senators can discuss any measure, whether it is before the Senate or not.

Mr. SIMMONS. But, Mr. President, if we meet on the 19th of September and vote on the bill on the 3d of October, and the time between those dates is taken up in discussing the tariff or the tax bill, there will be no time to discuss this measure. This is a very important proposition. We have twice discussed the question of Panama Canal tolls in the Senate, and twice acted on it. Both times we had lengthy discussion. I think the last time the debate and the general consideration occupied several weeks in the Senate. I do not think we ought to enter into a unanimous-consent agreement which will not provide ample opportunity for the discussion of this bill.

Mr. BORAH. I had thought that between the 19th of September and the 3d of October would be ample time to discuss it. Of course, I did not suppose it would be constantly before the Senate, but I am seeking to accommodate the situation to the requests of other Senators. If the Senator from North Carolina desires to object to the proposed agreement, I will go ahead with the bill as long as I can.

Mr. SIMMONS. I simply want to suggest to the Senator that he make the date a little later than the 3d of October. The Senator has said himself that he expects the Senate to take up the revenue bill when Congress reassembles, and I am very much afraid that we are providing for an arrangement which will preclude very much discussion or which will probably allow practically no discussion of this very important measure.

Mr. BORAH. Would the Senator be satisfied if the 10th of October were fixed as the date when the vote shall be taken?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not think I would object to that.

Mr. BORAH. Then I will change the date to the 10th.

Mr. FLETCHER. I suggest that the request now is quite ambiguous. The Senator proposes to have a vote taken on the 10th of October or at some other time. I should think he had better make it read "on the 10th of October, if the Senate is then in session, or on the first day thereafter when the Senate is in session."

Mr. BORAH. Very well, make it the 10th of October if we are in session, or the first day thereafter when the Senate is in session.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Is it the Senator's request that we shall take it up at that time?

Mr. BORAH. No; to take a vote at that time. It is the unfinished business now. I want to provide for a vote. I would not desire to get an agreement to take it up at that time merely, and to let it run along, because the tariff bill or the tax bill will be here. But in the time which elapses between now and the 10th of October, in view of the fact that this matter has been discussed from every possible angle in the past, my view of it is that a discussion will not enlighten the Senate very much. But I do not want to deprive anyone of an opportunity who wants to discuss it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To attempt to enlighten the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. To attempt to enlighten us; that is better.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Should not the roll be called?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will first report the proposed unanimous-consent agreement as it has been modified.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

It is agreed by unanimous consent that at not later than 4 o'clock p. m., on the calendar day of Monday, October 10, 1921, if the Senate is in session on said date, or at not later than the said named hour on the first calendar day after October 10 on which the Senate may be in session, the Senate will proceed to vote without further debate upon any amendment that may be pending, any amendment that may be offered, and upon the bill (S. 665), to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SHEPPARD. The roll should be called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll. The Secretary informs the Chair that the roll has just been called, and that there has been no intervening business; but this is not the suggestion of the absence of a quorum. The rules require the calling of the roll when unanimous consent is asked for fixing a date for a vote upon a measure. The roll will be called.

The Assistant Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	McCormick	Sheppard
Ball	Hale	McCumber	Shortridge
Borah	Harrell	McKellar	Simmons
Brandegee	Harrison	McLean	Smoot
Broussard	Heflin	McNary	Stanley
Calder	Johnson	Nelson	Sterling
Cameron	Jones, N. Mex.	New	Sutherland
Capper	Jones, Wash.	Norbeck	Walsh, Mass.
Caraway	Kellogg	Oddie	Watson, Ga.
Culberson	King	Overman	Watson, Ind.
Curtis	La Follette	Pittman	Williams
Dillingham	Lenroot	Poinexter	Willis
Fletcher	Lodge	Pomerene

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-one Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum of Senators present. The question is on the unanimous-consent agreement proposed by the Senator from Idaho. The Secretary will state the proposed agreement.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] asks unanimous consent that at not later than 4 o'clock p. m. on the calendar day of Monday, October 10, 1921, if the Senate is in session on said date, or at not later than the said named hour on the first calendar day after October 10 on which the Senate may be in session, the Senate will proceed to vote without further debate upon any amendment that may be pending, any amendment that may be offered, and upon the bill (S. 665) to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the agreement is entered into.

THE CALENDAR.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I ask that we proceed to the consideration of the calendar under Rule VIII, and I ask unanimous consent that we begin with Order of Business No. 183, and that we consider only bills to which there is no objection. No. 183 is where we left off the last time the calendar was considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator requests that only bills to which there is no objection shall be considered?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Of course, that is not under Rule VIII. Under Rule VIII a motion may be made to proceed to the consideration of a bill notwithstanding the objection.

Mr. SMOOT. I am aware of that. I ask that only bills be considered to which there is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair merely wished to understand the request. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The Secretary will state the first business on the calendar under the unanimous-consent order.

HAROLD KERNAN.

The bill (S. 405) for the relief of Harold Kernan was announced as first in order on the calendar.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry of some Senator who has the bill in charge? Do the facts warrant the appropriation? It seems to me that if the Government appropriates for losses whenever any custodians of public funds are robbed or the funds are lost through embezzlement or otherwise it will be establishing a precedent that may be very costly to the Government.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, may I state to the Senator that this officer was connected with the quartermaster's department and it was customary to transmit money from the quartermaster's office to the financial agent at Brest, which was a short distance away. The money was given to an enlisted man to be carried over. In doing this the officer had simply followed the precedent established there.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, reading the letter of the Secretary of War—

Mr. BROUSSARD. That is what I wanted to bring out.

Mr. SMOOT. He states that the board which investigated the matter at the time of the loss held the officer responsible for not having provided the man with a sufficient guard. I ask that the bill may go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

OSCAR C. GUESSAZ.

The bill (S. 753) for the relief of Oscar C. Guessaz was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Oscar C. Guessaz, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100, as reimbursement for a horse lost while serving in the military service of the United States on or about the 13th day of January, 1899, at Camp Columbia, near Habana, Cuba.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH B. EDDY.

The bill (S. 1022) to carry into effect the finding of the Court of Claims in the claim of Elizabeth B. Eddy was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like some explanation in regard to this measure. It is not very clear from the report. Unless there is some explanation given, I shall object to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CAPT. EDWARD T. HARTMANN AND OTHERS.

The bill (S. 1281) for the relief of Capt. Edward T. Hartmann, United States Army, and others, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I object.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator if he will not first permit me to make a short statement, and then if he feels that he ought to object he can do so.

Mr. KING. I withhold my objection for that purpose.

Mr. McCUMBER. The report shows on page 2 that the Meade, which was a Government boat, was injured—I think it was really sunk—by running on a reef, and among others this officer's baggage was entirely destroyed. The report shows that it was entirely the fault of Government officials.

I call the Senator's attention to a further fact. Some two or three of the other officers, by bills of the same character that have been introduced in the past, have received pay for the damage done to their baggage. Inasmuch as we have paid several of the others, will the Senator object to this officer receiving payment for the loss he incurred, as others have been paid for losses due to exactly the same cause?

Mr. KING. Any precedent established by the Senate would not influence me at all because we are more often wrong than we are right, so the argument addressed to me by the Senator does not have any effect at all. The question is whether the claim is meritorious and, if it is, whether the Senate heretofore acted favorably or unfavorably would be immaterial to me. I will ask the Senator to let the bill go to the foot of the calendar and I will read the report in the meantime.

Mr. McCUMBER. I would rather pass it over and leave it where it is.

Mr. KING. Very well; let it be passed over.

Mr. McCUMBER. On the objection of the Senator I ask that it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 825) for the relief of certain officers in the United States Army was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Let the bill go over.

Mr. HEFLIN. What is the purpose of having the bill go over?

Mr. SMOOT. The purpose is that the report does not give any reason why the claims should be paid and I want to know.

Mr. HEFLIN. Oh, I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. SMOOT. There is not sufficient reason given to justify us in allowing the Government of the United States to pay such claims.

Mr. HEFLIN. The report is favorable, and the committee recommends that the bill pass with certain amendments.

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly, that is the committee report, but the mere fact that some committee thinks it ought to be paid, without giving any reasons, does not justify me in not objecting. I desire to have an opportunity to examine into it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will be passed over.

ESTATE OF MOSES M. BANE.

The bill (S. 464) for the relief of the estate of Moses M. Bane was announced as next in order.

Mr. PITTMAN. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

JAMES L. VAI.

The resolution (S. Res. 99) referring the claim of James L. Vai to the Court of Claims was announced as next in order.

Mr. PITTMAN. Let the resolution go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

ADMISSION OF CERTAIN ALIENS.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 153) permitting the admission of certain aliens who sailed from foreign ports on or before June 8, 1921, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PITTMAN. Let it go over.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. Will the Senator permit me to make a statement about the joint resolution before he asks that it shall go over?

Mr. PITTMAN. I asked that it go over because no one seemed to make a statement about it, and it is quite an important matter. I do not know that I have any objection at all, except that I do object to voting for something I do not know anything about.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. I will state the circumstances. The present immigration law went into operation on the 8th of June. At that time there were a large number of immigrants on the seas, and they came in during the month of June. The condition was presented where the department would have to deport about 5,000 of them. The hardship was such that the Secretary of Labor did not feel at liberty to do that, and he admitted them temporarily.

The joint resolution simply ratifies that act and provides that the number so admitted shall be applied on the quota under the existing law, so that at the end of the year no more will have come into the United States from those countries by reason of this joint resolution than would have come in otherwise. It simply provides that those who were admitted temporarily may be admitted permanently and the act of the Secretary ratified, but that they shall be counted upon the quota that would be permitted to come from the countries whence they came under the law itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. PITTMAN. The excellent explanation satisfies me, and I shall not make any objection.

The joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That aliens of any nationality who are brought to the United States on vessels which departed from foreign ports on or before June 8, 1921, destined for the United States, and who apply in the month of June, 1921, for admission to the United States, may, if otherwise admissible, be admitted to the United States, although the limit prescribed by section 5 of the act entitled "An act to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States," approved May 19, 1921, may have been reached before such application for admission. The number of aliens of any nationality so admitted shall be deducted, under such regulations as the Secretary of Labor may prescribe, from the number of aliens of that nationality admissible, during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1921, under the provisions of such act of May 19, 1921, but nothing in this resolution shall prohibit the admission of otherwise admissible aliens of any nationality during the month of July, 1921, up to 20 per cent of the number of aliens of that nationality admissible during such fiscal year under the provisions of such act of May 19, 1921, as heretofore promulgated.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSOLIDATION OF NATIONAL FOREST LANDS.

The bill (S. 490) to consolidate national forest lands was announced as next in order.

Mr. ASHURST. I should like to have an explanation of the bill from the chairman of the committee. I do not wish to object to its consideration.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, this is a department bill. A similar bill has passed the Senate at the last session. The object of the bill is this: At every session of Congress there are private bills for the transfer of privately owned lands within a forest reserve in exchange for other public lands. I suppose there is not a session of Congress when there are not 10 or 12 such bills introduced. The department thinks, and so did the committee unanimously think, that it is best to pass a general law authorizing such transfers whenever the department desires to make the exchange. That is the purpose of the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. It will be remembered that nearly 20 years ago grave abuses were practiced—

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that this is not a lieu land scrip bill at all. It simply provides that where any transfer can be made of land within a forest reserve owned by private individuals in exchange for other public lands the matter shall be passed upon by the Department of Agriculture and the Department of the Interior, and that they shall first find that the lands are of equal value and the same amount of acreage. If they so find, and that it is beneficial for the administration of the forest reserve, then the exchange may be made.

Mr. ASHURST. This applies to 160-acre tracts here or there?

Mr. SMOOT. It applies wherever a party owns land within a forest reserve or where he had title to his land before ever the forest reserve was created to include his land. Many of them desire to exchange the land, and the Government desires to make the exchange, for it may be right in the middle of a forest; and if the private owner of the land can get the same amount of land elsewhere from the public domain, and he desires to exchange it, then the Government for the better administration of the forests desires that it shall be done.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I appreciate the necessity for some bill of this kind, yet my State has been so terribly "stung" in these matters that it makes me probably overcautious. I know the committee have been unanimous in their report on this bill, and the chairman of the committee being most cautious and conscientious, I am inclined not to object. However, I simply wish to call the attention of Senators to the fact that about 20 years ago nearly a million acres—yes, a million acres—of land of a value of probably 10 or 15 cents an acre within forest reserves in Arizona was given up and transferred to the Government and lieu lands selected elsewhere worth $200 an acre, and in some cases even more.

Mr. SMOOT. That was done, I will say to the Senator, through lieu land scrip. That is now done away with entirely.

Mr. ASHURST. This bill merely provides for an exchange of land?

Mr. SMOOT. It provides for an exchange of land.

Mr. ASHURST. I am opposed to the policy, but I shall not object, though I should like to have had a yea-and-nay vote on the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Arizona may object if he wishes to do so.

Mr. ASHURST. I shall not object. The Committee on Public Lands has passed upon the matter favorably, and I shall not set up my individual judgment against the judgment of that great committee of the Senate. I am not sufficiently egotistical to do that.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That, when the public interests will be benefited thereby, the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized in his discretion to accept on behalf of the United States title to any lands within the national forests which, in the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture, are chiefly valuable for national forest purposes, and in exchange therefor may patent not to exceed an equal value of such national forest land, surveyed and nonmineral in character, or the Secretary of Agriculture may authorize the grantor to cut and remove an equal value of timber within the national forests of the same State; the values in each case to be determined by the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That before any such exchange is effected notice of the contemplated exchange reciting the lands involved shall be published once each week for four successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in the county or counties in which may be situated the lands to be accepted, and in some like newspaper published in any county in which may be situated any lands or timber to be given in such exchange. Timber given in such exchanges shall be cut and removed under the laws and regulations relating to the national forests, and under the direction and supervision and in accordance with the requirements of the Secretary of Agriculture. Lands conveyed to the United States under this act shall, upon acceptance of title, become parts of the national forest in which they are located.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the very matter which the Senator from Arizona has brought to the attention of the Senate was considered in the Committee on Public Lands. This bill was very carefully considered by the committee with a view that the mistake which originated under former acts might not be perpetuated under the pending bill. Under this measure there can not be more land granted to the private individual by the Government in exchange for the land within the reserve than he actually owns therein nor can it be of greater value. On the contrary, it may be a lesser quantity of land of an equal value; or the Government, if it sees fit, instead of exchanging land for land may give to the grantor of the land the right to cut timber in the forest reserve of equal value to the timber which he sells to the Government, but under the condition that it shall be cut in accordance with the Government regulations as to selling timber on forest reserves.

The real object of the bill has been stated by the Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot]. When the Government lays out a forest reserve it frequently happens that right in the center of that reserve will be a timber claim that has been patented years before the forest reserve was established. It is very difficult for the Government to control fire on that privately owned land right in the midst of a great forest reserve. Therefore it is to the interest of the Government to get rid of the piece of privately owned land in the center of the forest reserve. The Government would rather have the settler on the edge of the reserve, so that it may consolidate its tracts. The individual also is greatly hampered by being surrounded by a Government forest reserve, because he is at the mercy of the Government with regard to the building of roads and trams which he needs for the cutting of his timber.

These matters have been coming up before the Public Lands and Surveys Committee of the Senate for years, and we have recognized the benefit both to the Government and the individual in numerous cases and have consolidated the land in individual instances. This is a general consolidation bill which the committee thought was very carefully drawn and which very carefully guarded the interests of the Government.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator from Nevada a question?

Mr. PITTMAN. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator conceive of any condition or circumstance under which pressure might be brought against the individual occupants of land to coerce them into an exchange, or is there any possible oppressive course that might be pursued by the Government against individuals under the pending bill?

Mr. PITTMAN. There is not under this bill. Under the general power of the Government to regulate forest reserves, however, there is naturally a constant obstruction from which many individuals are trying to get away.

Mr. KING. I am familiar with that.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is no coercive power whatever contained in this bill.

Mr. KING. There is no method by which a man may be compelled to relinquish claims which are either inchoate or perfected or to accept land which is selected by the Government in some other part of the forest reserve?

Mr. PITTMAN. There is nothing whatever of that kind. I want to ask the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] a question as to line 11, page 2, of the amendment, which reads in this way:

The Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized, in his discretion, to accept on behalf of the United States title to any lands within the national forests—

If the land is privately owned land, is it within a national forest?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; there is a quantity of privately owned land within national forests.

Mr. FLETCHER. That is a condition which we find in Florida where individuals own land within the general boundaries of a national forest. Of course, such land is not a part of the forest reserve, but it is within its boundaries.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is what I meant.

Mr. FLETCHER. It is within the exterior boundaries, but it is not within a national forest, because private land can not be within a national forest.

Mr. SMOOT. It is within the exterior limits of the national forest.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is what I thought was meant by the language.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator from Nevada that we followed the exact wording that has always been used in cases of private bills relating to this matter.

Mr. PITTMAN. I understand that.

Mr. SMOOT. And this language is in accordance with the usual description of such lands contained in laws heretofore passed. I have no objection, however, to having inserted the words which the Senator from Nevada suggests.

Mr. PITTMAN. Then I suggest that there be inserted in the bill, before the words "national forests," in line 13, the words "exterior boundaries of the."

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection to that amendment to the amendment.

Mr. PITTMAN. I offer that amendment to the amendment, to come in on page 2, line 13.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada to the amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. On page 2, line 13 of the proposed committee amendment, before the word "national," it is proposed to insert the words "exterior boundaries of the," so that it will read:

Title to any lands within the exterior boundaries of the national forests—

And so forth.

Mr. SMOOT. That is all right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment to the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is one other matter to which I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Utah. In line 15, on page 2 of the amendment, the language reads:

And in exchange therefor may patent not to exceed an equal value of such national forest land.

Does the word "patent" there mean a patent to the grantor by the Government?

Mr. SMOOT. It applies both to the Government and to the private owner. The owner of the land, the exchange of which is made by the Government, must give a patent for that land to the Government of the United States.

Mr. PITTMAN. It reads "and in exchange therefor may patent"—

Mr. SMOOT. That is in exchange for the land within the boundaries of the forest reserve.

Mr. PITTMAN. I presume that means issue a patent to the individual who conveys the land to the Government.

Mr. SMOOT. It applies in both cases, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. FLETCHER. Would it not be better to have it read "patent or convey"?

Mr. PITTMAN. The bill reads:

and in exchange therefor may patent not to exceed an equal value of such national forest land.

I should think the word "patent" would hardly apply in an instrument such as a deed. I am not insisting on the suggestion, however.

Mr. SMOOT. When land is patented it means, of course, that a patent has been given for that land. The word is used in all similar legislation in that way, I will say to the Senator. The land is patented to the individual.

Mr. PITTMAN. I merely make the suggestion. I have no interest in the language.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator this is the exact wording that was suggested by the department itself.

Mr. PITTMAN. They will have to interpret it.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Arizona to a further provision in the bill which I think will operate to safeguard all of the interests that the parties may have, and that is, that "before any such exchange is effected, notice of the contemplated exchange" shall be published in the county where the lands to be turned over to the Government are located and where the lands which may be given in exchange are located. It seems to me that the interests of all parties are safeguarded by the provisions of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. P. D. SHIEBLER.

The bill (S. 1541) for the relief of J. P. D. Shiebler was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask that that bill go over.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold his objection for a few moments, I desire to say that this bill simply rights an injustice to an excellent officer who served with distinction throughout the World War and who desires to remain in the service. It appears that he complied with all the regulations in connection with application for commission in the Regular service, but the Medical Department of the Army notified him that his eyesight did not meet the requirements. Subsequently it was discovered that that was entirely wrong—that his eyesight met all the requirements. This bill simply rectifies that injustice to him. I know from my own personal knowledge, because I know Mr. Shiebler well, that he served faithfully and efficiently throughout the war. It seems to me, in view of the fact that the Surgeon General's office itself was responsible for the error, he ought to be allowed to come in now and take his place in the service.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no report at all from the department; there is a mere statement of the facts. I think that we ought to know something about what the record shows. It is for that reason, and that only, that I object to the consideration of the bill. I will say to the Senator from New York, however, that we are letting down the bars for nearly everybody to get promotion in the Regular Army, and it will not be long until we shall find that we will be loaded down with a retired list of Army, Navy, and marine officers, and public-health officers, and other officers and employees under retirement privileges which have been granted until we shall have about two or three people on the back of every taxpayer.

Mr. CALDER. That is a proper matter to consider; but this man served in the Army with the colors during the war. He was unable to come into the Regular Army through an error on the part of the Surgeon General's office, who notified him, as I have said, that his eyesight was defective. Subsequently, on reexamination, the Surgeon General's office said his eyesight complied with all the requirements in every respect. If they had done what was fair and just in the first instance and had not made the mistake he would have been in the Army during the last year and a half. The bill simply rights a wrong that has been done.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like to be able to know exactly what the record shows.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that, after a bill is objected to, debate is not in order, unless the objection is withdrawn. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. I object to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

JOHN M. GREEN.

The bill (S. 777) for the relief of John M. Green was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator withdraw his objection?

Mr. KING. If the bill involves the question of granting a private pension to some person, I regret very much that I can not accede to the Senator's request. I am opposed to that method of legislating.

Mr. McKELLAR. The bill is designed to right a wrong that has been done. That is my opinion and that was the opinion of the committee. Of course, if the Senator has examined the bill and feels that it ought not to pass, that is another matter, but I will say that the soldier is a man who enlisted from Illinois when he was 17 years old. He received an honorable discharge, which was afterwards revoked, when it ought never to have been revoked. I hope the Senator will look into the matter before the calendar is called again.

Mr. KING. I will be glad to do so.

Mr. McKELLAR. And then I hope the bill may be considered. I care nothing in the world about it, except in the interest of what is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 1880) providing for the appointment of Warrant Officer Herbert Warren Hardman as captain in the Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, to take rank under the provisions of section 24a of the act of Congress approved June 4, 1920, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that go over.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection until I can make a very brief statement?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; but I am going to object to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the Chair would rule—

Mr. NEW. If the Senator is simply going to object to the bill without knowing anything about it, I presume it is not necessary for me to make the statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold his objection, I should like to say just a word about the matter, so that the Senator may, if he sees fit, withdraw his objection or let us take up the bill at some other time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that after a bill has been objected to debate is not in order.

Mr. FLETCHER. I am not debating it. I was asking the Senator if he would withhold his objection while I make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah says he is going to object anyway. Most of the time is taken up in debate on bills that have been objected to, and under the unanimous-consent agreement debate is not in order where they are objected to.

Mr. LODGE. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over.

VALIDATION OF DECLARATION OF INTENTION TO BECOME CITIZENS.

The bill (S. 757) to validate certain declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States filed prior to the passage of this act in the counties of Fergus and Musselshell, State of Montana, under the act approved June 29, 1906, entitled "An act to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States," as amended by the acts of March 4, 1909, June 25, 1910, and March 4, 1913, are hereby declared to be as legal and valid as if such declarations of intention had been filed in the judicial district in which the declarants resided, as required by section 4 of said act of June 29, 1906, and that the petitions for naturalization dismissed on account of such invalidity in the declaration of intention shall be given a rehearing without additional cost, upon informal application therefor by the candidate for citizenship to the clerk of court upon notice to the Bureau of Naturalization: Provided, That such declarations of intention shall not be by this act further validated or legalized and that this act shall apply only to those persons who have heretofore made homestead, desert land, or timber and stone entries.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 518) to carry out the provisions of an act approved July 1, 1902, known as the act entitled "An act to accept, ratify, and confirm a proposed agreement submitted by the Kansas or Kaw Indians of Oklahoma, and for other purposes," and to provide for a settlement to Addie May Auld and Archie William Auld, who were enrolled as members of the said tribe after the lands and money of said tribe had been divided, was announced as next in order, and was read.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, the report does not give any facts upon which to authorize the passage of this bill. There may be some, but I think some statement ought to be made as to the character of these allottees and what their claims are before this bill should be passed. Unless some Senator is prepared to do that, I shall object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LENROOT. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2040) to provide for compulsory school attendance of children, to provide for the taking of a school census, to create the department of school attendance and work permits for the administration of this act and the act to regulate the employment of child labor in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, within the District of Columbia, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1247) for the relief of Frank Carpenter, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LEWIS W. FLAUNLACHER.

The bill (S. 1516) for the relief of Lewis W. Flaunlacher was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 2, line 2, after the words "sum of," to strike out "$4,280.47" and insert "$1,280.47," and, in line 3, after the words "in all," to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$2,000," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Lewis W. Flaunlacher, as reimbursement for expenses actually incurred by him as the direct result of personal injuries received by him on September 3, 1917, near Camp Upton, Long Island, when he was struck by an automobile operated by the United States Army, the sum of $719.53, and as full compensation for loss of earnings, pain, and suffering from said injury and resulting surgical operation, and permanent disability of the right leg resulting from said injury, the sum of $1,280.47; in all, $2,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANK CARPENTER.

Mr. HARRELD. Mr. President, may I ask what was done in regard to Senate bill 1247, Order of Business No. 203? I did not hear it called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection was made, and it was passed over.

RELIEF OF CONTRACTORS, SUBCONTRACTORS, ETC.

The bill (S. 32) for the relief of contractors, subcontractors, and material men who have suffered loss by reason of Government orders was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation from the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] concerning this bill. It seems to me that heretofore we have been very liberal in dealing with contractors and subcontractors, and have made, in fact, too many concessions to reimburse them and to relieve them from the rise in prices growing out of the war. I should like an explanation about this bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, there has been no legislation at all for the relief of contractors with the Navy Department. There has been legislation for the relief of contractors with the War Department, the Post Office Department, and contractors for rivers and harbors work under the Army engineers; but there has been none for the relief of those who have contracts with the Navy Department. This bill simply gives to that class of contractors the same relief that has already been granted to the others.

The bill is very carefully guarded, so as to give relief only in cases where there have been direct orders of Government authorities causing damage or delay in the execution of contracts where such orders were not provided for in the contracts themselves. It was the opinion of the committee that the bill was limited in such a way as to avoid the very things that the Senator from Utah suggests.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator, before he resumes his seat, whether claims have been made by persons alleged to have been damaged by priority or other orders of the Government, and, if so, what is the aggregate; and does the Senator think that if this bill shall be passed it will end the matter, or will it not be an invitation for a train of other claims to be presented, calling for thousands and tens of thousands of dollars of further appropriations?

Mr. POINDEXTER. My opinion is that this will end the matter, Mr. President. I think claims have been presented aggregating some two or three million dollars, but, of course, they have not been allowed and could not be allowed except under the scrutiny of the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Certainly.

Mr. LENROOT. Did the Senator say that similar legislation had been passed for the War Department for war contracts generally?

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is my impression.

Mr. LENROOT. We did pass such a bill for the War Department with regard to rivers and harbors, and for the Treasury Department with regard to public buildings; but has it gone further than that?

Mr. POINDEXTER. My recollection is that it has gone further than that, and has been extended to other contractors for war materials and war construction.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I do not so remember it, but I do remember that so far as public buildings were concerned and so far as rivers and harbors were concerned legislation was passed for their relief. I think, however, the Senator is mistaken when he says that such legislation has been passed for the War Department generally. If we pass this bill for the Navy Department, we will have to pass a similar bill for the marines, and a similar bill for the War Department, and a similar bill for every other department. It only proves what I said when the river and harbor bill was before the Senate, when that step was first taken. I made the statement then that just as surely as we passed such legislation for the contractors on rivers and harbors every department of our Government would be asking for it; and I have not any doubt that that will be the case.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, this bill confines the relief to those cases where there has been less than 6 per cent profit upon the entire work—that is, in any case where on the entire work of the contractor for the Government he made a profit of as much as 6 per cent he can not have any relief, even though he may have lost money on a particular contract. In a case, whatever department it is in, where a man is doing work for the Government and the Government comes in under its war power and interferes with his work, takes his property away from him, or prevents the shipment of necessary materials, and causes him to lose money on the contract, it seems to me he ought to have equitable relief.

Mr. FLETCHER. May I ask the Senator whether this bill was referred to the Navy Department; and if so, what their recommendation was?

Mr. POINDEXTER. It was referred to the Navy Department, and is strongly recommended by the Secretary of the Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I dislike very much to object to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I hope the Senator will not object. It is a very meritorious bill, I think.

Mr. KING. Let the bill be passed over until we can examine it a little further. If the Senator will call it up later during the day I shall not object to its consideration then.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 2170) to encourage the development of the agricultural resources of the United States through Federal and State cooperation, giving preference in the matter of employment and the establishment of rural homes to those who have served with the military and naval forces of the United States, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FLETCHER. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE &amp; ST. PAUL RAILWAY CO., ETC.

The bill (S. 1283) for the relief of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co.; the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Co.; and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co., was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I reserve the right to object. I do not know what the bill is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection can always be made, at any time.

Mr. KING. Very well.

The reading clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, any statute of limitations to the contrary notwithstanding, the Court of Claims is hereby given jurisdiction to hear and determine the claims of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., in accordance with the decisions of said court in causes Nos. 28272, 29636, and 30159, and the claims of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Co., in accordance with the decision of said court in cause No. 29875, which was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the claim of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co., in accordance with the decision of said court in cause No. 24409: Provided, That said court in rendering judgment shall enforce the provisions of section 3477, Revised Statutes of the United States, prohibiting the assignment of claims against the United States, and shall render judgment for said claimants only for the amounts in which they, and not any predecessors of theirs, were underpaid, it being the purpose of this act to waive only the statute of limitations and not any other legal defense the United States may have to said claims: Provided further, That the same right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States as exists in other cases in the general jurisdiction of said court is hereby granted.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like some explanation of the bill.

Mr. McCUMBER. I think I can explain it to the Senator very briefly. If he will look at the report, he will find on the second page this statement:

The errors arose out of the classification of certain portions of claimants' lines by the Post Office Department as land aided when, in fact, they were not land aided. Under the law only 80 per cent of the normal rates are paid to land-aided railroads for mail transportation, and this is what was paid by the Postmaster General to these companies on those portions of their lines so erroneously classed as land aided.

One of the roads took the matter up, and there was some delay, but it finally went to the Supreme Court, and it was held that all of the particular lines involved in this bill were not land-aided lines. The amount involved altogether is not more than $55,000, but it allows the companies to go to the Court of Claims to establish that fact, notwithstanding the six-year statute of limitations, while giving the Government every opportunity to avail itself of any defense upon the merits.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether he has made sufficient investigation to determine whether or not, if it shall be discovered that the roads were not Government aided, the amount which they are claiming is just and fair compensation for the transportation of the mails, such as would be paid to other roads under like conditions?

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, all of the contracts for carrying the mail are not based on a quantum meruit, but some upon a definite amount. I assume that the contracts which are made are just and fair. I can not assume that they are unfair. It may be that they made a profit; it may be that certain lines have made a loss. I have not gone into the whole subject of profits and losses in the matter of carrying the mails over any line or lines, and, of course, I could not do that. The whole question is simply this, when we say we will pay 100 per cent of the contract upon roads which are not land-aided roads and only 80 per cent of that price on roads that are land aided, and the question arises as to whether certain roads are land aided, and the Supreme Court has decided that they are not, and have only had 80 per cent, whether we will allow them to go into the Court of Claims and establish just what they are entitled to under the contract. That is all there is involved.

Mr. KING. Why did not the railroad take steps to preserve its rights against the running of the statute of limitations?

Mr. McCUMBER. I do not know, except what is in the report itself, that it was uncertain as to whether these were land-aided roads at the time, and there was one case taken up and that case decided them all. There was some delay in that. I do not know anything that could have been done in the matter to continue the statute of limitations, except merely the taking of an exception to the holding of the Post Office Department. Nothing they could have done, as I understand, would have continued it, except the bringing of an action before that time, and they would have had to have authority even to do that.

Mr. KING. One other question, if I may ask the Senator: When this contract was entered into between the Government and the railroad there certainly must have been some understanding on the part of the Government officials as to whether it was a land-aided or nonland-aided railway. It seems to me its rates would be fixed with reference to whether it was an aided or a nonaided railroad.

Mr. McCUMBER. No; I think the contracts are made generally with these roads, and then it is a question of so much on all ordinary railways, and there is an exception under the law itself. The law itself provides that only 80 per cent of the amount shall be paid to land-aided roads, and that is fixed, not by the contract, but by the law itself. These were found to be nonland-aided roads.

Mr. KING. Did not the roads know whether they were land aided or not?

Mr. McCUMBER. I understand they claimed they were not all the time.

Mr. KING. Has there been a unanimous report from the committee?

Mr. McCUMBER. There has been.

Mr. KING. And a favorable report from the Department of Justice?

Mr. McCUMBER. The Post Office Department has now held they were entitled to the difference.

Mr. KING. Had they held the other way earlier?

Mr. McCUMBER. Earlier they had held the other way; but the matter went to the Supreme Court—I presume under permission to sue in some other action—and it was decided that they were not land-aided roads. There is no question now upon the facts, only as to the right to bring the action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I shall not object.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LONGEVITY PAY.

The bill (S. 150) to provide longevity pay for reserve officers and National Guard officers serving under orders of the War Department was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

JOHN LYONS.

The bill (S. 943) for the relief of John Lyons was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I would like to ask the Senator from Utah to withhold his objection until an explanation can be made in regard to the bill.

Mr. KING. I will withhold the objection to hear the explanation of the Senator.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The report made by the subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs upon the bill contains a letter from the War Department which sets out quite fully the facts in this case, and I will ask the Secretary to read the letter.

Mr. KING. It presents a case of desertion from the Army, does it not?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. A supposed case of desertion, but not actually a case of desertion at all.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I withhold my objection pending the explanation of the Senator. I still think I shall object, but out of courtesy I shall withhold the objection for the time being.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I will say to the Senator, without having the letter read, that this soldier served honorably in the Army up until March, 1865. He was only 16 years old, and, of course, had enlisted at a very early age. He was furloughed for two or three weeks about that time to go home to look after some goods. That was just a few days before Lee's surrender. He heard while he was away that Lee's army had surrendered, and he did not return. Being only 16 years old, he did not appreciate the necessity of going back and getting a formal discharge. We have had numerous cases of grown men who have done the very same thing, and it seems to me that a boy of that age, who had enlisted and served faithfully for the length of time that he had, who, through his inexperience, had committed an unintentional error, should now be placed upon the regular rolls, and the charge of desertion removed from his name. It is a much more deserving case than a great many cases in which we have passed bills through a kindly feeling for these old veterans. He is now an old man, but at that time he was exceedingly young and inexperienced.

Mr. KING. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will go over.

MEN AND OFFICERS IN THE RUSSIAN RAILWAY SERVICE CORPS.

The bill (S. 28) providing for the men and officers in the Russian Railway Service Corps the status of enlisted men and officers of the United States Army when discharged was announced as next in order, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the enlisted men and officers in the Russian Railway Service Corps, organized by the War Department in 1917, under the authority of the President of the United States, shall henceforth have the status as to honorable discharge, when they are honorably discharged from such service, of enlisted men and officers honorably discharged from the Army of the United States, and also as to benefits under the war risk and war compensation act and other service benefits on the same terms and conditions as honorably discharged enlisted men and officers of the Army.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I must say that I can not see any reason why persons serving as civilians, no matter how hazardous their services and how arduous their duties, should be placed in the category of those who have been inducted into the military service, and have all the benefits of retirement, the compensation, and pensions which flow from actual military service.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I agree entirely with what the Senator says; but these men were enlisted as military men, placed under military orders, were under military discipline, and all of them supposed they were part of the United States Army. They were given Army uniforms, and were enlisted by the War Department upon representations that they would compose a part of the military forces of the United States. All the official business of the War Department was conducted as though they were. They were sent to Russia, and, as the report of the Secretary of State says, rendered faithful service under very difficult conditions. It was a very hazardous service. No one of them ever dreamed he was in a civilian status, that he could leave any time he wanted. They were under the strictest kind of military orders.

Mr. KING. Were they under military officers?

Mr. POINDEXTER. They were under military officers.

Mr. KING. What character of work were they performing?

Mr. POINDEXTER. They were performing the work of guarding and operating the Chinese Eastern and Trans-Siberian Railway.

Mr. KING. Was it in connection with the expedition which was under Gen. Graves?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Yes; in connection with that, and also in connection with the work of supplying our erst-time allies with supplies over those lines.

Mr. KING. What is the number involved?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I think about 200 or 250.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall not object. But may I inquire of the Senator whether there are any others who will follow and regard this as a precedent? Were there not other agencies and instrumentalities employed during the war, operating indirectly, and possibly at times directly, in aid of the military successes of the Government, who will regard this as a precedent?

Mr. POINDEXTER. No, Mr. President; I have looked into that matter very carefully, and there is nothing else whatever which bears any similarity to this measure. It is the only case of the kind, and it is almost incredible that there should have been this case. These men considered themselves to be a part of the Army. They put in their claims for war-risk insurance, and in many instances their claims were allowed. They were treated by that bureau as soldiers, and it was only at a later date that the point was made that they were not soldiers of the United States; and not even in the employ of the United States, according to the War Department, which claimed that they were employed by the Russian Government.

Mr. KING. Were they paid civilian compensation or the $30 a month paid to soldiers?

Mr. POINDEXTER. They were all officers, and they were paid the compensation of officers, in some instances extra compensation.

Mr. KING. Did they call themselves captains and colonels and lieutenants, and were they paid as such?

Mr. POINDEXTER. They had military grades.

Mr. SMOOT. The bill provides for enlisted men.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Officers and enlisted men.

Mr. SMOOT. Men and officers; so there must have been some enlisted men.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I was under the impression that there were some enlisted men, but the Secretary of State says they were all officers.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me to interrupt him, they were all officers, as the Senator has said. The bill was strongly recommended by the War Department, and a similar bill passed the Senate at the last session. So the measure has been previously acted on here.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, it could not do any harm to have it provide for enlisted men. If there were not any, it could not do any harm.

Mr. SMOOT. We had some enlisted men who went for this very purpose into the high mountains of Italy. Why should they not come and make claim on just exactly the same basis?

Mr. POINDEXTER. There were not any enlisted men who were in a civil status, who were enlisted as a part of the Army and then denied the privileges of enlisted men.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, I do not know about that.

Mr. POINDEXTER. There were not. There is no other case of this kind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KING subsequently said: Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Washington directing attention to the bill relating to the men and officers in the Russian Railway Service Corps, which was just passed—I am asking this so as to avoid a motion to reconsider—whether it would give to these individuals who are to be benefited by the act privileges which they have forfeited by reason of nonpayment of any insurance premiums? It seems to me this language would exonerate them from making payments for insurance, if they had failed in the past, and excuse them from such payments, and reinstate them with all of the advantages and privileges the same as if they had not forfeited any insurance or any other rights.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I do not understand that the bill could possibly have that effect, because it has put them in the same status as honorably discharged men of the Army, and they would be subject to the same law and the same regulations.

Mr. SMOOT. They would be honorably discharged even though they had not paid their insurance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The READING CLERK. A bill (S. 665) to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not know of anyone who desires to discuss the bill at this time. If there is anyone, of course I shall not ask that it be laid aside.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to state to the Senator from Idaho that if he will kindly lay it aside, I am going to ask that we proceed with the consideration of the calendar, at least, until we get through it.

Mr. BORAH. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in order that I may have an opportunity to investigate the question which I just propounded to the Senator from Washington, I give notice of a motion to reconsider the action of the Senate by which the bill, S. 28, was passed. I will say to the Senator that if upon investigation this afternoon I discover there is nothing in that point, I shall withdraw my motion. I wish to save the opportunity if an error has been committed.

BELL OF THE CRUISER "MILWAUKEE."

The bill (S. 1733) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, to deliver to the president of the Milwaukee Press Club, of Milwaukee, Wis., the bell of the wrecked cruiser Milwaukee was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to deliver to the president of the Milwaukee Press Club, of Milwaukee, Wis., for the use of the said press club, the bell of the wrecked cruiser Milwaukee, said bell now being in storage at the Mare Island Navy Yard: Provided, That no expense shall be incurred by the United States through the delivery of said bell.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE CALENDAR.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we proceed with the consideration of the calendar at least until we get through the bills now on the calendar, considering all bills up to calendar No. 269 that may not be objected to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I suggest that I have two bills not on the printed calendar which have been reported to-day and I should like to include those.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Utah?

Mr. POINDEXTER. What is the request?

Mr. SMOOT. I have requested that we proceed with the consideration of the calendar until we go through the calendar, including also the two bills referred to by the Senator from Oregon which were reported to-day.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I ask unanimous consent pending that to report from the Committee on Mines and Mining a bill which has passed the House, and I ask that it be included also.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington asks unanimous consent to report a bill from the Committee on Mines and Mining. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. POINDEXTER. From the Committee on Mines and Mining, I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 4813) changing the period for doing annual assessment work on unpatented mineral claims from the calendar year to the fiscal year beginning July 1 each year.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be placed on the calendar. The Senator from Utah has modified his request so as to include the bill suggested by the Senator from Oregon and the bill reported by the Senator from Washington.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I understand the request of the Senator from Utah is that we shall continue the consideration of unobjected bills now on the calendar under the provisions of Rule VIII.

Mr. SMOOT. Under the same provision under which we have considered bills up to this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the understanding that a motion can not be made to proceed to the consideration of a bill, an objection to the contrary notwithstanding, and with a limitation of debate under the 5-minute rule as prescribed in Rule VIII.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I shall have to object to that request. I desire to address the Senate on another subject. Did I understand the Chair to say that if the order shall be made as suggested by the Senator from Utah, we can only discuss a measure five minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes. We are under the provisions of Rule VIII, considering bills to which there is no objection, and debate is limited to five minutes. It has been so limited for the last two hours.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I will say to the Senator from Alabama that the purpose is simply to proceed with the calendar in the usual way and dispose of such matters as are not objected to, and after that is done, to go on with other bills.

Mr. HEFLIN. I have no desire to prevent that arrangement if we can get through in time so that I may be able to discuss a matter that is of vital importance to our section of the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is impossible to state when the consideration of the calendar would terminate, because the request is that the Senate shall proceed through the entire calendar, including the last bill now on the printed calendar and three other bills. It may take all afternoon.

Mr. HEFLIN. I will let the calendar proceed for a while.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unanimous consent must be given now or objection entered now.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Alabama could object to every bill reached on the calendar, so that would terminate the call of the calendar very quickly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; but the Senator from Alabama could not object to the unanimous-consent request at a future time. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Utah?

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is, that we shall consider bills that are not objected to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection and the unanimous-consent agreement is entered into.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN NAVAL RESERVE OFFICERS.

The bill (S. 1824) to provide for the relief of certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I regret very much the action of the Senator from Utah, who, I understand, has made an objection to the consideration of the bill.

I think there is a great injustice being done those who would be the beneficiaries of the bill. Two Secretaries of the Navy have reported favorably on it, and I have the reports here. A unanimous favorable report was made by the Committee on Naval Affairs through the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]. There is no objection to it that I know of from any source. I think it meets a situation which should be corrected, and I hope the Senator will be good enough to let us consider the bill.

Mr. KING. I shall withhold my objection until the Senator makes a statement.

Mr. McNARY. I ask that the Secretary may read from the report of the committee the letter of the Secretary of the Navy. It is not very long.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The reading clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
Washington, June 11, 1921.

Hon. CARROLL S. PAGE,
Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Replying further to the committee's letter of May 18, 1921, inclosing a bill (S. 1824) "to provide for the relief of certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force, and for other purposes," and requesting the department's consideration and report thereon, I have the honor to inform you that the language of said bill is identical with that proposed by this department and transmitted to your committee by its letter of May 5, 1920, to which letter reference is hereby made for full and detailed information.

The said proposed legislation was introduced in the Senate on May 11, 1920, as bill S. 4351, passed by the Senate on May 28, 1920, and received in the House May 29, 1920, but failed of passage.

The purpose of the proposed legislation is to provide relief for certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force and the Marine Corps Reserve, who, under decisions of the Comptroller of the Treasury, have been denied the right to mileage or travel allowance to their homes upon being disenrolled from the service or released from active duty therein. The early enactment of the bill (S. 1824) is urgently recommended.

Sincerely, yours,

EDWIN DENBY,
Secretary of the Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. The letter does not make any explanation. It merely gives a departmental view.

Mr. McNARY. There is another communication from the former Secretary of the Navy which gives more complete information. I ask that it may be read also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The reading clerk read as follows:

MAY 5, 1920.

Hon. CARROLL S. PAGE,
Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Replying to your letter of April 29, 1920, relating to the reimbursement of certain officers of the Marine Corps Reserve on account of travel pay, I have the honor to inform you that under date of March 11, 1920, the following letter, together with the proposed draft of a bill hereto attached, were forwarded to the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

"There is inclosed herewith a proposed draft of a bill to provide for the relief of certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force and the Marine Corps Reserve who, through decisions of the Comptroller of the Treasury, have been denied the right to mileage or travel allowance to their homes upon being disenrolled from the service or released from active duty therein, which is respectfully submitted for your consideration.

"Shortly after the armistice had been signed, several officers of said reserve forces, who had been originally enrolled as seamen at one naval station and transferred for the good of the service to some other naval station or base where they were given provisional assignments as officers, were released from active duty or disenrolled from the service under honorable conditions under orders which failed to direct them to proceed to their homes, whereupon said disenrollment or release would become effective, but detached them from the service at said naval station or base.

"Under date of April 17, 1918, the Comptroller of the Treasury decided that an officer of the Naval Reserve Force who had been erroneously disenrolled at a place other than that of his enrollment may not receive mileage to said place of enrollment for the reason that he was not in the service when the travel was performed.

"In an attempt to follow out the intent of the above decision many officers of said reserve forces were detached from duty by the department and directed to proceed to their homes at their convenience and there to consider themselves as detached from all active duty. Although the department had acted in good faith in directing the officers of said forces to proceed in the above manner, the Comptroller of the Treasury in passing upon this procedure under date of October 7, 1917, held that the active-duty status of said officers terminated as of the date of detachment and that they were not entitled subsequent thereto to the pay of officers actively employed or to mileage for the travel to their homes within the period of authorized delay. The decisions of the comptroller under the dates of February 9 and 20, 1920, merely reaffirmed the above decisions in applying them to modified statements of facts.

"As a result of these decisions of the Comptroller of the Treasury a considerable number of officers of the Naval Reserve Force and the Marine Corps Reserve have been denied the benefits of the mileage pay and travel allowances to which the department assumed they were entitled under the laws which had been previously enacted for this purpose.

"In addition to the above, quite a number of officers of said forces were paid mileage or travel allowance to their homes by the disbursing officers of the Navy or Marine Corps, as the case might be, all of which payments have been rendered void by the decisions of the Comptroller of the Treasury, above noted, and either have been, or will hereafter be, disallowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department. This action will cause said disbursing officers of the Navy and Marine Corps to face large financial losses which were incurred through no fault of theirs, since they acted under instructions from the department, which instructions were given in good faith.

"The proposed draft of bill hereto attached is submitted for the purpose of correcting the conditions above noted, and it is therefore recommended that it be enacted."

I am not aware of the present status of this proposed legislation.

Sincerely, yours,

JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. KING. I will withdraw my objection so that the bill may be considered, but I desire to ask the Senator from Oregon the amount involved, if he knows.

Mr. McNARY. I regret very much my inability to inform the Senator from Utah the total amount involved. It does not appear in the record.

Mr. KING. Why was it that some were paid by the disbursing officer prior to return to their homes and others were not?

Mr. McNARY. I could not answer that question. All I know is contained in the report filed by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] and the reports which have been read here from the two Secretaries of the Navy, which I think show a meritorious case.

Mr. KING. It may be meritorious, but there are some links missing from the chain which would establish beyond question the merit of the claim. However, I shall not object. I wish the Senator could submit further information, though, regarding the matter. May I inquire of the Senator whether it extends into thousands of beneficiaries under the bill and millions of dollars which the Treasury will be compelled to pay? Can any Senator present answer that question?

Mr. McNARY. I will say to the Senator from Utah that it is the principle involved rather than the amount of money. If it is $10 that is involved and it ought to be paid, the principle is just the same.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. McNARY. I am not interested in the number of men or the amount of money involved. It is either right or it is not.

Mr. KING. Can the Senator give any explanation why officers who were detached in that way were not paid?

Mr. McNARY. They were paid previously. I have not in my possession data of that character. The letter from Josephus Daniels, the eminent Democratic ex-Secretary of the Navy, so clearly sets forth the case favorably to these individuals that I think we need not go any further unless we go to the communication of the present Secretary of the Navy who confirms the action of the former Secretary. The Committee on Naval Affairs reported unanimously in favor of the bill, and the report as presented was written by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator will not say the Committee on Naval Affairs unanimously reported, because I am a member of that committee, and I did not assent to the report.

Mr. McNARY. I think if the record is studied it will show that the Senator from Utah was not present on that day.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, considered the bill, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That officers of the Naval Reserve Force or the Marine Corps Reserve who have heretofore been, or may hereafter be, released from active duty therein shall receive mileage at the same rate as authorized for officers of the Regular Navy for the distance involved in travel in the United States from the place where disenrolled or released from active duty to their homes.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I am not going to object to the proposition, but I desire to offer an amendment to the bill and have it styled section 2. I ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The READING CLERK. Add at the end of the bill a new section, to be known as section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. That every officer or midshipman of the United States Navy or Marine Corps who was dismissed therefrom solely because he left such service in order to join, or because he joined, the Confederate forces for service during the Civil War shall be held and considered to have duly resigned and to have been honorably discharged therefrom, and the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and directed to correct the records of such officers and midshipmen in accordance herewith as of the date of such dismissal.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the proposed amendment to the bill is based on justice. I have offered it because of a desire that various records be fixed and adjusted to show that these men, during 1861, who were in the Navy and in the Marine Corps, and who joined the Confederate forces, were honorably discharged. There were a great many similar cases, most of which have been adjusted. I think there are about 35—I am not sure as to the exact number, but it is about 35—who joined the Confederate forces, either in the Navy or the Marine Corps, as to whom it is shown on the records of the Navy Department that they were dismissed. The only object of the amendment is to show that they were honorably discharged. I can not see why in the world there would be any objection to the proposition, and I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Mississippi whether, if the amendment were to prevail, it would carry with it the objection on the part of the United States to pay to those individuals retirement pay?

Mr. HARRISON. Absolutely not. The whole proposition is this: At the outbreak of the war between the States there were some men from the South who happened to belong to the Navy or to the Marine Corps. They left that service without being honorably discharged, so to speak, and joined the Confederate forces. The records show that they were dismissed from the service. The object of this amendment is merely to show that they were honorably discharged. That is the purpose of the amendment. It will require no appropriation. It is in the interest of fairness and justice and in order to cement the two sections together. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, is the Senator from Mississippi able to state how many officers and men would probably be affected by the proposed amendment?

Mr. HARRISON. I think there are about 35 who appear on the records as having been dishonorably dismissed from the service because of the circumstances which I have stated. The records as to a great many persons who were in the Navy and in the Army, who, under similar circumstances, left those branches of the service and joined the Confederate forces have been changed and they show them to have been honorably discharged. There are only a few cases where the records have not been clarified. I repeat that the only object of this amendment is to have the record show that these men were honorably discharged instead of showing that they were dishonorably discharged.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REGISTRATION OF CERTAIN CHINESE.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 33) permitting Chinese to register under certain provisions and conditions was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas 379 Chinese men, some of the merchant and others of the laborer class, attached themselves to the punitive military expedition under the command of Gen. Pershing, which entered Mexico in 1916, and when said expedition returned from Mexico were temporarily admitted to the United States as refugees; and

Whereas the said Chinese performed extensive services and rendered valuable assistance to the punitive expedition in Mexico and jeopardized their lives and made their further residence in Mexico at the time impossible by attaching themselves to the expedition and rendering such services; and

Whereas the said Chinese after temporary admission to the United States as refugees continued to render, and are now rendering, services to the military branch of the United States Government, such services being valuable, unusual, and in some instances of a hazardous nature; and

Whereas the said Chinese can not return to their former homes in Mexico with safety and can not at this time be deported to any other place justly and humanely: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That the Commissioner General of Immigration be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to permit the said Chinese to register under the terms of and in accordance with the provisions of section 6 of the act approved May 5, 1892 (27 Stats. at L., p. 25), as amended by section 1 of the act approved November 3, 1893 (28 Stats. at L., p. 7).

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry relative to Senate joint resolution 33, which was just passed. May I ask the Secretary to reread the joint resolution in order that I may make a motion to reconsider the vote by which it was passed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested. Does the Senator from Idaho care to have the preamble of the joint resolution also read?

Mr. KING. I suggest to the Senator from Idaho that the preamble of the joint resolution should be read in order to understand the circumstances.

Mr. BORAH. I suppose the preamble should be read in order to understand fully the facts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The reading clerk again read the joint resolution.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire what section 6 of the act approved May 5, 1892, provides?

Mr. BORAH. That is what I was trying to find out, but the Senator in charge of the bill has left the room.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Under the circumstances I withdraw the inquiry. I was asking more for information than anything else.

Mr. BORAH. I am going to make a motion for the present to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, until I can find out what it is about.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to reconsider will be entered.

Mr. BORAH subsequently said: Mr. President, I have examined the Statutes at Large to which Senate joint resolution 33 refers, and, as I now understand, the joint resolution does not have the effect of giving citizenship to the Chinese referred to in the joint resolution.

Mr. KING. No.

Mr. BORAH. Nor does it provide a method by which they may ultimately acquire citizenship.

Mr. WILLIS. I desire to say in reply to the Senator from Idaho that this resolution does not give to these Chinese men American citizenship, nor does it provide any means whereby they subsequently can become citizens. It simply makes provision for the issue of temporary certificates of registration so that they may have a legal status in this country.

Senators will understand that these men were in Mexico when the punitive military expedition went into Mexico in 1916. They attached themselves to the expedition with the approval and at the request of the commanding officer, Gen. Pershing. They rendered important service.

Mr. KING. The bill simply prevents their deportation?

Mr. WILLIS. That is all there is to it. When the expedition came out of Mexico, of course, these Chinese, by aiding the Americans, had become to Mexico persona non grata, and they had to come out as a matter of self-protection. Gen. Pershing brought them out, so they got into the United States, but they have no legal status in this country. I have on my desk here a letter from Gen. Pershing in which he expresses very great interest in this matter.

Mr. BORAH. I withdraw my motion to reconsider.

Mr. WILLIS. Then, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD the letter from Gen. Pershing, with certain other brief documents explanatory of this whole matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that order will be made.

The matter referred to is as follows:

GENERAL OF THE ARMIES,
Washington, June 29, 1921.

The Hon. HENRY W. KEYES,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR KEYES: I am taking the liberty of introducing to you Mr. William Tracy Page, who has charge of the Chinese refugees from Mexico. It is understood that the papers regarding these refugees are on file with you, and I would thank you very much to give Mr. Page a conference, as I believe he is in a better position than anyone else to know the necessity for early legislation in behalf of these unfortunate people.

Thanking you for your courtesy in the matter, I beg to remain,

Very sincerely, yours,

JOHN J. PERSHING.

William Tracy Page, in a detailed communication dated December 17, 1919, states:

The refugees originally numbered 527. They arrived at Columbus, N. Mex., on February 3, 4, and 5, 1917, and remained in a camp at that place for about four months while their cases were being considered and decided by the Department of Labor. During the period mentioned some of them returned to points in Mexico, where they thought they would be safe for the time being; some went to China, and some, being found to belong to the exempt class, were furnished with appropriate certificates and regularly admitted. In this way the number was reduced from 527 to 427. Subsequently the number was reduced to 399, the present figure, through the death of 8 and the deportation of 20.

While detained in the camp at Columbus the Chinese were trained in the principles of camp sanitation and hygiene and were given sufficient physical training to keep them in good health. In all of this training they manifested great interest. In June, 1917, the refugees were transferred from Columbus to San Antonio, Tex. At the time the Government was experiencing great difficulty in finding competent labor to clear the ground where part of Camp Travis was to be constructed, and the Chinese were placed upon this work. It was estimated that three or four months' work would be required, but the clearing was completed in five weeks, the Chinese starting their labors at 7 in the morning and working even as late as 11 o'clock at night, when moonlight permitted. They were paid 20 cents per hour, with no additional pay for overtime and seemed perfectly contented. After this work was finished the Chinese were allowed to work for the contractors building Camp Travis and performed valuable and acceptable services. The refugees did the cooking for the 6,000 men employed in the construction work at Camp Travis and also at Kelly Field, in connection with which they worked from 10 to 12 hours a day and a half day on Sundays and whenever necessary at night. During this time it became apparent that when it would become necessary to assign the Chinese to other classes of work it would be important for them to have a knowledge of English, and night schools were established in the camp, where the Chinese became apt and willing students and where they fitted themselves for employment as cooks and stewards in the messes. Services of this kind were rendered by them at the officers' training camp at Leon Springs, Tex., and in the Air Service camps in Texas and Louisiana. Later it became necessary to withdraw some of the men from this class of work and to assign them to duty in the tuberculosis hospitals in Forts Stanton and Bayard, N. Mex., where it had been found impossible to obtain satisfactory help for the conduct of the messes. They have been, and are now, employed in the base hospital at Fort Sam Houston in a similar capacity, and, in fact, they are employed in more than 30 different localities at the present time, with excellent results everywhere.

The refugees have endeavored in every way to show by their conduct the appreciation which they feel of the kindness of the United States Government in granting them refuge. They are physically of a superior type and have observed the sanitary regulations, these facts doubtless accounting for the small death rate among them. They have respected the restrictions placed upon them by the Department of Labor and have not attempted to escape from those restrictions and remain permanently within the country in violation thereof.

(Personal.)

AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES,
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF,
Washington, D. C., November 6, 1919.

Hon. ANTHONY CAMINETTI,

Commissioner General of Immigration,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CAMINETTI: My attention has been called to a bill making an appropriation to cover expenses of deporting to China the refugees who were brought out of Mexico by me, which has recently been reported favorably to the House.

May I avail myself of this my first opportunity to write you, and suggest that, if it is at all possible, some other way than the deportation of these men be found to solve the difficulty that confronts your bureau.

Every consideration should be shown these unfortunate people. The reasons given below, I believe, will appeal to you and to all high-minded, right-spirited public officials:

First. These Chinese knowingly jeopardized their own lives when they attached themselves to and assisted the punitive expedition into Mexico, where they were employed in various capacities.

Second. They suffered a great financial loss through using their funds in the establishment of stores for the sale of merchandise which was not carried in the commissary and into the erection and equipment of a large laundry at Colonia Dublan, which had to be abandoned when the expedition withdrew, the withdrawal occurring before the laundry had been operated long enough for the profits to reimburse the Chinese. Third. They were faithful and efficient in all the services they rendered to the punitive expedition.

Their sacrifices and services, made for and rendered to the United States while the Chinese were still in Mexico, were, in my judgment, of such a nature and extent as to create the strongest kind of equities in their behalf.

Fourth. After they had been permitted by the immigration officials, acting under your instructions, to come into the United States and remain temporarily in the haven of refuge thus afforded them by you they have continued to render, and are now rendering, I am informed, services of a very acceptable, and in some instances of a very unusual and often of a hazardous nature, such as cooking in tuberculous hospitals or sanitariums.

I request that your usual earnest and careful consideration be given to this matter.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Very truly, yours,

JOHN J. PERSHING.

[Senate Report No. 200, Sixty-seventh Congress, first session.]

REGISTRY OF CERTAIN CHINESE REFUGEES.

Mr. WILLIS, from the Committee on Immigration, submitted the following report, to accompany S. J. Res. 33:

The Committee on Immigration, to whom was referred the resolution (S. J. Res. 33) permitting Chinese to register under certain provisions and conditions, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the resolution do pass without amendment.

PURPOSE OF THE RESOLUTION.

The purpose of the resolution, as clearly indicated by its text, is simply to afford relief in the cases of 379 Chinese now in this country and not in possession of the certificates of residence required by law, and who entered the United States in 1916, and have since been permitted temporarily to reside here, under the following circumstances and conditions:

While the punitive expedition was in Mexico under the command of Gen. John J. Pershing, the Chinese in question, along with some others who are now no longer within the United States, attached themselves to the expedition and rendered extensive and valuable services, in that manner becoming persona non grata in Mexico, so that when the expedition returned to the United States it was necessary, in order to avoid the probability that the Chinese would be harshly dealt with or even murdered if required to remain in Mexico, to permit them temporarily to enter the United States. This was done, and they were furnished with temporary certificates indicating the circumstances. They were admitted by the Department of Labor with the understanding that they would be employed by the Quartermaster Department of the Army. Thereafter they rendered extensive and valuable services in various capacities in the said department at different places in the vicinity of the Mexican boundary.

The relief which it is proposed by the resolution to afford these Chinese consists merely of giving legislative authority for their registration by the Commissioner General of Immigration under the provisions of the Chinese registration acts.

EVIDENCE CONSIDERED BY COMMITTEE.

A volume of evidence of most convincing character bearing upon this matter was placed before the committee by Gen. Pershing, through his representative, Mr. William Tracy Page. Mr. Page was placed in charge of the refugee camp by Gen. Pershing immediately after the Chinese entered the United States and continued to have charge of the Chinese while their cases were being considered and decided by the Department of Labor and also after they were assigned to different duties in various military camps as employees of the Quartermaster Department. This report would be rendered entirely too lengthy if the evidence in question should be incorporated therein. Suffice it to say that it included a letter from Gen. Pershing, dated November 6, 1919, addressed to the former Commissioner General of Immigration, and suggesting that if possible administrative relief should be afforded, and if that were not possible relief from Congress ought to be sought; a letter written by Gen. Pershing on November 8, 1919, to Mr. Page, directing him to obtain from the Army officers under whom the Chinese had been serving statements of the nature and value of their work; and letters from practically all of the officers under whom the Chinese had been serving, there being 20 such letters, in all of which the conduct of the Chinese, their faithfulness to duty, and the extremely valuable nature of the services rendered by them were set forth clearly and emphatically.

Gen. Pershing expressed a desire to come personally before the committee on behalf of the refugees, but the evidence submitted by his representative was regarded as so satisfactory and as so clearly establishing all of the claims made in behalf of the Chinese that the committee did not deem it necessary to take advantage of Gen. Pershing's offer.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 1831) to amend section 237 of the Judicial Code was announced as next in order.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. KING. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

E. W. McCOMAS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1945) for the relief of E. W. McComas. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That E. W. McComas be permitted to purchase from the United States, at the price of $1.25 per acre, lots 2 and 4 of section 5, the north half of the northeast quarter, and lots 1 and 2 (or the north half of the northwest quarter) of section 7, township 5 north, range 30 east, Willamette meridian, in Umatilla County, Oreg., containing 205.72 acres, more or less, and that patent shall, after such purchase, issue to him therefor: Provided, That McComas files in the district land office at La Grande a proper application to purchase the said lands, and tenders payment therefor at the price fixed herein, within 60 days of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time and passed.

LANDS AT FORT MADISON AND BELLEVUE, IOWA.

The bill (H. R. 5621) for the disposal of certain lands in the town sites of Fort Madison and Bellevue, Iowa, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lots in the town sites of Fort Madison and Bellevue, Iowa, not heretofore sold and patented under the acts of July 2, 1836, and March 3, 1837 (5 Stat., 7, 178), shall be disposed of and patented to the uncontested occupants thereof holding same by themselves and their predecessors in interest, in good faith under claim and color of title, and who shall make application for patent or to purchase such lots within one year from the passage of this act, and who shall furnish satisfactory proof of such occupancy and color of title, and pay therefor the appraised value of such lots in case the purchase price has not been paid to the United States: Provided, That lots occupied by public improvements shall be donated and patented to the municipality owning such improvements. All lots in said town sites not so disposed of at the expiration of one year after the passage of this act shall be subject to private sale at the appraised value thereof, or to competitive sale, at not less than the appraised value, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TIMBER CUTTING IN ARIZONA.

The bill (S. 561) to grant citizens of Washington and Kane Counties, Utah, the right to cut timber in the State of Arizona for agricultural, mining, and other domestic purposes was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 8 of an act entitled "An act to repeal the timber culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, as amended by an act approved March 3, 1891, chapter 559, page 1093, volume 26, United States Statutes at Large, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following:

"That it shall be lawful for the Secretary of the Interior to grant permits, under the provisions of section 8 of the act of March 3, 1891, to citizens of Washington County and of Kane County, Utah, to cut timber on the public lands of the counties of Mohave and Coconino, Ariz., for agricultural, mining, and other domestic purposes, and remove the timber so cut to said Washington County and Kane County, Utah.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I presume that the Senators from Utah and Arizona have agreed upon this measure, and have no objection to it.

Mr. KING. It is mutual.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FINAL ENTRIES ON PUBLIC LANDS.

The bill (S. 1099) to amend section 2372 of the Revised Statutes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, with an amendment on page 1, line 12, after the word "laws," to insert "or patented to a claimant under other public land laws"; so as to make the bill read:

That section 2372 of the Revised Statutes is amended by adding thereto the following:

"In all cases where a final entry of public lands has been or may be hereafter canceled, and such entry is held by the Land Department or by a court of competent jurisdiction to have been confirmed under the proviso to section 7 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat., p. 1099), such entry shall, unless the land has been disposed of to or appropriated by a claimant under the homestead or desert-land laws, or patented to a claimant under other public-land laws, be reinstated and passed to patent; and in case the land has been so disposed of or appropriated, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his discretion, and under rules to be prescribed by him, to change the entry and transfer the payment to any other tract of surveyed public land, nonmineral in character, free from lawful claim, and otherwise subject to general disposition: Provided, That the entryman, his heirs, or assigns shall file a relinquishment of all right, title, and interest in and to the land originally entered: Provided further, That no right or claim under the provisions of this paragraph shall be assignable or transferable."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 138) to repeal so much of the act of Congress approved February 28, 1920, as provides for the sale of Camp Eustis, Va., was announced as next in order.

Mr. LENROOT. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

CHALMETTE MILITARY PARK, LA.

The bill (H. R. 2232) in reference to a national military park on the plains of Chalmette, below the city of New Orleans, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LENROOT. I ask that that bill go over.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, do I understand that objection has been made to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. LENROOT. I asked that it go over. I made the request upon the ground that I do not believe at this time we should go to any expense upon a matter of this kind.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the Senator withhold his objection for just a moment?

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly.

Mr. BROUSSARD. This measure has been passed by the House of Representatives, and I think it provides that there shall be no expense incurred on the part of the Government. I have been informed that the work is to be performed by the Army Engineer officers stationed at New Orleans.

Mr. LENROOT. It provides that the expenses of the investigation shall be paid from the appropriation for contingencies of the Army.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I do not understand that that is the way in which the measure is worded.

Mr. LENROOT. There is an amendment to that effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (H. R. 7158) to amend the Army appropriation act, approved July 11, 1919, so as to release appropriations for the completion of the acquisition of real estate in certain cases and making additional appropriations therefor, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Unless there is some exigency, inasmuch as this seems to be a measure of considerable importance, I shall object to its consideration at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS FOR PHYSICAL DISABILITY.

The bill (S. 1565) making eligible for retirement under the same conditions as now provided for officers of the Regular Army all officers of the United States Army during the World War who have incurred physical disability in line of duty was announced as next in order.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I do not see the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURSUM], the author of this bill, in the Chamber. This is a very important proposition.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I hope the Senator from Mississippi will not object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. I am not going to object, because I think it is a very meritorious measure, and it ought to pass.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It is true that my colleague [Mr. BURSUM] is not in the Chamber and is necessarily absent from the city, but this bill was under consideration by the committee for a considerable length of time. There were rather extensive hearings upon the merits of the bill, the committee has made a report in favor of it, and I certainly hope no Senator will object and that the bill may pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret very much that I feel constrained to object to the consideration of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The Secretary will state the next bill on the calendar.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, is there not some member of the Military Affairs Committee here who can explain this bill? It strikes me as a very meritorious measure, and I have had letters from all over the country about it. As I understand the bill, under its provisions those officers who incurred disabilities in the Great War and who were not members of the Regular Army will be placed upon the same plane as those officers who were in the Regular Army. Is that right?

Mr. NEW. Yes; Mr. President, if I may be permitted to answer that question in the absence of the chairman of the committee, that is substantially correct. I do not think, however, that this bill ought to be considered in the absence of the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs. There is much to be said concerning it, and I know that the chairman has views regarding it which he desires to express.

Mr. HARRISON. Is the chairman of the committee opposed to the bill?

Mr. NEW. I think he is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? If not, the question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LENROOT. I agree that there should be very full discussion of this bill. It ought not to be considered under this order. I think very likely the Senator from Mississippi himself, upon a full discussion, will not favor the bill, for I can not see myself, with due allowance for all possible differences of opinion, how anyone can favor this bill. I will simply call attention at this point to the fact that it proposes to give compensation to officers for disability four or five times as great as we give to privates for like disability. It proposes to give to a colonel a very much greater compensation than to a second lieutenant for exactly the same disability. It seems to me the bill makes the grossest discrimination not only as between officers and privates but as between different grades of officers. The Secretary of War has reported against it, and I am confident that upon full discussion the Senate will not agree to the bill.

What we ought to do, I am frank to say, so far as total disability is concerned, is to increase the compensation for officers and privates alike, and certainly we ought not to have any such very great difference as the bill provides between the compensation of different grades of officers and between the compensation of officers and privates.

The American Legion, it is true, has indorsed this bill, but I am confident that if this bill should be enacted it would destroy the American Legion.

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator that I have not given the bill as much consideration as probably I should have. It appeared to me, on the face of it, to be a very good measure. Of course, I see that the bill is amended, that the committee has stricken out everything in the original bill and inserted a substitute; but I thought, perhaps, there was no objection to the proposition, and if there was not, I had hoped it would pass to-day.

Mr. LENROOT. I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi a question. Here are a colonel and a private. Each has the same disability; we will say it is 30 per cent. Is the Senator willing that a colonel shall receive $3,000 a year and a private $360 a year for the same disability?

Mr. HARRISON. My understanding about the bill was that it placed those officers who were not members of the Regular Army upon the same footing as officers in the Regular Army; and I think that an officer who happened to be a National Guard officer and who was disabled in the war should be treated, so far as the Government is concerned, the same as an officer in the Regular Army.

Mr. LENROOT. Then the Senator does think that a colonel with a 30 per cent disability should receive $3,000 a year compensation when a private receives only $360?

Mr. HARRISON. I think that if a Regular Army colonel receives a certain amount, a National Guard colonel should receive the same amount.

Mr. LENROOT. Then, the Senator does think that a colonel with a 30 per cent disability should get $3,000 a year, and a private $360 a year?

Mr. HARRISON. I have not said that.

Mr. LENROOT. That is the only conclusion one can draw from what the Senator has said.

Mr. HARRISON. I have stated to the Senator exactly what my idea about the bill was. It is apparent upon the face of the matter that National Guard officers should be treated in the same way, so far as disabilities are concerned, as Regular Army officers are treated under the present law. I believe that, and I think that the law should be amended so as to cure any defects in that situation.

Mr. LENROOT. So, the Senator is willing, then, that we shall enact compensation paying, in the case I have mentioned, a colonel $3,000 a year for the same disability for which we allow a private only $360?

Mr. HARRISON. I am not a member of the Military Affairs Committee and the Senator is. May I ask whether the present law is that a lieutenant gets as much or does not get as much as a colonel in the Regular Army if he is disabled?

Mr. LENROOT. He does not.

Mr. HARRISON. They get the same?

Mr. LENROOT. No; they do not.

Mr. HARRISON. Did not the Senator's committee report out the present law as to disabilities? The Military Affairs Committee considered and reported the present law, did they not, as to disabilities?

Mr. LENROOT. No; that law was on the statute books long before I was born.

Mr. HARRISON. When was it passed?

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, if I may be permitted, that is an old law. This committee had nothing to do with that.

Mr. HARRISON. That has been on the statute books a good while?

Mr. NEW. Yes; as applied to officers of the Regular Army.

Mr. HARRISON. Under the present law, then, a lieutenant who is disabled gets the same pay as a colonel who is disabled? Is that right?

Mr. NEW. No; not at all.

Mr. HARRISON. That is not so?

Mr. NEW. No.

Mr. HARRISON. Let me understand what the Senator is driving at. The Senator argues one proposition at me here, and I do not catch it. What is the law, then?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield.

Mr. STERLING. The simple question in my mind was not as to the amount that a Regular Army officer is getting now, but as to whether the bill gives to men who are not in the Regular Army the same privileges that it gives to those in the Regular Army.

Mr. LENROOT. Originally it did; yes.

Mr. NEW. It is intended to.

Mr. STERLING. It is intended to?

Mr. NEW. Yes.

Mr. STERLING. Does it not do it?

Mr. NEW. I do not think it does.

Mr. LENROOT. The amendment does not give them quite the same privileges. The original bill did.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senate committee, then, changed the bill in that respect?

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I am in thorough sympathy—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. Now I yield to the Senator from Indiana for a question.

Mr. NEW. Not for a question, but for a very brief statement.

Mr. HARRISON. For an explanation.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, I think the colloquy that has taken place here gives conclusive evidence of the very great difficulties presented in the consideration of this bill. It has given the Committee on Military Affairs, I think, more concern, and we have taken more time in the consideration of this subject than any other single one that I know of that has been before the committee since the close of the war, at least; and I think it is very apparent that we can not make any progress with it now. I am very much in favor myself, and have always been, of putting the volunteer officers who came in through the National Guard and the training camps on an equality with the officers who were in the Regular Army.

Mr. HARRISON. That is exactly my position.

Mr. NEW. But I do not think this bill, as amended, does it.

Mr. LENROOT. It does not.

Mr. NEW. It does not, and I am far from satisfied with it myself. I think it is very apparent that we can not make any progress with it to-day.

Mr. HARRISON. Do the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Indiana agree on that proposition?

Mr. LENROOT. Oh, it does not; no. The amendment does not put them on the same basis.

Mr. NEW. The bill, as amended, does not.

Mr. HARRISON. But the original bill did?

Mr. LENROOT. If the Senator from Mississippi will read the report of the committee, he will find that the bill is reported purely as a compensation measure. My objection to it is that it discriminates against the privates; it discriminates against the lower grades of officers in the matter of the amount of compensation.

Mr. HARRISON. We could vote down the Senate committee amendment, and vote for the passage of the original bill.

Mr. LENROOT. Very well; then we will assume that the original bill—

Mr. HARRISON. I understood the Senator from Wisconsin to favor the original bill.

Mr. LENROOT. No; I did not; oh, no. The Senator asked if the Senator from Indiana and I agreed as to what the amendment did, and I said we did; but before the Senator from Mississippi concludes that he is in favor of the original bill I want to call his attention—

Mr. HARRISON. I am trying to get information; that is all.

Mr. LENROOT. I am trying to give it to the Senator. I want to call his attention to what the original bill would do. Disability in the Regular Army is based wholly upon the officer's ability to carry on his duties as an officer and engage in the military service. An officer in the Regular Army may have a stiff knee, and he is retired at three-fourths pay. If the original bill should go through, assume that an emergency officer has a stiff knee that does not interfere, perhaps, with his pursuing his usual vocation. We will say he is retired. For that slight defect he would receive $3,000 a year, where a private with both legs cut off would receive very much less than this officer would receive.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, I am opposed to any such proposition as that.

Mr. LENROOT. Of course the Senator is. That is why I am objecting to this bill.

Mr. HARRISON. I merely wanted to get information about it.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I desire to ask the Senator from Wisconsin whether this proposed law discriminates any more as between officers and privates, or between officers of different grades, than does the existing law?

Mr. LENROOT. No; but the Senator must know the distinction, although if he will yield to me I shall be very glad to state it to him.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think I know the distinction, but I thought the Senator—

Mr. FLETCHER. I call for the regular order.

Mr. LENROOT. I know the distinction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia has the floor. He has a right to debate five minutes.

Mr. LENROOT. I shall be glad to state it.

Mr. FLETCHER. I understood that objection was made to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; not yet.

Mr. FLETCHER. Did not the Senator object to taking up the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection was withheld. Is there objection?

Mr. LENROOT. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CEMETERY OF WHITE'S TABERNACLE NO. 39.

The bill (S. 2108) prohibiting the interment of the body of any person in the cemetery known as the Cemetery of White's Tabernacle No. 39 of the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, in the District of Columbia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That from and after the date of the passage of this act it shall be unlawful to inter the body of any person in the cemetery known as the cemetery of White's Tabernacle No. 39 of the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, in the District of Columbia and situate in the District of Columbia, to wit: Part of a tract called "Chappell's Vacancy," contained within the following metes and bounds, namely: Beginning for the same at the southeast corner of the land conveyed to Frederick Bangert by deed recorded in Liber Numbered Seven hundred and eighty-five, folio four hundred and seventy-four, of the land records of the District of Columbia, and running thence north fifteen and three-fourths degrees east, twenty and forty-four hundredths perches; thence south eighty-nine degrees east, three and nine-tenths perches; thence south fifteen and three-fourths degrees west, twenty and forty-four hundredths perches; thence north eighty-nine degrees west, three and nine-tenths perches to the point of beginning; and any person or persons violating the provisions of this act, or aiding or abetting its violation, shall be subject to a fine of not less than $100, nor more than $500 for each offense, to be collected as other fines are collected in the District of Columbia.

Sec. 2. That the board of officers of White's Tabernacle No. 39 of the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, in the District of Columbia, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered, under such regulations as the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may prescribe, to disinter and remove all the bodies now buried in said cemetery lot, and to transfer and reinter the same in some other suitable cemetery or cemeteries selected by the said board of officers of White's Tabernacle No. 39 of the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, and at the cost and expense of said order: Provided, That each monument, tombstone, or marker marking any grave or graves in said described burial ground shall be transferred to mark the grave or graves in which such body or bodies are to be interred, and shall be there placed in position as soon as can be done without danger of settling.

Sec. 3. That in so far as the same shall be inconsistent with the provisions of this act as to the cemetery lot herein described, sections 675 and 680 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia shall be, and the same are hereby, declared inoperative, otherwise said sections 675 and 680 to remain unqualified and in full force and effect.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, that is a bill I inherited from the late Senator Newlands. It is a bill that has been approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on several occasions. There is an abandoned cemetery in the District for colored people which has not been used since 1910. The association are very anxious to have permission to remove the bodies and reinter them in another cemetery which has been approved by the cemetery association. That is all the bill amounts to.

Mr. HARRISON. What is the name of the organization, may I ask?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the name of the order.

The READING CLERK. It is the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, in the District of Columbia.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES ACT.

The bill (S. 2207) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia; to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia; and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1921, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the act entitled "An act to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia; to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia; and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1921, be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out section 13 and inserting the following in lieu thereof:

"Sec. 13. That the standard loaf of bread manufactured for sale, sold, offered, or exposed for sale in the District of Columbia shall weigh 1 pound avoirdupois, but bread may also be manufactured for sale, sold, offered, or exposed for sale in loaves of one-half pound, 1½ pounds, or multiples of 1 pound, but shall not be manufactured for sale, sold, offered, or exposed for sale in other than the aforesaid weights. Every loaf of bread manufactured for sale, sold, offered, or exposed for sale in the District of Columbia shall have affixed thereon, in a conspicuous place, a label at least 1 inch square, or, if round, at least 1 inch in diameter, upon which label there shall be printed in plain, bold-face Gothic type, not smaller than 12 point, the weight of the loaf in pound, pounds, or fraction of a pound, as the case may be, whether the loaf be a standard loaf or not, the letters and figures of which shall be printed in black ink upon white paper. The business name and address of the maker, baker, or manufacturer of the loaf shall also be plainly printed on each such label. Every seller of bread in the District of Columbia shall keep a suitable scale which shall have been inspected and approved in accordance with the provisions of this act in a conspicuous place in his bakery, bakeshop, or store, or other place where he is engaged in the sale of bread, and shall, whenever requested by the buyer, and in the presence of the buyer, weigh the loaf or loaves of bread sold or offered for sale. Nothing herein shall apply to crackers, pretzels, buns, rolls, scones, or to loaves of fancy bread weighing less than one-fourth of 1 pound avoirdupois, or to what is commonly known as stale bread, provided the seller shall, at the time the sale is made, expressly state to the buyer that the bread so sold is stale bread: Provided, That any loaf of bread weighing within 10 per cent in excess or within 4 per cent less than standard weight shall be deemed of legal weight."

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Delaware whether there is any guaranty that the weight shall be perpetuated, that the bread will not shrink, or that evaporation will not reduce it?

Mr. BALL. The weight is to be tagged on every loaf, whether it be a half-pound, a pound, or a pound-and-a-half loaf. The only change from the present law, as passed at the last session, is that this will permit the sale of a pound-and-a-half loaf.

Mr. KING. I was interested to know how you would prevent evaporation of the water from the roll and prevent it from shrinking so that it would get below the pound weight.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 1976) to amend the first paragraph of section 2 of an act entitled "An act to regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia," approved June 20, 1906, was announced as next in order.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I ask that that may go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN IN WORLD WAR.

The bill (S. 1790) to place national guardsmen who entered the World War otherwise than through the draft on equal basis as to longevity and continuous-service pay with national guardsmen who were drafted was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think these matters relating to the Army compensation, pensions, and so forth, ought to be considered more with reference to each other and at a time when we can fully discuss them. I hope the Senator will not press for the consideration of this bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Will the Senator allow me to make an explanation?

Mr. KING. I will withdraw the objection for that purpose.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, some time in 1918 the Comptroller of the Treasury decided that officers and enlisted men of the National Guard who were drafted into the service pursuant to the act of June 3, 1916, were entitled to count for longevity and continuous service pay their previous National Guard service, but that officers and enlisted men having previous National Guard service who came into the service otherwise than through the draft were not entitled to those allowances. In order to obviate the effect of that decision, in July, 1918, Congress passed an act putting all these men on the same basis. The Comptroller of the Treasury then held that that act was prospective and could not by its terms be considered as having a retroactive operation. The present bill applies only to those who came in otherwise than through the draft before July, 1918. Its purpose is to make effective the intention which Congress meant to express in the act of July, 1918. There are not many of these men, and the pending bill places them on a parity with their fellow guardsmen.

Mr. KING. What obligation does it entail upon the Government?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Not over a comparatively small amount, as I understand it. The Secretary of War under the last administration said it did not involve any considerable amount and that the number affected was small. The present Secretary of War, Mr. Weeks, also approves the bill.

Mr. KING. It would compel the Government, then, to make a payment to a number who are not in the service now?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Some of them probably are still in the service.

Mr. KING. But how does it affect those who are not in the service, pecuniarily or otherwise? How are those who have been separated from the military service of the Government affected by this legislation?

Mr. SHEPPARD. They are all put on the same basis whether still in the service or not; it puts them in the same category.

Mr. KING. I am interested to know how it would affect the Government in a pecuniary way. Would it require the Government to make them compensation which was denied them in the past to which, under the Senator's view, they were entitled?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I am unable to give the Senator the exact figures, but I shall endeavor to secure them.

Mr. KING. I do not know that I shall object to the consideration of the bill later, but I will be glad to have further information in regard to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will be passed over.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS OF COAST GUARD.

The bill (S. 1075) giving permanent rank to district superintendents of the Coast Guard on the retired list was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PAYMENT OF CLAIMS FOR MATERIAL AND LABOR FURNISHED FOR DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BUILDINGS.

The bill (S. 5) to amend an act approved February 28, 1899, entitled "An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings," was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings," approved February 28, 1899, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"That hereafter any person or persons entering into a formal contract with the District of Columbia for the construction of any public building, or the prosecution and completion of any public work, or for repairs upon any public building or public work, shall be required, before commencing such work, to execute the usual penal bond, with good and sufficient sureties, with the additional obligation that such contractor or contractors shall promptly make payment to all persons supplying him or them with labor and material in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract; and any person, company, or corporation who has furnished labor or materials used in the construction or repair of any public buildings or public work, and payment for which has not been made, shall have the right to intervene and be made a party to any action instituted by the United States or by the District of Columbia on the bond of the contractor and to have their rights and claims adjudicated in such action and judgment rendered thereon, subject, however, to the priority of the claim and judgment of the United States or the District of Columbia. If the full amount of the liability of the surety on said bond is insufficient to pay the full amount of said claims and demands, then, after paying the full amount due the United States or the District of Columbia, the remainder shall be distributed pro rata among said interveners. If no suit should be brought by the United States or the District of Columbia within six months from the completion and final settlement of said contract, then the person or persons supplying the contractor with labor and material shall, upon application therefor, and furnishing affidavit to the department under the direction of which said work has been prosecuted that labor or materials for the prosecution of such work has been supplied by him or them, and payment for which has not been made, be furnished with a certified copy of said contract and bond, upon which he or they shall have a right of action, and shall be, and are hereby, authorized to bring suit in the name of the United States or the District of Columbia, for his or their use and benefit, against said contractor and his sureties, and to prosecute the same to final judgment and execution: Provided, That where suit is instituted by any of such creditors on the bond of the contractor it shall not be commenced until after the complete performance of said contract and final settlement thereof, and shall be commenced within one year after the performance and final settlement of said contract, and not later: And provided further, That where suit is so instituted by a creditor or creditors, only one action shall be brought, and any creditor may file his claim in such action and be made a party thereto within one year from the completion of the work under said contract, and not later. If the recovery on the bond should be inadequate to pay the amounts found due to all of said creditors, judgment shall be given to each creditor pro rata of the amount of the recovery. The surety on said bond may pay into court, for distribution among said claimants and creditors, the full amount of the sureties' liability, to wit, the penalty named in the bond, less any amount which said surety may have had to pay to the United States or the District of Columbia by reason of the execution of said bond, and upon so doing the surety will be relieved from further liability: Provided further, That in all suits instituted under the provisions of this act such personal notice of the pendency of such suits, informing them of their right to intervene as the court may order, shall be given to all known creditors, and in addition thereto notice of publication in some newspaper of general circulation published in the District of Columbia, for at least three successive weeks, the last publication to be at least three months before the time limited therefor."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARINE INSURANCE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (S. 2265) to regulate marine insurance in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read.

Mr. LENROOT. I ask that the bill go over. I do not know anything about it.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I wish to say with reference to the bill that I know it is rather long, but it is one of considerable importance. I hope we may have an opportunity to pass it before the recess, if possible, and some day when we are not crowded with other business I hope I may have an opportunity to bring it up and have it considered and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

DISTRIBUTION OF ABANDONED OR FORFEITED TOBACCO, ETC.

The bill (S. 1718) authorizing the distribution of abandoned or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes to hospitals maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from New York [Mr. CALDER] why there should be a destruction of the property, because it will not bring the full amount of the tax or why there should be, on the other hand, a gift of it if it fails to bring enough to pay the amount of the tax?

Mr. CALDER. Under section 3369 of the Revised Statutes it is provided:

That in case it shall appear that any abandoned, condemned, or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, when offered for sale, will not bring a price equal to the tax due and payable thereon such goods shall not be sold for consumption in the United States; and upon application made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue he is authorized to order the destruction of such tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes by the officer in whose custody and control the same may be at the time, and in such manner and under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, or he may under such regulations order delivery of such tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, without payment of any tax, to any hospital maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States.

That is the present law. It is required by that law that they shall be so destroyed. The bill simply provides that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may, under such regulations, order the delivery of such tobacco, snuff, or cigars or cigarettes, without payment of any tax, to any hospital maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator's proposed amendment, and I was familiar with the fact that that was the existing law, but I was wondering as to the wisdom of it. When we were amending, why was there not some discretion given that if a sum approximating the tax, or 50 per cent of the tax, could be obtained it should be sold?

Mr. CALDER. I do not know the reasons which actuated the framers of the provision originally, but I found the law as it is to-day and felt that rather than have the tobacco and cigarettes destroyed it would be better that the soldiers have them. This was brought to my attention, I will say to the Senator, by the chairman of the welfare committee of the American Legion in my State. I submitted it to the Committee on Finance and, if the Senator has noticed the report, they have observed, as the Secretary of the Treasury observed, that there is no objection to the bill.

Mr. KING. I think the amendment of the Senator is meritorious. The point that suggested itself to me was this: The property might not pay the amount of the tax. The tax might be very heavy. The tax might be upon property a portion of which was destroyed, so that it could not be of any value, and yet the residue might be of considerable value but not of sufficient value to pay the entire tax. To order destruction seems to me most absurd. I wondered why they have permitted the statute to remain.

Mr. CALDER. It is the law to-day, however, I will say to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

Be it enacted, etc., That the last proviso of section 3369 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

"And provided further, That in case it shall appear that any abandoned, condemned, or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, when offered for sale, will not bring a price equal to the tax due and payable thereon, such goods shall not be sold for consumption in the United States; and upon application made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, he is authorized to order the destruction of such tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes by the officer in whose custody and control the same may be at the time, and in such manner and under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, or he may, under such regulations, order delivery of such tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, without payment of any tax, to any hospital maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM AND COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY.

The resolution (S. Res. 115) directing an investigation of the administration of the Federal reserve system and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency was announced as next in order.

Mr. LENROOT. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

JURISDICTION OVER CERTAIN LANDS IN TEXAS.

The bill (S. 2133) ceding jurisdiction to the State of Texas over certain lands or bancos acquired by the United States of America from the United States of Mexico was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with amendments, in line 9, page 1, to strike out the word "constitute" and insert the word "be," and in line 6, page 2, to strike out the word "hereinafter" and insert the words "be and," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all the lands or bancos acquired by the Government of the United States of America by virtue of its treaty with the United States of Mexico of March 20, 1905, and subsequent thereto, and which lie adjacent to the territory of the State of Texas as constituted by the compromise act of Congress of September 9, 1850, and accepted by the State of Texas on November 25, 1850, shall be and become a part of the State of Texas, and shall be under the civil and criminal jurisdiction of said State of Texas, and of the respective subdivisions of said State of Texas, wherein said land lies; and that all lands or bancos hereinafter acquired by the United States of America from the United States of Mexico, by virtue of said treaty, which shall lie adjoining to the State of Texas, shall be and become part of said State of Texas and be subject to its civil and criminal jurisdiction without any further enactment from the Congress of the United States.

Mr. LODGE. There is another amendment that should be made. In line 3, page 2, the word "hereinafter" should be stricken out and the word "hereafter" inserted. I so move.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.

The bill (S. 2263) to amend the Federal reserve act, approved December 23, 1913, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, there is apparently no one here representing the Committee on Banking and Currency. This seems to be a very important bill. I have not any objection to it myself, but it seems to me very extraordinary to pass this kind of a bill without any knowledge at all on the part of the Senate.

Mr. KING. Does it increase the membership of the Federal Reserve Board?

Mr. BORAH. Yes; it increases the membership.

Mr. KING. If it increases the membership, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ASSOCIATION OF PRODUCERS OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

The bill (H. R. 2373) to authorize association of producers of agricultural products was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. This bill is of very great merit, but it will take considerable time, and some Senators who desire to be present when it is considered are not now here. For that reason I ask that it may go over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

RIGHT OF WAY AT SPRINGFIELD ARMORY, MASS.

The bill (S. 2306) to authorize the Secretary of War to release a certain right of way no longer needed for military purposes at Springfield Armory, Mass., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to release and quitclaim the easement or interest acquired by the United States from Edward Ingersoll and wife, by deed dated May 14, 1859, for a right of way in connection with Springfield Armory, Springfield, Mass., upon the payment of a reasonable compensation to be fixed by the Secretary of War, and to execute any instrument or instruments necessary to quiet title in the purchaser thereof, the said right of way being no longer used or necessary for military purposes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PORT HUDSON STORMING PARTY MEDALS.

The bill (S. 65) to grant medals to survivors and heirs of volunteers of the Port Hudson forlorn-hope storming party was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 10, to strike out the period and the word "in" and insert a comma and the words "and that, in," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to procure a suitable bronze medal commemorating the organization of the volunteer storming party against the works at Port Hudson, La., organized pursuant to General Order No. 49, by command of Maj. Gen. Banks, commanding the Department of the Gulf, June 15, 1863, and present one of said medals to each of the surviving volunteers of said storming party, and that, in case of the decease of the volunteer, said medal shall be given to his widow or oldest heir: Provided, That such medal shall bear an inscription in suitable language, to be designated by the Secretary of War, giving the name of the volunteer, his company and regiment, and stating in substance that the person to whom this medal was awarded volunteered for said storming party: Provided further, That for the purposes of this act the sum of $2,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUGAR EQUALIZATION BOARD.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 79) authorizing the President to require the United States Sugar Equalization Board (Inc.) to take over and dispose of 5,000 tons of sugar imported from the Argentine Republic was announced as next in order.

Mr. LENROOT and Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Let the joint resolution go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENSE ACT.

The bill (S. 2333) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 3, 1916, and to establish military justice," approved June 4, 1920, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Reserving the right to object, may I ask the Senator from Indiana [Mr. New] whether this is a pressing measure? It seems to me it affects some part of the Army organization, and is of considerable importance.

Mr. FLETCHER. Pending the answer of the Senator from Indiana, I will say that this is intended to give the President power to remove any officer in the Army. At present he has no such authority and no such power. The President could not dismiss, for instance, Gen. Pershing or any other commander in the Army under the existing law. This is intended to give him that authority. He should have the power and authority to remove any officer in the Army.

Mr. KING. Without an appeal?

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes; I think so. The President is the commander in chief, and it is thought wise to place that authority in the hands of the commander in chief. It is hardly proper to hold him responsible for the success of the Army without that authority.

Mr. KING. Does it take all these pages of print, as contained in the bill, to effectuate that simple result or tragic result, as the case may be?

Mr. FLETCHER. It is to amend a special provision in the existing law, and apparently they have set out that provision and then added enough to effect what I have suggested. That was made necessary in order to make it clear. It might have been done by a separate act in a briefer way.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, this bill means simply this: Under the present law a man may be appointed to the head of any one of the staff positions and he holds the position for four years whether the President wishes him to hold it for that length of time or not. The bill proposes to put such officers on the same basis as others, so that the President may cut that time short if he sees fit as to any one of that line of officers. It would include The Adjutant General, the Quartermaster General, the head of the Ordnance Department, and all the other heads of Staff Corps and other departments.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I called attention this morning to the fact that an examination has been provided on the 22d of August for a thousand more commissioned officers of the Army. I wish to ask members of the Committee on Military Affairs, who are now present, if they see any objection to including in this particular bill an amendment to the effect that no more commissions shall be issued by the Secretary of War until further advised by Congress.

Mr. NEW. Yes. As a member of that committee I think there is objection to such an amendment. The Army is almost entirely without second lieutenants.

Mr. BORAH. That is because men have been advanced so rapidly who ought not to have been advanced.

Mr. NEW. Whatever the cause, the deficiency in a necessary grade of officers exists and a failure to appoint second lieutenants would not rectify a mistake if a mistake were made in the other case.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am informed that there are at present a number of commissioned officers performing services which have heretofore been performed by clerks at from $1,400 to $1,500 a year, because it is necessary to find some form of activity for those officers, there being so many of them in the Army that there is no work for them to do.

Mr. NEW. I do not think that is the case; but if an officer is available and is drawing pay, in any event, I think the Government has saved $1,500 if he is detailed to do the work of a clerk and the clerk is dismissed. I do not see that the Government has lost anything by that.

Mr. BORAH. I think that the Government has lost considerably by that kind of service being performed by officers at the salaries which such officers are paid.

Mr. NEW. I do not think that that condition exists to any considerable extent. There may be instances of it, of which I know nothing, but that that is generally true, I do not know or believe. I think the Senator from Idaho is misinformed as to that.

Mr. BORAH. I do not think I am misinformed, because I received my information from an Army officer himself. But, Mr. President—

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

Mr. BORAH. Just a moment. It is a notorious fact, as the Senator from Indiana knows, that we have now 14,000 commissioned officers in the Army, and only 150,000 men. What possible excuse can there be for adding another thousand officers to the 14,000 which we already have?

Mr. NEW. The excuse is found in the fact that there are substantially no officers of the grades which are proposed to be provided for by this bill.

Mr. BORAH. But there are officers who can perform the services and the duties of the second lieutenants?

Mr. NEW. No.

Mr. BORAH. I think the Senator from Indiana is in error about that.

Mr. NEW. No; the Senator from Indiana thinks that the mistake is on the part of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator from Idaho yield to me?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I wish to call the Senator's attention to the fact that it is true, as the Senator from Indiana [Mr. NEW] has said, that we have no second lieutenants; but the War Department itself has abolished all distinctions between captains and first and second lieutenants in so far as promotion is concerned. I think that is absolutely wrong; I think they have made a very egregious blunder in doing that; but the War Department by their strained construction of the so-called single list having abolished all difference between captain and first and second lieutenants, there is no reason in the world why it may not adopt the suggestion which has been made by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], and assign certain of these officers to the performance of the duties of captains and certain of them to the performance of the duties of first lieutenants and certain others of them to the performance of the duties of second lieutenants. I think the Senator from Idaho is entirely correct that, with the distinction, so far as promotion is concerned—and that is the only real distinction that there is in time of peace—abolished as between captains and first and second lieutenants, we ought not add any more officers to the Army until we get rid of those two grades.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, that opens up another subject in which the Senator from Tennessee has manifested a very lively and a very proper interest, but which has no bearing whatever on the question now at issue. The fact is that there are substantially no second lieutenants to perform the duties of that grade in the Army now. They are very much needed; in fact, they are essential.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. BORAH. I do.

Mr. LENROOT. I wish to ask the Senator from Indiana if the duties to which he refers are not now being performed by first lieutenants and captains?

Mr. NEW. They are.

Mr. BORAH. I ask that the bill may go over until to-morrow. If it again comes up, I will offer an amendment to it and see whether or not the Senate thinks it necessary to add a thousand more commissioned officers to the 14,000 which we now have, with an Army of only 150,000 men.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Being objected to, the bill goes over.

MAJ. FRANCIS M. MADDOX.

The bill (H. R. 6407) for the relief of Maj. Francis M. Maddox, United States Army, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LENROOT. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

Mr. HEFLIN. I believe we have an agreement that that bill is to be taken up for consideration to-morrow immediately after the disposition of the Ball rent bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Being objected to, the bill will go over.

NATIONAL GRAIN DEALERS' ASSOCIATION.

The resolution (S. Res. 110) to investigate activities of the National Grain Dealers' Association and other organizations engaged in combating legislation for the relief of agriculture was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I desire to inquire of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] whether or not the joint committee, of which he is a member and which is now making certain extensive investigations, would have authority to cover the same field contemplated by the resolution which has just been stated from the desk?

Mr. LENROOT. I will say to the Senator from Utah that I have not examined the resolution. The agricultural commission to which the Senator refers has a broad field of inquiry; but I really should be unable to answer his question until I had examined the resolution.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, obviously no investigation could be conducted between now and the proposed recess. So, in view of the fact that we have so many committees functioning and conducting investigations, I suggest that this resolution be passed over, at least temporarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will go over.

MEMORIAL BUILDING AT ABILENE, TEX.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6514) granting Parramore Post, No. 57, American Legion, permission to construct a memorial building on the Federal site at Abilene, Tex. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to grant an easement to the executive committee of Parramore Post, No. 57, American Legion, and its successors in office, for the use, without expense to the United States, of the strip of land off the Federal building site fronting 150 feet on the south side of North Fourth Street and extending southwardly, of that width, along the east side of Pine Street 100 feet, in block 20, Abilene, Tex., for the purpose of erecting thereon a memorial building to the soldiers and sailors of Taylor County who served in the Great War, said easement to continue as long as such building shall be devoted to the original purpose: Provided, however, That said easement shall cease and determine, and the custody and control of said parcel of land shall revert to the United States if said memorial building is not erected thereon within five years from the date of this act: And provided further, That the design and construction of the said memorial building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE WASHINGTON MEMORIAL BUILDING.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 67) stating the true meaning and intent of the provisions relating to the erection and use of the George Washington Memorial Building in the act entitled "An act to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings; to authorize the enlargement, extension, remodeling, or improvement of certain public buildings; to authorize the erection and completion of public buildings; to authorize the purchase of sites for public buildings; and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1913, as amended, which was read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the true meaning and intent of the provisions in the act entitled "An act to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings; to authorize the enlargement, extension, remodeling, or improvement of certain public buildings; to authorize the erection and completion of public buildings; to authorize the purchase of sites for public buildings; and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1913, as amended, giving authority for the erection of the George Washington Memorial Building, is that the auditorium therein contemplated shall be available for the use of such conventions as are civic, scientific, educational, patriotic, national, or international in character, and the provisions of such acts shall be so construed by the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

Sec. 2. That the erection of the George Washington Memorial Building may be begun as soon as the temporary war buildings have been removed from the site and $500,000 has been paid into the treasury of the George Washington Memorial Association.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, the bill does not change the present situation at all regarding the proposed memorial building, except that it liberalizes the conditions under which the building shall be erected, so that it may be opened to various classes of occupancy and be made of more substantial use to the public generally.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I do not see that the bill will accomplish anything; I do not believe that Congress can construe a law which it has already passed or add anything to the force of the law. If it is the purpose and intent of the bill to permit the use of the proposed building for purposes for which the law does not now permit it to be used, it seems to me we would have to provide by legislation to have that done; but we can not do it by simply construing the other law or authorizing somebody to construe the law in that way.

Mr. KING. I will suggest to the Senator, if he will permit me, that we frequently enact statutes alleged to be declaratory of the common law, but which really expand and modify and oftentimes greatly enlarge, at least, the construction placed upon the common law by the courts.

Mr. JONES of Washington. But this is a bill that purports to construe a law which we have already passed, or authorizes the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution to construe that law in a certain way. How that can add to the former law I can not see.

I do not like to object to the bill; yet it seems to me that we are doing a vain thing when we pass it. It would be a very simple thing to say that the proposed building may be used for the purposes desired, and that is what we ought to say.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I presume the Senator knows the facts concerning the proposed building. It is to be erected not by the Government of the United States but a very patriotic woman has already raised something over $500,000, and is raising the remainder necessary to construct a great memorial to the survivors of the World War. Of course, she not only wants the building to be a great memorial but she desires it also to contribute to the convenience of the city in connection with conventions held here, and so forth.

There has been some anxiety on the part of those who would like to subscribe to the fund for the building whether it is to be open in a general public way, just as is the Smithsonian Institution and other similar buildings. Therefore the bill was suggested by the benefactor. I see no harm in it, and I hope that it will not be objected to and that it will pass.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Of course, I am in hearty accord with the purpose to which the Senator refers, and I understand the bill is designed for the protection of those who want some additional authority provided before they put up their money; but it seems to me Congress ought to give express authority for the use of the building instead of saying that the regents may construe the previous act.

Mr. WARREN. I will remind the Senator that it is not to be a Government building.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I understand that; but apparently it is thought that there should be some additional authority to use the proposed building for certain purposes. Congress has been called upon to act with reference to the matter heretofore; we have passed a law which apparently some of those who want to put up their money do not think is sufficient, and instead of having Congress grant the express authority to use the building for the purposes desired, Congress is construing the law or authorizing the regents to construe the law so as to do so. Suppose a question shall be raised in the courts; the courts would not take the construction of the law placed upon it by the regents unless that construction were warranted by the language of the law itself.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. The bill was prepared, I think, by Mr. McFarland after consulting with the legal department and was presented in the form in which it now is. The lady who is raising the money for the construction of the building is now abroad. The bill was prepared before she left and has been presented in the way I have indicated, Mr. McFarland having taken, in his judgment, proper advice concerning it.

As I have already said, the building is to be erected from funds contributed entirely by private individuals. The Government had agreed heretofore to grant land, but the land was afterwards used for a temporary war building. The authority to use the land at the time was extended; the temporary building is now being torn down, and it is desired to proceed with the laying of the corner stone of the proposed new building in a short time.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, of course I understand that the bill was prepared outside, yet that is no reason why we should adopt language or enact legislation that really amounts to nothing, in my judgment. I may be entirely wrong; I am not going to object to the consideration of the bill; but I desire to call attention to the feature of it which I have mentioned. In my judgment, hereafter if any legal controversy arises as to the effect of this proposed legislation the courts will hold that it amounts to nothing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair was going to suggest to the Senator from Washington that if all of the first page of the joint resolution—the first six lines and the first four and one-half lines on the second page—were stricken out, and it were simply provided that the auditorium contained in the George Washington Memorial Building shall be available for the use of such conventions, that would give distinct authority.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That certainly is the way it ought to be.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair agrees with the Senator from Washington.

Mr. McKELLAR. Why not amend it so as to make it what it ought to be?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I should like to offer the amendment that the Chair has suggested, if the Chair prefers that I do it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest the striking out on page 1 of the bill of lines 3, 4, 5, and 6 and on page 2 of the bill of lines 1, 2, 3, and 4, and the insertion of the words:

That the auditorium of the George Washington Memorial Building, as provided for in the act approved March 4, 1913, shall be—

And then let the rest of the bill remain the same as it is now.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That, I think, would be beneficial.

Mr. WARREN. As I understand, that leaves undisturbed all of the bill after what line?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It strikes out all of the first page of the bill except the enacting clause, the first four lines; and instead of saying that the act shall be construed so that its meaning shall be that this hall shall be used in a certain way, it provides that the hall shall be open to these conventions.

Mr. WARREN. Does it leave in any reference to the Smithsonian Institution, and so forth?

Mr. FLETCHER. It leaves section 2 as it is now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It leaves section 2 as it stands.

Mr. FLETCHER. I understand that the Senator from Washington offers that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest that the bill be passed over temporarily—the Chair does not want to object to it—and that the Senator from Washington prepare the proper amendment, and we will recur to it later, by unanimous consent, after we finish the calendar. If there is no objection, that course will be taken. The Secretary will state the next bill on the calendar.

Mr. WARREN subsequently said: Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to Senate joint resolution 67, which was under consideration a few moments ago, and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the joint resolution so that it will read:

That the auditorium contemplated by the act entitled "An act to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings," etc., approved March 4, 1913, as amended, giving authority for the erection of the George Washington Memorial Building, shall be available for the use of such conventions as are civic, scientific, educational, patriotic, national, or international in character.

Section 2 remains the same as in the printed joint resolution. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. May I ask the Senator whether that will provide for the holding of a national political convention of any sort in it?

Mr. WARREN. I do not suppose the Senator wants to put that language in, but it would seem as if it would cover that.

Mr. McKELLAR. The word "national" probably would make that full enough.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment to be proposed the joint resolution will be reported to the Senate.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 2356) for the relief of Clarence L. Reames was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 165) for the relief of Hans Weideman was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to inquire whether the Government of the United States was put to the expense of apprehending the fleeing criminal. If so, that amount ought to be deducted from the forfeited bond. It would certainly be unjust, if the Government was put to expense to recapture the criminal who had fled, to return to the bondsman the entire amount.

If no Senator can give any information on that subject I shall ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CITY OF WEST POINT, GA.

The bill (H. R. 2117) for the relief of the city of West Point, Ga., was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of West Point, in the State of Georgia, be, and hereby is, relieved of any liability to and from paying any amount to the Government of the United States, or any department thereof, on account of the construction and maintenance of a pontoon bridge across the Chattahoochee River at West Point, Ga., constructed and maintained under public resolution No. 25, Sixty-sixth Congress, and from paying the Government for any damage to or loss of any part of the material used in said bridge: Provided, That the transportation of personnel, material of first and second bridge, and inspection by officers, all amounting to $2,705.77, shall be paid by said city of West Point, and also transportation charges of bridge material now on hand from West Point, Ga., to the point where the Secretary of War may direct said material to be shipped, but not for a greater distance or expense than that from the point which said material was shipped to said West Point, Ga.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Mr. President, very briefly I will explain to the Senate that this bill seeks to relieve the city of West Point, situated on the Chattahoochee River, the boundary line between the States of Georgia and Alabama, of an expense account rendered against it by the War Department in the reconstruction of a bridge across the Chattahoochee River.

A couple of years ago we had a great flood that overflowed West Point, devastated a large area in the little city, and inflicted upon it damages of a million or so of dollars. In reconstructing the bridge some soldiers from a nearby cantonment rendered some manual service, and the War Department put in a claim for the service rendered by these soldiers from the cantonment; but the position taken by the Government now is that the expense of these soldiers was not increased at all. They, of course, received no extra pay from the Government. It was a question of their being at West Point engaged on the bridge or being at the cantonment, Camp Gordon, doing drill work or other necessary camp duty; and the city of West Point simply asks to be relieved of this charge against it. A bill to that effect having been introduced in the other House, has been favorably acted upon there, and the Senate committee here has acted upon it favorably, and it is now ready for passage.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether or not the bridge, after reconstruction, was available for use by the Federal Government and whether it was used by the Federal Government?

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. It is available for the use of everybody.

Mr. KING. And was it used by the Government?

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. It is used by the Government, and by the traveling public generally.

Mr. KING. The Government is advantaged by its repair and reconstruction?

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Necessarily so. The Government would have to have a bridge there across that navigable stream for the movement of its own troops and supplies.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAPPER in the chair). If there be no amendment to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROSEN REICHARDT BROKERAGE CO.

The bill (S. 157) for the relief of the Rosen Reichardt Brokerage Co., of St. Louis, Mo., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on line 7, after the words "sum of," to strike out "$1,000" and insert "$372.24," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Rosen Reichardt Brokerage Co., of St. Louis, Mo., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $372.24, the same being a refund of duty paid on certain walnuts imported on December 15, 1915, and covered by New York warehouse bond No. 88451.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (H. R. 4810) to authorize the incorporation of companies to promote trade in China, was announced as next in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STERLING in the chair). The bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL MOTOR VEHICLE THEFT ACT.

The bill (S. 2272) to amend the act approved October 29, 1919, known as the national motor vehicle theft act, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to amend the act approved October 29, 1919, known as the national motor vehicle theft act, by adding at the end thereof the following:

That whoever shall transport or cause to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce a motor vehicle with intent to or in conspiracy to defraud the owner or any insurer carrying insurance thereon against loss by any hazard shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both. That whoever shall receive, conceal, store, barter, sell, or dispose of any motor vehicle moving as or which is a part of or which constitutes interstate commerce with intent to or in conspiracy to defraud the owner or any insurer carrying insurance thereon against loss by any hazard shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRAZING FEES FOR USE OF NATIONAL FORESTS.

The bill (S. 2330) to extend the time for payment of grazing fees for the use of national forests during the calendar year 1921 was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the time for making payments of grazing fees for the use of national forests as provided by existing law is extended from the 1st day of September, 1921, to the 1st day of December, 1921.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEAMSHIP "TEXAS."

The bill (S. 2153) authorizing the owners of the steamship Texas to bring suit against the United States of America was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 2, line 10, after the word "appeal," to insert:

Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

And to strike out lines 18 to 24, both inclusive, on page 2, and lines 1 to 4, both inclusive, on page 3, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the owners of the steamer Texas arising out of a collision between said steamer and the United States steamer Frederick der Grosse, off Tompkinsville, Staten Island, in the harbor of New York, on the 3d day of September, 1917, for and on account of the losses alleged to have been suffered in said collision by the owners of said steamer Texas by reason of damages to and detention of said steamer may be submitted to the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, under and in compliance with the rules of said court sitting as a court of admiralty; and that said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the whole controversy and to enter judgment or decree for the amount of the legal damages sustained by reason of said collision, if any shall be found to be due either for or against the United States, upon the same principle and measure of liability, with costs, as in like cases in admiralty between private parties, with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

BERING SEA CLAIMS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS.

The bill (S. 2235) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to adjudicate the claims of American citizens was announced as next in order, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction be, and is hereby, conferred upon the Court of Claims for determination of the law and the fact in the claims of American citizens, their heirs, or legal representatives, for damages or loss resulting from the seizure, detention, sale, or interference by the United States of vessels charged with unlawful sealing in the Bering Sea during the years 1875 to 1896, inclusive, and to enter judgment therefor.

SEC. 2. That all American citizens whose rights were affected by said seizure, detention, sale, or interference specifically referred to in section 1 hereof during the years 1875 to 1896, inclusive, may submit to the Court of Claims thereunder, and the court shall render judgment thereunder.

SEC. 3. That claims not presented within two years from the passage of this act shall hereafter be forever barred.

Mr. WARREN. What are the years given there?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. 1875 to 1896.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, briefly, it is the purpose of the bill to send to the Court of Claims the claims of Americans whose property was taken when the United States was claiming that the Bering Sea was what they called a mare clausum, a closed sea. It was finally decided not to be. These Americans were illegally arrested by the Federal authorities and deprived of their property. Our Government paid those of other nations who were illegally arrested and deprived of their property, the Russians paid theirs, and the British paid theirs. Those of our citizens who lost their property were of the greatest service as witnesses before the Bering Sea Commission, when we had the joint commission to decide that question. The claims of the British were reduced from over a million dollars down to $250,000 by virtue of the testimony of these very people who lost their own property and whom we have not yet compensated.

A bill similar to this, except that it conferred jurisdiction upon the Circuit Court of the Ninth Circuit instead of upon the Court of Claims, has passed the Senate three times and has passed the House, but it has never passed both bodies in the same Congress. Three different favorable reports were made by the Committee on Foreign Relations on those measures. One was made by the distinguished Senator from Alabama, Mr. Morgan, another by Senator McCreary, and the third by another Senator, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, whose name I do not now recall. They were all substantially the same, as I said, except that those bills gave jurisdiction to the Circuit Court of the Ninth Circuit, and this bill gives jurisdiction to the Court of Claims. It authorizes the Court of Claims to find the law and the facts, and, if the facts and the law warrant, to pronounce judgment.

Mr. OVERMAN. There is nothing in the claims involving damages?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, no; it is simply for the loss of their property, their vessels and the cargoes.

Mr. OVERMAN. That might involve damages. I do not know whether the question of damages comes in or not, but if there is any question of damages the Court of Claims will not have jurisdiction, and it ought to be referred to the Circuit Court of the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The bill as reported, of course, gives jurisdiction to the Court of Claims.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not know whether there are any damages involved or not. I just suggest to the Senator that if there is a question of damages in it, of course the Court of Claims would have no jurisdiction, and it ought not to have, because it has no facilities for affording a jury trial.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It ought not to have what?

Mr. OVERMAN. It ought not to have jurisdiction to try a case involving a question of damages.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It ought to have jurisdiction to find the amount.

Mr. OVERMAN. To find the amount due on a contract, yes; but it has no jurisdiction of any questions sounding in tort.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the damages are simply the amount of the property that was taken, that is easy to ascertain.

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It is simply to recompense them for the value of the property that was taken.

Mr. OVERMAN. Property lost?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Property lost, to find what it was worth.

Mr. OVERMAN. And not for any damages suffered by reason of the loss?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, no.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DREDGE "MARYLAND."

The bill (H. R. 1942) for the relief of the owners of the dredge Maryland was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the words "claim of," to insert the words "John Emile, of Duval County, Fla., and"; on line 5, after the word "Alabama," to strike out the word "owner" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "owners"; on line 10, after the word "said," to strike out the words "Peoples Bank of Mobile" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "owners"; on page 2, line 3, after the word "decree," to insert the word "therein"; on line 4, after the word "damages," to insert the words "sustained by reason of said collision"; on line 5, after the word "due," to insert the words "either for or"; on line 6, after the words "United States," to strike out the words "in favor of the Peoples Bank of Mobile or against the Peoples Bank of Mobile in favor of the United States"; and on line 9, at the beginning of the line, to insert the words "and damages, with costs," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of John Emile, of Duval County, Fla., and the Peoples Bank of Mobile, a corporation under the laws of the State of Alabama, owners of the dredge Maryland, against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by a collision between said dredge and the U. S. S. O-4, in the Cooper River at Charleston, S. C., on the 10th day of February, 1919, may be sued for by the said owners in the district court of the United States for the southern district of Florida, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree therein for the amount of such damages sustained by reason of said collision and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due either for or against the United States upon the same principles and measures of liability and damages, with costs, as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I call attention to an amendment on page 2, line 9, where the language of the bill is "upon the same principles and measures of liability," after which it is proposed to insert the words "and damages, with costs." This is about the only instance of those words "with costs" ever being put in a bill passed by the Senate.

Mr. FLETCHER. That means the actual court costs, whichever way the damages go.

Mr. SMOOT. Those words have never been inserted in bills in the past. Damages have been allowed but never the costs, and in order to make it conform to the other bills the words "with costs" ought to be stricken out of that amendment.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have no objection to striking them out.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask that the vote by which that amendment was agreed to be reconsidered, and that the words "with costs" be stricken from the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which that amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah.

The READING CLERK. On page 2, line 9, in the committee amendment, the Senator from Utah proposes to strike out the words "with costs," so that it will read:

Upon the same principles and measures of liability and damages as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have no objection to that.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, those words occur in another place on the same page and should be stricken out. I therefore move that, on line 4, page 2, after the word "collision," the words "and costs, if any" be stricken out, so that it will provide for straight damages for a collision.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF THE JUDICIAL CODE.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to go back to Senate bill 1831, to amend section 237 of the Judicial Code. That bill was introduced by the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], who is ill, and he is very anxious to have it passed.

Mr. KING. I objected to the consideration of that bill, but I shall be glad to have it taken up for consideration.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, line 7, after the word "statutes," to insert the words "by the highest court of a State"; and on line 9, after the words "the Supreme Court," to strike out the word "may" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "shall," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 237 of the Judicial Code is hereby amended by adding thereto the following:

"In any suit involving the validity of a contract wherein it is claimed that a change in the rule of law or construction of statutes by the highest court of a State applicable to such contract would be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, the Supreme Court shall, upon writ of error, reexamine, reverse, or affirm the final judgment of the highest court of a State in which a decision in the suit could be had if said claim is made in said court at any time before said final judgment is entered and if the decision is against the claim so made."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would like to have some explanation of this bill.

Mr. NELSON. The bill is to cover the case where a contract has been entered into in a State, under the interpretation and construction of the laws of that State by the court, and afterwards an attempt is made by the court to so change the law as to invalidate that contract which was valid when made. It is simply to allow an appeal or a writ of error to the Supreme Court in such cases.

Mr. KING. I am not sure that I follow the Senator in all the implications which might arise in a State. Does it relate to suits which may be brought where there is no diversity of citizenship?

Mr. NELSON. Oh, no; it does not enlarge the jurisdiction at all. The Supreme Court, I may say, in cases where they have had an opportunity to decide, have held that where a contract was entered into in a State, under the decisions of the courts of that State, and was valid when entered into, the State court could not invalidate that contract by a subsequent decision. This does not enlarge the jurisdiction at all, in any shape or manner.

Mr. KING. Assume a contract between two citizens of the same State and litigation ensuing growing out of an alleged breach of the terms of the contract, and the Supreme Court of the State, perhaps contrary to former holdings, holds that the contract is invalid.

Mr. NELSON. I can not conceive how, under the judiciary act, the court could get jurisdiction of such a case.

Mr. KING. I was going to say, if the purpose of this act is to attempt to confer jurisdiction upon any Federal court by reason of the action of the highest tribunal of any State growing out of conditions such as I have indicated, I should oppose it; but if it involves merely the construction of a contract, or the alleged breach of a contract—

Mr. NELSON. That is all.

Mr. KING. Between citizens of different States—

Mr. NELSON. They must be citizens of different States.

Mr. KING. Or where the question of diversity of citizenship is involved, then I have no objection to the bill.

Mr. NELSON. It does not change that provision of the law at all.

Mr. KING. The Senator can assure the Senate that that is the situation, then?

Mr. NELSON. That is the situation. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] introduced this bill and explained it before the Judiciary Committee, and that is the sole purpose of the measure.

Mr. KING. Have any evils been brought to the attention of the committee which have resulted from the present law?

Mr. NELSON. Yes. I can not at this moment recall the cases, but there have been cases in the Supreme Court where it has appeared that a contract when made or an engagement when made, under the decisions of a court of a State interpreting the law and the constitution of that State, was held valid, and the court of that State afterwards, when it came to the enforcement of the contract, made a different interpretation and invalidated it.

The Supreme Court has held properly that they could not do that. This is to allow an appeal in such cases and does not otherwise enlarge the jurisdiction of the court.

Mr. KING. We know that the Federal Government more and more is encroaching upon the States and upon their sovereign powers. I am unwilling to support any measure that enlarges the control of the Federal Government or any measure that will cripple the jurisdiction of the States over matters that are properly cognizable under the State constitutions and under the State laws. But if the bill relates merely to cases where there is diversity of citizenship and where now it is permissible to go from the State to the Federal court, I shall not object to its passage.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF JUDICIAL CODE.

The bill (S. 2228) to amend certain sections of the Judicial Code relating to the Court of Claims was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I object to the present consideration of the bill. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. The bill will go to the calendar.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We are not yet through with the bills included in the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. KING. There is no question that the Senator from Alabama can object to the consideration of any other measure.

Mr. HEFLIN. May I inquire how many more bills there are?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are three more which are covered by the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. HEFLIN. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will announce the next order of business.

FOREIGN TRADE ZONES IN UNITED STATES PORTS OF ENTRY.

The bill (S. 2391) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will retain its place on the calendar.

ASSESSMENT WORK ON UNPATENTED MINERAL CLAIMS.

The bill (H. R. 4813) changing the period of doing annual assessment work on unpatented mineral claims from the calendar year to the fiscal year beginning July 1 each year, which had been reported from the Committee on Mines and Mining without amendment, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of "An act to amend sections 2324 and 2325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States concerning mineral lands," approved January 22, 1880, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That section 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended by adding the following words: 'Provided, That the period within which the work required to be done annually on all unpatented mineral claims located since May 10, 1872, including such claims in the Territory of Alaska, shall commence at 12 o'clock meridian on the 1st day of July succeeding the date of location of such claim: Provided further, That on all such valid existing claims the annual period ending December 31, 1921, shall continue to 12 o'clock meridian July 1, 1922.'"

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROLPH NAVIGATION &amp; COAL CO.

The bill (S. 1408) authorizing the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. to sue the United States to recover damages resulting from collisions, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The first amendment of the Committee on Claims was, in line 7, page 2, after the word "damages," to insert the words "and costs."

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Claims was, on page 2, in line 7, after the word "any," to insert the word "as," and in the same line, after the word "found," to insert the words "to be"; in line 8, after the word "do," to strike out the comma; in line 9, after the word "company," to insert the words "or against the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. in favor of the United States"; in line 18, after the word "that," to strike out "should damages be found to be due to said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. the amount of final decree therefor shall be paid out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated" and to insert "said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act," so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of Rolph Navigation & Coal Co., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business in the city and county of San Francisco, in said State, owner of the barkentine Hesperian for damages caused by collision between said vessel and the destroyer Risal, a naval vessel belonging to the United States, in the Bay of San Francisco, on the 26th day of November, 1919, may be sued for and submitted to the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California, sitting as a court in admiralty, and acting under the rules in admiralty, governing said court, in an action in which said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. is hereby authorized to commence against the United States for the recovery of said damages. Said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine said action and enter its judgment or decree therein for the amount of such damages, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co., or against the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and according to the measure of liability prevailing in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same right of appeal: Provided, That such notice of said action shall be given upon or after the commencement of said action to the Attorney General of the United States, as may be provided by order of said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General upon receipt of such notice to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear for and defend the United States in such action: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Claims was on page 3, line 11, after the word "damages" to insert the words "and costs."

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendments were in section 2 on page 3, line 11, before the word "be" to insert "as shall"; in line 12, after the word "due" to strike out the comma; in line 13, after the word "company" to insert "or against the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. in favor of the United States"; and in line 23, after the word "That", to strike out "should damages be found to be due to said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. the amount of final decree therefor shall be paid out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated" and to insert "said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act"; so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That the claim of said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co., owner of the coal barge Alden Besse for damages caused by collision between said vessel and the destroyer Buchanan, a naval vessel belonging to the United States, in the Bay of San Francisco, on the 1st day of September, 1919, may be sued for and submitted to the United States District Court in and for the Northern District of California, sitting as a court of admiralty, and acting under the rules in admiralty governing said court, in an action in which said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. is hereby authorized to commence against the United States for the recovery of said damages. Said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine said action and enter its judgment or decree therein for the amount of such damages, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of said Rolph Navigation & Coal Co., or against the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and according to the measure of liability prevailing in like cases in admiralty, between private parties, and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of said action shall be given upon or after the commencement of said action to the Attorney General of the United States, as may be provided by order of said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General, upon receipt of such notice, to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear for and defend the United States in such action: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE DRASTIC AND DESTRUCTIVE DEFLATION POLICY OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, for months I have criticized and condemned the drastic deflation policy inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board. I was convinced, and I am now more strongly convinced than ever, that the hasty, drastic, and reckless manner in which that board undertook to deflate the currency and curtail credits is responsible for the loss of billions of dollars to the people of the South and West.

I have been doing all in my power to have that policy changed. I am not alone in the position that I occupy upon this important matter.

Senator SMITH of South Carolina, Senator SIMMONS of North Carolina, Senators WATSON and HARRIS of Georgia, and others representing the cotton-growing States, feel as I do about the deadly deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. President, the power to control the volume of currency and credit in this country is a tremendous power. That power is lodged in the Federal reserve banking system, and, so far as I know, it was never abused until last year when a deflation policy was invoked by the Federal Reserve Board, which struck down the agricultural business of the South and West and placed the farmers, merchants, and bankers of those sections at the mercy of speculators and those who purchased for export farm products from the South and West. This question is too big and too vital to the business life of our country to permit that strange and costly conduct of the Federal Reserve Board to go by uncensured and uncondemned by the representatives of the many who were robbed for the benefit of the few.

Money is the lifeblood of business, and they who have control over its volume and circulation are charged with the solemn duty and responsibility of having it circulate in a manner that will keep the body of business healthy and strong.

The farmer plants his crop, the merchant advances him credit, and the banker aids both the merchant and the farmer with credits, with the conviction that when the crop is made and farm products are ready for the market that there will be an ample supply of money available to meet the just and fair needs of the business of that locality. What are those needs? Money sufficient to buy the products at a price that will yield the farmer a profit sufficient to enable him to pay his debts and provide for those dependent upon him—yes; a profit sufficient to justify and even encourage him to remain in the farming business.

When this is done the needs of the farmer, merchant, and banker have all been met and our banking system has performed its duty well.

But, Mr. President, when money is withheld or credits are refused to the people who produce the things that feed and clothe the American masses something is radically wrong. To produce such a condition at the crop-moving time is injurious and destructive to the interests of agriculture and therefore injurious and destructive to the merchants and bankers of the agricultural section. When such a thing happens those who have control over the volume of currency and credits are responsible for it, and when they permit special interests to influence them to withhold money and credits which are absolutely necessary to enable the farmers to obtain a profitable price for their products they have committed a serious offense against the agricultural industry of our country. If you impoverish the farmers of the country you are striking down the forces that support the physical life of the Nation—the forces that help to feed and clothe the world.

The Federal reserve banking system was established for the purpose of supplying the money and the credits necessary to carry on the business of the American people under any and all conditions. It was created for the purpose of providing an elastic currency, and it did so. When the system was put into operation the people of the South and West rejoiced, because they knew that the day of their deliverance from the merciless financiers of Wall Street had come. They had seen that Wall Street crowd in complete control of the money supply of the country, and they had seen time and time again money withheld and credits refused just when the farmers of the South and West were ready to place their crops upon the market. They had seen their crops forced upon the market and sold at destructive prices, and they were happy to be delivered from a banking system that wrought such ruin among the farmers of America. I helped to create this great Federal reserve banking system. I rejoiced to see the day come when agriculture, commerce, and industry would stand free and unfettered everywhere in the business life of the country. For nearly five years that splendid system waved its magic wand over the various avenues of business and all was well during that time. I am not condemning the system. I am condemning the Federal Reserve Board for its interference with the legitimate functions of the system.

Instead of deflating the currency and curtailing credits very slowly and very gradually and extending the time of such deflation over a period of from 8 to 10 years, the Federal board commenced to talk deflation and it approved of a rapid deflation program in one year's time from the ending of the World War.

No sane man who has at heart the welfare of the business interests of the country can or will approve the hasty and drastic deflation policy inaugurated and mercilessly prosecuted since the summer of 1920. Farmers, merchants, and bankers of the South and West protested against it. Grain growers, cattlemen, and cotton producers came to Washington and pleaded with the Federal Reserve Board to change its policy and permit them to have the money and credit necessary to prevent the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars and the destruction of their business. They pointed out the fact that they were being forced to sell their cattle and farm products at prices below the cost of production. Mr. President, I have said it before, and I repeat it here to-day, that the failure of the Federal Reserve Board to provide ways and means for saving billions of dollars to the people of the South and West last fall was a crime against the people whose property was taken and sacrificed under the ruinous policy pursued by the Federal Reserve Board. Be it said to the credit and the praise of Hon. John Skelton Williams, then Comptroller of the Currency, that he urged upon the board the justice, the wisdom, and the pressing necessity for changing that policy. He urged that aid be granted; that money and credits necessary be advanced to farmers, merchants, and bankers in the South and West so as to prevent the destruction of their property and the ruin of their business. In addition to that he pointed out that the Federal reserve banks had gold reserves sufficient to authorize the issuance of more than $2,000,000,000 of Federal reserve notes. He showed that that could be done without in any manner endangering the stability of the system. If the Federal Reserve Board had followed his advice and had extended a helping hand to the people of the South and West, it could and would have prevented the wholesale slaughter of property values and kept out of dark despondency and dire distress millions of people who have been robbed of their property and made desperate and miserable by the deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board. Because of his enthusiastic advocacy of liberal loans to business in distress John Skelton Williams incurred the displeasure of the Federal Reserve Board. We are told that star-chamber proceedings were indulged in by the Federal Reserve Board and secret meetings were held by its members when Mr. Williams, the Comptroller of the Currency, was not even notified or invited to be present. John Skelton Williams knew that the Federal reserve banking system was amply able to relieve the embarrassing and distressing situation in the South and West, and he did everything in his power to have that relief granted. He was in position to know exactly what the Federal reserve banks could do, and he had the courage to come out in the open and tell the people just what the true situation was. But for John Skelton Williams I do not believe that the inside facts and real truth of the situation would ever have been made known. When Wall Street speculators were feasting and reveling in the markets as they made millions on the falling prices of farm products, it was John Skelton Williams who exposed the fact that while money was being withheld from the agricultural interests of the South and West millions and hundreds of millions were being loaned to four or five New York banks for speculative purposes. He showed that they were lending to these four or five banks in the city of New York more money than they were then lending to all the agricultural interests and all the millions of population for agricultural purposes in 21 States of the American Union. That was inflating currency and credits in New York City and deflating them in the South and West. During all that time the Federal Reserve Board's policy of deflation, which should be called the policy of destruction, was raging in all its fury throughout the agricultural regions of the South and West.

Delegations came to Washington, but they came in vain. Letters, telegrams, and petitions were sent to the Federal Reserve Board from the people of the South and West asking that its policy be changed and they pointed out in detail just how that policy was bringing ruin to their business. It was pointed out that the deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board was being used as a club—not to protect and defend the Nation's great agricultural industry but to beat it over the head and knock it into insensibility. Mr. President, I said then that it was wrong to hold up the American farmer and aid the speculators and market gamblers of Wall Street in robbing him.

The Federal Reserve Board is an institution created by law. It does not belong to the members individually or collectively. It belongs to the Government of the United States and was instituted for honest, intelligent, faithful, and effective service in the financial affairs of the American people. If it functions well and serves the purpose for which it was created, well and good; but if it is perverted from the ends of its institution and becomes an instrument of oppression and torture in the hands of crafty and avaricious interests, it then becomes the duty of those honored with seats in this body to cry out against such a thing and in the name of the American people to condemn and repudiate it. Mr. President, I am convinced that the Federal Reserve Board has during the time that I have mentioned been maladministered, and that as a result of that maladministration millions of people in the South and West have been greatly injured. As a result of the deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board they have suffered the loss of billions of dollars, while another class of people were profiting by their losses and fattening upon their misfortunes. In other words, the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy resulted in taking from millions of people in the South and West billions of hard-earned money and turning it over to a few thousand especially favored people in the East.

The high cost of living and the sale of billions of dollars' worth of Liberty bonds produced naturally and necessarily a greater amount of currency and credits for use in the business of the American people. This increase or inflation of currency and credits was necessary to meet the larger requirements of business of every kind. In other words, if currency and credits had been increased for five years during the war until at the close, we had ten times as much as we had at the beginning. Common sense and common justice would suggest and require that the volume of currency and credits in use when the war ended should not be abruptly and rapidly reduced. Rapid and drastic reduction or deflation could not be had without dis-jointing and destroying business, and I repeat that if deflation was to be undertaken it should have proceeded so slowly, gradually, and systematically that no basic or productive business of any character would have been seriously injured. This could have been done. The Federal reserve banking system which carried us so successfully up through all the trying vicissitudes of the war, carried us up toward the mountain top of inflation in currency and credits, could have and would have, if it had been permitted to do so, brought us back down the mountain side to normal times without the wreck of business; the suffering and misery of millions of people and the new-made graves of numerous suicides who were driven into desperation and madness by the untimely, unwise, and drastic deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board.

Good business men have told me that because of the greatly increased amount of currency and credits made necessary to carry on our business under the new condition, that in order to prevent disastrous disturbances in the business of the country we should go slowly through a reduction or deflation period of from 8 to 10 years.

Mr. President, the war ended in November, 1918, and strange as it may seem, in December, 1919, the Federal Reserve Board approved a statement to the effect that it was the duty of the Federal reserve banking system to proceed with the deflation of credits as rapidly and as systematically as possible. While the suggestion was ridiculous and dangerous, yet as disastrous and destructive as such a policy would have been at that time, it would have been better for the farmers, merchants, and bankers of the South and West; it would have been fairer to them if it had been adopted as a policy and wide publicity given to its demoralizing and destructive operation, so that farmer, merchant, and banker, and everybody else in the agricultural sections would have known before arranging for and planting another crop that such a thing was going to be done, it would have put everybody on notice and everybody would have known just what to expect and just what not to expect. The farmer would have had the conditions thus produced before him when he came to decide the matter as to the size of the crop that he would try to produce under the circumstances. He would have had the conditions thus produced to guide him in providing supplies of every kind for the crop of 1920. He would have avoided buying on the large scale that he did, fertilizer, agricultural implements, and various other things to be used in making a crop. He would not have gone in debt as he did. The merchant and the banker would have known just how to handle the situation under such conditions. The merchant would have known to what extent he should lay in supplies for the business of 1920. The banker would have known just about what would be required of him in the way of cash and credits for that year and just what he might expect in the way of banking business under such circumstances.

Everybody would have known about what to expect in every line of business if this work of deflation or destruction had commenced in December, 1919. But what happened? It seems that the South and West had been marked for slaughter. Those who had vehicles for sale and large supplies of fertilizers to sell and agricultural implements and farm machinery that must be disposed of before the crash came did not want anything done in the way of deflation until they at least could unload their supplies upon the farmers, merchants, and bankers of the agricultural sections of the country. So the deflationists or destructionists of the Federal Reserve Board lapsed into silence and waited.

No, Mr. President, the deflation policy was not urged in the spring time, when the farmers were buying automobiles in great numbers; when they were buying motor trucks for their farms; when they were buying tractor plows; when the manufacturing centers were sending out their agricultural implements and dumping them down in the farming regions of the country. There was no deflation policy urged and emphasized then.

When the farmer bought his fertilizers at top-notch price, where were the deflationists then? The Federal Reserve Board waited until the crop was planted; it did not tell the farmer in the spring time that it was going to wait until he went into debt and bought his supplies at high prices and then waylay him and rob him on the way to market. As he had received 40 cents for cotton in 1919 and all through the spring and up to June, 1920, he had reason to believe that he was going to get in the neighborhood of the same price for the crop of 1920. The Federal Reserve Board permitted him to believe that he would. If that board had told the farmer in April, "We are going to contract the currency and curtail credits or refuse you financial aid," the farmer would have said, "Well, if you are going to do that, I will buy fewer agricultural implements; I will not pay the high prices that are now being asked for them; if you are going to destroy the debt-paying power of my products, then I will have to change my plans to meet conditions that I know will exist when I go to sell my crop in the fall. I will greatly reduce the amount of fertilizers that I intended to buy." But no such information was given the farmer. The Federal Reserve Board permitted him to plant his crop under the impression that he was going to receive 40 cents a pound for his cotton. The merchant sold goods and advanced credits to the farmer upon the 40-cent basis; the banker in the cotton-growing States loaned money and committed himself to business transactions with the farmer and merchant upon the 40-cent basis. All three of them made investments and assumed the year's business obligations upon that basis.

What happened to them after the crop had been planted and all business arrangements for making the crop had been made and it was too late to keep the seed out of the ground; too late to cancel contracts for the fertilizers he had bought; too late to tell the merchant that he did not want the agricultural implements; too late to refuse to buy the plow mule for which he had agreed to pay $250? Why the Federal Reserve Board waited, I repeat, until the farmer was tied up hard and fast and then, just at the beginning of crop-moving time, commenced its deadly deflation policy.

In the month of July that policy of destruction made serious inroads upon the price of cotton, and then in the month of August it was let loose in all its fury and in 30 days it broke the price 9 cents a pound or $45 a bale. That loss in one month's time on a twelve and a half million bale crop cost our farmers $562,500,000.

I am bringing these terrible facts to the attention of the Senate and the country for the purpose of letting you and the people know just what havoc the Federal Reserve Board's policy wrought last year among the cotton growers of our country.

Mr. President, I am not advised as to whether or not any of the friends of the Federal Reserve Board were speculating in cotton at that time. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. Watson] reminded us the other day that they loaned to themselves in the system the sum of $18,000,000. I want to say just here, Mr. President, that if they invested any of that $18,000,000 in speculating on the bear side of the cotton market in the month of August last year, they made a lot of money.

Do you know, Mr. President, how much money the man made who sold on the exchange a thousand bales of cotton for the month of August, 1920? He made on that 1,000 bales $45,000 in cash. The Federal Reserve Board knew what effect its deflation policy would have upon the cotton market. Those who knew that that policy was going to run wild in August last year made millions of dollars to the distress and great injury of the cotton farmers of the country. Between the months of June and December that policy cost the cotton farmers more than $200,000,000 a month. Think of that, Senators! The deliberate and premeditated deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board cost the cotton farmers more than $200,000,000 a month between June and December of last year.

Mr. President, that tremendous loss on cotton could and should have been prevented. Various periodicals of the country said that the spinners were making more money than they had ever made and they admitted it. I have heard spinners say during that prosperous time that they could afford to pay 50 cents a pound for cotton.

Mr. President, at the very time of which I speak the New York Commercial had an editorial in which spinners were quoted as saying that they were willing to pay 30 cents a pound for cotton in order that the producer might have a profit. Cotton was then away below 30 cents. So we have the spinner quoted as saying that he was not asking that cotton be driven down to starvation prices, and we have the cotton producer pleading for help and asking that he be permitted to hold his cotton off the market until the price would yield him a profit. The cotton farmer called in vain to the Federal Reserve Board. It left him helpless in the hands of those who made money out of his distress. Now the average price of cotton is 8 cents a pound, or $40 a bale.

A small farmer who incurred an indebtedness of $1,400 last year when cotton was 40 cents a pound could have paid that debt with 7 bales of cotton, but the debt-paying power of that cotton has been destroyed to such an extent that he must now take 21 bales of cotton to pay that debt of $1,400. If that farmer made 7 bales of cotton last year, it would take that 7 bales, the 7 bales produced this year, and the 7 bales he may make next year to pay the debt of $1,400 incurred in 1920.

No man with a feeling of sympathy or of justice and right in his heart can look upon the Federal Reserve Board's treatment of the American farmer without a feeling of resentment and indignation.

Those who speculated in grain and cotton got all the money they wanted. The bear gamblers of Wall Street had all the money they needed to enable them to take advantage of the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy and make millions out of the rapid fall in the price of cotton. They were enabled by that policy to make more than $1,000,000,000 on the falling price of cotton in five months' time last fall. Just think of that! Are you surprised that the people of the cotton-growing States cried out against such a policy? Are you surprised that they condemned a policy that was bringing ruin to their business?

Mr. President, when the Federal Reserve Board's deadly deflation policy was raging last fall and bear gamblers were holding high carnival in New York City, John Skelton Williams, like Daniel of old, who refused to eat the King's meat and drink his wine, refused to join the Federal Reserve Board in creating and carrying out a deflation policy that he knew meant ruin to the business of millions of his countrymen. I wrote to him commending him for his great service to the American people. I received letters from him telling me of things that the Federal Reserve Board had done and was doing that had resulted, and would result, in injury to the interests of agriculture. His statements in the newspapers and his able and fearless speeches received the approval of the people everywhere who believe in a fair and square deal for the legitimate business interests of the country. His speech delivered a few days ago at Augusta, Ga., was a terrific and scathing arraignment of the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy. He pointed out that while the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy would not permit the farmer to borrow money on his cotton in a warehouse that that same policy permitted some fishermen in the Northwest to borrow money on fish that had not been caught. Here is what he said upon the subject:

The prodigality with which certain big banks disposed of the funds so unstintingly loaned them by certain reserve banks may be illustrated by a loan of $500,000 to a fisheries company made by a big northern bank which came to my notice. When I inquired what the security for the loan was, I was informed that the collateral was fish. And when I asked where the fish were, I was informed officially that the fish had not been caught at the time the loan was made, but that they were supposed to be swimming in the ocean thousands of miles away; but that the corporation had promised to go fishing, and if they caught any fish pack them and can them and then put them in warehouses and then deposit the warehouse receipts as security for their loan, which, when I last heard from it, had not been paid or reduced.

Senators, what do you think of the Federal board's deflation policy that will lend money on fish out of sight, swimming free in the ocean, and at the same time refusing to lend money on cotton stored in a warehouse? Cotton in normal times gives to America the balance of trade. It brings gold into our country when all other products fail. It brings into our country every year more gold than the world's annual output, and yet the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy prefers uncaught fish in the ocean to cotton stored in a warehouse. Those who hoped to catch fish could obtain loans, but those who had cotton, cattle, and grain and other farm products in sight and in hand were denied loans.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Mr. President—

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield to my friend from Georgia.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. According to the statement, I do not believe these fish even had been counted; had they?

Mr. HEFLIN. Counted? Why, they had never been seen.

Mr. ASHURST. They probably had not been hatched.

Mr. HEFLIN. They may not have been hatched, as my good friend from Arizona says, but hatched or unhatched, money could be obtained on them from the Federal reserve bank while cotton was outlawed and deserted by the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. President, upon permission granted to me by the Senate, I had printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the speech that John Skelton Williams delivered in Augusta, Ga. After that speech appeared in the RECORD the joint committee appointed by the Senate and House to inquire into the agricultural conditions of the country requested Mr. Williams to appear and give testimony regarding the Federal Reserve Board's conduct. No fair-minded person could listen to his testimony without being convinced of his sincerity and the truthfulness of his statements. The testimony is not yet available and I will not make further comment upon it at this time.

After we had finally succeeded in forcing the Federal Reserve Board to break its long silence and come out of its secret chambers, W. P. G. Harding, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, appeared before the committee and undertook to defend the board's actions and policies.

Immediately a newspaper propaganda was foisted upon the country and each day stories were sent out from Washington to the effect that Gov. Harding was explaining everything in a manner satisfactory to the committee. Some of these stories were to the effect that he had stamped his senatorial critics and that when he left the witness stand the members of the committee nodded their heads as if they had already made up their minds to acquit him and the board of the serious charges lodged against them.

Why should they undertake to mislead and to influence public opinion by such fictitious stories as those with which they have flooded the country? I do not intend that the people shall be misled or deceived about this matter.

Here is one of the articles sent out from Washington. The headlines read:

Harding predicts business revival.

This refers to Gov. Harding, of course, of the Federal Reserve Board. Then, under that little head the article undertakes to defend the governor of the reserve board and his deflation policy. I want to know by what authority that board spends hundreds and thousands of dollars of the people's money to carry on a publicity propaganda to bolster up and defend a policy that deserves the condemnation of all honest men and women in the country.

Here is another one of these articles sent out from Washington. This one is from the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph, with big headlines:

W. P. G. Harding blames the agrarian bloc in Senate for cotton loss. Holding policy disastrous, he tells probers. Senators HEFLIN and SMITH under fire of governor. Quotes his advice to sell in 1920 when price was high.

Mr. President, this article has reference to me and other Senators from the cotton-growing States when it says:

W. P. G. Harding blames the agrarian bloc in Senate for cotton loss.

He, of course, has reference to the time when cotton prices would break, and I, together with other friends of the cotton producers, would advise them to sell sparingly or keep their cotton off the market until the price advanced again. Bear speculators were flooding the cotton States with literature in an effort to frighten the producers, so that they would rush their cotton upon the market. This, of course, would have been disastrous. Throwing cotton upon the market in great quantities would have broken the price very greatly. The bear speculators knew that, and that is why they were trying to stampede the farmers into dumping all of their cotton upon the market at once.

But these inspired newspaper stories sent out from Washington say that Gov. Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, advised the farmers to sell cotton when the price was high. This interesting statement, Mr. President, might have induced some people outside of the cotton States to believe that the farmers were holding all of their cotton and refusing to sell any. That was not the case. The farmers were selling cotton all along—selling gradually, as they should have done, just as good sense and sound business would suggest that they should do. They were selling all the time all the cotton necessary to supply the spindles here at home and meet the requirements of our export trade. The fact that the American cotton mills were kept going and the fact that our farmers sold all of the cotton demanded for exports show that they were disposing of their cotton regularly and in the best way possible so as to prevent serious breaks in the price. But suppose all of them had decided to do as Gov. Harding thinks that he advised them to do—sell cotton when the price was high. What would have happened? Why, such a rapid and unintelligent dumping of cotton upon the market would have driven prices down almost as rapidly as Gov. Harding's deflation policy drove down the price of cotton in the month of August, 1920. Who was going to buy the cotton that the farmer held off the market when the spinners and exporters had supplied themselves with all the cotton they needed for a given time? Would it have been wise and businesslike to have thrown cotton as rapidly as possible upon the market without regard to the demands of the spinner and exporter? Why should not the cotton farmer be aided in holding his cotton off the market until he could get a price that would yield a profit?

When the cotton farmer saw the price of cotton goods, the goods that he had to buy, advance to a point where it was out of all proportion to the price being paid for cotton, why should he not insist upon a price for cotton that was more in keeping with the price of the goods made out of that cotton? When the farmer was insisting upon a price of 40 cents and maybe more, cotton goods were selling at a price that would have justified the cotton farmer in asking from 70 to 80 cents a pound. Cotton spinners never made as much money in all their lives as they made during that time.

Mr. President, it may be that Gov. Harding and the Federal Reserve Board knew what they were going to do to cotton in the summer of 1920, and the governor decided that if he could get all of the cotton farmers to rush upon the market in the hope of getting 40 cents for all their cotton at one and the same time, he would succeed in having the farmer do to cotton prices by such a piece of folly just what he and the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy did do a little later on.

Mr. President, I have no apology to make to Gov. Harding or to anyone else for advising the cotton farmers to sell their cotton sparingly so as to keep the market keen and hungry. I have been fighting the enemies of the cotton producer a long time and I am engaged in the same business now.

In the better days of the Federal Reserve Board I have seen the farmer enter the market and find cotton prices on the decline, and what did he do? Why, acting under the belief that cotton should and would bring a better price a little later on, he declined to sell at the price then prevailing. Then, taking advantage of the Federal reserve banking act which permits loans on cotton, he borrowed some money for use in his business and at the same time kept his cotton off the market. Under this new order of things the farmer could use his sense and his strength to good purpose.

For the first time the bear speculators who had robbed him for years and years felt his power in the market place. They could no longer fix the price to suit themselves and then force the producer to sell his cotton.

The fact that the farmer could borrow money at the bank on his cotton was the fact that stood between the farmer and starvation prices. The privilege and power to borrow money on cotton was a blessing and benediction to the cotton farmer. I fought harder to secure the adoption of that provision than any other one in the law. I had seen our cotton farmers sorely oppressed under the old system. I had seen them literally robbed of their cotton under the old order of things and I longed for the day when they could have a fair chance and a fair price in the markets of the country. Up to and through the spring of 1920 the Federal Reserve Board permitted the cotton farmer to borrow the money needed on his cotton, but in the early summer of last year, as I have shown on several former occasions, the deflation policy inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board denied this aid to our cotton farmers and left them to the mercy of market manipulators and bear speculators who make their millions by beating down the price of cotton to the lowest point possible.

Mr. President, in the early fall of last year I was campaigning in the interest of the national Democratic ticket out in the State of Oklahoma. Scores of cotton farmers attended the speakings and one day, as I told them how we had enacted a banking law that permitted them to borrow money on cotton and that under that law they were enabled to hold their cotton until they could sell for a price that would yield a profit, I noticed that they did not applaud that statement as I had seen farmers do the year before, and when my speech was concluded several farmers and merchants came up and told me that word had been sent into Oklahoma from the Federal reserve system not to lend any more money on cotton.

They informed me that they could not then borrow a dollar on cotton. Democratic leaders told me that the Federal reserve banks' refusal to lend money on cotton had hurt the party worse than anything that had happened. They said "the farmers, merchants, and bankers are sore. They resent such treatment."

Mr. President, they had a right to be sore and to feel resentful. They were being denied a right that the law gave to them. Thousands of Democrats in Oklahoma will tell you to-day that the destructive and deadly deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board caused the Republican Party to carry that State last fall.

The withdrawal of aid from the farmers, merchants, and bankers in the cotton States at the crop moving time left them helpless in the hands of bear speculators who got all the money they needed to beat down the price of cotton. When the price had been driven down from 40 to 30 cents, 10 cents a pound, or $50 a bale, the farmer begged and pleaded with the Federal Reserve Board to change its policy and permit him to borrow some money on his cotton so as to enable him to get 30 cents a pound, the price necessary to cover the cost of production. But Gov. Harding and his board hardened their hearts and turned a deaf ear to the persistent appeals of the distressed farmer. The deflation process proceeded, pouring money into Wall Street and leaving human suffering and business disaster in all cotton States. The price of cotton went down to 25 cents a pound, $25 a bale below the cost of production. Hon. J. S. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association, farm organizations, United States Senators, and Members of the House of Representatives from the cotton States came to Washington and pleaded with Gov. Harding and the Federal Reserve Board to permit loans on cotton. They informed the board of the disastrous and ruinous effects of its deflation policy on the cotton industry and begged the board to change it. Then what happened? Why the board declined to do it and continued to refuse to aid the cotton farmer in his efforts to prevent the sacrifice of his cotton and the ruin of his business. Then the bear speculators of New York declared that the action of Gov. Harding and his board had "made it impossible for the farmers of the South to hold their cotton" and they predicted that that action would cause cotton to go still lower. Immediately the price of cotton went down and down to still lower levels. Mr. President, the newspapers tell us that in his efforts to explain his action last fall and defend his destructive deflation policy, Gov. Harding insinuated several things regarding cotton that were meant for me and for Senator SMITH, of South Carolina. In fact the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph, which I hold in my hand, says: "Gov. Harding had reference to Senator HEFLIN, of Alabama, and Senator SMITH, of South Carolina. No names were called, but the witness, when asked after his testimony, did not deny that he had the Senators in mind." Let me say just here that Gov. Harding is from Alabama, and I had very much rather be able to praise and defend his deflation policy than to be impelled as I am from a sense of duty to criticize and condemn it. But, Mr. President, personal friendship and the location of a public official's residence should not prevent me or any other public servant from pointing out and criticizing a policy that injuriously affects the business of the country.

I have long been a close student of the cotton question. I have given years of thought and study to this great question in order that I might better prepare myself for service to the cotton producer. I made it my business to find out the character and quantity of cotton produced here and abroad. I obtained information as to the number of cotton spindles operating in this and foreign countries. I observed the increase in the use of cotton for various purposes.

From year to year I noted the amount of cotton consumed here at home and that exported to foreign countries. By informing myself as to the amount produced from time to time and the increasing consumptive demand, I could reach a pretty fair conclusion as to what American cotton should and would be worth. So when cotton was selling for 12 and 14 cents a pound I predicted that on account of its increased use and superior quality American cotton would soon go to 20 cents a pound, and it did. Then when we became involved in the World War and everything advanced in price, cotton advanced to 30 cents a pound. Bear speculators made a very determined effort to beat down the price, or to at least prevent it from going any higher. They sent literature all through the cotton States for the purpose of frightening the farmer into believing that cotton had gone as high as it would go and to induce him to throw his cotton on the market and break the price. I believed from the facts in my possession that cotton would go to 40 cents, and I predicted in statements published in newspapers in the cotton States that cotton would sell for 40 cents. Well my prediction came true, and when the price went to 44 cents I thought and said that it might go to 50 cents. Some of the bull speculators in New York were then predicting that it would go to 60 cents. Cotton sold as high as a dollar a pound just after the war of 1860. A bale of cotton that sold for 40 cents a pound, or $200 a bale, when made into cotton handkerchiefs at 10 cents apiece, sold and still sells for $750. Cotton socks at 25 cents per pair made out of a bale of cotton sell now for more than $800.

The deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board resulted in driving the price of cotton down from 40 cents to an average price of about 8 cents a pound, and yet cotton goods are selling now at a price that would justify the farmer in asking and receiving 40 cents a pound.

The deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board struck down the purchasing power and debt-paying power of the farmers' cotton, but left the price of cotton goods just where it was when cotton was 40 cents a pound. This fact alone is sufficient to cause the unbiased mind to conclude that the Federal Reserve Board had one kind of deflation medicine for the cotton farmer and quite another kind for the spinner and wholesale dealer in cotton goods.

Mr. President, I recall an incident which causes me to believe that Gov. Harding intended to start his deflation policy after the cotton crop had been planted in the spring of 1919. The cotton price had broken considerably—it had gone down 6 or 7 cents a pound. Senator SMITH of South Carolina, Senator Smith, of Georgia; Congressman POW, of North Carolina; and myself called on Gov. Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, to urge liberal aid to farmers in their efforts to hold their cotton for an advance in the price that we felt should come and that we thought would come.

Gov. Harding did not enthuse at all over our suggestion. He did not agree with us that cotton would advance in price, but expressed the belief that it would go down to 15 cents a pound. It was then selling above 20 cents. In order to sustain his opinion he quoted what a big cotton buyer who had just returned from Europe had said to him upon the subject. That cotton buyer, so Gov. Harding told us, had said that cotton was going back to 15 cents. We all disagreed with Gov. Harding, and I replied that cotton would come nearer going to three times 15 cents. Gov. Harding failed to impress any of us that he was at all friendly to a movement looking toward an advance in the price of cotton. But cotton did advance just as we thought it would. It advanced 6 cents a pound, or $30 a bale in about 60 days from the time that Gov. Harding had told us that it was going back to 15 cents a pound.

Gov. Harding did not impress me at that conference that he was very much concerned about cotton or those who produced it. I regretted that he felt as he seemed to feel about the matter and I had some doubts and misgivings as to what he was going to do. But the President was well and strong then and I knew, and I think that Gov. Harding knew, that the President would not stand for unfair treatment of the patriotic cotton producers of the country, and destructive deflation was postponed and cotton went to 40 cents a pound. In 1920, during the severe illness of the President and just before the election, strange to say, Gov. Harding, who is still holding office under a Republican President, prosecuted his drastic deflation policy with such disgusting and destructive effect until his course was severely criticized and condemned by the people of the cotton States. Delegations came here to Washington and made known their feelings on the subject. The New York Commercial of October 13, 1920, tells us that Dr. Dudley J. Stillman, former chief of the Board of Farm Management of the Department of Agriculture, was one of a number who advocated the prosecution of members of the Federal Reserve Board. He said:

It is quite clear that the Federal Reserve Board and the Secretary of the Treasury are using the authority placed in their hands for the purpose of manipulating the market.

I do not know all that he means by that, but I know that the bear speculators at that time were making millions of dollars. If some man had been in the confidence of the Federal Reserve Board and could have been able to obtain from the board what the farmers and merchants and bankers of the South could not obtain, and they had told this man that they were going to clamp down on the cotton producers on the last of July and break the price of cotton 9 cents a pound before the 1st day of September, that man could have made millions of dollars. If he had sold 1,000 bales of cotton on the exchange he would have taken down on the 1st day of September $45,000, and Stillman said that they were manipulating the market.

Mr. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association, came here to Washington and told the Federal Reserve Board that if they went "on with this policy of deflation it will kill agriculture."

Again, Mr. Wannamaker said:

We want funds to be furnished by the banks of the Federal reserve system. We want members of the Federal Reserve Board to stop browbeating bankers so that they are afraid of their shadows.

Here is another statement by Mr. Wannamaker:

In one month agricultural interests have lost over $1,000,000,000 through decreased prices.

That is what the president of the American Cotton Association said. Then he asked this question:

Does the cotton producer commit a crime when he tries to sell his cotton just a little over the cost of production?

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], one of the ablest and best friends that the cotton producer has ever had in this or the other body, said on that occasion that the Federal Reserve Board should permit the issuance of Federal reserve notes based on warehouse receipts for cotton, but they did not do it.

Alfred Tomblin, a banker-merchant and cotton producer of Georgia, declared that the farmers of his section at two meetings have asked the prosecution of members of the Federal Reserve Board.

And yet the Federal Reserve Board pretends not to know that anybody suffered at its hands last fall. They said the people were getting money. Here is a statement of F. W. Thompson, vice president of the Merchants Loan & Trust Co., of Chicago, Ill., and also president of the Farm Mortgage Bankers' Association. His bank is a member of the Federal reserve system and he testified. Listen to what he said. After saying they could not get money, former Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia asked:

Why is it that you, being a member bank, they decline to rediscount this paper from the country banks?

Mr. THOMPSON. I do not know, Senator.

Here is another statement from Mr. Thompson, made in December last:

Mr. THOMPSON. I want to say another thing.

We want to relieve the situation in the country, and it needs it, gentlemen. I am not an alarmist or anything of the kind, but I do know some of the problems that are to-day affecting the banker in his demand upon the farmer that he pay and the demand upon the city banker that he deflate, and they are all up in the air.

This shows what the Federal Reserve Board's deflation policy was doing.

Mr. President, that was the policy, and yet here is the governor of the Federal Reserve Board trying to convince the investigating committee that the Federal Reserve Board has done nothing toward deflating the currency and curtailing credits.

Former Senator Gronna, at the December meeting, had this to say:

Let me say this: I dislike very much to be a witness before this committee, but let me tell you what happened in St. Paul the other day. Since you have brought this up I think I might just as well tell the truth.

We had over a hundred head of large cattle which we shipped to St. Paul. We found the markets demoralized and we wanted to ship them to Illinois and feed them. We could not get a loan of a dollar on those cattle.

Mr. THOMPSON. Whom did you go to, Senator?

Senator GRONNA. We went to the people right there in St. Paul and Minneapolis, and they said they were not advancing a dollar on cattle. The ninth Federal reserve district does not furnish any money to the producers of the country.

I just want that to go in the record, that the country is not being supplied with money. The feeders and purchasers of cattle are not being furnished with money.

That is what Senator Gronna said about the deflation policy of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. Mr. President—

Mr. HEFLIN. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. The Senator no doubt remembers the statements carried in the newspapers of last Sunday, I think, in which the story was told of the rebuilding of the waste places in France and Belgium. The substance of it was that France and Belgium had been rehabilitated and had recovered from the dreadful effects of the invasion by the German Army. I state that in this connection to the Senator to bear out his argument that our own banking system, which represents our Government so far as our finances are concerned, is, in the language of the Supreme Court, waging war upon legitimate business and prostrating the industries of our country.

Mr. HEFLIN. I thank the Senator for bringing that to my attention. It is literally true. The great banking system that we relied on to help us has been arbitrarily used to strike us down.

Following up that suggestion, here was a banking system the pride of the American people, the proud boast of all American business men, which in the crash of the greatest war that ever cursed the world stood unshaken, towering like a monument against the sky. While ruin was everywhere else, this bank stood here, the mighty stronghold of the financial system of the great American people. They said then, "Why, no; war can not produce a panic; if necessary we could stand the expenditure of billions and billions of dollars without at all shaking the foundations of this great system." What excuse do you suppose they gave when they got ready to turn the currents of a destructive panic upon the South and West? Why, this Federal Reserve Board said that the silk industry of Japan had failed and that something had happened of minor importance in Cuba. God pity this board!

Mr. President, in that better day when the Federal Reserve Board thought more of successfully operating the system than of holding their seats on the board under a new administration, they would not have batted an eye at the failure of little Japan's silk industry or the falling down of a sugar warehouse in Cuba.

Just here I want to read a portion of an editorial from the Manufacturers' Record of June 9, 1921:

The business of the country has been robbed to enrich the coffers of financial institutions over the protests of many farseeing and honorable bankers. The profits that Gov. Harding has sought to explain can not be explained. They stand as an immutable evidence of the poverty of his financial direction.

The Federal reserve system financed the war; it could not finance the peace. So is the record written; so is it written in shame. Out of our vast resources flowed in endless streams the means to drive back the Hun. Then almost overnight Gov. Harding and his associates decided that the onslaught of approaching economic disaster should not be financed, that the reservoirs should be closed, and decided on a course of action that facilitated disaster. The law itself provided for extraordinary use of credit in case of just such a situation as the country faced, permitting a lowering of the necessary reserve. Gov. Harding refused to take advantage of that provision. He turned his back on it and faced the other way. What is a reserve for? To be used, of course, when need arises. That is just when Gov. Harding refused to use it. He hoarded the Nation's lifeblood and would not let it circulate.

Last summer, aware of the approaching disaster, John Skelton Williams, then Comptroller of the Currency, pointed out that $2,000,000,000 in additional credit could be extended without imperiling the reserve position.

Mr. President, there is no getting away from the facts here presented by the Manufacturers' Record.

In line with the testimony which I have read from Mr. Thompson, of Chicago, and the testimony of ex-Senator Gronna, of North Dakota, that the people out there were not getting money, I wish to read the testimony of Gov. Bickett, of North Carolina, who appeared before our committee. Here is what he said:

One thing we call attention to is the present policy to call loans. I happen to know that down in my State of North Carolina there is a disposition—and the bankers say it is because of instructions approved by the Federal Reserve Board—to call loans.

This statement was made by the governor of a large cotton-growing State. He says that the bankers said last fall that the word had gone out to call loans. Further, he said:

Gentlemen of the committee, the situation with us in the South is more than distressing—it is tragic. It would be impossible for me to use words that would overstate the alarming condition that confronts the cotton farmer of the South.

We think the man who made the cotton ought to be given assistance and enabled to hold the cotton until the market opens up and the world is ready to take the cotton that it needs. We have not made more cotton this season than the world needs.

Senator CAPER. Did your governors' conference consider this suggestion: As to whether the Congress or the Government could provide relief by requiring the Federal Reserve Board to advance additional funds to the farmer, the cotton man, and the wheat grower, and others, on warehouse certificates temporarily?

Gov. BICKETT. Yes, sir. That it should provide additional funds and also provide for these extensions and stop this command that has come down all the way along the line to make everybody settle up right now.

This statement tells the story, Mr. President. The governor of North Carolina says the word came down the line to require the people to "settle up right now." What did that do? It required them to dump their cotton on the market without regard to the market conditions or the price being paid for cotton. That is what he was complaining about. The testimony continues. Senator SMITH, of South Carolina, said on that occasion:

At the conference we held before the Federal Reserve Board and the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller of the Currency made the statement and published it that there was a sufficient gold reserve for the issuance of $2,000,000,000 additional Federal reserves if the board saw fit to do it.

But the Federal Reserve Board would not change its policy. It would not have the money needed loaned on cotton. They forced the farmer to get rid of his bonds; and the Government in time is going to pay every one of them dollar for dollar, with interest.

Mr. President, the Federal Reserve Board's action injured cotton greatly. I read from the New York Commercial of September 16, 1920. Under a Washington date line, among other things, this article says:

Gov. Harding frowned upon the proposal that additional credits be provided as a means of holding cotton in warehouses beyond the usual marketing period in order to insure better prices.

What did he do, Mr. President? Here is the farmer ready for the market, and here are those who manipulate the market knocking the market in the head every night, and he is going into a dead market, and the governor of the reserve board puts himself in the attitude of refusing to aid him in holding his cotton because it is time to sell cotton, he says.

Mr. President, if that theory is to be lived up to it would impoverish and send to the poorhouse every farmer in the cotton-growing States. What is the farmer to do? These were the lines in the paper. "He could not aid them in holding cotton in warehouses beyond the usual marketing period in order to insure better prices." Why better prices? So that he could cover the cost of production, so that he could pay his just debts, so that he could provide for those dependent upon him. But the governor of the Federal Reserve Board took that action. This is the blow that sent terror into the hearts of our cotton producers and turned them over to the wolves of Wall Street. Let us see how New York cotton speculators and market manipulators construed this position of Gov. Harding. Let us see what effect his action had upon the cotton market:

[From the New York Commercial, September 16, 1920.]

COTTON OFF FROM 12 TO 31 POINTS—FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD REFUSES SPECIAL AID TO SOUTH.

The conference held in Washington yesterday between representatives of the cotton States and officials of the Federal Reserve Board was disappointing to cotton holders, as the Federal Reserve governor made it plain that the South could expect no special help.

Special help! Where is the cotton of the United States produced? In the East, the North, or the West? No. It is produced in the South. It is the cotton crop of the United States grown in the South, and at the marketing time they had to have help or perish, and he told the South that they could not expect any special aid. Listen to this:

This decision will influence sentiment here regarding the ability of the planters to finance any sort of a holding movement now.

That is New York talking now in the Commercial.

The next day, September 17, this appeared in the Commercial. Under the head of "Cotton market opinions," W. J. Wollman & Co. said:

The action of the Federal board in refusing special assistance to the cotton growers is certain to act against the growth of the hold-the-crop movement.

They were taking advantage of it. They said, "They can not get any money; they are helpless"; and they sold the market to death, and down, down the price went. I repeat, between June and December they cost the cotton growers of the South $200,000,000 a month. Those are astounding figures, Mr. President, but they are literally true.

The New York Commercial cotton article of the same date said:

Many traders were inclined to sell the market after overnight consideration of the refusal of the Federal Reserve Board to help the cotton planters, as it is believed that this decision will effectually kill most of the holding movement because of the difficulty of financing the proposition.

The market manipulators of New York knew that if the Federal Reserve Board refused to let the cotton farmer borrow money on his cotton he could not hold it and that they would get it at a low price real soon. So the action of Gov. Harding and his board cost the farmers of the cotton States more than ten hundred million dollars.

Mr. President, in the newspaper report sent out from Washington in defense of Gov. Harding's deflation policy, one item referred to Senator HARRISON of Mississippi. I will read it:

Senator HARRISON of Mississippi, endeavoring to indicate that certain statements by the Federal Reserve Board had depressed the value of cotton, caused the witness—meaning Gov. Harding—to discuss national politics. It seems that Senator HARRISON last fall spoke to the witness of the good effect which a lowering of discount rates would have on the Democratic situation.

Then it quotes Gov. Harding as saying:

We could not follow the suggestion.

And then he said:

In January of this year I encountered Gov. Cox at a reception, and he told me that he had been of the opinion that the board's policy was wrong, but that he was convinced that we would have been very foolish had we made a change.

Mr. President, I knew Gov. Cox did not indorse the drastic and destructive policy of the Federal Reserve Board. I wired him, and he wrote me that when he came back last fall from his tour of the Pacific slope he wired Gov. Harding of the evil effects of that policy on the cattlemen, causing them to throw their cattle upon the market. Again he said that when he met Gov. Harding at this reception, that with a piece of pleasantry he remarked, "Well, I guess you knew what you were doing." Then Gov. Cox went on to say that he knew that some sort of a deflation policy would be inaugurated after the war, but he denies that he indorsed the deflation policy foisted upon the country by the Federal Reserve Board.

In his letter to me, Gov. Cox called attention to the fact that farmers in Ohio who contracted for farms at high prices had to give them up because they could not obtain the money and credits necessary to tide them over.

Mr. President, I wanted the Senate and the country to know that the position of Gov. Cox had been misrepresented. I knew Gov. Cox had never approved a policy that placed the agricultural industry of the country at the mercy of those who were seeking to pillage and plunder it.

Now, Mr. President, since Gov. Harding states that he informed Senator HARRISON last fall in response to a suggestion from that Senator that if he would reduce the rediscount rate it would help the price of cotton and aid the Democratic cause, that he could not and would not do as suggested.

I want to read an editorial from the Washington Times of April 12, 1921. That was just after a new chief had gone into control at the White House, and the one who appointed him had retired to private life. Here is what was said right here at the Capital of the Nation. The headline reads—

FEDERAL RESERVE HEAD TO REMAIN IS REPORT.

That refers to Gov. Harding, and the article reads in part as follows:

Although Gov. Harding is a Wilson appointee he did everything consistent with his office to further the Republican cause at the last election. This attitude has dispelled prejudice arising out of the fact that he was inducted into public life under the Democratic auspices.

I wonder, Mr. President, if Gov. Harding, who could not do the thing last fall that might help the cotton farmer and the Democratic Party, is now holding on to his job because the appointing power is pleased with the contribution he made to Republican success in the last election. There is nothing that Gov. Harding could have done for the party that now indorses his deflation policy and now keeps him in office that would have contributed more to Republican success than what he did do in his position as governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

He could not have done more if he had been trying to defeat the Democratic Party that had nurtured him into being in a public way. A great many people believe that if he had decided to support the Republican ticket he should have resigned, so that the position given him by the Democratic Party could not and would not have been used without Democrats knowing just what he was doing with it. If the Democrats of Tennessee and Oklahoma who stayed away from the polls had known that Gov. Harding was supporting the Republican ticket, they would have understood just why the deflation policy was being pressed so vigorously and so mercilessly just before the election in 1920. I think that any man appointed to an office like that of governor of the Federal Reserve Board should be required to announce his change of political faith and resign and not be permitted to continue in office in disguise and maybe use his powers to retain his position.

WATERS OF THE COLORADO RIVER.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a few days ago the Senate passed House bill 6877, which I have been requested to explain. The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That consent of Congress is hereby given to the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement not later than January 1, 1923, providing for an equitable division and apportionment among said States of the water supply of the Colorado River and of the streams tributary thereto, upon condition that a suitable person, who shall be appointed by the President of the United States, shall participate in said negotiations, as the representative of and for the protection of the interests of the United States, and shall make report to Congress of the proceedings and of any compact or agreement entered into, and the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated to pay the salary and expenses of the representative of the United States appointed hereunder: Provided, That any such compact or agreement shall not be binding or obligatory upon any of the parties thereto unless and until the same shall have been approved by the legislature of each of said States and by the Congress of the United States.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is herewith expressly reserved.

It will be observed that by the bill the consent of Congress is proposed to be given to the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement providing for an equitable division and appropriation among the said States of the waters of the Colorado River. The time has come when the march of civilization and the Nation's necessities demand that the potentialities of these waters shall be utilized. The enactment of legislation of this character was recommended by the conference of governors of the Western States, which recently assembled at Denver, Colo. The League of the Southwest, of which the governor of Arizona is president, also recommended the passage of this legislation.

Clause 3, section 10, Article I, of the Constitution of the United States provides that—

No State shall, without the consent of Congress * * * enter into any agreement or compact with another State * * *.

Therefore the said States are asking the Congress to grant its consent that they may enter into such an agreement.

PHYSICAL FEATURES OF THE COLORADO RIVER BASIN.

The region drained by the Colorado River and its tributaries, known as the Colorado River Basin, is about 900 miles long, from 300 to 500 miles wide, and embraces 251,000 square miles, an area larger than Georgia, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, and Virginia combined.

The Colorado River proper is formed by the junction of the Green and the Grand; the name of the Grand was by act of Congress approved the 25th day of July, 1921, changed to the Colorado. Green River from its source to its junction with the Grand is 700 miles long and sends down an average annual run-off exceeding 5,600,000 acre-feet. The Grand River from its source to its junction with the Green is about 450 miles long and sends down an average annual run-off exceeding 6,700,000 acre-feet.

Green River heads near Fremont Peak in the Wind River Mountains in a group of alpine lakes fed by perpetual snows. The source of Grand is in the Rocky Mountains west of Longs Peak. Like the Green, it is fed by small alpine lakes that receive their waters directly from eternal snow banks. Including the Green, the Colorado River is about 1,700 miles long and empties into the Gulf of California in latitude 31° 53' and longitude 115°.

The Colorado River, including its principal tributaries, the Green and the Grand, flows through or is part of the boundary line of the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, and Utah. In addition, its tributaries drain portions of New Mexico and Wyoming. The Colorado River enters Arizona from Utah near what is called the Crossing of the Fathers and flows through Arizona for a distance of 330 miles to the Arizona-Nevada State line, in Iceberg Canyon, just below the Grand Wash. From this point the river forms the western boundary line of Arizona for a distance of 400 miles to the point where it intersects the boundary line between Arizona and Old Mexico.

The Colorado River Basin, that is to say, the region traversed by this river and drained by its tributaries, contains mountains reaching to a height of 13,500 feet, belted at the base by forests of vivid green, and capped with gleaming snow; it contains playas and inland lakes below the level of the sea; it contains vast, desolate plateaus of rugged, black scoria; immense forests of pine, cedar, and pinon, and in these forests are hundreds of small parks, bowl-like gems of exquisite scenery; it contains the largest area of recent volcanic action to be found on the continent, "recent" being employed in its geological sense. It contains a real desert where the raw and scorching sun comes down as a pitiless flail, where the sand reflects the heat and glare and distresses the eye of the traveler, and where little dew or moisture is deposited, but where a wind, hot as a furnace blast, sometimes blows from the south.

Before the railroad was built through it a journey over this desert was at times dangerous and always fraught with extreme discomfort. Day after day nothing was to be seen but an expanse of hot sand, with now and then a cactus lifting its thorny arms into the brazen gloom. The loneliness and helplessness of the pioneer there seemed to sever him from human things and to remove him an infinite distance from the world with its interests and its occupations, but nature, in one of her capricious moods, placed in this same basin the richest agricultural lands in the Western Hemisphere, a tract of about 45,000 acres and known as the Yuma Mesa, near the town of Yuma, now under course of irrigation by virtue of a bill which I introduced in the Sixty-fourth Congress and which became a law on January 25, 1917.

In this basin, which was a populous land before the Pyramids were built, ancient peoples builded cities not wholly lacking in grandeur. These peoples of antiquity wove and spun cotton and flax into gaudy tapestries before Romulus and Remus were suckled. They melted gold and silver into chieftains' ornaments and queens' girdles before Caesar's shouting legions and laureled ensigns brought tribute back to imperial Rome.

Centuries before the Knickerbocker set foot on Manhattan Island tribes of men now vanished irrigated the fertile sands of the Colorado River Basin from canals and reservoirs finished with hard linings of tamped or burnt clay which in some degree possessed the endurance of our modern concrete. The origin of this mysterious people is enwrapped in the mists of antiquity. Nothing has been found of sufficient distinctiveness to enable us to do more than speculate and form ingenious theories as to whence they came, how long they enjoyed their tolerable civilization, and whither and why they went.

Within this basin is the Petrified Forest, whose trees lived their green millenniums and put on immortality in Triassic time, 7,000,000 years ago. The trees were of several kinds, most of them being related to the Norfolk Island pines. A small amount of iron oxide is distributed through the logs, which gives them their beautiful yellow, brown, and red tints.

Within the region traversed by the Colorado River and drained by its tributaries is the Painted Desert, in which at a distance you perceive the "sea of jasper" and the face of cliffs that gleam like jewels; you seem to descry fortifications with flags flying on their ramparts and walled towers on conical hills amidst an admixture of light and shade.

Within this region is the Grand Canyon, a terrible abyss of wondrous colors, of bold escarpments, pyramids, swelling domes, mosques, minarets, and isolated mesas through which rolls and tumbles this Colorado River.

On the 5th day of January, 1886, in the Forty-ninth Congress, the first bill to make the Grand Canyon a national park was introduced in the Senate by the late ex-President Benjamin Harrison, then a Senator from Indiana. This bill failed to become a law, and the project has been presented to the Congress from time to time since 1886.

In the Sixty-fifth Congress I introduced a bill to make the Grand Canyon a national park. The bill was referred to Secretary of the Interior Lane for a statement of the facts relating to the subject, and in the Secretary's report to the committee he states as follows:

It seems to be universally acknowledged that the Grand Canyon is the most stupendous natural phenomenon in the world. Certainly it is the finest example of the power and eccentricity of water erosion, and as a spectacle of sublimity it has no peer.

It would be futile to attempt to describe the Grand Canyon. However, a review of a few facts with relation to the canyon would be pertinent to a report of this character.

The Colorado River, which flows through the gorge, drains a territory of 300,000 square miles, and it is 2,000 miles from the source of its principal tributary to its entrance into the Gulf of California. It is one of America's greatest rivers. It is proposed by this bill to establish a national park at the point in the river's course where it has worn a channel more than a mile deep. This enormous gulf measures occasionally 20 miles across the top.

The sides of the gorge are wonderfully shelved and terraced, and countless spires rise within the enormous chasm, sometimes almost to the rim's level. The walls and cliffs are carved into a million graceful and fantastic shapes, and the many-colored strata of the rocks through which the river has shaped its course have made the canyon a lure for the foremost painters of American landscapes.

It seems that the Grand Canyon, therefore, is entitled to the same status and to an equal degree of consideration by Congress as are enjoyed by Yellowstone, Yosemite, and the other great national parks which contain natural phenomena of the first order, and I heartily recommend immediate favorable action looking toward the enactment of this bill.

The bill passed both Houses and was approved by President Wilson on the 26th day of February, 1919.

Whilst the bill in its opening sentences declared—

That there is hereby reserved and withdrawn from settlement, occupancy, or disposal under the laws of the United States and dedicated and set apart as a public park for the benefit and enjoyment of the people, under the name of the "Grand Canyon National Park"— no valid existing right initiated prior to the approval of the bill can be disturbed by reason of the following sections:

SEC. 2. That the administration, protection, and promotion of said Grand Canyon National Park shall be exercised, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916, entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes": Provided, That all concessions for hotels, camps, transportation, and other privileges of every kind and nature for the accommodation or entertainment of visitors shall be let at public bidding to the best and most responsible bidder.

SEC. 3. That nothing herein contained shall affect the rights of the Havasupai Tribe of Indians to the use and occupancy of the bottom lands of the Canyon of Cataract Creek as described in the Executive order of March 31, 1882, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to permit individual members of said tribe to use and occupy other tracts of land within said park for agricultural purposes.

SEC. 4. That nothing herein contained shall affect any valid existing claim, location, or entry under the land laws of the United States, whether for homestead, mineral, right of way, or any other purpose whatsoever, or shall affect the rights of any such claimant, locator, or entryman to the full use and enjoyment of his land, and nothing herein contained shall affect, diminish, or impair the right and authority of the county of Coconino, in the State of Arizona, to levy and collect tolls for the passage of live stock over and upon the Bright Angel Toll Road and Trail, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to negotiate with the said county of Coconino for the purchase of said Bright Angel Toll Road and Trail and all rights therein, and report to Congress at as early a date as possible the terms upon which the property can be procured.

SEC. 5. That whenever consistent with the primary purposes of said park the act of February 15, 1901, applicable to the locations of rights of way in certain national parks and the national forests for irrigation and other purposes, and subsequent acts shall be and remain applicable to the lands included within the park. The Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion and upon such conditions as he may deem proper, grant easements or rights of way for railroads upon or across the park.

SEC. 6. That whenever consistent with the primary purposes of said park, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, under general regulations to be prescribed by him, to permit the prospecting, development, and utilization of the mineral resources of said park upon such terms and for specified periods, or otherwise, as he may deem to be for the best interests of the United States.

SEC. 7. That, whenever consistent with the primary purposes of said park, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to permit the utilization of areas therein which may be necessary for the development and maintenance of a Government reclamation project.

SEC. 8. That where privately owned lands within the said park lie within 300 feet of the rim of the Grand Canyon no building, tent, fence, or other structure shall be erected on the park lands lying between said privately owned lands and the rim.

The Grand Canyon National Park represents an area of approximately 950 square miles, a greater part of which is within the walls of the canyon. Sufficient land has been included back of the north and south rims to make possible an adequate road development and to take care of camping and hotel facilities.

FUTURE OF THE BASIN.

What is to be the future of this basin, a country larger in area than the tract of land which Virginia, with princely liberality ceded to the Colonial Government in 1787, out of which five States were erected?

Of course, its forests will be utilized, its mineral wealth will be sought, its dazzling scenic beauties will be unfolded; but its greatest development, however, must come from its water resources, upon which the development of its other resources must largely depend. Without the water afforded by Colorado River and its tributaries, vast tracts of its land would remain unproductive and practically useless; but the Hand that formed this land, that cleft its mountains in twain and filled their caverns with precious metals, that painted its landscapes in colors warranted never to fade, and that replenishes this inexhaustible and perpetual river left it feasible for man not only to construct large irrigation systems and to build towns, cities, and prosperous agricultural communities within this basin, but to generate hydroelectric power for lighting, heating, industrial uses, and the transportation of freight and passengers.

In discussing the broader possibilities and problems of the Colorado River Basin there are hundreds, even thousands, of minor yet important possibilities of expansion that I necessarily must leave unmentioned, although these future minor auxiliary developments will have much local importance and in the aggregate true natural significance. In general such minor or auxiliary projects do not preclude the larger use of the river, but must be undertaken as part of that larger use.

The record of accomplishment of the United States Reclamation Service enriches the annals of the American people. Irrigation projects charm the imagination with their wizardry. Their power of transforming barren deserts into grain and cotton fields, into orchards and vegetable and flower gardens make the lamp of Aladdin and the purse of Fortunatus seem tame and prosaic. The wildest hyperbole would not overestimate the strength, wealth, beauty, comfort, and public order that would be added to this Nation were all the unemployed agencies of the Colorado River set to work.

During the past 19 years, or since Federal irrigation began, 3,000,000 acres of theretofore practically worthless desert land have been made productive by Government irrigation. The value of the crops produced thereon now amounts to $90,000,000 annually. The increase in value of the irrigated acreage amounts to $600,000,000, and since the Government began the delivery of irrigation water the crops produced on the reclaimed lands to-day aggregate $400,000,000 in value. Nor does this sum of $400,000,000 include the value or expansion of production of live stock or stock products; in other words, the figures ($400,000,000) as to the aggregate crop value are limited to vegetable, fruit, and grain values at the farm, for which Government reclamation furnishes the sole supply of water. All the moneys disbursed by the Government to the various irrigation projects will ultimately be repaid.

At the outset let it be remembered that the full importance of national irrigation can not be measured in dollars, for it has an intangible value not to be estimated in tonnage tables nor transportation rates. In building new Commonwealths in the arid lands of the West the Government is utilizing undeveloped resources and creating opportunities for its citizens. One of the primary purposes of the reclamation law was to create homes, and this purpose has been richly fulfilled. Viewed from this standpoint alone, national reclamation has amply justified all for which its advocates hoped.

Since 1902 the Reclamation Service has constructed the irrigation systems to supply abundant water to 2,000,000 acres of land, and the capacious storage reservoirs of the Government are furnishing a supplemental supply of stored water to a million additional acres in other projects, or a grand total of 3,000,000 acres. On these irrigated lands are now profitably employed and satisfactorily housed approximately 500,000 persons.

On the Government project lands are 50,000 families in independent homes. The population in cities, towns, and villages in these Government projects has been increased by an equal number of families. The arguments for increasing and making permanent the Nation's virility, prosperity, and growth by creating more homes of this kind were never more forcible and unanswerable than at this juncture.

The American people can not claim to have measured up fully to their opportunity and responsibility until the deserts of the West and the unused agricultural lands of the Nation have been replaced by prosperous farmsteads.

When measured by the yardstick of the financier—the dollar—the results of the Reclamation Service activities are enormously great.

As a creator of wealth, its service to the Nation and the State has been as great as in its principal task of home making. Out of the uninhabited and almost worthless desert, reclamation has carved an empire of nearly 3,000,000 acres, intensively cultivated and producing crops whose annual average gross returns per acre about double those per acre for the balance of the country.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD at this point a letter and a tabular statement from the United States Reclamation Service showing the amount of money appropriated for reclamation purposes, the total investment of the United States in reclamation, the amount of the disbursements and credits, and the amounts ultimately to be repaid to the Government.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES RECLAMATION SERVICE,
Washington, D. C., August 6, 1921.

HON. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In the absence of Director Davis we duly received your letter of July 20, 1921, to him, requesting a revision of figures sent to you in 1919, showing the net investments in several Government reclamation projects.

When your letter arrived we were, for other purposes, compiling such data to the end of the last fiscal year, and as that is a convenient period to use, it seemed best to withhold reply until these figures were available.

I am now sending them herewith in a tabulation similar to the one returned with your letter.

You may recall that these figures were made up in this way originally by specific request from your office by telephone. They are not in the form that we would select for ordinary purposes of publication because there is danger that they will mislead.

In other words, the inclosed figures are bookkeeping data and involve considerable duplication that swell the totals and make these misleading unless there is given and read with them considerable explanation. For example, we are constantly transferring from one project to another machinery, equipment, and materials in order to work the greatest economy and efficiency in utilizing these.

To keep the books showing the investments in any particular project, it is necessary to include an agreed value for such things transferred from and to the project. Thus, the total investment for each project includes "transfers received" of such things, and the column "Reimbursements and credits" includes "transfers issued." On any particular project these two entries necessarily differ, and hence must be included to bring out the net investment for that project, whereas for all projects these items merely balance one another and swell the totals, aggregating upward of $8,600,000.

The figures given for total investments include cash disbursements from the reclamation fund, appropriations for "increase of compensation," and other special appropriations, such as that of a million dollars toward the cost of Elephant Butte Dam under the act of March 4, 1907; others for judgments of the Court of Claims, the funds for the Yuma auxiliary project, etc.

At the bottom of the table you will notice a number of other items added to bring the figures into agreement with our book totals. The "secondary projects" include a great number of possibilities that have been surveyed or examined from time to time in addition to the projects actually undertaken. For example, in Arizona this includes the San Carlos, San Pedro, Sentinel, and other propositions that will occur to you.

The item of "general expense" includes headquarters offices at Washington and Denver for administration, engineering design, and other purposes, legal services, and many other items that can not readily be allocated to particular projects except in bulk from time to time on the basis of expenditures or similar criteria. This item of general expense is the largest one included under the head of transfers already mentioned.

The item entitled "Indian projects" represents expenditures from the reclamation fund reimbursed by the Indian Bureau.

If you intend to publish these figures and want to avoid the possibility of misleading suggested above, you may want to use merely the figures of "net investment." In most cases we find that figures of cost rather than investment answer the questions in the minds of inquirers, and if you wish figures on a cost basis, or if we can otherwise be of further service in this connection, we shall be glad to do so.

Very truly, yours,

MORRIS BIEN, Acting Director.

Reclamation projects investment to June 30, 1921.

State.	Project.	Total investment of United States.	Reimbursements and credits.	Net investment of United States.
Arizona.....	Salt River.....	$14,738,768.28	$4,800,610.32	$9,938,157.96
Arizona-California.....	Yuma.....	11,353,345.18	2,330,515.52	9,022,829.66
California.....	Orland.....	1,330,107.50	411,650.07	918,457.43
Colorado.....	Grand Valley.....	4,051,877.50	234,165.35	3,817,712.15
Do.....	Uncompahgre.....	7,873,432.32	1,214,326.00	6,659,106.32
Idaho.....	Boise.....	15,080,090.12	3,168,134.50	11,911,955.62
Do.....	King Hill.....	1,359,886.98	54,356.61	1,305,530.37
Do.....	Minidoka.....	8,866,272.26	4,038,517.85	4,827,754.41
Kansas.....	Garden City.....	402,424.80	69,063.14	333,361.66
Montana.....	Huntley.....	2,511,337.38	841,256.80	1,670,080.58
Do.....	Milk River.....	3,881,950.40	210,097.77	3,671,852.63
Do.....	St. Mary Storage.....	2,904,882.94	158,565.01	2,746,317.93
Do.....	Sun River.....	4,354,658.49	456,792.73	3,897,865.76
Do.....	Lower Yellowstone.....	3,780,806.97	318,825.18	3,461,981.79
Nebraska-Wyoming.....	North Platte.....	14,240,256.48	2,960,317.42	11,279,939.06
Nevada.....	Newlands.....	7,691,341.87	1,349,537.06	6,341,804.81
New Mexico.....	Carlsbad.....	1,893,115.31	677,633.86	1,215,481.45
Do.....	Hondo.....	407,745.12	35,842.46	371,902.66
New Mexico-Texas.....	Rio Grande.....	12,963,441.23	1,746,396.42	11,217,044.81
North Dakota.....	North Dakota pumping.....	1,584,033.21	519,601.59	1,064,431.62
Oklahoma.....	Lawton.....	(1)	(1)	(1)
Oregon.....	Umatilla.....	3,249,935.01	793,916.49	2,456,018.52
Do.....	Deschutes.....	2,041.83	7,407.29	5,365.46
Oregon-California.....	Klamath.....	3,986,187.17	990,872.96	2,995,314.21
South Dakota.....	Belle Fourche.....	4,413,894.12	1,012,666.36	3,401,227.76
Utah.....	Strawberry Valley.....	4,154,753.17	864,211.43	3,290,541.74
Washington.....	Okanogan.....	1,659,232.53	294,233.95	1,364,998.58
Do.....	Yakima.....	13,845,153.71	5,224,092.68	8,621,061.03
Wyoming.....	Shoshone.....	7,808,514.85	1,159,099.35	6,649,415.50
Do.....	Riverton.....	172,885.52	18,271.41	154,614.11
Various.....	Secondary.....	1,760,256.72	562,330.17	1,197,926.55
	Civil Service, retirement and disbursement fund.....	22,785.00	16,925.18	5,859.82
Subtotal.....		162,345,393.97	36,540,143.93	125,805,250.04
Wyoming.....	Jackson Lake enlargement.....	(2)	(2)	(2)
General expense.....		6,181,268.14	6,015,817.56	167,450.58
Indian projects.....		3,145,052.66	3,145,052.66
	Yuma auxiliary.....	221,774.18	424,080.63	* 202,306.45
	Drainage and cut-over.....	100,987.52	464.51	100,523.01
Total.....		171,996,476.47	46,125,559.29	125,870,917.18

<sup>1</sup> Included in secondary projects.

<sup>2</sup> Included in Minidoka project.

* The reimbursements exceed the investment.

POTENTIALITIES OF THE COLORADO RIVER BASIN.

Mr. ASHURST. According to records kept at Laguna Dam, the flow of the Colorado River during 22 years was as follows:

	Maximum.	Minimum.	Mean.
Discharge in second-feet.....	240,000	1,800	23,240
Annual run-off in acre-feet.....	21,700,000	9,110,000	16,400,000

One second-foot is a flow of 1 cubic foot of water per second.

One acre-foot is a volume of water sufficient to cover 1 acre 1 foot deep: 16,400,000 acre-feet of water would submerge the District of Columbia over 400 feet.

The irrigable land within the Colorado River Basin is as follows:

	Acreage irrigated in 1920.	Additional acreage possible.	Total possible acreage irrigable.
United States:
Wyoming.....	367,000	543,000	910,000
Colorado.....	740,000	1,018,000	1,758,000
Utah.....	359,000	456,000	815,000
New Mexico.....	34,000	483,000	517,000
Arizona.....	501,000	776,000	1,277,000
Nevada.....	5,000	2,000	7,000
California.....	458,000	481,000	939,000
Total United States.....	2,464,000	3,759,000	6,223,000
Mexico.....	190,000	610,000	800,000
Grand total.....	2,654,000	4,369,000	7,023,000

Among the projects which should be built within the Colorado River Basin will be the Boulder Canyon Reservoir, in Arizona, and the acreage irrigable under the Boulder Canyon is approximately as follows:

	Acreage irrigated in 1920 (gravity).	Future additional possible acreage.		Total ultimate acreage.
		Gravity.	Pump.
United States:
Nevada.....		1,000	1,000	2,000
Arizona.....	50,000	256,000	73,000	379,000
California.....	458,000	358,000	123,000	939,000
Total United States.....	508,000	615,000	197,000	1,320,000
Mexico.....	190,000	547,000	63,000	800,000
Grand total.....	698,000	1,162,000	260,000	2,120,000

POWER.

A vast amount of power is dissipated in the fall of the Colorado River from its mountain sources to the sea, and large amounts of power may be harnessed for use. Imaginative France calls water power "white coal," and this brilliant characterization suggests a coal free from dust, cheaper, easier handled, a supply inexhaustible, which after used flows on to the projects below and may be used again and yet again.

Thus on the main stream of the Colorado River below the junction of the Green and Grand known power sites on the Colorado can yield 6,000,000 horsepower with present irrigation and 4,800,000 horsepower with estimated total ultimate irrigation development of the 2,120,000 acres as above set out.

Practically all of this 6,000,000 horsepower would, of course, be developed and generated in the State of Arizona, but the justice, fair dealing, and large vision of Arizona's people is a firm and perpetual guaranty that the distribution and allocation of this power would always be made with justice and equity and that Arizona would constantly keep in view the needs and requirements of all interests, whether mining, railroad, agriculture, domestic, manufacturing, or municipal.

Boulder Canyon alone, assuming maximum reservoir and irrigation below, with 35 feet dedicated to flood control, can supply 600,000 year-round horsepower.

A horsepower is a rate of work equal to lifting 33,000 pounds 1 foot per minute. Originally based on observations of dray horses, it greatly exceeds the average performance of an ordinary horse.

The combined peak demand on all power plants in the District of Columbia in 1920 was 95,000 horsepower.

The total development at Niagara in 1916 was 575,000 horsepower.

The installed substation capacity on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway electrification is 180 horsepower per mile.

At 200 horsepower per mile, 4,800,000 horsepower would serve 24,000 miles of electrified railroad, which roughly approximates the earth's circumference, or the total railroad mileage in Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming.

As I said before, the complete and proper utilization of all waters of the Colorado River would embrace hundreds of projects of various kinds, each one of which, however, would be a unit of or part of the complete plans of the development of the river's resources, yet each project might appear to be independent. For example:

THE PARKER PROJECT ON THE COLORADO RIVER INDIAN RESERVATION.

The Parker Valley, or what is called by the Indian Service, the Colorado River Indian Reservation project, lies on the east side of the Colorado River in Yuma County, Ariz. A small portion of the valley is on the west side of the river in California. The principal town is Parker, at the head of the valley, with a population of 500, located on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad.

Parker Valley has a total length of about 40 miles, extending from Parker Valley on the north to near Ehrenburg on the south. The maximum width of the valley is about 7 miles on the east side of the river. The river is said to overflow the lower bottom lands and that 95,000 acres are subject at times to overflow during periods of maximum flood.

The bench lands, really a substantial part of the project, consist of the Parker Mesa at the head of the valley, surrounding the town of Parker. This is an attractive stretch of land, being smooth and level, with a gravelly and sandy soil. The bench is from 75 to 150 feet about the bottom lands.

The Colorado River Reservation embraces about 243,000 acres, of which about 222,000 lie within the State of Arizona; the remainder being in California. While extensive topographic surveys have not yet been made, preliminary surveys disclose that approximately 150,000 acres within this reservation consist of fine "bottom," susceptible of irrigation, by gravity, from the Colorado River upon construction of the necessary diversion dam and distributing system. About 5,000 acres, allotted to the Indians, are now being supplied with water through a pumping plant constructed under authority found in the act of April 4, 1910 (36 Stat., 272), and acts making supplementary appropriations. Pumping water for irrigation purposes, however, is an onerous burden, which is daily becoming more expensive, as the cost of labor, material, and supplies increases. Logically, therefore, the irrigation of large areas calls for a gravity system, where feasible.

The right to divert water from the Colorado River was authorized by act of Congress entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, and for other purposes" (act Apr. 21, 1904, ch. 1402, 33 Stat., 189). The portion authorizing the diversion of water reads as follows:

"That in carrying out any irrigation enterprise which may be undertaken under the provisions of the reclamation act of June 17, 1902, and which may make possible and provide for, in connection with the reclamation of other lands, the reclamation of all or any portion of the irrigable lands on the Yuma and Colorado River Indian Reservations in California and Arizona, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to divert the waters of the Colorado River and to reclaim, utilize, and dispose of any lands in said reservations which may be irrigable by such works in like manner as though the same were a part of the public domain."

In addition to the Parker project on the Big Colorado River, a number of projects could be built in the basin of the Little Colorado River.

The average annual run-off of water from the 30,000 square miles drained by the Little Colorado River is 200,000 acre-feet, and the maximum flow during any one year probably does not greatly exceed 300,000 acre-feet.

Storms of short duration are frequent and the run-off is irregular. The flood waters must be stored if any large part of the run-off of the Little Colorado is to be used for irrigation.

That the Little Colorado Basin contains more than 200,000 acres of good agricultural land which could be irrigated by canals from the Little Colorado at a reasonable cost has been shown by the United States Reclamation Service, and the existence of reservoir sites, whose aggregate capacity is greatly in excess of the annual run-off, is shown by the following table:

Reservoir sites in the Little Colorado Basin.

Name.	Capacity.
	Acre-feet.
Woodruff.....	108,000
Forks.....	148,000
Leroux.....	54,000
Tucker Flat.....	118,000
Greer.....	260,000
Zuni.....	107,000
Little Colorado.....	140,000
Lyman.....	40,000
Baum.....	437,000
Navajo.....	100,000
	1,512,000

An intensive development of Big Colorado River Basin will, of course, mean the building of the San Carlos Reservoir, the irrigation of the white and Indian lands in the Casa Grande Valley, and the control of the Gila River in Graham County, Ariz., so that the lands of the settlers in the Gila Valley will not be destroyed by floods of the river; and the development of the Gila River will undoubtedly embrace projects at Duncan and Franklin. Neither my time nor the patience of the Senate permit me to describe dozens of other projects that may be promoted within this Big Colorado River Basin, but among them will be an all-American canal for the Imperial and Coachella Valleys.

NAVIGABILITY.

It is by no means beyond the domain of probability that one of the features of an intensive development of the potentialities of the Colorado River will lead to the resumption, during certain periods of the year, of navigation on the Colorado River.

Prior to the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad into Yuma, in 1876, practically all of the supplies reaching Arizona for the settlers and the troops came from California by steamer to Yuma, where the ocean steamers lightered and their cargo was transferred to river steamers, which distributed the merchandise to the various settlements along the river between Yuma and Callville, thence to be hauled into the interior of the country by ox teams. For many years two steamers, the Esmeralda and the Nina Tilden, made regular trips up and down the river between Callville and Yuma, at which latter place they connected with steamships plying between Yuma and San Francisco. The owners of these river boats seeking trade carried standing advertisements in the Salt Lake City and San Francisco newspapers up to 1867.

FLOODS ON COLORADO.

Hernando de Alarcón sailed in May, 1540, to explore the region north of New Spain, and reached the head of the Sea of Cortes, now known as the Gulf of California. He says: "And it pleased God that after this sort we came to the very bottom of the bay, where we found a very mighty river which ran with so great fury of a stream that we could hardly sail against it." Here began the acquaintance of Europeans with the river now known as the Nile of the West. Alarcón proceeded up the Colorado in small boats to a point about 100 miles above the mouth of the Gila River.

Owing to the gradual upbuilding of its deltaic bed and banks and its aggressive "cutting edge" the flood menace on the Colorado River is an increasing and ever-recurring problem of great importance which calls for solution at an early date.

The Gulf of California once extended northwestward to a point a few miles above the town of Indio, or about 144 miles from the present head of the gulf. The Colorado River, emptying into the gulf a short distance south of the international boundary, carried its heavy load of silt into the gulf for centuries, gradually building up a great delta cone entirely across the gulf and cutting off its northern end, which remains as a great depression from which most of the water has evaporated, leaving in its bottom the Salton Sea of 300 square miles with its surface about 250 feet below sea level.

The river flowing over its delta cone steadily deposits silt in its channel and by overflow on its immediate banks, so that it gradually builds up its channel and its banks and forms a ridge growing higher and higher until the stream becomes so unstable that it breaks its banks in the high-water period and follows some other course. In this manner the stream has in past centuries swung back and forth over its delta until this exists as a broad flat ridge between the gulf and the Salton Sea, about 30 feet above sea level, and on the summit of this has formed a small lake called Volcano Lake, into which the river flows at present, the water then finding its way to the southward into the gulf.

The direct distance from where the Colorado River reaches Mexico to the head of the Gulf of California is about 75 miles, and the distance from the first-mentioned point to the margin of the Salton Sea is but little greater. As the latter is about 250 feet lower than the gulf, the tendency of the river to flow in that direction needs no demonstration. This coupled with the inevitable necessity for such an alluvial stream to leave its channel at intervals constitutes the menace to the lands lying about Salton Sea, called the Imperial Valley. As there is no escape of water from Salton Sea except by evaporation, the river flowing into this sea would, unless diverted, gradually fill it to sea level and submerge the cultivated land and the towns of Imperial Valley, nearly all of which are below sea level. Any flood waters that overflow the bank to the north must therefore without fail be restrained and not allowed to flow northward into Salton Sea. This is now prevented by a large levee north of Volcano Lake, extending eastward and connecting with high lands near Andrade. This levee is in Mexico and its maintenance is complicated thereby.

The floods of the Colorado divide themselves naturally into two general classes—those from the Colorado River, which drain the large areas in Arizona, California, Colorado, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming I have hereinbefore described, and those from the Gila River, which lies in Arizona.

The Gila River, owing to its temperamental and flashy nature, sometimes furnishes a volume of water and flood waves at its mouth near Yuma almost as large as the maximum discharge of the Colorado at the same point. These floods from the Gila, however, are of relatively short duration, but their sudden flow and erratic nature make them particularly menacing to Yuma and have already done enormous damage.

The Colorado River rises gradually, carries a large volume of water for several weeks, and declines gradually. Should it break into the Imperial Valley at time of flood, the long duration of high water would cause great erosion and render its control difficult. The great floods of the Gila occur in winter, while those of the Colorado occur in the summer. So far as I know, they have never coincided, but if this should occur, and no man dares to say it never will, enormous losses would be occasioned.

During the past 25 years at flood seasons the Colorado and Gila have overflowed their banks and have done immense damage to the landowners and water users on the eastern side of the river below Yuma, and although the land in that region is very fertile and the average yield per acre is high, the expense of controlling this mighty river and keeping it in a fixed channel is a burden of crushing weight which can not and should not be borne by the farmers there, as has been done in the past. The control of the Colorado River should be made a national affair, and the saving of these farms from destruction should be one of the first features of such control.

In conclusion, I know the generosity of Senators will pardon me if I now presume to solicit their attention while I make a reference personal to myself. My forebears were members of that bold advance guard of pioneers who 70 years or more ago explored the Colorado River Basin. From the time of my youth to the present day I have wielded ceaselessly what strength was mine, which was modest and small enough, to bring about an intensive development of the potentialities of the Colorado River. The time now seems not far distant when my hope shall be realized, and there shall be brought forth within and for the United States the inland empire of the Colorado River Basin, an empire wealthier than that which Pizarro added to the dominions of Charles V, and more splendid and more durable than that of the Caesars.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, August 16, 1921, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 15, 1921.

CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Manuel Araullo, of the Philippine Islands, vice Victorino Mapa, resigned, to take effect October 31, 1921.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Charles A. Johns, of Oregon, vice Adam C. Carson, resigned.
Norberto Romualdez, of the Philippine Islands, vice Manuel Araullo, appointed Chief Justice, to date from November 1, 1921.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

G. J. Lomen, of Alaska, to be United States district judge, second division, District of Alaska, vice William A. Holzheimer, resigned.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Arthur G. Shoup, of Alaska, to be United States attorney, first division, District of Alaska, vice James A. Smiser, resigned.

Sherman Duggan, of Alaska, to be United States attorney, third division, District of Alaska, vice William A. Munly, resigned.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Morris W. Griffith, of Alaska, to be United States marshal, second division, District of Alaska, vice E. R. Jordan, resigned.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

MARSHAL OF THE CANAL ZONE.

Horace D. Ridenour, of Vincennes, Ind., to be marshal of the district of the Canal Zone, provided for by the Panama Canal act, approved August 24, 1912, vice Miguel Antonio Otero.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

REGISTERS OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Edgar T. Conquest, of Sterling, Colo., to be register of the United States land office at Sterling, Colo., vice Albert F. Browns, whose term will expire August 26, 1921.

James D. Gallup, of Wyoming, to be register of the land office at Buffalo, Wyo., vice Hayden M. White, resigned.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR BUREAU OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC COMMERCE.

Oliver Paul Hopkins, of Pennsylvania, to be assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, at $4,000 per annum, in the Department of Commerce; new position.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

PASSED ASSISTANT SURGEONS TO BE SURGEONS.

Mather H. Neil to rank as such from March 7, 1921.

Harry F. White to rank as such from March 12, 1921.

ASSISTANT SURGEONS TO BE PASSED ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

Paul D. Mossman to rank as such from March 24, 1921.

John W. Tappan to rank as such from March 26, 1921.

Thomas Parran, jr., to rank as such from March 26, 1921.
Vance B. Murray to rank as such from July 26, 1920.
Roy P. Bandidge to rank as such from March 26, 1921.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

MARINE CORPS.

First lieutenants to be captains from July 1, 1921.

Louis Cukela.	William W. Rogers.
Jacob Lienhard.	Curtis T. Beecher.
Frederick Israel.	George F. Stockes.
Victor F. Bleasdale.	Tom E. Wicks.
Merwin H. Silverthorn.	Murl Corbett.
Walter Sweet.	James P. Schwerin.
Fred J. Zinner.	William M. Radcliffe.
Prentice S. Geer.	John H. Parker.
John Groff.

Second lieutenant James L. Denham to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of July, 1921.

REAPPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenants with rank from August 8, 1921.

Roswell Emory Round, late second lieutenant, Cavalry, Regular Army.

O. D. Wells, late first lieutenant, Infantry, Regular Army.

APPOINTMENT BY TRANSFER IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Capt. Arthur Burnola Custis, Cavalry, with rank from October 19, 1920.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 15, 1921.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT, PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

James A. Ostrand.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Robert W. McCuen to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Vermont.

ASSAYERS IN CHARGE.

Charles L. Longley to be assayer in charge at Boise, Idaho.
Thomas G. Hatheway to be assayer in charge at Seattle, Wash.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Henry Benjamin Clark to be colonel, Coast Artillery Corps.

George Sherwin Simonds to be colonel, Infantry.

Thomas Jefferson Dickson to be chaplain, rank of lieutenant colonel.

Harry Lumsden Hodges to be major, Field Artillery.

Joseph Irving McMullen to be major, Judge Advocate General's Department.

Walter Lucas Clark to be major, Ordnance Department.

William Nichols Porter to be major, Chemical Warfare Service.

Aquila Mitchell to be major, Veterinary Corps.

Allan Johnson to be captain, Infantry.

Lewis Bradley Bibb to be captain, Medical Corps.

Charles William Henderson to be captain, Medical Corps.

Oscar Thweatt Kirksey to be captain, Medical Corps.

Glenn Dale Lacey to be captain, Dental Corps.

Henry William Meisch to be captain, Medical Corps.

George Palmer McNeill, jr., to be captain, Medical Corps.

Benjamin William Lewis to be captain, Medical Corps.

Merrill Clary Sosman to be captain, Medical Corps.

Willis Burleigh Parsons to be captain, Dental Corps.

Joseph Hayden Jones to be captain, Dental Corps.

George Mason Babbitt to be captain, Dental Corps.

Frank Celestine Meade to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Giles Frederic Ewing to be first lieutenant, Infantry.

Claude Weaver Feagin to be first lieutenant, Cavalry.

Everett Samuel Prouty to be first lieutenant, Infantry.

Wilber Russell Ellis to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Morris Haslett Marcus to be first lieutenant, Cavalry.

Frank Zea Pirkey to be first lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.

Karl William Hisgen to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Joseph Patterson Wardlaw to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery.

James Harry Marsh to be first lieutenant, Infantry.

Francis Warren Cray to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery.

John Baylis Cooley to be first lieutenant, Cavalry.

John Elmer Freeman to be first lieutenant, Infantry.

Selby Francis Little to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Milo Glen Cary to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Harold Joseph Conway to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Gustin MacAllister Nelson to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
 Frank Joseph Spettel to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
 Carroll Frederick Sullivan to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
 Rupert Harris Johnson to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
 Francis Joseph Magee to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
 Burwell Baylor Wilkes, jr., to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
 James Raymond Goodall to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 John Kenneth Sells to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 Douglas Cameron to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 Hobert Hayden James to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Eleuterio Susi Yanga to be second lieutenant, Philippine Scouts.
 Donald Raymond West to be second lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps.
 Edward Lowry Traylor to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Robert Thomas Randel to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 John Barry Peirce to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Arthur Jennings Grimes to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Walter Duval Webb, jr., to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Ernest Starkey Moon to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Charles Emmett Cheever to be second lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps.
 Paul Gustav Wehle to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Vesper Anderson Schlenker to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Harry Meyer to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 Peter Anthony Feringa to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 John Russell Perkins, jr., to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Warren Catlin Hamill to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Frederick Hewitt Fox to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 Edward Barber to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Edward Hall Walter to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 David Albert Morris to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 Percy Earle Le Sturgeon to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Juan Segundo Moran to be second lieutenant, Philippine Scouts.
 Paul Cone Parshley to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 Lewis Wellington Call, jr., to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Richardson Selee to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 James Benjamin Ford to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Luis Mobo Alba to be second lieutenant, Philippine Scouts.
 Don Waters Mayhue to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 James Wilbur Robinson to be second lieutenant, Signal Corps.
 Carter Jenkins to be second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers.
 Charles Harold Crim to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 John Harry to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Harold Oakes Bixby to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 John Bruce Medaris to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Ambrose Lawrence Kerrigan to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Charles Ernest McKelvey to be second lieutenant, Chemical Warfare Service.
 Irvin Albert Robinson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 George Randall Scithers to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 John Henry Featherston to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Paul Massillion McConihe to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Ralph Roth Wentz to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 Daniel Webster Kent to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Michael Henry Zwicker to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Maurice Gordon Jewett to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery.
 Frederic deLannoy Comfort to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 Charles Andrews Jones, jr., to be second lieutenant, Chemical Warfare Service.
 Cecil Austin Bryan to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 William Conrad Jones to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

George Marion Davis to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Hubert Stauffer Miller to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Edward Harold Coe to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Allan Eugene Smith to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Robert Dunning Chellis to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Daniel Burnett Knight to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Paul MacKeen Martin to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 Creswell Garretson Blakeney to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Alfred Griffin Ashcroft to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 Louis Jeter Tatom to be second lieutenant, Signal Corps.
 Marshall Keith Berry to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 George Wythe Bott, jr., to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 Louis Watkins Prentiss to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 William Edmund Waters to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Joseph Kennard Bush to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Orlando Clarendon Mood to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 John Oliver Kelly to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Bert Nathan Bryan to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Harvie Rogers Matthews to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Louis Beman Rapp to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 Hayward Kendall Kelley to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Caryl Rawson Hazeltine to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 James Thorburn Cumberpatch to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Edwards Matthews Quigley to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Kent Roberts Mullikin to be second lieutenant, Chemical Warfare Service.
 James Breakenridge Clearwater to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Noble Crawford Shilt to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Henry Laurance Ingham to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Joseph Warren Huntress to be second lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps.
 Luther Daniel Wallis to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 William Daniel Bradshaw to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 John Tipton Lonsdale to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Wesley Tate Guest to be second lieutenant, Signal Corps.
 Edward Charles Engelhardt to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Edgar Daye Upstill to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Duncan Philip Frissell to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 James Baker Dickson to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Henry Hammond Duval to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Charles Edward Neagle to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Leon Valentine Chaplin to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 John William Dwyer to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Alvin Frederick Pitzner to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 Alfred Vepsala to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Robert John Zaumeyer to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 Samuel Howard Davis to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Joseph Myles Williams to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
 Verne Leon Harris to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Edmund C. Langmead to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Carroll Heiney Deitrick to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 Leon Marcellus Grant to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Burton Larrabee Pearce to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
 Alan Dean Whittaker, jr., to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
 Lee W. Haney to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Leon Crescencio Reyna to be second lieutenant, Ordnance Department.
 David William Goodrich to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
 Franklin Mitchell to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 George William White to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
 Arnold Hoyer Rich to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Philip Fisher Robb to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
William Hypes Obenour to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Henry Burt Bosworth to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Wallace Ellsworth Niles to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Harvey Thomas Kennedy to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Lewis Edward Weston Lepper to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Ralph Henry Price to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Edward Harris Barr to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Melecio Manuel Santos to be second lieutenant, Philippine Scouts.

James Augustus Whelen, jr., to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
James Roscoe Hamilton to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Joe Robert Sherr to be second lieutenant, Signal Corps.
Simon Meyer to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Harold Goodspeede Laub to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

William Uren Gallaher to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Charles Dawson McAllister to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Henry Chester Jones to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Louis Simelson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Frank Weddall Simpson to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Ernest Vivian McCain to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Christopher William Duffy to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Charles Irish Preston to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Walter Vinal Reed to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery.
Edward Albert Banning to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Richard Franklin Rey to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
John Robsin Skeen to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Arthur Benton Campbell to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Keff Dobbs Barnett to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Albert John Lent to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Louis Leopold Lesser to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Walter Francis Jennings to be second lieutenant, Cavalry.
Edward Cuyler Applegate to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Henry Louis Love to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Fay Warren Lee to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Stanley Lane Engle to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Asa Vern Wilder to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Clinton Velony Stevens to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Lewis Eugene Snell to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Harold Arthur Doherty to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Cranford Coleman Bryan Warden to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Harry Robert Swanson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
William Dawes Williams to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

William Thomas Semmes Roberts to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

McDonald Donegan Weinert to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Frederick Lake Thomas to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

John Walker Childs to be second lieutenant, Signal Corps.
Harold Stevenson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Vincent Joseph Tanzalo to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Carl Emil Hansen to be second lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Charles Donald Clay to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Arthur Lee Forbes, jr., to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Russell Shannon Lieurance to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Wilmar Weston Dewitt to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Carl Philip Dowell to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Hermas Victor Main to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Gerald Handley Fitzpatrick to be second lieutenant, Air Service.

James Milliken Bevans to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Floyd Raymond Brisack to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Clarence Everett Jackson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Edward Joseph Walsh to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Chester Arthur Carlsten to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
James Thomas Dismuke to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Karl Vernon Palmer to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Russell Harold Swartzwelder to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Hayden Purcell Roberts to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Aaron Grayson Dawson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Alan Sydney Rush to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Thomas Brown Manuel to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Dayton Talmage Brown to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Clifford Cleophas Duell to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Harry Lynch to be second lieutenant, Signal Corps.
Thomas Whitfield Ross to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Lauren Blakely Hitchcock to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Thomas Archer Bottomley to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Paul Groover to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Henry William Erickson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Thomas Williams Williamson to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

William Orville Collins to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Frank Thomas Honsinger to be second lieutenant, Air Service.
Harry Craven Dayton to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

William Larwill Carr to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Frank Vern Silver to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Russell George Duff to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Raphael Fred Rabold to be second lieutenant, Air Service.

Ross Clyde Brackney to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Alfred Clement, jr., to be second lieutenant, Air Service.

Glenn Ingersoll Molyneaux to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
John Randolph Reilly to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Roy Prewett Huff to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Harold Robertson Davenport to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

Herbert John Affleck to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Nicolas Boadilla Dalao to be second lieutenant, Philippine Scouts.

Ray Kerr Easley to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Lawrence August Dietz to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

David Martin Bowes to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Narciso Lopez Manzano to be second lieutenant, Philippine Scouts.

Rex Leno Brown to be second lieutenant, Infantry.
Paul Hanes Kemmer to be second lieutenant, Air Service.

Elmo Shingle to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate August 15, 1921.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Capt. Arthur Burnola Custis, Cavalry, with rank from October 19, 1921.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, August 15, 1921.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Just now may there be an altar in every breast and at each altar may there be a bowed soul breathing the spirit of reverence, confession, and thanksgiving. Here may our thoughts and our purposes receive their sustaining power and thus our public ministrations shall be raised to their highest efficiency and our private lives made acceptable to Thee. And in the great awakening may we be at home with God. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, August 13, 1921, was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS—RECESS.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess to-day from 1 o'clock until 5.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the House stand in recess from 1 o'clock until 5. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the gentleman advise what the program for to-morrow will be?

Mr. MONDELL. We expect to take up for consideration to-morrow the bill that was left unfinished on Saturday, and if the gentleman will be good enough to help give a rule on the beer bill, we may be able to take the beer bill up and send it to conference.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Well, Mr. Speaker, of course the matter of giving a rule ought not to depend on my goodness.

Mr. MONDELL. Good enough to assist. Was not that the statement I made? Knowing the gentleman to be much in favor of law and order, and withal a very good prohibitionist, I felt confident that he would aid.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. That is, at times. [Laughter.] Then do I understand that the plan is to proceed with the bill from the Committee on Banking and Currency to-morrow and to have a rule on the Volstead bill and that that will be up to-morrow?

Mr. MONDELL. I think that will be up to-morrow.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Now, I assume that the revenue bill will be—

Mr. MONDELL. We hope the committee will report the revenue bill to-morrow, so that we can take it up on Wednesday.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The gentleman has no request to make at this time about Wednesday?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes. I had intended to ask, and I will make the request now, as the gentleman suggests, to dispense with Calendar Wednesday business.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, can the gentleman give us an idea as to what the rule on the revenue bill will provide as to the final hour?

Mr. MONDELL. Of course, I can not say until the conference has met, but our hope is that we will be able to dispose of the bill this week—finish it on Saturday.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The gentleman does not know the hour?

Mr. MONDELL. I do not know the hour, but some time Saturday afternoon.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Wyoming a question. His object, I presume, in asking a recess from 1 o'clock until 5, is in order that the Republicans may hold a conference on the revenue bill?

Mr. MONDELL. That is the purpose.

Mr. GARNER. Let me ask the gentleman, in case the Democrats should decide to have a caucus or conference to-morrow afternoon, would his side be good enough to try to adjourn, say, by 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, that we might have two hours of the afternoon for a conference?

Mr. MONDELL. I would be very glad, indeed, and I am very sure the Members on this side would, to accommodate the minority, but we are very anxious to get the so-called beer bill to conference to-morrow, and also to conclude consideration, if it is practical to do so, of the bill from the Committee on Banking and Currency, now the unfinished business, and I am afraid that would take us to a later hour.

Mr. GARNER. We could devote a couple of hours this afternoon to it and you would be able to get to it then. I call attention to the fact that the gentleman is asking for four hours to-day, and we wanted one hour to-morrow. It would seem to me reasonable, if you are going to take the entire day, that you should give us one hour to-morrow.

Mr. MONDELL. It is entirely reasonable, if we can dispose of the business that ought to be disposed of to-morrow.

Mr. GARNER. You could dispose of that business to-day.

Mr. MONDELL. I do not see how we could well do so. Of course, we could meet at 4 instead of 5, but we felt it was better to stand in recess until 5; we might conclude our conference earlier, but there is no certainty about that.

Mr. GARNER. Let me ask the gentleman why he can not meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock, and thereby give us a chance to have a conference?

Mr. MONDELL. I will be glad to do that in an effort to accommodate the gentleman.

Mr. GARNER. You are asking unanimous consent to take a recess from 1 o'clock until 5, and I am perfectly willing that you should do it in order to enable the Republicans to have a conference. I am asking the gentleman to arrange affairs for to-morrow so that we may have an hour in case we desire it. We may not want it.

Mr. MONDELL. May I suggest that, if possible, we will secure unanimous consent to meet at 11 o'clock, and then will endeavor to accommodate the minority if they desire the House to-morrow afternoon.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman ask unanimous consent to that effect, so that we may know whether we can meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I will prefer that request.

The SPEAKER. There is a request already pending.

Mr. MONDELL. I will first submit the other request, suggested by the gentleman from Texas, that we meet to-morrow at 11.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the House meet at 11 a. m. to-morrow. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. GARNER. Now, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman a further question?

Mr. MONDELL. Certainly.

Mr. GARNER. Does the gentleman expect to introduce the bill this afternoon, the revenue bill?

Mr. MONDELL. That is the thought.

Mr. GARNER. And to consider it in the Committee on Ways and Means to-morrow?

Mr. MONDELL. That is the expectation.

Mr. GARNER. Does the gentleman know whether or not the Committee on Ways and Means will be permitted to offer amendments to the bill in the Committee on Ways and Means, or will it be considered as the tariff bill was considered, without being read in the committee and without opportunity being allowed to offer amendments in the committee?

Mr. MONDELL. Not being a member of the committee, I can not answer that.

Mr. GARNER. I would suggest to the gentleman that if it were passed in the Committee on Ways and Means as it was before, we could have it attended to this afternoon and he would thus save that time.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I think the gentleman will find the bill so perfect in all respects that it will not be deemed desirable to offer amendments. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman is overoptimistic.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, the effort to pass necessary legislation to stop the dispensation of beer during the summer months has been pending all the summer, and the beer season is now about over; and now when it is about over, the steering committee offers us the hope that it may get up the bill and stop the dispensation of beer. I think if we are going to stop it during the remaining few days of the beer season they had better get busy. I am not going to assent to any unanimous consent for a recess until we can get that antibeer bill up and pass it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas objects.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I think it is unreasonable, when we have been endeavoring to meet the wishes of the leaders on the minority side, to have a Member object.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Texas only wants to have the antibeer bill passed.

Mr. MONDELL. I am not complaining. I am confident Members on the other side are trying in good faith to carry out a program.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Texas is anxious to expedite the passage of the beer bill, because the dispensation of beer is now going on all over the United States.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY.

Mr. MONDELL. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to dispense with Calendar Wednesday business on Wednesday.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that on Wednesday Calendar Wednesday business be dispensed with. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. MONDELL. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] may have until midnight to-night to introduce the revenue bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan may have until midnight to-night to introduce the revenue bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. It will be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

CALENDAR FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

The SPEAKER. To-day business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent is in order. The Clerk will call the first bill.

EXCHANGE OF GOVERNMENT LANDS, HAWAII.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4598) to provide for the exchange of Government lands for privately owned lands in the Territory of Hawaii.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

CONTRACTS FOR FUTURE DELIVERY OF GRAIN.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to get the attention of the gentleman from Wyoming. I desire to get some information from the gentleman from Wyoming. Reserving the right to object, I wanted to ask the gentleman from Wyoming a question.

Mr. MONDELL. The right to object to what?

Mr. KINCHELOE. To the consideration of the pending bill.

Mr. MONDELL. As I understand, there is nothing pending.

Mr. KINCHELOE. There is something pending. I understand the conference committee have agreed to a report on the grain futures bill, which has passed the House and Senate. Is it contemplated to have the conference report considered before the taking of the contemplated recess?

Mr. MONDELL. It is.

EXCHANGE OF GOVERNMENT LANDS, HAWAII.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, when in his opinion the public good demands it, to exchange any land or any interest in land owned by the United States now or hereafter set apart for military purposes in the Territory of Hawaii, for privately owned land or land owned by the Territory of Hawaii, or any interest therein of equal value located in that Territory and selected by the Secretary of War, and thereafter to set apart for military purposes the lands or interest therein so acquired: Provided, That the Attorney General of the United States shall first pass upon and approve the title to the privately owned lands or interest therein to be acquired by the United States before any exchange of lands shall be made under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2. That the value of the lands or interests to be so exchanged shall be determined by three appraisers, one of whom shall be appointed by the Secretary of War, one by the owner of the private property, and the third shall be chosen by the two appraisers so appointed. The expense necessary to effect the appraisements herein authorized, when approved by the military commander of the Hawaiian Department, may be paid out of the current appropriation for contingencies of the Army.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Illinois permit me to interrupt the proceedings for a moment in order to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Wyoming?

Mr. MANN. Yes. The gentleman can walk all over me at any time. [Laughter.]

RECESS FROM 1 P. M. TO 5 P. M.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I think if the gentleman from Wyoming will renew his request that the House stand in recess from 1 o'clock until 5, with the understanding that at 5 there will be no business conducted except the introduction of the bill, we may be able to get along on that basis.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, Mr. Speaker, at the suggestion of the gentleman from Tennessee, I renew my request that the House stand in recess from 1 o'clock until 5, at which time—

Mr. STEENERSON. What is to become of the Unanimous-Consent Calendar? [Laughter.] Many of us are interested in having it resumed. Will it be resumed at 5 o'clock?

Mr. MONDELL. My request is that the House stand in recess from 1 o'clock until 5, at which time the gentleman from Michigan will report the tax bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Of course, Mr. Speaker, there could not be an agreement, other than a gentleman's agreement, that no business will be transacted at that time. But I understand that there is a gentleman's agreement that the revenue bill will be introduced at that time, if ready, and that no other business will be transacted after 5 o'clock except the motion to adjourn.

Mr. MONDELL. That is it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. There can be no objection to that.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, that being the agreement between the leaders—that there will be no other business transacted but the introduction of the revenue bill—I do not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXCHANGE OF GOVERNMENT LANDS, HAWAII.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 1, line 3, after the word "authorized," by inserting the words "within two years of the passage of this act."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, may we have the amendment again reported?

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the amendment will again be reported.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, this amendment was agreed to when the House passed the bill before.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to section 2.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MANN: Page 2, line 6, strike out, after the word "appraisers," the words "one of whom shall" and insert in lieu thereof the word "to" and strike out, after the word "war," in line 7, the words "one by the owner of the private property, and the third shall be chosen by the two appraisers so appointed."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, this amendment was also agreed to by the House when a similar bill passed in the last Congress. The bill provided for the appointment of three appraisers, one by the Secretary of War, one by the private owners of the property, and the third by these two appraisers. The amendment proposes to have the three appraisers named by the Secretary of War, because practically the Government will be bound by the appraisement, while the private owners will not be bound by the appraisement, and it is not thought desirable to let them participate in the making of the appraisement.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. KAHN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

GRAIN FUTURES.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a conference report on the grain futures bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa submits a conference report for printing in the RECORD.

The conference report and statement of the House conferees are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5676) taxing contracts for the sale of grain for future delivery, and options for such contracts, and providing for the regulation of boards of trade, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert:

"That this act shall be known by the short title of 'The future trading act.'"

"Sec. 2. That for the purposes of this act 'contract of sale' shall be held to include sales, agreements of sale, and agreements to sell. That the word 'person' shall be construed to import the plural or singular and shall include individuals, associations, partnerships, corporations, and trusts. That the word 'grain' shall be construed to mean wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flax, and sorghum. The term 'future delivery,' as used herein, shall not include any sale of cash grain for deferred shipment or delivery. The words 'board of trade' shall be held to include and mean any exchange or association, whether incorporated or unincorporated, of persons who shall be engaged in the business of buying or selling grain or receiving the same for sale on consignment. The act, omission, or failure of any official, agent, or other person acting for any individual, association, partnership, corporation, or trust within the scope of his employment or office shall be deemed the act, omission, or failure of such individual, association, partnership, corporation, or trust, as well as of such official, agent, or other person."

"SEC. 3. That in addition to the taxes now imposed by law there is hereby levied a tax amounting to 20 cents per bushel on each bushel involved therein, whether the actual commodity is intended to be delivered or only nominally referred to, upon each and every privilege or option for a contract either of purchase or sale of grain, intending hereby to tax only the transactions known to the trade as 'privileges,' 'bids,' 'offers,' 'puts and calls,' 'indemnities,' or 'ups and downs.'

"SEC. 4. That in addition to the taxes now imposed by law there is hereby levied a tax of 20 cents a bushel on every bushel involved therein, upon each contract of sale of grain for future delivery except—

"(a) Where the seller is at the time of the making of such contract the owner of the actual physical property covered thereby, or is the grower thereof, or in case either party to the contract is the owner or renter of land on which the same is to be grown, or is an association of such owners or growers of grain, or of such owners or renters of land; or

"(b) Where such contracts are made by or through a member of a board of trade which has been designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as a 'contract market,' as herein-after provided, and if such contract is evidenced by a memorandum in writing which shows the date, the parties to such contract and their addresses, the property covered and its price, and the terms of delivery, and provided that each board member shall keep such memorandum for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, which record shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture or the United States Department of Justice.

"SEC. 5. That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to designate boards of trade as 'contract markets' when, and only when, such boards of trade comply with the following conditions and requirements:

"(a) When located at a terminal market upon which cash grain is sold in sufficient volumes and under such conditions as fairly to reflect the general value of the grain and the difference in value between the various grades of grain, and having recognized official weighing and inspection service.

"(b) When the governing board thereof provides for the making and filing, by the board or any member thereof, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, of reports in accordance with the rules and regulations, and in such manner and form and at such times as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board, or the members thereof, either in cash transactions consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, or transactions for future delivery, and when such governing board provides, in accordance with such rules and regulations, for the keeping of a record by the board or the members of the board of trade, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, showing the details and terms of all cash and future transactions entered into by them, consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, such record to be in permanent form, showing the parties to all such transactions, any assignments or transfers thereof, with the parties thereto, and the manner in which said transactions are fulfilled, discharged, or terminated. Such record shall be required to be kept for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, and shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture or United States Department of Justice.

"(c) When the governing board thereof prevents the dissemination, by the board or any member thereof, of false, misleading, or inaccurate report, concerning crop or market information or conditions that affect or tend to affect the price of commodities.

"(d) When the governing board thereof provides for the prevention of manipulation of prices, or the cornering of any grain, by the dealers or operators upon such board.

"(e) When the governing board thereof admits to membership thereof and all privileges thereon on such boards of trade any duly authorized representative of any lawfully formed and conducted cooperative associations of producers having adequate financial responsibility: Provided, That no rule of a contract market against rebating commissions shall apply to the distribution of earnings among the bona fide members of any such cooperative association.

"(f) When the governing board shall provide for making effective the final orders or decisions entered pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b), section 6, of this act.

"SEC. 6. That any board of trade desiring to be designated a 'contract market' shall make application to the Secretary of Agriculture for such designation and accompany the same with a showing that it complies with the above conditions, and with a sufficient assurance that it will continue to comply with the above requirements.

"(a) A commission composed of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General is authorized to suspend for a period not to exceed six months or to revoke the designation of any board of trade as a 'contract market' upon a showing that such board of trade has failed or is failing to comply with the above requirements or is not enforcing its rules of government made a condition of its designation as set forth in section 5. Such suspension or revocation shall only be after a notice to the officers of the board of trade affected and upon a hearing: Provided, That such suspension or revocation shall be final and conclusive unless within 15 days after such suspension or revocation by the said commission such board of trade appeals to the circuit court of appeals for the circuit in which it has its principal place of business by filing with the clerk of such court a written petition praying that the order of the said commission be set aside or modified in the manner stated in the petition, together with a bond in such sum as the court may determine, conditioned that such board of trade will pay the costs of the proceedings if the court so directs. The clerk of the court in which such a petition is filed shall immediately cause a copy thereof to be delivered to the Secretary of Agriculture, chairman of said commission, or any member thereof, and the said commission shall forthwith prepare, certify, and file in the court a full and accurate transcript of the record in such proceedings, including the notice to the board of trade, a copy of the charges, the evidence, and the report and order. The testimony and evidence taken or submitted before the said commission duly certified and filed as aforesaid as a part of the record, shall be considered by the court as the evidence in the case. The proceedings in such cases in the circuit court of appeals shall be made a preferred cause and shall be expedited in every way. Such a court may affirm or set aside the order of the said commission or may direct it to modify its order. No such order of the said commission shall be modified or set aside by the circuit court of appeals unless it is shown by the board of trade that the order is unsupported by the weight of the evidence or was issued without due notice and a reasonable opportunity having been afforded to such board of trade for a hearing, or infringes the Constitution of the United States, or is beyond the jurisdiction of said commission: Provided further, That if the Secretary of Agriculture shall refuse to designate as a contract market any board of trade that has made application therefor, then such board of trade may appeal from such refusal to the commission described therein, consisting of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General of the United States, with the right to appeal as provided for in other cases in this section, the decision on such appeal to be final and binding on all parties interested.

"(b) That if the Secretary of Agriculture has reason to believe that any person is violating any of the provisions of this act, or is attempting to manipulate the market price of any grain in violation of the provisions of section 5 hereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made pursuant to its requirements, he may serve upon such person a complaint stating his charge in that respect, to which complaint shall be attached or contained therein a notice of hearing, specifying a day and place not less than three days after the service thereof, requiring such person to show cause why an order should not be made directing that all contract markets until further notice of the said commission refuse all trading privileges thereon to such person. Said hearing may be held in Washington, D. C., or elsewhere, before the said commission, or before a referee designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, who shall cause all evidence to be reduced to writing and forthwith transmit the same to the Secretary of Agriculture as chairman of the said commission. That for the purpose of securing effective enforcement of the provisions of this act the provisions, including penalties, of section 12 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, relating to the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of documentary evidence and the immunity of witnesses, are made applicable to the power, jurisdiction, and authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, the said commission, or said referee in proceedings under this act, and to persons subject to its provisions. Upon evidence received the said commission may require all contract markets to refuse such person all trading privileges thereon for such period as may be specified in said order. Notice of such order shall be sent forthwith by registered mail or delivered to the offending person and to the governing boards of said contract markets. After the issuance of the order by the commission, as aforesaid, the person against whom it is issued may obtain a review of such order or such other equitable relief as to the court may seem just by filing in the United States circuit court of appeals of the circuit in which the petitioner is doing business a written petition praying that the order of the commission be set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the commission by delivering such copy to its chairman, or to any member thereof, and thereupon the commission shall forthwith certify and file in the court a transcript of the record theretofore made, including evidence received. Upon the filing of the transcript the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm, to set aside, or modify the order of the commission, and the findings of the commission as to the facts, if supported by the weight of evidence, shall in like manner be conclusive. In proceedings under paragraphs (a) and (b) the judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court upon certiorari, as provided in section 240 of the Judicial Code.

"SEC. 7. That the tax provided for herein shall be paid by the seller, and such tax shall be collected either by the affixing of stamps or by such other method as may have been prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury by regulations, and such regulations shall be published at such times and in such manner as shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"SEC. 8. That any board of trade that has been designated a contract market, in the manner herein provided, may have such designation vacated and set aside by giving notice in writing to the Secretary of Agriculture requesting that its designation as a contract market be vacated, which notice shall be served at least 90 days prior to the date named therein, as the date when the vacation of designation shall take effect. Upon receipt of such notice the Secretary of Agriculture shall forthwith order the vacation of the designation of such board of trade as a contract market, effective upon the day named in the notice, and shall forthwith send a copy of the notice and his order to all other contract markets. From and after the date upon which the vacation became effective, the said board of trade can thereafter be designated again a contract market by making application to the Secretary of Agriculture in the manner herein provided for an original application.

"SEC. 9. That the Secretary of Agriculture may make such investigations as he may deem necessary to ascertain the facts regarding the operations of boards of trade and may publish from time to time, in his discretion, the result of such investigation, and such statistical information gathered therefrom, as he may deem of interest to the public, except data and information which would separately disclose the business transactions of any person, and trade secrets or names of customers: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the Secretary of Agriculture from making or issuing such reports as he may deem necessary, relative to the conduct of any board of trade, or of the transactions of any person found guilty of violating the provisions of this act under the proceedings prescribed in section 6 of this act: Provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture in any report may include the facts as to any actual transaction. The Secretary of Agriculture, upon his own initiative or in cooperation with existing governmental agencies, shall investigate marketing conditions of grain and grain products, and by-products, including supply and demand for these commodities, cost to the consumer, and handling and transportation charges. He shall likewise compile and furnish to producers, consumers, and distributors, by means of regular or special reports, or by such methods as he may deem most effective, information respecting the grain markets, together with information on supply, demand, prices, and other conditions, in this and other countries that affect the markets.

"SEC. 10. That any person who shall fail to evidence any such contract by a memorandum in writing, or to keep the record, or make a report, or who shall fail to pay the tax, as provided in sections 4 and 5 hereof, or who shall fail to pay the tax required in section 3 hereof, shall pay in addition to the tax a penalty equal to 50 per cent of the tax levied against him under this act and shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

"SEC. 11. That if any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

"SEC. 12. That no fine, imprisonment, or other penalty shall be enforced for any violation of this act occurring within four months after its passage.

"SEC. 13. The Secretary of Agriculture may cooperate with any department or agency of the Government, any State, Territory, District, or possession, or department, agency or political subdivision thereof, or any person; and shall have the power to appoint, remove, and fix the compensation of such officers and employees, not in conflict with existing law, and make such expenditures for rent outside the District of Columbia, printing, telegrams, telephones, law books, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment, travel, and other supplies and expenses as shall be necessary to the administration of this act in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for such purposes."

And the Senate agree to the same.

G. N. HAUGEN,
J. C. McLAUGHLIN,
J. N. TINCHER,
J. B. ASWELL,

Managers on the part of the House.

ARTHUR CAPPER,
CHAS. L. McNARY,
E. D. SMITH,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5676) entitled "An act taxing contracts for the sale of grain for future delivery, and options for such contracts, and providing for the regulation for boards of trade, and for other purposes," submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conference committee and submitted in the accompanying conference report as to the amendment of the Senate, to which the House recedes with an amendment which is a substitute therefor:

Section 1 provides a short title. This was not changed by the Senate.

Section 2 defines certain terms. The Senate inserted the following: "The term 'future delivery' as used herein shall not include any sale of cash grain for deferred shipment." To this amendment the House recedes with an amendment inserting after the word "shipment" the words "or delivery."

Section 3 imposes a tax on "privileges," "bids," "offers," "puts and calls," "indemnities," and "ups and downs." This was not changed by the Senate.

Section 4 imposes a tax on contracts of sale of grain for future delivery, with certain exceptions set forth in subdivisions (a) and (b). The Senate amended the first paragraph of this section by striking out the words "made at, on, or in an exchange, board of trade, or similar institution or place of business." The House recedes.

The Senate amended subdivision (b) of this section by striking out the words "for a period of three years from the date thereof and for such longer period as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct a permanent record of such contract for future delivery" and substituted therefor the following: "such memorandum for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, which record shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture and United States Department of Justice." The House recedes with an amendment substituting the word "or" for the word "and" following the words "United States Department of Agriculture."

Section 5 provides that the designation for boards of trade as "contract markets" upon certain conditions set out in subdivisions (a) to (f), inclusive.

The Senate amended subdivision (a) of section 5 by inserting at the end thereof the following words: "and having adequate storage facilities and recognized official weighing and inspection service." The House recedes with an amendment striking out the words "adequate storage facilities and."

The subdivision (b) of section 5 relates to the making and filing of records and reports. The Senate amended this subdivision by striking out all of the House provision and substituting therefor a new provision as follows:

"When the governing board thereof provides for the making and filing, by the board or any member thereof, as the governing board may elect, of reports in accordance with the rules and regulations and in such manner and form as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, and whenever in his opinion the public interest requires it, showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board, or the members thereof, either in cash transactions consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, or transactions for future delivery, and when such governing board provides for the keeping of a record by the members of the board of trade showing the details and terms of all cash and future transactions entered into by them, consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, such record to be in permanent form, showing the parties to all such transactions, any assignments or transfers thereof, with the parties thereto, and the manner in which said transactions are fulfilled, discharged, or terminated. Such record shall be required to be kept for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, and shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture and United States Department of Justice."

The House recedes with amendments, making the subdivision read as follows:

"When the governing board thereof provides for the making and filing, by the board or any member thereof, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, of reports in accordance with the rules and regulations and in such manner and form and at such times as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board or the members thereof, either in cash transactions consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, or transactions for future delivery, and when such governing board provides, in accordance with such rules and regulations, for the keeping of a record by the board or the members of the board of trade, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, showing the details and terms of all cash and future transactions entered into by them, consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, such record to be in permanent form, showing the parties to all such transactions, any assignments or transfers thereof, with the parties thereto, and the manner in which said transactions are fulfilled, discharged, or terminated. Such record shall be required to be kept for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, and shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture or United States Department of Justice."

Subdivision (c) of section 5 of the bill relates to the dissemination of false, misleading, or inaccurate information. The Senate amended this subdivision by substituting the word "false" for the word "fake." The House recedes.

Subdivision (d) of section 5 relates to the prevention of the manipulation of prices. The Senate amended this subdivision by inserting the words "undue or unfair" before the word "manipulation," and by inserting the words "or the cornering of any grain" after the word "prices." The Senate also struck out the following: "including a reasonable limitation upon the total quantity of grain of the same kind covered by contracts unfulfilled or unsettled at any one time by or on behalf of the same person commonly called 'open trades' in speculative transactions." The House recedes with an amendment striking out the words "undue or unfair" contained in the Senate amendment, so that subdivision (d) will read as follows: "When the governing board thereof provides for the prevention of manipulation of prices or the cornering of any grain by the dealers or operators upon such board."

Subdivision (e) of section 5 relates to the admission on boards of trade of representatives of cooperative associations of producers. The Senate amended the subdivision by correcting a typographical error by substituting "representative" for the words "executive officer," by striking out the House proviso and substituting therefor a new proviso, as follows: "That no rule of a contract market against rebating commissions shall apply to the distribution of earnings among the bona fide members of any such cooperative association." The House recedes.

The Senate further amended section 5 by inserting a new subdivision as follows:

"(f) When the governing board shall provide for making effective the final orders or decisions entered pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b), section 6, of this act."

The House recedes.

Section 6 relates to the procedure involved in the designation and the suspension or revocation of the designation of any board of trade as a contract market. The Senate amendments to this section relate primarily to the establishment of a commission composed of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General to act in lieu of the Secretary of Agriculture in such proceedings. These amendments are as follows: Strike out the words "The Secretary of Agriculture" at the beginning of the second sentence of section 6 and substitute therefor the following: "(a) A commission composed of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General." In the second sentence of section 6 insert the words "using reasonable diligence in" before the words "enforcing its rules." In the third sentence strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and substitute the words "said commission" in two places in said sentence. The same change is subsequently made in four places in the remainder of the section. In the fourth sentence of section 6 insert, after the words "Secretary of Agriculture," the words "chairman of said commission, or any member thereof." At the end of section 6 of the House bill insert a proviso, as follows:

"Provided further, That if the Secretary of Agriculture shall refuse to designate as a contract market any board of trade that has made application therefor, then such board of trade may appeal from such refusal to the commission described therein, consisting of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General of the United States, with the right to appeal as provided for in other cases in this section, the decision on such appeal to be final and binding on all parties interested."

Following said proviso insert a subdivision as follows:

"(b) That if the Secretary of Agriculture has reason to believe that any person is violating any of the provisions of this act, or is attempting to manipulate the market price of any grain in violation of the provisions of section 5 hereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made pursuant to its requirements, he may serve upon such person a complaint stating his charge in that respect, to which complaint shall be attached or contained therein a notice of hearing, specifying a day and place not less than three days after the service thereof, requiring such person to show cause why an order should not be made directing that all contract markets until further notice of the said commission refuse all trading privileges thereon to such person. Said hearing may be held in Washington, D. C., or elsewhere, before the said commission, or before a referee designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, who shall cause all evidence to be reduced to writing and forthwith transmit the same to the Secretary of Agriculture as chairman of the said commission. Any member of the said commission or said referee shall have authority to administer oaths to witnesses. Upon evidence received the said commission may require all contract markets to refuse such person all trading privileges thereon for such period as may be specified in said order. Notice of such order shall be sent forthwith to the offending person and to the governing boards of said contract markets. After the issuance of the order by the commission as aforesaid the person against whom it is issued may obtain a review of such order or such other equitable relief as to the court may seem just by filing in the United States circuit court of appeals of the circuit in which the petitioner is doing business a written petition praying that the order of the commission be set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the commission by delivering such copy to its chairman, or to any member thereof, and thereupon the commission shall forthwith certify and file in the court a transcript of the record theretofore made, including evidence received. Upon the filing of the transcript the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm, to set aside, or to modify the order of the commission, and the findings of the commission as to the facts, if supported by the weight of evidence, shall in like manner be conclusive. In proceedings under paragraphs (a) and (b) the judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court upon certiorari, as provided in section 240 of the Judicial Code."

The Senate recedes as to its amendment inserting the words "using reasonable diligence in." The House recedes on all other Senate amendments to section 6 with amendments as follows: At the end of the last sentence of section 6 of the House bill substitute the words "said commission" for the words "Secretary of Agriculture." In subdivision (b) of the Senate amendment strike out the sentence "any member of the said commission or said referee shall have authority to administer oaths to witnesses" and substitute therefor the following sentence: "That for the purpose of securing effective enforcement of the provisions of this act the provisions, including penalties, of section 12 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, relating to the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of documentary evidence, and the immunity of witnesses, are made applicable to the power, jurisdiction, and authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, the said commission or said referee in proceedings under this act, and to persons subject to its provisions." In the fifth sentence of the subdivision (b) of the Senate amendment insert after the words "sent forthwith" the words "by registered mail or delivered."

Section 7 of the House bill relates to the procedure to be followed in collecting taxes under the act. The Senate amendment struck out this section. The Senate recedes.

The Senate inserted a new section 7 providing a method by which a board of trade can voluntarily relinquish its designation as a "contract market." The House recedes with an amendment changing the number of the section so that it will be section 8.

The Senate amended section 8 of the House bill by substituting the words "boards of trade" for "future exchanges," by striking out the words "and such parts of reports made to him under this act" and by adding at the end of the House provision the following: "except data and information which would separately disclose the business transactions of any person and trade secrets or names of customers: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the Secretary of Agriculture from making or issuing such reports as he may deem necessary relative to the conduct of any board of trade or of the transactions of any person found guilty of violating the provisions of this act under the proceedings prescribed in section 6 of this act: Provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture in any report may include the facts as to any actual transaction on any board of trade without divulging the names of the persons therewith connected. The Secretary of Agriculture, upon his own initiative or in cooperation with existing governmental agencies, shall investigate marketing conditions of grain and grain products and by-products, including supply and demand for these commodities, cost to the consumer, and handling and transportation charges. He shall likewise compile and furnish to producers, consumers, and distributors, by means of regular or special reports, or by such methods as he may deem most effective, information respecting the grain market, together with information on supply, demand, prices, and other conditions in this and other countries that affect the markets." The House recedes with amendments changing the number of the section, so that it will be section 9, and striking out the following words at the end of the second proviso of the Senate amendment: "on any board of trade without divulging the names of the persons therewith connected."

Section 9 of the House bill provides penalties for violations of the act. This section remains unchanged except that it becomes section 10 in consequence of the changes in the numbering of the preceding sections.

Section 10 of the House bill relates to the interpretation of the constitutionality of the act. This section remains unchanged except that it becomes section 11 in consequence of the changes in the numbering of the preceding sections.

Section 11 of the House bill relates to the enforcement of the act. The Senate amendment substitutes the words "four months" for the words "sixty days." The House recedes, and the number of the section is changed to 12 in consequence of the changes in the numbering of the preceding sections.

Section 12 of the House bill authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with other agencies and provides the necessary authority for making appropriations. This section remains unchanged except that it becomes section 13 in consequence of the changes in the numbering of the preceding sections.

G. N. HAUGEN,
J. C. McLAUGHLIN,
J. N. TINCHER,
J. B. ASWELL,

Managers on the part of the House.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER AT BOONVILLE, MO.

Mr. ROACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 2301) granting the consent of Congress to Old Trail's Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Missouri River. A similar House bill is on the calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to call up for consideration a Senate bridge bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to inquire of the gentleman from Missouri whether this bill has passed the Senate and been messaged over to the House?

Mr. ROACH. It has passed the Senate and been referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and favorably reported by that committee to the House.

Mr. STAFFORD. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. ROACH. This is a Senate bill which is a substitute for a similar House bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to Old Trail's Bridge Co. (a Missouri corporation) and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at the city of Boonville, Mo., in the county of Cooper, in the State of Missouri, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. ROACH, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. WINGO. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks that I made on Saturday.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER IN HAWAII.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 6208) to authorize and provide for the manufacture, maintenance, distribution, and supply of electric light and power within the district of Hamakua, on the island of Hawaii, Territory of Hawaii.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. CURRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have that bill passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 6674) to authorize and provide for the manufacture, maintenance, distribution, and supply of electric current for light and power within Kapaa and Waipouli, in the district of Kawaihau, on the island and county of Kauai, Territory of Hawaii.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CURRY. I ask unanimous consent that Nos. 56, 59, 60, 61, and 62 on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that Nos. 56, 59, 60, 61, and 62 be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

REQUEST TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by inserting in the RECORD a short editorial from the Washington Times on the railroad question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks by inserting an editorial from the Washington Times on the railroad question. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the bill that was under consideration Saturday, the McFadden bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the McFadden bill. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I was attempting to get recognition with reference to the previous request.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not observe the gentleman. Of course if that is so the gentleman will be recognized.

Mr. WINGO. Do I understand the gentleman wanted to object to my request?

Mr. WALSH. No; it was the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. JOHNSON]. Do I understand the gentleman from Mississippi asked consent to print some editorial from a local paper in the RECORD?

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Yes; an editorial from the Washington Times on the railroad question.

Mr. WALSH. I do not think we ought to reprint editorials from the local papers here.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, there was no objection at the time, as the RECORD will so show.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Massachusetts says that he was on his feet endeavoring to attract the attention of the Chair.

Mr. WALSH. I think we ought not to do that. We seldom reprint editorials of local papers.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. I have made very few such requests and I have never made an unreasonable request.

Mr. WALSH. I know the gentleman from Mississippi is very considerate of the House, but for several years we have uniformly kept out editorials unless referred to in speeches at the time of consideration.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. NORRIS] extending his remarks in the RECORD on the war finance bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next bill on the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

FLOOD CONTROL PUYALLUP RIVER, WASH.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 1578) to provide a preliminary survey of the Puyallup River, Wash., with a view to the control of its flood.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, for the present, until we have discussed the policy of these propositions, I object.

Mr. CURRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CURRY. And I also make the same request for the next bill on the calendar, H. R. 1577, to provide a preliminary survey of Cowlitz River, Wash., with a view to the control of its floods.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

TRANSPORTATION OF STOLEN MOTOR VEHICLES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 1060) to amend an act entitled "An act to punish the transportation of stolen motor vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce," approved October 29, 1919.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, I understood the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT], when the Unanimous Consent Calendar was called the last time, to say that he had certain objections to the bill. I will ask the gentleman from Tennessee whether he wishes to withdraw his objections made at that time.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. No; I do not. I shall object.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I will reserve my objection for the present.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, this bill to which the gentleman from Wisconsin desired to attract the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee, who was absent temporarily from the Chamber and who made some objections at the last time the bill was called, is simply an amendment to existing law. We passed a bill here nearly two years ago known as the motor vehicle theft act which makes it a felony to steal an automobile or truck and transport it from one State to another. My attention, and the attention of other Members of the House, has been called to the fact that the word "embezzlement" was left out of the act. This bill is merely to amend the act by putting in the word "embezzlement." The act did not provide for the case where a man got possession of the automobile lawfully, by renting it perhaps, and then drove it into another State and sold it. In some States it does not cover such a case. This was called to our attention particularly by the State of California. This is to fortify and make the law stronger.

The enactment of this law has had the effect to cut down automobile thefts in this country nearly 50 per cent. It has been in force not quite two years. Automobile thefts in the country have been cut down 50 per cent. It is impossible for State laws to cope with the difficulty, and thefts have been carried on to an enormous extent. There are more than 10,000,000 automobiles in this country, and it is a serious problem. These thieves operate extensively, steal machines in one State, transport them to another State, sell them to confederates in that State who resell them, and in that way the crime has been perpetrated, and it is almost impossible to secure convictions under the State law, because there is no way in which you can get the evidence and bring the witnesses from other States. I think this is a very important addition to the law and the law has been of great value to most of the States. I was quite surprised when I read in the RECORD the criticism from such distinguished Members of the House as the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAR-

RETT] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. This is a law that was sought by the automobile people—manufacturers, dealers, and users of more than 10,000,000 automobiles in this country. There was no opposition to it in the House when it passed almost by unanimous consent. It passed the Senate in the same way, with very little, if any, opposition to it. It has brought great results. The records of the courts of the United States show convictions one after another, and, as I say, it has cut down the automobile theft insurance which was so high and is still high because of so many thefts. It is a splendid law and I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Has there been any decision of a responsible court that an article found in the possession of somebody in Illinois is not a crime because it was stolen in some other State?

Mr. DYER. I will say to the gentleman that I do not know of any case having been taken to the court of appeals, where a decision has been handed down, but there have been convictions in various district courts. I have not been following the cases in the higher courts to which the gentleman from Illinois refers.

Mr. MANN. There may have been convictions for transporting an article from one State to another, where it had been stolen. Possibly that could be upheld. What I asked was whether, taking the case of an automobile found in Illinois in the possession of some one, can that some one be convicted of a crime against the National Government because the automobile was stolen in Indiana, because if he can, I do not see any limit to the authority of the National Government over crime, and I do not see what use there is further for State governments trying to control crime.

Mr. DYER. This does not deprive the States of prosecuting. It is only in those cases where it is impossible to get the evidence to the State that it was found necessary to have this law in force.

Mr. MANN. Oh, I appreciate the desirability of legislation of this kind, but what I am asking is as to our constitutional authority. Of course that does not bother the Judiciary Committee any.

Mr. DYER. I appreciate, of course, that the gentleman from Illinois is not a member of the Judiciary Committee, and hence we have not much wisdom in that committee.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYER. Yes.

Mr. REAVIS. I do not recall the exact language of the original bill, but did it provide that possession of a stolen automobile was conclusive proof of guilt?

Mr. DYER. The act provides, where an automobile is stolen and transported into another State, through a confederate in that State—that is, he receives the automobile from the thief, knowing it to be stolen—that he shall be guilty of a crime.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. REAVIS. The books are full of cases holding that possession of stolen property immediately after the theft, when unexplained, is prima facie evidence of guilt. Does this law go beyond that?

Mr. DYER. It does not, and we filed a very exhaustive brief. Of course it was written by members of the Committee on the Judiciary and probably is not as strong as it would have been if it had been written by other gentlemen, but it covers the situation up to date. I hope the gentleman from Tennessee will withdraw his objection.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FREE. Mr. Speaker, I thought objection had been made before the speech was made.

The SPEAKER. No; it was reserved.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, still further reserving the right to object—

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. If the gentleman from Missouri will agree to accept an amendment to repeal the original act, I shall not object.

Mr. DYER. I would gladly do that. I shall be glad to have the House given an opportunity to vote on the question of repealing the act.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. That is not what I said.

Mr. DYER. What the gentleman wants is an opportunity for the Members to vote on the question of repealing the act, is it not? I am willing that the House shall have that opportunity.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object.

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that we may now consider out of order Calendar No. 88 (H. R. 216) to incorporate the disabled American veterans of the World War. Unless the bill is considered at this time it seems that it can not be reached until after the recess.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that Calendar No. 88 be taken up out of its order. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, there is a bill on the calendar to incorporate the Grand Army, as well as several other measures which Members would like to have taken up. Would the gentleman have any objection to the Grand Army bill being considered after the disposition of this?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I would not have any objection if this may be considered first.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object.

REPAIR AND CONSTRUCTION OF CUSTOMS BUILDINGS, PORTO RICO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 6557) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to repair and rebuild customs buildings in Porto Rico, and to pay for same out of duties collected in Porto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to repair and rebuild, as may be necessary, the buildings in Porto Rico acquired by the United States under article 8 of the treaty of April 11, 1899, between the United States and Spain (30th Stats., p. 1758), and reserved for customs purposes by the proclamation of the President of June 30, 1903, and to pay for the cost of such repairs and rebuilding out of the duties collected in Porto Rico as an expense of collection.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 10, page 1, after the word "rebuilding" insert "not to exceed $200,000."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of inquiring of some member of the committee why full authority is vested in the Secretary of the Treasury to repair, alter, and build customs buildings in any part of the island and not limit him to the places referred to in the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury to the Speaker? In the letter of the Secretary to the Speaker attention is called to the need of repairs and alterations and improvements in three designated places, at an estimated cost of $170,000. The bill which the committee now reports grants full authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to erect buildings at any place, at not to exceed $200,000.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Not to erect them, is it?

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, the bill is for the express purpose of authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to erect new structures, because under present authorization of law the Comptroller of the Treasury has authority to make minor repairs; but because of the earthquake at certain places it was necessary to have entirely new structures erected. I am directing my inquiry as to why the committee gave the Secretary unlimited authority to erect buildings anywhere, limiting him only as to the amount, and did not designate the places referred to in his letter.

Mr. MANN. There are more than three places.

Mr. STAFFORD. I thought there were three.

Mr. MANN. There are four.

Mr. STAFFORD. I stand corrected.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The purpose of the bill was to permit the repair and not the erection of new buildings.

Mr. STAFFORD. The purpose of the bill is to authorize the erection of new buildings, to overcome the objection of the Comptroller of the Treasury that under existing law there is no authority to make more than merely ordinary repairs. To make substantial alterations requires substantive enactment of law.

Mr. MANN. Well, at two of these places customhouses were destroyed by the earthquake, and so they desire to rebuild. At two other places repairs are necessary by reason of the earthquake. The amount is limited to $200,000 by the committee amendment. The preliminary estimate of expense was $180,000, and I should say that the actual expense when completed will amount fully to $200,000; it will amount to more than that unless they do better than they do in the United States in building public buildings. Of course, the gentleman understands the reason for the bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Surely.

Mr. MANN. And this is paid out of the revenues of the district instead of out of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. STAFFORD. In that connection the thought came to my mind whether, as it is going to be a building used exclusively for governmental purposes, we are right in our position of having the money appropriated out of the revenues of Porto Rico rather than pay for that ourselves.

Mr. MANN. Well, it is used exclusively for revenue purposes for the benefit of the district, the district of Porto Rico; therefore they should pay for it. Why should we pay out of the General Treasury to build a building down there to be used exclusively in order to collect revenues which are all turned over to Porto Rico?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The gentleman from Wisconsin understands, of course, that all revenues collected by the Federal Government of Porto Rico, through the customhouses or otherwise, go into the treasury of the Government of Porto Rico. There is no reason, as long as the present system prevails, why this Government should pay out of its Treasury for the customhouses or any other buildings there that are used for tax-collection purposes in the island of Porto Rico. This bill is properly guarded; I was a member of the committee.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONTESTED-ELECTION CASES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 7761) to amend the Revised Statutes of the United States relative to proceedings in contested-election cases.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

INCORPORATING THE DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS OF THE WORLD WAR.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 216) to incorporate the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, on page 2 of the bill after it names the incorporators, line 14, it adds "and such persons as may be chosen," and in section 2 it says "that said persons named in section 1 and such other persons as may be selected from among the membership," and so forth, to be the incorporators. Who are these persons chosen by and who are they selected by?

Mr. DYER. By the national encampment organization, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois. This organization is now meeting in national encampment, held one recently last month in the city of Detroit, and already are organized, and now these vacancies will be filled, as explained by the officers, by the national encampment.

Mr. MANN. Well, I suppose we can incorporate a society by stating that the incorporators shall be certain persons selected by somebody. I do not see how you can incorporate by saying that the incorporators shall be such persons as may be chosen or such persons as may be selected, with no provision as to who is to do the choosing and who is to do the selecting. We can not say the corporation shall be created to be composed of such persons as may be chosen. It is nonsense. You have got to name the incorporators or name somebody who selects them. In this case you have neither—

Mr. LONGWORTH. I would like to ask the gentleman if this is not the same provision exactly as in the bill incorporating the American Legion?

Mr. DYER. That is my understanding.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, in order to expedite matters, I object now.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

LAND PATENTS TO CERTAIN PERSONS IN THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 7881) to authorize the governor of the Territory of Hawaii to ratify the agreements of certain persons made with the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Hawaii and to issue land patents to those eligible under the terms of said agreements.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I ask to have the bill read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the governor of the Territory of Hawaii is hereby authorized and directed to ratify and carry into effect the agreements made by the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Hawaii with certain homesteaders, referred to in the resolution adopted by the senate and house of representatives of the Territory of Hawaii April 26, 1917; also to issue land patents to those living up to the terms of the agreements when the same have been completed; also to issue land patents to those who have already complied with all the terms of their agreements, and to ratify and confirm the land patents already issued to homesteaders, in accordance with the provisions of the resolution of the senate and house of representatives, Territory of Hawaii, April 26, 1917, above mentioned.

SEC. 2. That the governor shall report to the Secretary of the Interior the action taken by him hereunder.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from California make an explanation as to the reason for the passage of this bill?

Mr. CURRY. I will. Mr. Speaker, this bill passed the House in the Sixty-fifth and Sixty-sixth Congresses. An identical bill passed the Senate in the Sixty-sixth Congress, but the same bill did not pass both Houses in the Sixty-sixth Congress. The reason for the bill is this: There have been 26 homesteaders in the Territory of Hawaii on three islands with a homestead area altogether of 514.98 acres of land.

Mr. STAFFORD. Are those native Hawaiians?

Mr. CURRY. They are. Under the control of the public lands in Hawaii, when any person has homesteaded on one parcel of land they are forever precluded from homesteading on another parcel of land, whether they prove up or whether they do not prove up. These 26 people—Hawaiians—homesteaded on 33 parcels of land. In the meantime the land commissioner of Hawaii requested them to release those holdings and take others, which they did. Now, it was simply a matter of equity—

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, so that this bill may be passed before the hour of 1 o'clock, when the recess will be taken, I withdraw the reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7881) to authorize the governor of the Territory of Hawaii to ratify the agreements of certain persons made with the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Hawaii, and to issue land patents to those eligible under the terms of said agreements.

Be it enacted, etc., That the governor of the Territory of Hawaii is hereby authorized and directed to ratify and carry into effect the agreements made by the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Hawaii with certain homesteaders, referred to in the resolution adopted by the senate and house of representatives of the Territory of Hawaii, April 26, 1917; also to issue land patents to those living up to the terms of the agreements when the same have been completed; also to issue land patents to those who have already complied with all the terms of their agreements, and to ratify and confirm the land patents already issued to homesteaders in accordance with the provisions of the resolution of the senate and house of representatives, Territory of Hawaii, of April 26, 1917, above mentioned.

SEC. 2. That the governor shall report to the Secretary of the Interior the action taken by him hereunder.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. DYER, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Leavett Grimes, no adverse report having been made thereon.

RATIFYING ACTS, LEGISLATURE OF HAWAII.

The next business on the calendar for unanimous consent was the bill (S. 2062) an act ratifying, confirming, and approving certain acts of the Legislature of Hawaii, granting franchises for the manufacture, distribution, and supply of gas, electric light and power, and the construction, maintenance, and operation of a street railway, and for other purposes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the bill read.

RECESS.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the hour of 1 o'clock p. m. having arrived, the House stands in recess until 5 o'clock.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock p. m.) the House stood in recess until 5 o'clock p. m.

AFTER RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 5 o'clock p. m.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, it may be necessary for the Committee on Ways and Means to take advantage of the unanimous consent granted earlier in the day to introduce the revenue bill some time before midnight.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee rose.

Mr. MONDELL. Acting on the understanding reached early this afternoon, that there will be no business transacted at the reconvening this afternoon, I shall move to adjourn, unless the gentleman from Tennessee has something to submit.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. I yield.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I heard the request made this morning, following the colloquy between the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER], that the Committee on Ways and Means, through its chairman, should have until 12 o'clock to-night to introduce the bill. It was a very unusual request, so far as I know. Many times requests have been made and granted that a committee should have until 12 o'clock midnight to report, but not to introduce a bill. However, that unanimous consent was given. That, I suppose, set a precedent that a bill can be introduced when the House is not in session. The gentleman from Wyoming knows that some of us were quite busy trying to keep the agreement that we had made touching the matter of a recess from 1 o'clock until 5 o'clock. We did not object to it. I suppose that will stand. I do not think it ought to stand, and I do not believe—

Mr. MONDELL. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that after the unanimous consent was granted to introduce the bill at any time before midnight the situation was entirely satisfactory from our viewpoint. The gentleman himself then suggested that I resubmit the unanimous-consent request to stand in recess. There was no reason why I should do that, the situation being entirely satisfactory in every way, except that I like to agree with the gentlemen on the other side as far as possible and follow their views, and it enabled him to carry out his part of the agreement we had made. So I made the request. Were the bill ready for introduction at this time it would be introduced. But the gentleman will realize that we still have opportunity to introduce the bill under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I wish to state to the gentleman, if I may, my impression. Of course, the letter of the record stands. I thought that the agreement entered into, that the bill would be introduced at 5 o'clock, abrogated the other agreement. However, I realize that the letter is different. I shall make no complaint.

Mr. MONDELL. I think we are following absolutely not only the letter but the spirit of the agreement that was entered into, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Well, Mr. Speaker, as far as I know—and I think the gentleman might consider that very carefully—I do not know of any bill being introduced when the House was not in session. Reports are introduced.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Are not a very large number of bills introduced before the House begins a session?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Let me say I am not making captious objections, and I have no disposition and no one on this side has any disposition, so far as I know, to interfere with what the majority desires to do. But whether a bill can be introduced, even with unanimous consent, when the House is not in session, I gravely doubt.

Mr. GARNER. I think you are setting a bad precedent—introducing this bill after the House has adjourned. This could be obviated, as I see it, in this way: To-morrow at 11 o'clock, after the meeting of the House, the bill could be introduced. The Committee on Ways and Means could meet out here and report the bill, and it would be reported ready for Wednesday's transaction just as if it were introduced to-night.

Mr. MONDELL. The introduction of the bill is only a formal matter. The Committee on Ways and Means could consider it without the formal introduction. It is better practice, however, to have the bill introduced and submitted in the regular printed form for the consideration of the committee. Having entered into a unanimous-consent agreement to introduce the bill to-day, I think we should do it.

Mr. GARNER. I am not objecting. The only suggestion I make is the policy of introducing this bill to-morrow morning. Introduce it at 11 o'clock, report it at 12 o'clock, and have it ready for consideration on Wednesday, instead of introducing it to-night at 11 or 12 o'clock. You can accomplish the same purpose. You can have the bill printed to-morrow at 11 o'clock, because you know exactly what will be reported.

Mr. MONDELL. We can not accomplish the same purpose unless the bill is printed. It would not be printed in the regular form. I do not think we should introduce the bill and immediately report it.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCKRAN. Is it within the competency of the House to provide by resolution or otherwise as to any action on a bill that is not in existence?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is not a parliamentary inquiry. That is stated as an abstract proposition.

Mr. COCKRAN. Is it competent for this House, by unanimous consent or otherwise, to give power to this House to entertain or permit the introduction of a bill when the House is not in session?

The SPEAKER. That has already been done.

Mr. COCKRAN. Is it within its constitutional power?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is. That would be his offhand decision. The Chair would suggest that there is no great difficulty; that the House can take a recess until half past 11 to-night, when nobody need be present but the Speaker and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I believe the bill can be ready much before that. I can find out in a few minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. We have a unanimous-consent agreement entered into this morning in perfect good faith. There is no reason whatever why we should not proceed under it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair believes that the House can receive a report when it is not in session, and the Chair does not understand why the House could not receive a bill.

Mr. COCKRAN. It is a mechanical process, subject to the direction of the House, and it may not belong to the House procedure at all. This is the introduction of a bill, not the reporting of a bill, and there is an essential distinction between them.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the House could do it.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Is a bill introduced in the House of Representatives when the House is not in session? In my judgment it is not and can not be, and therefore I think it would be a wise thing for the House to take a recess until 11 o'clock, or half past 10 o'clock, or any other hour, and have the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means present and introduce the bill at that time.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the bill is introduced when it is delivered to the Clerk of the House. The House has repeatedly received conference reports of the greatest importance when the House has not been in session. There is no distinction—

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I think the House has not received conference reports.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Is it not a fact that a very large number of bills are always introduced before the House begins its session—hundreds of bills?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. They may be dropped into the basket. But this is a bill that must be reported from the floor, is it not? How can it be reported from the floor when the House is not in session?

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to make it perfectly clear to gentlemen on that side of the House that this is not a captious objection at all. It is entirely immaterial to us when the bill is introduced.

Mr. LONGWORTH. There is a great difference between the reporting of a privileged bill and its introduction.

Mr. MONDELL. We are not proposing to report the bill. In my judgment the gentleman's objection is captious; otherwise he would have objected at the time the request was made. But he did not object.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Oh, let us be perfectly candid with each other.

Mr. MONDELL. I am entirely candid, but I am wondering if the gentleman from Tennessee is entirely candid. No one objected when I made my request this morning, and I do not understand why they should do so now.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I did not at the moment entirely catch the point of the gentleman as to when the bill should be introduced; that is, that the gentleman from Michigan should have until 12 o'clock to-night to introduce the bill. A few minutes later, when I was trying to plead with my friend from Texas [Mr. BLAXTON] that an agreement that had been entered into should be kept, I learned of the language used by the gentleman from Wyoming in presenting the request, and I went to the Speaker's desk later. I will not say what occurred at the Speaker's desk. The Speaker's recollection and mine differ somewhat on the proposition. Now, I do not care anything in the world about it, nor does this side care a thing about it, except as to the question of the legality of its introduction.

Mr. MONDELL. I am somewhat surprised that my friend from Tennessee, who is a very good parliamentarian—none better—should not have thought of all these matters this afternoon when the request was made and assent given.

Mr. GARNER. Remember that we were trying to accommodate you. That is the main proposition. Remember we were trying to accommodate you in order to enable you to get your bill in.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum.

Mr. MONDELL. What is the gentleman's idea now?

Mr. GARNER. We want to accommodate you now, but we do not want to create a precedent. We think you ought not to create a precedent that may come up to plague the House in the future.

Mr. MONDELL. That is one reason why I was asking the House to reconvene at 5 o'clock, in order that we might introduce the bill at that time if it was ready at that time.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Can not the gentleman suggest this, That the House stand in recess until 10 o'clock or 10.30 o'clock or 11 o'clock or 12 o'clock, so that the House will be in session when the bill is introduced? At 12 o'clock there will be no trouble. The gentleman ought to understand that we have tried thus far to do our duty to-day.

Mr. MONDELL. Then I suppose if the point of no quorum is made we can call the gentlemen here from their various entertainments and occupations—but, Mr. Speaker, we need discuss the matter no further.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, the Constitution is saved! [Laughter.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] is now ready to introduce the bill. [Applause.] During our discussion the bill has been amended in accordance with the decision of the Republican conference.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, I introduce the bill. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not need to introduce it. He can just drop it in the basket. The bill is introduced.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARNER. Do I understand the gentleman is introducing the bill now?

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. I do not understand that it is necessary to reserve points of order now, but if it is necessary I desire to reserve all points of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas reserves all points of order on the bill.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, pursuant to the order already made, until to-morrow, Tuesday, August 16, 1921, at 11 o'clock a. m.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. RAKER, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 57) making the provisions of section 2296 of the United States Revised Statutes applicable to all entries made under the homestead laws and laws supplemental to and amendatory thereof, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 346), which said joint resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8172) granting an increase of pension to Frances W. Mallow, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FORDNEY: A bill (H. R. 8245) to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ROSSDALE: A bill (H. R. 8246) to tear down and remove the obsolete structure known as the post-office or Federal building in City Hall Park, at New York, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas: Resolution (H. Res. 174) for the immediate consideration of House bill 8245; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. WOODS of Virginia: Resolution (H. Res. 175) to pay Irene A. Dwyer, clerk to the late Hon. ROBERT A. JAMES, one month's salary; to the Committee on Accounts.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 176) to pay H. B. Trundle, clerk to the late Hon. ROBERT A. JAMES, one month's salary; to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 8247) granting an increase of pension to Hiram Williams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DARROW: A bill (H. R. 8248) for the relief of the Mutual Fire, Marine & Inland Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., for taxes on insurance premiums unlawfully collected and withheld from said company; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 8249) granting an increase of pension to William J. Shirley; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8250) granting a pension to Jennie C. Richardson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HUDDLESTON: A bill (H. R. 8251) granting a pension to Herbert S. Cooley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KNUTSON: A bill (H. R. 8252) granting an increase of pension to Maranda A. Chance; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMPERT: A bill (H. R. 8253) granting an increase of pension to Eliza J. Stever; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8254) granting a pension to Jacob Mottl; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MOORES of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 8255) granting a pension to Louisa V. Sullivan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RIDDICK: A bill (H. R. 8256) authorizing the issuance of a patent in fee to Perry H. Kennerly for land allotted to him on the Blackfoot Reservation, Mont.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2416. By Mr. ATKESON: Petition of F. M. Walter and others, of Clinton, Mo., opposing the passage of House bill 4388, the Sunday observance bill; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2417. By Mr. BRIGGS: Petition of Royall National Bank, of Palestine, Tex., protesting against proposed stamp tax on bank checks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2418. By Mr. CULLEN: Resolution No. 96 adopted by the American Federation of Labor relative to Treasury certificates; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2419. By Mr. FOCHT: Petition for the support of House bill 7664, granting a pension to Mrs. Theodosia Harris; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

2420. Also, evidence in support of House bill 7666, granting an increase of pension to Harry H. Sieg; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

2421. By Mr. KIESS: Communication from the Women's Organized Bible Class of the Erie Avenue Baptist Church, of Williamsport, Pa., relative to the situation in the Near East; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2422. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of C. P. Coleman, president of the Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, 115 Broadway, New York City; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2423. Also, petition of J. R. Bersk, of Harvey & Outerbridge, 11 Broadway, New York City; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2424. By Mr. LAMPERT: Resolution No. 7, of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, demanding the release of political prisoners and conscientious objectors; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2425. Also, resolution No. 3, of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, favoring the modification of the Federal prohibition law to provide for the exemption of beer and light wines; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2426. By Mr. STINESS: Memorial of the United Baptist Church, of Providence, R. I., urging the passage of House joint resolution 159; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2427. Also, memorial of Calvary Baptist Church, of Providence, R. I., urging the passage of legislation prohibiting sectarian appropriations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2428. By Mr. TILLMAN: Petition of C. M. Gouge and others, opposing Senate bill 1948, the Sunday observance bill; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, August 16, 1921.

The Chaplain, Rev. J. J. Muir, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father and our God, Thou hast been gracious to us in the days gone by and dost continue Thy mercies unto us now. We return to Thee thanks for all the multitude who have been evidencing to Thee and to us and to the world that goodness and grace are the portions of those who trust in Thee. May the Lord reveal Himself in this Chamber this morning in the wisdom and strength of the deliberations. We ask in Christ Jesus' name. Amen.

NAMING A PRESIDING OFFICER.

The Secretary, George A. Sanderson, read the following communication:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, D. C., August 16, 1921.

To the SENATE:

Being temporarily absent from the Senate I appoint Hon. IRVING L. LENROOT, a Senator from the State of Wisconsin, to perform the duties of the Chair this legislative day.

ALBERT B. CUMMINS,
President Pro Tempore.

Mr. LENROOT thereupon took the chair as Presiding Officer. The Assistant Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. CURTIS and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed bills of the following titles, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 4598. An act to provide for the exchange of Government lands for privately owned lands in the Territory of Hawaii;

H. R. 6557. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to repair and rebuild customs buildings in Porto Rico and to pay for same out of duties collected in Porto Rico; and

H. R. 7881. An act to authorize the governor of the Territory of Hawaii to ratify the agreements of certain persons made with the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Hawaii and to issue land patents to those eligible under the terms of said agreements.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE UNITED STATES.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of Labor in response to Senate resolution 126, giving an estimate of unemployment in the several States, which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to be printed in the Record and to lie on the table, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

Hon. CALVIN COOLIDGE,
President of the Senate, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Upon receipt of a copy of Senate resolution 126 of the first session of the Sixty-seventh Congress, I directed Ethelbert Stewart, commissioner of labor statistics, to prepare an estimate of the present volume of unemployment following the lines of the resolution as closely as the information at hand would permit.

A report of such estimates as can be made has just been completed. I have the honor, therefore, to transmit herewith Commissioner Stewart's report, in compliance with Senate resolution of August 5, 1921, as follows:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of Labor be, and he hereby is, directed immediately to advise the Senate as to the estimated unemployment in the several States, including the number of men, of ex-service men, and of women estimated to be unemployed."

Respectfully,

JAMES J. DAVIS, Secretary.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

Hon. JAMES J. DAVIS,
Secretary of Labor, Washington, D. C.

SIR: In accordance with your instructions of August 6, 1921, I have completed the closest estimate which can be made from available data concerning the volume of unemployment in the United States and in the several States. No segregation can be made of ex-service men nor of women estimated to be unemployed. In the body of the report such explanations are given concerning the material presented as will make clear the sources and the nature of the material upon which the estimates are based.

Respectfully,

ETHELBERT STEWART,
Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

(Inclosure.)

REPORT ON UNEMPLOYMENT.
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS,
Washington, August 12, 1921.

On August 5, 1921, the United States Senate passed Senate resolution 126, as follows:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of Labor be, and he hereby is, directed immediately to advise the Senate as to the estimated unemployment in the several States, including the number of men, of ex-service men, and of women estimated to be unemployed."

Responding to the requirements of the above resolution the best estimate that can be made from available sources of information is that there are at present 5,735,000 persons unemployed in the United States. These figures relate to the differences in the numbers of employees carried on pay rolls July, 1921, as compared with the peak of employment in 1920. Figures of the unemployed by industries are:

Manufacturing and mechanical industries (including building trades)	3,900,000
Mining	250,000
Transportation	800,000
Trade and clerical workers	450,000
Domestic and personal service	335,000
Total	5,735,000

No estimates can be given as to the number of ex-service men unemployed, as the reports covering pay roll data do not segregate them. The same applies to women workers.

This total must be accepted, of course, as an estimate. It is practically impossible to get exact figures of persons out of work except by an actual count upon a given date, which is, of course, prohibitive by reason of its cost. The Department of Labor through the United States Employment Service in January, 1921, estimated that there were 3,473,446 less workers employed in January, 1921, than in January, 1920, and that this was a reduction of 36.9 per cent. For the succeeding six months between January and July, 1921, the number of names on the pay rolls covered by that service decreased 7.3 per cent. There was a decrease of 1.1 per cent between June and July, 1921. This reduction, added to the estimate of unemployment for January, 1921, indicates 3,906,450 less workers employed in industry in July, 1921, than in January, 1920.

The reports of the United States Employment Service cover the principal manufacturing and mechanical industries, including building trades. They do not, however, cover all manufacturing, nor do they cover the great groups of agriculture, mining, transportation, trade, public service, professional service, domestic service, or clerical work. The best estimate that can be secured at this time indicates that there are 160,000 coal miners out of work. This does not include many others who have only part-time employment. In iron and copper mining and other mineral extracting there is much slack work. A conservative estimate of the unemployed in the mining group taken as a whole is 250,000, as compared with 15 or 18 months ago. In transportation a conservative estimate of the unemployed as a whole is 800,000; of this number 700,000 are unemployed railroad workers. It is not possible to make an estimate of the unemployment among the wage and low-salaried workers in the public service or in professional service. The total of 5,735,000 must, of course, be accepted as a rough estimate.

In consideration of these figures certain conditions must be kept in mind: First, they refer to the change in number of persons employed between the peak of operations in 1920 and the present time, ignoring whatever of unemployment there may have been in the spring of 1920; second, that the employment was far above normal in the spring of 1920, industries bid for workers, wives, daughters, and boys who were not accustomed to work for wages took up gainful work through economic necessity or because of the tempting wages offered. Therefore the present recession in employment may mean not entirely unemployment for regular workers, but in addition a return of many persons from gainful work back to nongainful home work or schools.

WOMEN'S WORK.

In this connection attention is called to the fact that many thousands of women and girls were called into the factories and munition plants during the war. A large percentage of these were not formerly among the factory and industrial workers of the country. In large part these women workers were retained or returned to industry in the peak of manufacturing activity in March and April, 1920, and when the slump came they were released. They returned to their homes, thus swelling the volume of reduction of numbers of wage workers on pay rolls, but not to the same extent the volume of those seeking employment. In other words, while it is impossible to give the relation between male and female workers dropped from the pay rolls of manufacturing industries, it is known that a very large percentage of the women were dropped, and that, of the women so dropped a considerable number did not enter the army of the unemployed as it is generally understood, but returned to school and nongainful home work.

DISTRIBUTION BY STATES.

It is impossible to make any distribution of the unemployed by States for any industry outside of the factories. The figures for unemployment in the building trades, transportation trades, mechanical workers, domestic, and personal service can not be distributed by States upon any basis available in this bureau. For factory workers alone, however, some basis is provided by the New York State Industrial Commission. In June, 1921, the Labor Market Bulletin of New York indicated that the number of factory workers employed in that State in May, 1921, was at least 400,000 less than in March, 1920. Because of further reductions as shown by that report in May and June, there were in June approximately 423,700 (since the preparation of this report the New York State index number for July has been received showing a decrease of 2 per cent in employment in July as against June; this would increase the New York factory unemployment to 447,400 persons) factory workers unemployed in New York that had been employed in March, 1920.

According to the United States Census of 1914 the number of wage earners in the factories of New York State constituted 15 per cent of the wage earners in factories in the United States. Assuming that New York is representative, this would indicate that in the factories of the United States the decrease in the number of workers between March, 1920, and June, 1921, was 2,825,000. These figures must be understood as applying to the changes between March, 1920, and June, 1921, and not to the entire industrial population, and as relating only to wage earners in factories as distinct from wage earners in all lines of industry. With this restriction in view, and assuming 2,825,000 fewer factory workers in the United States in June, 1921, than in March, 1920, and assuming this number distributed in proportion to the number of wage earners in factories in the States in 1914, the following table of distribution by States is submitted for what it is worth:

New England States:
Maine	32,982
New Hampshire	31,715
Vermont	13,130
Massachusetts	243,582
Rhode Island	45,539
Connecticut	90,842
Middle Atlantic States:
New York	424,716
New Jersey	149,998
Pennsylvania	371,166
East North Central States:
Ohio	204,933
Indiana	79,295
Illinois	203,531
Michigan	108,839
Wisconsin	78,013
West North Central States:
Minnesota	37,272
Iowa	25,339
Missouri	61,099
North Dakota	1,315
South Dakota	1,521
Nebraska	10,095
Kansas	16,563
East South Central States:
Kentucky	25,930
Tennessee	29,860
Alabama	31,604
Mississippi	18,750
South Atlantic States:
Delaware	8,805
Maryland	44,800
District of Columbia	3,564
Virginia	41,281
West Virginia	28,537
North Carolina	54,941
South Carolina	28,873
Georgia	41,940
Florida	22,326
West South Central States:
Arkansas	16,854
Louisiana	31,181
Oklahoma	7,003
Texas	30,053
Mountain States:
Montana	5,502
Idaho	3,581
Wyoming	1,200
Colorado	10,952
New Mexico	1,516
Arizona	2,769
Utah	5,578
Nevada	1,467
Pacific States:
Washington	26,982
Oregon	11,574
California	56,000
Total	2,825,000

The State Industrial Commission of New York has a continuous report on the number of persons employed in the factories of that State covering the period from June, 1914, to the present time. The New York commission uses the number of the pay roll in June, 1914, as their base, or the 100 point, in calculating their index number or ratio. It is believed that a reproduction of this index for New York would be valuable in this place, and it is therefore given below:

Number of employees.

	1914.
June	100
July	97
August	92
September	96
October	95
November	93
December	92
Average for 7 months	95

1915.
January	92	August	122
February	94	September	122
March	94	October	117
April	95	November	120
May	97	December	119
June	98
July	97	Average for year	122
August	96
September	101	1919.
October	102	January	113
November	106	February	112
December	108	March	111
		April	111
Average for year	98	May	110
		June	110
1916.		July	113
January	108	August	115
February	111	September	116
March	111	October	115
April	115	November	118
May	113	December	122
June	113
July	112	Average for year	113
August	113
September	117	1920.
October	117	January	123
November	120	February	122
December	122	March	125
		April	124
Average for year	114	May	122
		June	121
1917.		July	121
January	121	August	118
February	121	September	117
March	123	October	115
April	121	November	108
May	120	December	100
June	119
July	118	Average for year	118
August	116
September	118	1921.
October	120	January	93
November	121	February	94
December	122	March	95
		April	94
Average for year	120	May	92
		June	90
1918.		July	88.5
January	121	The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics since January, 1915, has compiled reports on volume of employment in 13 industries. In the work of this bureau January, 1916, is taken as the base or as 100. This index down to and including July, 1921, is herewith presented, and indicates unmistakably the trend in employment.
February	123
March	124
April	123
May	123
June	123
July	125

Index numbers of employees on pay roll January, 1915, to May, 1921 (January, 1916=100).

Month and year.	Iron and steel.	Automobiles.	Car building and repairing.	Cotton manufacturing.	Cotton finishing.	Hosiery and underwear.	Woolen.	Silk.	Men's ready-made clothing.	Leather manufacturing.	Boots and shoes.	Paper making.	Cigars.
1915.
January	74			101	85	87	88	91			87
February	71		71	101	94	91	88	93	98		87
March	77		80	103	91	91	91	93	92		83		105
April	80		67	102	93	94	93	90	80		77		90
May	82		85	103	93	96	91	90	94		79		98
June	85		87	102	87	98	89	90	95		80		94
July	87		92	103	92	96	92	89	97		81		96
August	90		89	101	90	94	90	91	83		82		92
September	93		95	101	90	96	90	92	80		82		97
October	97		99	102	94	100	99	94	84		90		106
November	97	99	104	103	104	101	102	97	88	97	94	84	108
December	97	100	105	102	97	104	103	98	81	101	109	96	103
1916.
January	100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100
February	102	112	104	101	101	101	102	97	98	112	100	105	95
March	105	114	109	101	103	103	102	100	100	111	101	103	99
April	104	112	110	101	98	104	104	101	97	110	99	104	93
May	108	113	109	101	95	105	105	99	102	106	98	106	90
June	109	109	111	102	96	105	103	100	105	104	99	108	91
July	110	116	108	102	96	104	101	101	105	106	100	107	94
August	113	117	109	100	97	102	97	100	97	110	99	109	90
September	115	123	113	100	96	104	101	99	93	101	98	102	93
October	115	132	111	130	96	106	102	100	95	111	98	103	97
November	117	129	117	100	99	107	103	98	101	113	102	101	93
December	118	125	116	102	101	108	105	100	92	116	107	114	96
1917.
January	122	133	111	101	99	107	107	100	107	124	108	118	97
February	123	134	112	102	99	108	105	99	107	121	108	117	98
March	124	135	109	101	99	109	108	98	110	119	107	117	100
April	124	133	104	101	96	106	105	97	110	114	105	116	92
May	127	130	105	100	98	108	106	95	113	109	104	113	92
June	129	125	104	100	98	107	104	93	118	106	105	115	94
July	130	118	108	101	94	105	104	93	113	105	102	111	94
August	134	120	107	99	94	103	102	91	108	104	97	103	87
September	133	125	96	98	96	104	101	89	103	101	91	109	91
October	135	126	93	98	95	105	107	88	101	104	93	110	88
November	136	122	108	100	98	106	110	88	104	111	101	111	103
December	136	121	113	101	100	108	112	88	107	114	101	114	103
1918.
January	134	119	113	100	96	105	107	86	102	111	101	112	103
February	135	119	112	95	96	107	105	88	105	108	102	109	101
March	137	123	111	100	98	108	109	89	101	106	103	113	104
April	136	124	108	98	94	108	109	88	101	102	99	112	103
May	138	124	109	96	93	107	106	87	101	101	97	113	88
June	139	126	102	96	93	107	106	87	101	104	96	113	94

Index numbers of employees on pay roll January, 1915, to May, 1921 (January, 1915=100)—Continued.

Month and year.	Iron and steel.	Automobiles.	Car building and repairing.	Cotton manufacturing.	Cotton finishing.	Hosiery and underwear.	Woolen.	Silk.	Men's ready-made clothing.	Leather manufacturing.	Boots and shoes.	Paper making.	Cigars.
1918.
July.....	137	122	110	97	97	108	105	85	102	106	98	114	96
August.....	133	118	116	97	95	107	104	83	98	105	96	114	92
September.....	137	120	119	95	92	105	103	79	94	102	95	114	93
October.....	133	121	125	87	88	95	95	79	86	98	89	106	87
November.....	135	123	126	92	89	101	98	76	85	99	92	112	92
December.....	138	114	125	98	92	101	90	77	83	100	95	116	95
1919.
January.....	136	108	122	99	84	97	74	79	76	101	95	115	89
February.....	128	108	109	95	71	90	43	75	78	101	95	113	89
March.....	125	111	107	95	73	90	56	83	79	103	95	112	80
April.....	119	117	100	96	79	91	77	85	80	103	91	108	87
May.....	114	123	99	108	86	94	87	87	81	105	93	102	85
June.....	114	129	99	109	94	99	99	88	86	108	92	110	89
July.....	117	135	99	111	97	101	103	90	93	110	92	112	71
August.....	121	139	91	111	94	102	102	89	91	111	95	114	60
September.....	122	147	93	112	97	101	102	77	96	114	96	119	68
October.....	81	149	89	113	99	105	103	80	100	113	98	119	73
November.....	95	150	89	111	102	105	103	84	105	114	100	122	62
December.....	113	146	92	116	106	108	100	86	95	115	102	123	82
1920.
January.....	127	154	90	115	105	108	104	87	96	117	103	124	80
February.....	129	156	90	112	102	107	102	87	98	113	101	123	76
March.....	131	155	90	114	102	108	105	86	103	114	102	129	77
April.....	130	153	94	113	100	109	105	87	106	110	101	128	77
May.....	121	148	110	112	98	106	104	86	107	109	98	129	72
June.....	128	145	114	113	99	101	97	85	104	105	98	129	71
July.....	126	146	94	115	98	98	44	82	100	105	89	133	71
August.....	125	139	104	113	97	93	41	80	96	99	89	135	71
September.....	128	133	99	112	91	87	56	75	89	92	76	134	75
October.....	128	116	98	109	81	78	59	74	76	87	73	134	74
November.....	124	103	99	104	79	68	52	71	63	80	69	130	77
December.....	113	98	95	101	78	53	42	66	51	75	70	125	77
1921.
January.....	93	36	83	94	76	50	41	63	59	73	69	118	71
February.....	93	51	73	111	86	61	59	66	71	74	75	114	69
March.....	89	68	68	108	93	68	69	72	74	77	76	110	67
April.....	81	85	59	107	94	73	84	75	79	68	76	98	70
May.....	79	89	57	109	98	78	89	77	76	72	79	85	71
June.....	75	89	56	109	100	81	90	77	83	78	83	85	72
July.....	64	91	55	111	99	81	90	78	92	80	86	85	72

1 Labor troubles and part time.

2 Strikes.

3 Strikes and labor troubles.

4 Lack of orders. Dull season.

5 Lack of orders and part time.

6 General business depression.

General index—13 industries.

Consolidating the index numbers of the preceding table from January, 1920, to July, 1921, the following general index is obtained. In the computation of this general index the several industries are weighted according to the number of wage earners employed therein. In using this consolidated index it must be remembered that it is based on only 13 industries:

January, 1916	100
January, 1920	106
February, 1920	106
March, 1920	107
April, 1920	108
May, 1920	108
June, 1920	108
July, 1920	100
August, 1920	100
September, 1920	97
October, 1920	94
November, 1920	89
December, 1920	83
January, 1921	74
February, 1921	80
March, 1921	80
April, 1921	80
May, 1921	81
June, 1921	82
July, 1921	82

So far as these industries collectively are concerned, the peak of employment was reached in April, 1920, and the lowest point in January, 1921, with an increase from January to July of 8 points. The decrease from April, 1920, to July, 1921, was 24 per cent.

As indicative of the local and sporadic variations in employment, hence of course in unemployment, I quote here two paragraphs from the July report of the Department of Labor, United States Employment Service, announcing the results of the industrial surveys for the month ending July 31, 1921.

"Out of the 65 cities, 27 report employment increases during July over June, with percentages of increase as follows: Denver, Colo., 16.5 per cent; Portland, Oreg., 14.7 per cent; Brockton, Mass., 12.6 per cent; Lawrence, Mass., 11.5 per cent; St. Paul, Minn., 9.4 per cent; Memphis, Tenn., 8.4 per cent; Buffalo, N. Y., 6.34 per cent; Detroit, Mich., 6.07 per cent; Milwaukee, Wis., 5 per cent; Niagara Falls, N. Y., 4.08 per cent; Manchester, N. H., 3.35 per cent; Richmond, Va., 3.05 per cent; Kansas City, Mo., 3.01 per cent; Los Angeles, Calif., 2.97 per cent; Syracuse, N. Y., 2.34 per cent; Seattle, Wash., 2.3 per cent; Flint, Mich., 2 per cent; New Orleans, La., 1.8 per cent; Albany and Schenectady, N. Y., 1.5 per cent; Bayonne, N. J., 1.3 per cent; Dayton, Ohio, 1.3 per cent; Sioux City, Iowa, 1.19 per cent; New Bedford, Mass., 0.75 per cent; Minneapolis, Minn., 0.7 per cent; Lowell, Mass., 0.58 per cent; Philadelphia, Pa., 0.18 per cent; and Springfield, Mass., 0.07 per cent.

"Thirty-eight cities report employment decreases during July over June, the percentages of decrease being as follows: Youngstown, Ohio, 22.8 per cent; Chattanooga, Tenn., 15.6 per cent; Yonkers, N. Y., 12.8 per cent; Indianapolis, Ind., 10.6 per cent; Grand Rapids, Mich., 8.7 per cent; San Francisco, Calif., 8.46 per cent; Toledo, Ohio, 8.2 per cent; Camden, N. J., 7.5 per cent; Cincinnati, Ohio, 7.5 per cent; Perth Amboy, N. J., 7.3 per cent; Bridgeport, Conn., 7 per cent; St. Louis, Mo., 6.9 per cent; Cleveland, Ohio, 6.6 per cent; Birmingham, Ala., 6.5 per cent; Pittsburgh, Pa., 5.9 per cent; Kansas City, Kans., 5.57 per cent; Newark, N. J., 5.2 per cent; Trenton, N. J., 4.5 per cent; Providence, R. I., 4 per cent; Peoria, Ill., 3.9 per cent; Johnstown, Pa., 3.3 per cent; New Haven, Conn., 3.3 per cent; Worcester, Mass., 3.27 per cent; Boston, Mass., 2.58 per cent; Columbus, Ohio, 1.7 per cent; Baltimore, Md., 1.5 per cent; Louisville, Ky., 1.5 per cent; Waterbury, Conn., 1.5 per cent; New York, N. Y., 1.32 per cent; Jersey City, N. J., 1.2 per cent; Paterson, N. J., 1.18 per cent; Reading, Pa., 1.05 per cent; Rochester, N. Y., 1.4 per cent; Chicago, Ill., 0.77 per cent; Omaha, Nebr., 0.48 per cent; Passaic, N. J., 0.04 per cent; and Fall River, Mass., 0.007 per cent."

CONCLUSION.

It is to be regretted that no other State has seen fit to keep as general and close a tab on the volume of employment as has been the case in the State of New York, and equally regrettable that lack of funds available for the use of the United States Department of Labor has not enabled us to secure either through the cooperation of the States or by direct investigation from the department in those States that are not well equipped for such service an employment survey for the entire country equal to that which is made in the State of New York. It must be noted, however, that the appropriations for the State industrial commission of New York enable it to give to its work a wider scope and more accuracy of detail than is possible elsewhere. It should be noted that the appropriation for 1920 of the industrial commission of New York was $1,549,100, which is nearly as much as the entire appropriation for the United States Department of Labor during the same year, if we omit the appropriation for the Bureau of Immigration.

Respectfully submitted.

ETHELBERT STEWART,
Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. BALL presented two memorials of sundry citizens of the District of Columbia, remonstrating against the enactment of Senate bill 1948, providing for compulsory Sunday observance, etc., which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. JOHNSON presented memorials of sundry citizens of Riverside, Fullerton, and Brea, in the State of California, remonstrating against the enactment of Senate bill 1948, providing for compulsory Sunday observance, etc., which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented telegrams in the nature of memorials from Mary McManus, president Branch No. 171, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; P. J. O'Connor, president Branch No. 168, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; John F. Ryan, president Branch No. 173, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; P. J. Thompson, president District Council No. 3, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; S. J. Lamb, president Branch No. 161, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; William Ergenzinger, president Branch No. 160, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; Kate De Lee Schleuter, president Branch No. 18, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic; P. T. Horan, president Branch No. 42, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, all of Los Angeles; P. J. Lennon, president Branch No. 27, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, of Santa Barbara; J. B. Smith, secretary Branch No. 31, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, of San Francisco; M. K. Kelly, president Branch No. 8, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, of Stockton; T. E. Collins, president Branch No. 33, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, of Fresno, all in the State of California, remonstrating against the enactment of Senate bill 2135, to enable the refunding of obligations of foreign Governments owing to the United States of America, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WILLIS presented a resolution of Robert E. Bentley Post, No. 50, American Legion, Department of Ohio, of Cincinnati, Ohio, protesting against the sale of the cantonment at Camp Sherman, Ohio, and urging that it be retained by the Government as a hospital site or for such other purposes as the War Department may desire, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

IMPORTATION OF DYES AND CHEMICALS.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8107) to control importations of dyes and chemicals, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 259) thereon.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on August 15, 1921, they had presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 1934) granting the consent of Congress to the Huntington & Ohio Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a highway and street railway bridge across the Ohio River between the city of Huntington, W. Va., and a point opposite in the State of Ohio.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NEW:

A bill (S. 2410) to amend section 1044 of the Revised Statutes, United States, relating to limitations in criminal cases; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BALL:

A bill (S. 2411) to vacate certain streets and alleys within the area known as the Walter Reed General Hospital, District of Columbia; and to authorize the extension and widening of Fourteenth Street from Montague Street to its southern terminus south of Dahlia Street, Nicholson Street from Thirteenth Street to Sixteenth Street, Colorado Avenue from Montague Street to Thirteenth Street, Concord Avenue from Sixteenth Street to its western terminus west of Eighth Street west, Thirteenth Street from Nicholson Street to Piney Branch Road, and Piney Branch Road from Thirteenth Street to Blair Road, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2412) to equalize the remuneration of men and women employees of the Government; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

A bill (S. 2413) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and acts amendatory thereof; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. LODGE:

A bill (S. 2414) to amend section 13 of the river and harbor act of March 3, 1899; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. ERNST:

A bill (S. 2415) granting an increase of pension to J. N. Culton (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 2416) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Totten (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2417) granting an increase of pension to Oney Deatley (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2418) granting extra pay in case of Benjamin V. Banks; and

A bill (S. 2419) granting extra pay in case of Leonidas K. King; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HEFLIN:

A bill (S. 2420) authorizing and directing the Postmaster General to permit the use of a special canceling stamp at the post office of Birmingham, Ala., bearing the words "Birmingham Semicentennial"; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 101) authorizing the Federal Reserve Board to cause rediscount rates charged by Federal reserve banks to be lowered in certain cases; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

INVESTIGATION OF GRAIN PRICES.

Mr. LADD submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 133), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Whereas the condition of the export market has been alleged as one of the reasons for the decline in the domestic prices of grain since the summer of 1920; and

Whereas there nevertheless has been during the past year a record volume of exports of grain from the United States, and at prices showing a wide margin over the price at the farm; and

Whereas a wide spread of 15 to 20 cents between cash wheat and futures throughout the marketing season of 1920-21 existed, and was caused either by the unprecedented export demand or heavy pressure on futures, or both; and

Whereas the organization of the export trade and all the conditions connected with the export of grain by American exporters and the purchase thereof by foreign buyers are of vital interest to American farmers and consumers: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Federal Trade Commission be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to immediately investigate, beginning with the harvest of the 1919 grain crop, the margins between farm and export prices; the freight and other costs of handling; the profits or losses of the principal exporting firms and corporations and their subsidiary or allied companies and firms; all the facts concerning market manipulations, if any, in connection with large export transactions or otherwise; the organization, ownership, control, interrelationship, foreign subsidiaries, agencies, or connections of the concerns engaged in the export of grain, including the extent of their control of the facilities used by them; the organization, methods of operation, and agencies used by foreign buyers of grain in this country; and other data affecting the demand for and foreign disposition, movement, and use of American exported grain; and report its findings and recommendations thereon as promptly as the various phases of the work are concluded. For the purpose of this investigation, it is requested that the United States Grain Corporation, the Department of Agriculture, and other Government departments, and the United States Food Administration make available all the pertinent records from these several departments and organizations for the use of the commission.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

On August 11, 1921:

S. 252. An act to amend an act approved February 22, 1889, entitled "An act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States, and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington to form constitutions and State governments and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, and to make donations of public lands to such States"; and

S. 732. An act to extend the provisions of section 2455, Revised Statutes, to lands within the abandoned Fort Buford Military Reservation, in the States of North Dakota and Montana.

On August 13, 1921:

S. 1811. An act to amend the Federal farm loan act, as amended.

On August 16, 1921:

S. 1434. An act for the relief of the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, Baltimore, Md.

On August 15, 1921:

S. J. Res. 36. Joint resolution authorizing the appointment of a commission to confer with the Dominion Government or the provincial governments thereof as to certain restrictive orders in council of the said Provinces relative to the exportation of pulp wood and paper therefrom to the United States.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by title and referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions:

H. R. 4598. An act to provide for the exchange of Government lands for privately owned lands in the Territory of Hawaii;

H. R. 6557. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to repair and rebuild customs buildings in Porto Rico and to pay for same out of duties collected in Porto Rico; and

H. R. 7881. An act to authorize the governor of the Territory of Hawaii to ratify the agreements of certain persons made with the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Ha-wail, and to issue land patents to those eligible under the terms of said agreement.

PROPOSED RECESS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I desire to call up the recess resolution which I introduced on yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 8) before the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I make the point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	McKellar	Simmons
Ball	Hale	McLean	Smoot
Borah	Harrell	McNary	Stanfield
Brandeggee	Harrison	Nelson	Stanley
Broussard	Heflin	New	Sterling
Calder	Johnson	Nicholson	Sutherland
Cameron	Jones, N. Mex.	Norbeck	Townsend
Capper	Jones, Wash.	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Caraway	Kellogg	Oberman	Warren
Culberson	King	Phipps	Watson, Ga.
Curtis	Ladd	Pittman	Watson, Ind.
Dillingham	La Follette	Poinexter	Williams
Ernst	Lenroot	Pomerene	Willis
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Sheppard
Glass	McCumber	Shortridge

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to announce that the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] is necessarily absent on account of sickness.

Mr. CURTIS. I was requested to announce the absence of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] on account of a death in his family. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

I also wish to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] on official business. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. WATSON of Georgia. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. HARRIS] is absent attending the funeral of his nephew, who died in France in the defense of his country. This young man was the only son of Gen. P. C. Harris, Adjutant General of the United States Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-eight Senators have responded to their names. A quorum is present. The concurrent resolution will be reported.

The Assistant Secretary read the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 8) submitted yesterday by Mr. LODGE, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the two Houses adjourn on Saturday, the 20th day of August, 1921, they stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, the 19th day of September, 1921.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question? The bill that was passed through the Senate the other day, known as the McNary substitute for the Norris bill, amending the War Finance Corporation act, is now in the House. I understand they have not yet considered it. They had one day's debate but have not finished consideration of the bill. That bill should be passed—

Mr. LODGE. I agree with the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. It should be passed before the recess of Congress is taken.

Mr. LODGE. I agree to that.

Mr. HARRISON. I personally have no objection in the world to a recess of Congress, if we get through with the business, but if it does not pass—

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I hold the same view about that as does the Senator from Mississippi; that bill undoubtedly must pass before we take a recess, but I understood it was coming from the other House to-day. I can not conceive that there will be much delay concerning it. The Senator understands that this is not such a resolution as I previously introduced. This is a resolution providing for a recess of both Houses. The resolution will go to the House and be held, undoubtedly, until the bill to which the Senator refers shall have been disposed of and also the joint resolution extending the time for the operation of the emergency tariff bill. The House may change the dates which I have provided in the pending resolution.

Mr. HARRISON. What was the statement of the Senator from Massachusetts relative to the emergency tariff bill?

Mr. LODGE. There is a joint resolution pending in the other House proposing to extend the emergency tariff for two months.

Mr. HARRISON. That is not embodied at all in the pending resolution.

Mr. LODGE. Nothing is embodied in this resolution but the provision for a recess.

Mr. HARRISON. I do not care anything about the passage of the joint resolution providing for the extension of the emergency tariff, but the War Finance Corporation amendment, I think, should be passed.

Mr. LODGE. I think it is generally understood that that measure will be disposed of before a recess is taken. Certainly that will be in accordance with my own desire.

Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if the so-called "road bill," which has been reported to the Senate, will also be taken up and disposed of this week before the recess shall be taken?

Mr. LODGE. That was not one of the matters especially spoken of. There are a great many bills, of course, pending, and if we undertake to act on all legislation which is pending before the recess there will be no recess.

Mr. McKELLAR. The road bill has been already delayed for a long time, and I had very much hoped, inasmuch as it has been reported favorably to the Senate, that it would be disposed of this week. I see no reason why it should not be. As a matter of fact, a portion of the legislation embodied in that bill came over from the last Congress.

Mr. LODGE. If we are going to take a recess, of course, we can not possibly arrange to pass every bill which we hope to pass.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The debate is proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly, I understand that.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. LODGE. I yield, Mr. President, but reserve the point of order.

Mr. STERLING. I simply want to say that I am very much interested in one piece of legislation that has passed both the House and the Senate, and in regard to which conferees will undoubtedly be appointed to-day on the part of the other House. I refer to what is known as the antibeer bill. Under present conditions I can not consent to a recess on Saturday next. It will be to-morrow, which is Wednesday, at least, before the conferees on the bill to which I refer can meet for the purpose of considering the differences between the two Houses on the bill. That will give a very limited time for the conferees to reach an agreement and for action on the part of the Senate before Saturday or even on Saturday. The bill is an important piece of legislation, as everybody knows, which ought to be passed before any recess is had. I do not know whether or not the conditions described by the Senator from Massachusetts will exist, but, under present conditions, I feel that I must oppose the resolution.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. LODGE. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not desire to have the Senator yield to me. I have no question to ask the Senator. I desire to make a statement.

Mr. LODGE. I did not catch the Senator's remark.

Mr. PITTMAN. I said I had no desire to take the Senator from Massachusetts off the floor.

Mr. LODGE. I am perfectly willing to yield. I shall not now make the point of order if the Senator from Nevada desires to make a statement.

Mr. PITTMAN. Do I understand that the Senator from Massachusetts holds the view that the pending motion is not debatable?

Mr. LODGE. I hold that view most distinctly. I think the matter is perfectly clear in the rule.

Mr. PITTMAN. I should like to hear the rule read, if the Senator from Massachusetts will turn to it.

Mr. LODGE. I will turn to it in a moment.

Mr. BORAH. If the Senator from Massachusetts has conceded that we may debate the motion, I think we had better take the concession and proceed with the debate. I wish to make an observation or two, and I think I shall have a better opportunity to make it now than after the ruling of the Chair on the point of order.

Mr. PITTMAN. I have no doubt that that is true. In the meantime, while the Senator from Massachusetts is finding the rule to which he refers—

Mr. SMOOT. That is Rule XXII.

Mr. LODGE. I call the attention of the Senator from Nevada to Rule XXII. I think that rule is perfectly clear. It reads:

PRECEDENCE OF MOTIONS.

When a question is pending no motion shall be received but—

To adjourn.

To adjourn to a day certain, or that when the Senate adjourn, it shall be to a day certain—

Then the rule goes on to enumerate the other motions—which several motions shall have precedence as they stand arranged—
And continues—

And the motions relating to adjournment—

The pending motion is a motion relating to adjournment—and the motions relating to adjournment, to take a recess, to proceed to the consideration of executive business, to lay on the table, shall be decided without debate.

I have no desire to cut off debate unduly, though I reserve the point of order, but I hope the question may be decided by the Senate one way or the other just as quickly as possible. I think it is well for us to know if we are going to stay here and take no recess.

Mr. PITTMAN. I have not had time to look up the question, but I have always been of the opinion that a motion to adjourn to a day certain was not such a motion to adjourn as was contemplated in Rule XXII, where the rule states the motions relating to adjournment.

Mr. LODGE. The motion that when the Senate adjourn it shall be to a day certain is specifically covered in the rule which I have just read.

Mr. PITTMAN. It is stated as a matter of precedence as to the order of the precedence of motions.

Mr. LODGE. They are all privileged motions and are not debatable.

Mr. PITTMAN. I am not questioning that they are all privileged motions, and the order of precedence is set down in the rule. It is further stated in the rule itself that the motions relating to adjournment are not debatable, as I remember.

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. But I think that presiding officers have held—at least I have it firmly in mind—that such a resolution as that now pending was subject to debate.

Mr. LODGE. Former Vice President Marshall held that there was an exception on the question of debate, because as to the case then in issue the resolution was a concurrent resolution, affecting both Houses of Congress. I have never been able to accept that doctrine, because the language of the rule is perfectly clear. It says: "Motions relating to adjournment."
This is a motion relating to adjournment.

Mr. PITTMAN. I realize that the Senator from Massachusetts is going to make his point of order, and I will simply trespass no further on his time before he makes it.

Mr. LODGE. I do not wish to make the point of order. I am very anxious to get a vote, of course, but I desire every Senator to have a reasonable opportunity, if he so desires, to state his opinion.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will state my reasons for voting against the recess when the vote shall come. I do not see why the House and the Senate can not be engaged in the transaction of public business while the Finance Committee is working on a bill, no matter how important the bill may be. We have in the past had that great committee and other committees of the Senate conduct the business of the committees without adjourning the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Sometimes that course has been followed and sometimes it has not been followed.

Mr. PITTMAN. If there were no important matters coming before Congress, it would be very well to recess or adjourn; but I can not conceive on what theory we will recess unless it is that there are no urgent matters pending.

We have been in extraordinary session for over four months.
We had measures of great importance pending here in February that were considered even that far back that have not as yet been acted upon.

Mr. LODGE. That was in a previous session.

Mr. PITTMAN. Undoubtedly. We had a recess after the 4th of March and came back here and have not acted upon them yet. We have most strenuously endeavored to pass an act allowing the War Finance Corporation to relieve the emergency with regard to the export of farm products. We are about to vote to adjourn this body on Saturday without having any assurance that that bill will have passed both Houses finally before that time.

Mr. LODGE. I think as to that bill I can give the Senator every assurance that there will be no recess until that measure is disposed of.

Mr. PITTMAN. But that assurance, of course, is dependent on what—

Mr. LODGE. The Senator must remember that this concurrent resolution has to go to the House, and the House may hold it until they can arrange the dates.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator is basing his assurance on something that another body, of which he is not a member, may do or may not do. It seems to me that it would be a much safer proposition to hold the concurrent resolution for two or three days. It will only take an hour or two to pass it through the House, if they desire to pass it. Under the position the Senator from Massachusetts takes with regard to limiting the debate, which amounts to cutting off debate—

Mr. LODGE. It is not that, Mr. President.

Mr. PITTMAN. And I have no doubt that his point of order will be sustained—this resolution could be brought up and passed on Saturday. On that day we will know the condition we shall then be in; now we do not know what condition we shall be in at that time.

Mr. LODGE. I think we do know the condition we are in as well as we shall know it on Saturday, and the House, unless I am very much misinformed, when they once send the tax bill over here and dispose of the War Finance Corporation bill designed for the relief of the agricultural situation, will take a recess.

Mr. PITTMAN. That may all be true enough.

Mr. LODGE. I think it is desirable that the two Houses should act together. This concurrent resolution is simply designed to give the other House an opportunity to arrange the dates so as to meet the question of the bill to which reference has been made.

Mr. PITTMAN. The only difference in the question of policy is as to whether or not this body will determine on a recess, so far as it is concerned, before it knows that important business has passed, or whether it will pass the resolution now, believing that it will be held up in the House awaiting the determination of important and urgent legislation.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. STANLEY. I should like to suggest that if possible the Senator from Massachusetts frame his motion so as to incorporate in it a proviso that the proposed adjournment shall take place at a certain time, provided the farmers' relief bill shall have passed both Houses. I see much pertinency in the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts, but at the same time I hesitate to allow any possible contingency to interfere with the passage of the farmers' relief bill prior to the passage of a similar bill for the relief of the railroads. We have turned over to the War Finance Corporation $500,000,000, the greater part of which is now available.

If by any contingency the bill for the relief of the railroads should pass and go into operation and the farmers' relief bill should strike a snag in any of the parliamentary stages necessary to pass it through the two Houses, it might not take many days to exhaust the entire available funds of the War Finance Corporation and leave the farmers' relief bill a mere promise to pay or a mere kind expression on the part of Congress. For that reason I am unwilling to agree to adjourn until it is positively certain that the farmers' relief bill is a law, at least in so far as the two Houses can make it a law. I will take a chance on the President signing it.

Mr. LODGE. I never knew of attaching such a proviso as that to a resolution of the kind now proposed. It is perfectly easy to amend the resolution and fix a date, which may be afterwards modified by the House, so far ahead that it will be certain to afford time for the passage of the so-called farmers' relief bill, which I think there can be no doubt is coming over to-day and about which I do not understand that there will be any difficulty at all. If we begin to provide that a recess shall not be taken until we dispose of this bill, and then that bill, and then another bill, we will of course have no recess.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, there is another matter that possibly is not of universal importance with regard to which I have already spoken on a prior occasion. I refer to road legislation. Some of the Senators from the West—I believe the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS] is among them—do not believe that this is an emergency matter. I think my colleague from Nevada [Mr. ODDIE] does not consider it an emergency matter, and yet I have in my possession telegrams from the governor, from the road department, from all of the various road associations and clubs of the State urging most emphatically that this is an emergency matter in the West and that there should be some action upon it before the recess. That bill is in such a form that if it were crowded it might be passed between now and Saturday.

I do not know the exact course that the Senator having charge of the bill, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND], will take. He could, I believe, send it to conference now. It is on the calendar. There is a disagreement on the bill between the two Houses.

The Senate passed the bill, the House struck out all after the enacting clause, and substituted another bill; and now the Senate committee have amended the House amendment by incorporating new matter, but still it seems to be in disagreement between the two Houses. I should like to know whether or not the Senator from Michigan, having charge of that bill, is going to put it in conference.

Mr. LODGE. The road bill has just been reported.

Mr. PITTMAN. The road bill was reported yesterday.

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. I was expecting yesterday that when the road bill was reported the chairman of the committee, owing to the urgency of the matter and owing to his statements that the committee was going to hurry up and act on it right away, would ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that report. There was not very much going on yesterday, and that report could have been acted on and it could have gone to conference in the form in which the Senate passed it.

Mr. LODGE. Does the Senator think that bill is going through right away?

Mr. PITTMAN. I hope so. Of course, I realize—and I will admit to the Senator the realization—that the amendment the committee has now placed upon the House bill changes the original legislation a great deal and probably brings into it a great many controversial questions which were not there before; and that was the reason why the other day, before the committee had acted, I urged the committee not to mix up general road legislation with the remedial legislation originally carried in the Phipps bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, of course, there are bills that will be put over for 30 days if we take a recess. There will be that period during which we shall not take up general legislation. My object in moving the passage of this concurrent resolution is to get a decision of the Senate upon it. A majority of the Senate, on both sides—a very decisive majority—have told me they desire to take a recess, and have come to me about it, and have come to me every day. My own belief is that we shall expedite the public business if we take a recess of 30 days. I believe it will add at least 50 per cent to the time which will be devoted by the Finance Committee to the tax bill and the tariff bill, which are the two great measures that will have to be disposed of and that will take precedence of everything else.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly. The Senator from Nevada has the floor, however. He kindly yielded to me.

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why did the resolution take the form of a proposal to adjourn, rather than to take a recess?

Mr. LODGE. That is the way in which a recess is taken, by naming the dates. At least I know of no other way to take a recess than to give the dates.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I know; but it says that the Senate shall adjourn to a day certain, instead of recessing.

Mr. LODGE. It says that when the Senate adjourns it shall be to a certain date, and that makes the recess. It always has been done in that way.

Mr. WILLIAMS. All right. I just wanted to know. It struck me that the question of mileage might come up in connection with a resolution in this form.

Mr. LODGE. If we want to take a recess, we shall have to do it in that way—by a resolution that when the Senate adjourns, or when the Senate takes a recess, it shall be to a certain date.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, of course, if the chairman of the Post Office Committee and the Republican leaders on that committee are not going to try to pass this road bill now, if they are determined to let it go for action until after the recess, it is perfectly apparent that there is nothing that those who favor the bill can do to accomplish haste in the matter; and yet it is a matter of such great importance to the public-land States that I do not see how any Senator from the public-land States can vote for a recess and delay that legislation for months. As I stated before, road work has practically stopped in the public-land States because of the uncertainty of the legislation at this time. No State is going to allocate an amount equal to that furnished by the Government when it is the plain intent of Congress, as expressed in various bills, to relieve the public-land States from the burden they now bear. This road legislation is of such importance that all of the institutions and all of the public officers and road societies and automobile clubs are indorsing that position, and are opposing a recess of Congress while a bill which is now so near passage and so near action is pending.

That, however, is not the only bill. You have here a very important bill reported by the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands, dealing with the question of irrigation in the West. The bill was considered by the committee almost essential to the further reclamation of arid lands and to the development of the existing projects. That bill was reported to the Senate a month or so ago. It is now, I believe, ready for action. It is an exceedingly important matter. Why should we western Senators, I should like to know, be in favor of returning out West and probably being there a week or ten days, after taking the time coming and going, when the deck is cleared for action, so to speak, for western legislation?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if the Senator thinks the deck is cleared for action for western legislation, I think he errs. There are some other very important bills pressing for consideration at this time. There is the railroad bill, which many people scattered through the whole country think it is of very great importance to dispose of.

Mr. PITTMAN. I am glad the Senator from Massachusetts agrees that there is a lot of other very important legislation.

Mr. LODGE. There is. I think we shall deal with it better if the Senate, tired out as it now is, and with great difficulty in getting a quorum, shall have two or three weeks of recess. I think we will get on a good deal faster in that way than we will as we are now. We will get practically nothing done until the tariff and the tax bills come in if we stay here.

Mr. PITTMAN. It would appear that the effect of the recess on this very important pending legislation to which the Senator refers, and to which I refer, will be that we will convene about the time the Finance Committee is ready to report the tariff bill.

Mr. LODGE. Undoubtedly, and the tax bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. And the tax bill; and those two measures, being considered the most important measures before Congress, will have the right of way, and all of this other important legislation now pending and ready for action will necessarily be delayed until after the passage of those great measures. No one has any doubt that there will be a great deal of debate on both of those measures. There undoubtedly will be a great deal of difference of opinion, even between Senators on the other side, as to many of the items of the tariff and many of the provisions of the revenue bill. We have had less radical changes in other tariff bills heretofore that it took two or three months to pass. We have had less radical changes in revenue legislation that has required several months for passage. In other words, a recess at this time for the purpose of keeping us in recess until the tariff and revenue bills are reported means not simply the postponement of these important measures during the period of the recess, but it means their postponement for several months, until after the tariff and revenue legislation is disposed of. In voting for a recess you are voting practically to postpone indefinitely all of the legislation now pending that the Senator from Massachusetts himself recognizes is important.

You even proceed to adjourn in a condition where it is impossible to have knowledge as to what is going to happen to the bill intended to aid the farmers in the exportation of their products.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The Senator's last remark seems to me to put the legislative situation about in this wise, that the adjournment or the recess is of very much more importance than the legislation to which the Senator has referred. If this legislation which all of us who have expressed any interest in it think should pass is important legislation, why should we fix a time for adjournment when we do not know what is going to happen to the legislation? If the legislation is of importance, why should we not pass it first and then find out whether or not we have an opportunity for a proper recess period? To fix a time now, in this uncertain state of the legislation, seems to me extremely unwise.

Mr. PITTMAN. We can pass a resolution of adjournment through both Houses in four or five hours. Therefore there is no necessity for passing a resolution of adjournment several days before the period set for adjournment. It would have the appearance of attempting to anticipate that certain legislation would not be ready for passage rather than to place the date so that the legislation could pass.

I know that at the present time I am speaking by sufferance of the Senator from Massachusetts. He has a right to make his point of order at any moment. I presume he will make the point of order when he feels that this debate has gone far enough. I intend, however, to contest the point of order on an appeal to the Senate; but I do not desire by proceeding along that line now to debar other Senators from stating their position on this matter. I therefore give notice to the Senator from Massachusetts that after other Senators have spoken I intend to seek the recognition of the Chair, and I intend to address myself to matters of importance, particularly bills now pending, and if the Senator from Massachusetts then will make his point of order we will, of course, have a right to appeal from the decision of the Chair, assuming that the Chair sustains him.

Mr. LODGE. I have no desire to do that; but it seems to me it is only fair to Senators to submit this matter to a vote within a reasonable time. Of course, if it is intended to filibuster on this resolution it can be carried along for some days.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, would the Senator from Massachusetts consider a proposition to postpone a vote on the resolution for a day or two? I ask that question because a number of us—though I speak only for myself, of course—are very much interested in two measures which have already passed the Senate and are now pending in the House. In the consideration of one of them undoubtedly the House will appoint its conferees to-day. I think the Senator from Massachusetts is quite right in desiring a recess, but, so far as I am concerned, I shall not feel justified in voting for one until we know what disposition is to be made of those two measures. Could not a vote on the resolution be postponed for a day or two?

Mr. LODGE. I am perfectly willing to postpone a vote on the resolution if I can get an agreement to vote upon it.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, it seems to me advisable to withhold any vote upon the resolution now, because, as the Senator from Massachusetts knows, when a time is fixed for adjournment or for a recess it is quite easy for one or two Senators, or a small minority of the body opposed to any legislation which may be pending, to discuss it to such an extent as to prevent action upon it prior to the adjournment. It appears to me that it would invite a filibuster, to use an opprobrious term, upon those measures to which a large majority of the Senate may be committed.

Mr. LODGE. I see the point the Senator makes; but, of course, if we are to take a recess at all such a resolution as this ought to be voted upon. If it is to be subjected to indefinite debate, it will postpone every other measure just as much, if I try to keep it before the Senate; and I have a right to keep it before the Senate because it is privileged. The course proposed by the Senator from Nevada, of course, will shut out everything else. I am perfectly willing, as I have said, to postpone it, but it seems to me I ought, in fairness, to have a unanimous-consent agreement to vote at a certain time.

Mr. WILLIS. I suggest that we agree to vote on Friday.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I can conceive of a situation arising where some of us would be agreeable to a recess, but in the absence of some indication of the passage of legislation in which we are vitally interested we necessarily will be compelled to vote against a recess. I am inclined to think that the Senator would be satisfying a very large percentage of Senators by withholding action upon the resolution at this time.

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD telegrams from the governor of the State of Nevada, the Nevada Highway Association, and other public bodies, touching the pending road legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent that the telegrams he sends to the desk may be printed in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CARSON, NEV., August 13, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Road legislation is our most crying need, and everyone appreciates your action in resisting the recessing of Congress until action has been had on some measure carrying the graduated scale. Please keep up the good work.

EMMET D. BOYLE, Governor.

CARSON CITY, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
Senator, Washington, D. C.:

We urge you to continue to block recess until road legislation is considered, as this is greatly needed by State.

NEVADA HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION.

CARSON, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
Senator, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

The public here is absolutely behind you in your attitude of opposing recess until road bill is passed. Congratulations.

C. C. COTTRELL.

CARSON, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Strongly urge continuing block until promised road legislation passed Senate.

W. P. HARRINGTON,
State Counsel Lincoln Highway.

RENO, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Senator KEY PITTMAN,
Washington, D. C.:

Your stand of yesterday demanding passage of road legislation appreciated here. Accept our thanks.

RENO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

CARSON, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

West demands road legislation without further delay, and we urge immediate action on compromise bill before adjournment.

GREATER CARSON CLUB.

RENO, NEV., August 13, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

To-day's press dispatches call attention to fact that you are determined to secure favorable action on the Phipps-McDowell Federal highway construction bill before fall recess of Congress. Board of directors of Reno Lions Club, in special session, to-day passed resolutions highly commending your efforts and determination in this matter. We consider the passage of this measure of vital importance to the progress and prosperity of Nevada.

S. M. SAMPLE, President.

RENO, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Factions seem to be together now on road legislation in which we are so interested. Appreciate your efforts of yesterday and stand you have taken.

ROTARY CLUB OF RENO,
A. R. KENT, Secretary.

VIRGINIA CITY, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Accept warmest congratulations your splendid work in forcing consideration highway legislation. Best wishes.

JAMES M. LEONARD,
Chairman State Highway Department.

VIRGINIA CITY, NEV., August 12, 1921.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your fine efforts behalf highway legislation at this time much appreciated here.

H. L. SLOSSON,
President Savage and Gould and Curry Mining Co.

LOVELOCK, NEV., August 13, 1921.

KEY PITTMAN,
Senator from Nevada, Washington, D. C.:

We congratulate you on your splendid work in trying to prevent the present Congress from taking a vacation until they have really done something and particularly to take action on the compromise road bill. Road building in the public-land States is at a standstill until this necessary legislation is enacted, and we urge you to keep up the good work and assure you we are solidly behind you in your determined fight to get results.

OVERLAND TRAIL CLUB.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, to bring this matter to an issue, I ask unanimous consent that the further consideration of the resolution be postponed until Friday at 2 o'clock, and that at that time we shall proceed to vote, without further debate, on the resolution.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not make that request. It seems to me the Senator from Massachusetts ought to have control of the resolution with respect to the matter suggested now by the Senator. Something may arise tomorrow, or perhaps the following day, that will justify us in asking for a vote at that time.

Personally I think that we should take a recess. A large number of Senators are absent, some have been absent and are now here, and some have been here constantly since the opening day of the session. We all know that the work before the Senate—and I refer now particularly to the revenue legislation and the tax legislation—will require the attention of the Finance Committee during the recess. A number of hearings have been ordered, and I know it is the purpose of some of the Senators to act during the recess in the discharge of the obligations resting upon them with respect to those hearings.

We know that when we convene again, if we take a recess, we shall be here for an indefinite period, extending perhaps until late next year. I believe we ought to have a brief recess, and if we do not take it now we will not get it. There is no advantage, in my opinion, in not taking a recess, and I want to say that I do not think there is any political advantage to be gained by the Democratic Party or by any Democrats, or by Republicans, for that matter, in opposing the proposed recess.

Mr. LODGE obtained the floor.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. If the Senator from Massachusetts was going to ask that the resolution be postponed, I do not care to occupy the time of the Senate. I do not know for what purpose the Senator rose.

Mr. LODGE. I was going to express a hope that the request of the Senator from Ohio shall be agreed to. Resolutions of this sort are rarely debatable, and I think on such a resolution we must take a vote and decide one way or the other, whether we are going to take a recess or not. If we keep debating it indefinitely, we postpone all other business, and postpone the recess by carrying on the debate eternally.

Mr. BORAH. I have no objection to the Senate fixing a time certain to vote, if that is what the Senator is asking.

Mr. LODGE. That is all I seek.

Mr. BORAH. I have some observations to make in regard to the adjournment, but I have no desire to object to the fixing of a time to vote. I realize that the Senator has a right to have a vote on his resolution.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I make the further suggestion to the Senator from Massachusetts that, as I understand it, this is a privileged resolution, and a resolution which must be decided without debate, if a point of order is made.

Mr. LODGE. I shall not make the point of order, Mr. President, if I can get an agreement to vote on Friday at 2 o'clock, as proposed by the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The Senator is in a very advantageous position, as he can get a vote at any time he demands it, and that being so, as suggested, why should there be an agreement now as to the time for a vote? We can not foretell what the situation will be on Friday.

Mr. LODGE. It is simply because many Senators have requested it. If we could get an agreement to vote on the resolution, I should not feel it my duty, as I should otherwise, to keep the resolution before the Senate until it is disposed of. I do not want to do that and interfere with the other matters.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. May I inquire can not the Senator introduce this resolution at any time and would it not have a privileged status?

Mr. LODGE. If it is going to be put over, I ask for an agreement on a time to vote; that is all. All I want is the instruction of the Senate with regard to it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understand that the Senator from Ohio asked unanimous consent for a vote to be taken, without further debate, on Friday at 2 o'clock.

Mr. LODGE. At 2 o'clock.

Mr. McKELLAR. It seems to me that that is very much better than voting now. We will know very much better what is the condition of pending legislation.

Mr. LODGE. We shall know the conditions, and we shall know whether we will have to postpone beginning the recess until some day next week, as we may have to do.

Mr. McKELLAR. In the meantime, I shall use every endeavor to have called up and pass the bill in which I am interested, of which I have already spoken, the roads bill. I think there will be no material opposition to it, and I hope that it may be passed before the recess.

Mr. LODGE. If I can have an agreement to take a vote on Friday, as suggested by the Senator from Ohio, I shall withdraw the resolution now.

Mr. PITTMAN. I object to that agreement.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator objects. Very well, Mr. President; then I think we had better go on and dispose of the resolution.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Before the Senator makes his point of order, may I not rather insist on the suggestion which I made a few moments ago? The Senator can introduce his resolution on Friday at any time he sees fit.

Mr. LODGE. I am perfectly aware of that, Mr. President. I can make a motion to adjourn now.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. And the Senator can get a vote without any delay, whenever he insists on it. We can not possibly anticipate at this moment what may be the status of business here on Friday at 2 o'clock, and if the Senator from Nevada had not objected I would have been compelled to do so, not because I am not perfectly willing that the Senator from Massachusetts shall take the sentiment of the Senate as to the time for the taking of the recess, but the Senator can certainly get a vote on that proposition at any time he sees fit. Why, may I inquire, is it necessary to now fix a time for voting when we are not advised as to what the situation of legislation may be?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I can not get a vote at any time I see fit unless I make a point of order and we debate that for a long time first. I have tried to be as liberal about it as possible and give every Senator a chance to say what he desired; but when a Senator gives notice that he is going to debate a great question elaborately, then I shall have to make the point of order. I do not know how the Chair will rule, but I should have to make the point of order, and if the Chair rules, which I think is the correct ruling, that the resolution relates to a motion to adjourn, and therefore is not debatable, of course that would cut off debate, and we should have a vote. I am very reluctant to do that. I prefer that Senators should express their views in regard to the proposed adjournment. But if an effort is going to be made to delay it by elaborate speeches on any kind of subject, of course you simply hold up, then, all business of the Senate while we talk about a privileged motion to adjourn.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to put my request for unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the request for unanimous consent.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS] asks unanimous consent that the further consideration of the resolution (Senate concurrent resolution 8), providing for an adjournment of the two Houses of Congress from August 20 to September 19, 1921, be postponed until 2 o'clock p. m. on the calendar day of Friday, August 19, 1921, and that at the hour named on the said calendar day a vote shall be taken upon the said resolution.

Mr. BORAH. Does it say "further consideration of the resolution?"

Mr. WILLIS. Let the Secretary read it again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again read the request.

The request was again read by the Assistant Secretary.

Mr. LODGE. It was certainly not my intention to cut off any debate in regard to the resolution itself which Senators chose to indulge in. It was simply that we should have a vote at that time.

Mr. BORAH. I suppose "further consideration" would not preclude further debate?

Mr. LODGE. Oh, no. I can call it up at any time Senators desire it, of course, because it is privileged.

Mr. PITTMAN. The proposed agreement provides for a final vote on the resolution at 2 o'clock on Friday?

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. We shall not be in any better position at 2 o'clock Friday, in my opinion, than we are now, and we shall probably be in worse position, because, as has been suggested, it is notice to those who are opposed to pending legislation that there is only a limited length of time to be consumed in order to kill it. The Senator from Ohio evidently has in mind the so-called beer bill.

Mr. WILLIS. Not that alone, Mr. President. There is other legislation, such as the so-called farmers bill. Both those measures can be acted upon by that time.

Mr. PITTMAN. I did not mean that the Senator was not interested in other legislation. I meant that he had that particularly in mind, and it must occur to him that when it is known to the opponents of that bill that this body is going to adjourn on Friday at 2 o'clock it will be very easy for them to see that that bill does not pass.

Mr. WILLIS. There is no proposition that this body is to adjourn at 2 o'clock on Friday. The only proposition is to fix a time for a vote on the resolution. That is all there is to it.

Mr. PITTMAN. It does not say alone take it up. It says take it up and vote on it.

Mr. WILLIS. There is no proposition to adjourn on that day.

Mr. PITTMAN. It means that we will adjourn on that day with the present temper of this body.

Mr. WILLIS. But the resolution of the Senator from Massachusetts does not provide for adjournment on that day.

Mr. PITTMAN. On the next day.

Mr. LODGE. It has to go to the House where it can be amended very easily. In fact, we can change the date in it ourselves if we choose.

Mr. PITTMAN. If the House is to have control of this matter of adjournment, why do we initiate it? Why not let the House have it? What difference does it make?

Mr. LODGE. The House have no more control over it than we have. They have just the same control. We can modify a House concurrent resolution and have done it, and have held it here until we could see what modification if any should be made under the course of business. The House have just as much control as we have, of course.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yet the Senator says they will amend it if necessary.

Mr. LODGE. They may change the date if they think proper, as we have changed the date in resolutions originating there time and again.

Mr. PITTMAN. There are bills pending in the House, not in this body. The House has control of that legislation and we are waiting for that legislation to be passed. We are waiting for this aid to the farmers bill to be passed. It is not in this body; it is in the control of the House. Therefore the House ought to have control of the recess proposition, and not the Senate. The House ought to determine with reference to the measures pending before them when they will proceed to consider them.

Why we should take snap judgment now in this body on the matter of adjournment when it will not be acted on probably for two or three days in the other body and may be changed, depending on legislation now pending there, is not understood by me. It looks as though we might have the votes here today and not have them to-morrow. I object to the unanimous-consent agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made to the request of the Senator from Ohio. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads have, in my judgment, done exactly what I expressed the other day as my opinion they would do in regard to this legislation. They have imposed on a bill that has passed both branches of Congress a new bill, and that bill is now before the Senate.

I wish to read from the majority report of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads to sustain the position that I take in the matter. The report was made on yesterday, and reads as follows:

The Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1355) to provide for the establishment, construction, and maintenance of a post roads and interstate highway system, to create a Federal highway commission, and for other purposes, report it back with amendments, and as thus amended recommend its passage.

In view of the very general interest in the subject and the fact that the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads has held hearings and given serious thought and consideration to the subject over a period of several years, the committee feels justified in presenting a general review of its labors and an analysis of the bill here presented, together with a statement of the essential differences from the law passed in 1916 as amended in 1919.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I think the question may as well be determined now as at any other time. I make the point of order under Rule XXII that this being a motion relating to adjournment it is not debatable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LENROOT). The Senator from Massachusetts makes the point of order that the concurrent resolution is not debatable under Rule XXII. The Chair has examined the question somewhat and finds that the precedents are conflicting. The Chair would have no question concerning the correctness of a ruling if the concurrent resolution had come before the Senate under Rule XXII. Rule XXII provides that—

When a question is pending, no motion shall be received but—stating the several privileged motions. Among them are included the motions to take a recess and to adjourn—which several motions shall have precedence as they stand arranged; and the motions relating to adjournment, to take a recess, to proceed to the consideration of executive business, to lay on the table, shall be decided without debate.

The question arises as to whether the phrase "the motions relating to adjournment, to take a recess," is not limited to the motions that are made under Rule XXII; in other words, made when a question is pending. If the concurrent resolution were introduced after 2 o'clock, the Chair would have no doubt that it would not be debatable. It so happens, however, that when the concurrent resolution was offered and received there was no question pending, and the Chair is inclined to think that it does not, therefore, come within the prohibition of Rule XXII, but it is clearly analogous to it.

Inasmuch, therefore, as the question has never been decided, the Chair will submit the question to the Senate. The question is, Is the concurrent resolution debatable?

Mr. PITTMAN. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For what purpose does the Senator arise?

Mr. BORAH. A parliamentary inquiry. The proposition as to whether or not it is debatable being submitted to the Senate is a debatable question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the Chair will treat the submission of the question to the Senate exactly the same as if he had ruled and there had been an appeal from his ruling, in which case the question would not have been debatable.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I agree that the Chair is right in drawing that distinction, there being no business pending, but I understood the Chair to say—and the Chair will correct me if I am wrong—that if business had been pending and this resolution had taken precedence under Rule XXII, it then would have come under the provisions of that rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would have so held.

Mr. LODGE. And that it is not debatable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And that it is not debatable.

Mr. LODGE. Then I withdraw my point of order and renew the question of agreeing to the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is withdrawn, and the question now is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. LODGE. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution, and at the proper time I shall, of course, renew it, when business is pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Of course, the Senator from Massachusetts understands the Chair did not rule that it was not debatable, but stated that he would submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, yes; I understood that.

Mr. PITTMAN. Then I shall proceed to lay before the Senate the report of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to submit a report, so that it may go to the Printing Office.

From the Committee on Appropriations I report back favorably with amendments the bill (H. R. 8117) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 260) thereon. I give notice that I shall call the bill up at an early date, probably to-morrow.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, may I inquire if the bill has relation to appropriations for the Shipping Board?

Mr. WARREN. It relates to a very great many things, but it does contain an appropriation for the Shipping Board.

Mr. BORAH. That is one of the things I wish to call attention to before the question of adjournment is determined. As the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] has the floor, I only wish to mention the fact that I would like to have the deficiency appropriation bill, which has reference to and makes appropriations for the Shipping Board, disposed of before we dispose of the motion with reference to the concurrent resolution. If there is any cesspool in the world that ought to be cleaned out, and we know what we are going to do, it is the Shipping Board proposition. To have Congress run away from here with only a cursory consideration would be unjustifiable from every standpoint.

If the deficiency appropriation bill is coming before the Senate, then I sincerely hope we will not be in such position that we can not go into that matter. I have here upon my desk that testimony which has just been taken with regard to the Shipping Board and Baron Munchausen never wrote anything equal to it.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to say to the Senator that he undoubtedly speaks only of the testimony taken before the House committee?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. The Senate committee has also taken an abundance of testimony which will go to the printer to-day and will be before the Senate to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. BORAH. I am not going to discuss it now because the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] has the floor, but I wish to give notice that in the future I shall do so.

PROPOSED RECESS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like very much to hear the Senator from Nevada speak, but I have no desire to keep him on the floor until 2 o'clock when the unanimous-consent agreement will displace his discussion in any event. I do not know that I have the right to do so, but if there is no objection,

I ask permission to withdraw the resolution, and I shall submit it at a subsequent time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts to withdraw his concurrent resolution?

Mr. PITTMAN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I know that the Senate desires to hear this very enlightening report from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with regard to roads. The committee have said that they have been considering this subject for several years. The committee composed of these very able Senators have been giving seven years of intense thought to this matter, and after that length of time they have brought in a bill which they seem to be afraid to submit to the Senate.

It is a strange thing that less than a week ago the chairman of that committee should have been so anxious to assure the Senate that he was going to hasten this legislation. Now, he sits in his place and makes no statement to this body with regard to the time when he is going to ask for action on the legislation. I have asked whether he expects to pass it before there is any recess and I hear nothing from him in reply.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I did not hear what the Senator said, if he was addressing me.

Mr. PITTMAN. I asked if the Senator expects to pass the good-roads legislation before the Senate takes a recess?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Not if the Senator from Nevada takes all the time that is left between now and the time proposed for a recess in discussing a matter that is not before the Senate.

Mr. PITTMAN. But the Senator is only addressing the Senate to keep from having the time cut off in which the Senate may act.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is no excuse. The question of taking a recess has been withdrawn, or rather the offer was made by the Senator from Massachusetts to withdraw it, and the Senator from Nevada objected.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is hardly a fair statement to the Senate, when the Senator from Michigan knows that the Senator from Massachusetts, in asking to have it withdrawn, had in mind the purpose of having it voted on immediately after 2 o'clock.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, no, Mr. President.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Furthermore, let me say, inasmuch as the Senator has interrogated me, that the Senator understands from the meeting that was just held, over which I presided, that I was anxious to report back to the Senate the road bill, and this morning, and when the first opportunity was given to me to call it up, the Senator from Nevada has prevented that possibility.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think that is hardly—

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me one moment, I said that at 2 o'clock the unanimous-consent agreement with reference to the rent act would come before the Senate and that, of course, displaces everything at that time.

Mr. PITTMAN. Undoubtedly; and then there will be business before the Senate, and the Senator's point of order against debating the matter of a recess after that hour will be in order.

Mr. LODGE. When there is business before the Senate I shall certainly bring it up.

Mr. PITTMAN. Undoubtedly. We should not try to deceive ourselves about the matter, because it is apparent.

Mr. LODGE. I endeavored not to deceive the Senator.

Mr. PITTMAN. Oh, no; but I did not want the Senator to deceive himself nor the Senator from Michigan. I was afraid the Senator from Michigan was deceived by the Senator's offer of withdrawal. He seemed to feel that that ended it.

Now, as to the serious charge that the Senator from Michigan has made, that the Senator from Nevada is responsible for the road bill not having been called up this morning, I desire to say a few words. I assume that he bases that on the ground that while a member of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and while present there, I offered an amendment to the bill then pending before the committee to protect the farmers—

Mr. TOWNSEND. Oh, no.

Mr. PITTMAN. Then I do not know what it is.

Mr. TOWNSEND. No. The Senator evidently was charging me with being dilatory in calling up the bill. I suggested in the committee meeting this morning that I wanted to quit at 12 o'clock in order to get over to the Senate to call up the road bill, which had been reported on yesterday.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator could have called up the bill on yesterday by unanimous consent.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator knows that it was not possible then to call it up. It was only reported on yesterday and had not even been printed. The Senate has not had an opportunity to see it, and we know and the Senator from Nevada knows that there are many Senators who would object to any road bill being considered by unanimous consent. The bill must be called up and was to be called up as soon as printed and that was not until to-day. If the Senator from Nevada had not occupied the time this morning in his discussion the bill, which ought to be called up in order, when we can get action upon it, would have been called before this time.

Mr. PITTMAN. I am trying to understand the Senator from Michigan. Was it some act of the Senator from Nevada in committee which he charges delayed the bill?

Mr. TOWNSEND. It was not, but it is the Senator's action now.

Mr. PITTMAN. Oh, now?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes; this day, on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. PITTMAN. There were quite a few minutes this morning during which the Senator had an opportunity to call up the bill. I have no doubt that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] would have withdrawn his resolution for a recess in order to allow the Senator from Michigan to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. If the Senator will now yield, and give me the opportunity of calling up the road bill, I will do so.

Mr. PITTMAN. Undoubtedly, if the bill is going to be allowed to be considered, I shall be very glad to yield to the Senator for that purpose. I certainly desire action on the road bill. That is what I am contending for.

INTERSTATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I ask unanimous consent to call up the amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 1072 for the purpose of considering the amendment which the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads has reported in lieu of the House amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 1072.

Mr. LODGE. What bill is that?

Mr. McKELLAR. It is the road bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. LODGE. I object, Mr. President. That is a very important bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Would a motion be in order to take the amendment up at this time, notwithstanding the objection?

Mr. SIMMONS and Mr. PITTMAN. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. There is another measure coming up under a unanimous-consent agreement at 2 o'clock.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I know that, but I have in mind the time until 2 o'clock. A parliamentary inquiry. Would a motion now be in order to take up the House amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would be inclined to rule that such a motion would be in order. Ordinarily, of course, the resolution for an adjournment which has been submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] would present a privileged question; such a motion is always privileged when another question is pending; but the Chair is inclined to rule that, there being no other question pending at the time the resolution of the Senator from Massachusetts was asked to be considered, the motion of the Senator from Michigan is in order, although the Senator from Massachusetts could immediately submit his motion if the bill were taken up, and the motion would then become privileged.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 1072.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill named by him, the title of which will be stated.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1072) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan to proceed to the consideration of the House amendment to the bill the title of which has just been stated.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 1072, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is upon the amendment reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads by Mr. STERLING (for Mr. TOWNSEND).

Mr. KING. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. Is the pending bill a House bill or Senate bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a Senate bill.

Mr. KING. Is it a Senate bill which has been reported by the committee, so that it follows the usual parliamentary procedure?

Mr. McKELLAR. It is a substitute for the House amendment to the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the parliamentary status. The pending bill was a Senate bill which passed the Senate; which then passed the other House with an amendment; was returned to the Senate; referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and has now been reported from the committee with a substitute amendment. The question is on agreeing to the amendment in the form of a substitute reported by the committee to the House amendment.

Mr. KING. Let the proposed substitute be read.

Mr. ASHURST. Let it be read. I should like also to have some explanation in regard to it.

Mr. KING. May I inquire if the amendment which has been reported by the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads has been printed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that the amendment has been printed and is upon the desks of Senators. The Secretary will state the proposed substitute.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. In lieu of the matter inserted by the House amendment, it is proposed to insert the following—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator desire to have the amendment read?

Mr. ASHURST. I ask that the amendment be read.

Mr. LODGE. Let the amendment be read for the information of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the amendment reported by the committee.

The Assistant Secretary proceeded to read the amendment reported by the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads as a substitute for the amendment of the House of Representatives, and read as follows:

That this act may be cited as the Federal highway act.

SEC. 2. That when used in this act, unless the context indicates otherwise—

The term "Federal aid act" means the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended by sections 5 and 6 of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1919, and all other acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto.

The term "commission" means the post roads and Federal highway commission created by this act.

The term "highway" includes rights of way, bridges, drainage structures, signs, guard rails, and protective structures in connection with highways, but shall not include any highway or street in a municipality having a population of 5,000 or more as shown by the last available census, except that portion of any such highway or street along which within a distance of 1 mile the houses average more than 200 feet apart.

The term "State highway department" includes any State department, commission, board, or official having adequate powers and suitably equipped to discharge to the satisfaction of the commission the duties herein required.

The term "maintenance" means the constant making of needed repairs to preserve a smooth surfaced highway.

The term "construction" means not only the actual construction, but also the locating, surveying, mapping, supervising, inspecting, and all expenses incidental to the location and building of a highway.

The term "reconstruction" means a widening or a rebuilding of the highway to make it of sufficient width and strength to care adequately for traffic needs.

The term "forest roads" means roads wholly or partly within or adjacent to and serving the national forests.

SEC. 3. That a post roads and Federal highway commission is hereby created, which shall be composed of three commissioners, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The commissioners shall be appointed with due regard to a fair representation of the geographical divisions of the United States. Not more than two of the commissioners shall be members of the same political party.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. KING. I presume the matter being read by the Secretary is treated as one amendment to the entire bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been so reported by the committee.

Mr. KING. And amendments to the amendment would be in order during the progress of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They would.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Michigan whether he proposes making a general explanation of the amendment reported by the committee, and, if so, whether he prefers to make it at the conclusion of the reading or prior to the amendment being read?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I would prefer to make it at the conclusion of the reading, although I had not contemplated making any extended speech on the subject. I am very ready and willing at all times, however, to explain the measure and its provisions so far as it is desired that I should do so.

Mr. KING. The Senator knows that this bill has just been reported; it has just been printed; it has just been placed on our desks; and many of us have never seen it and are not familiar with the bill or with its provisions.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will say to the Senator that the so-called Dowell bill, which passed the House and came over here, and the bill which the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads reported some time ago and went on the calendar of the Senate, were the two bills which have generally been considered, one in the House and the other by the Senate committee. The Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads have endeavored to take those two bills and harmonize their differences so as to get practically a unanimous agreement in the committee. While the measure now pending contains one or two provisions of little consequence, perhaps, which are not found in either the House bill or the bill which the Senate committee reported, it is a combination of the provisions of both bills which we thought were desirable. We thought that some of them were necessary in order to secure a compromise measure. So the bill in the form of an amendment is a complete bill, taking the place of the bill of the Senate committee and the bill which passed the House.

Mr. KING. I inquire of the Senator at this point in regard to a matter which I understand has been somewhat acute in the form it has assumed from time to time. As I understand, there has been one school of thought that has insisted that the Federal Government should construct local highways, local roads, so-called rural roads, which would reach every house and every home and every farm; that the interests of the Federal Government were to be wholly subordinated to the interests of individuals within local communities, and that there was to be superimposed upon the Federal Government responsibilities which belong to local communities and to the States themselves. Upon the other hand, there have been those who have contended that the power of the Federal Government to construct highways would not permit it to construct local highways, highways for local communities and highways for the States, and who have insisted that the appropriations made by the Federal Government should be expended only upon those highways which are interstate and, in a word, national in character. May I inquire of the Senator which school of thought has triumphed in the formulation of this bill?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Perhaps the direct and proper answer to make to that question is that there has been somewhat of a compromise, although there is no recognition of the general principle that money can be expended anywhere that a State may desire that it shall be expended. Neither have I, and the majority who felt as I did, succeeded in confining all of the money to interstate roads which serve a Federal purpose, but that class of roads is given preference. The bill provides that the States shall designate a system of roads, not to exceed 7 per cent of the highways of the State, three-sevenths of those to be designated as interstate roads and four-sevenths as State or intercounty roads connecting with the interstate system. Then not less than 60 per cent of the Federal money shall be expended on the roads of primary or interstate importance, and the balance on the intercounty connecting roads.

It is a recognition of the principle, at least, that the Federal Government shall have something to say about the location of the roads by confining these roads to a system and stating that the interstate roads connecting the States shall be given first attention. We provide for that in the amendment as we go along, if the Senator will follow it, and then perhaps the amendment itself will answer the very question he has asked of me quite as well as I have done.

Mr. KING. As I understand the Senator, then, the committee have not differentiated between purely State highways and highways in which the Government might presumably have an interest, and the funds of the Government may be devoted to the construction of purely local highways, purely State roads?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Hardly that; because, in the first place, the States have to designate a system of roads not exceeding 7 per cent of the roads of the State, which must be approved by the commission. Forty per cent of the Federal aid may be expended on intercounty roads connecting with the interstate roads and not less than 60 per cent on the interstate roads.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Michigan if the Federal commission has any authority in connection with the selection of the local roads to which the Government is to contribute?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes. The Federal commission approves just as it does under the law that now exists; that is, the State highway department can approve or disapprove a road upon which Federal money may be expended. The bill that we reported here provided that this system should be laid out by the commission, but this amendment reverses it by saying that the States must lay out the system, to be approved by the commission.

Mr. McKELLAR. Just the same as it is now.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; but I understood that that applied, of course, to what are designated or what we usually speak of as interstate roads. What I am inquiring about is whether the Federal commission will have authority to veto, if it sees fit, a local road to which the Government is expected to contribute which may be laid out or selected by the local authorities.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Connecting with the interstate roads?

Mr. SIMMONS. Connecting with the interstate roads; yes.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It would have that right.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will say to the Senator that it would have that right under the present law.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Just as the present law is.

Mr. SIMMONS. So that the meaning of it is that in the first instance the State authorities select the roads, whether interstate or local?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. But in both instances their action must have the approval of the Federal commission?

Mr. TOWNSEND. The amendment does not change the present law a bit. That is what the law is to-day.

Mr. McKELLAR. The only change in the present law is that under the present law the Secretary of Agriculture approves or disapproves the designation of the roads by the State highway commission. Under the amendment that is being read, a Federal commission takes the place of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will say to the Senator that I understood that, and that is satisfactory to me, if that is what it means.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is entirely satisfactory to me. This provision of the bill is a provision for which I fought and which I heartily indorse.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator will not understand me to say, however, that it is entirely satisfactory to me that 60 per cent of this money shall be spent upon these interstate roads and only 40 per cent upon the local roads. The manner of selection is what I refer to, and that part of it is satisfactory to me.

Mr. McKELLAR. Take the matter of the 60 per cent. Here is the situation: Take the Senator's own State. If the bill passes, his State's proportion of this appropriation would be about $2,000,000. Twelve hundred thousand dollars of that would be applied to the interstate roads—which, of course, are intercounty roads themselves; all of them are intercounty roads—and $800,000 of it would be applied to the secondary system of roads, which are intercounty or farm-to-market roads connecting with the principal system. Now, it seems that that is reasonably fair. I should have preferred a 50-50 proposition—50 per cent of the money to be spent on interstate roads, and 50 per cent of the money to be spent on the secondary system of roads—but the majority of the committee did not agree, and we are trying to get some legislation passed at this session of Congress, and it seems to me it ought to be passed and go to conference before a recess is taken.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Furthermore, if I may be permitted to say so, this 60-40 proposition was the Dowell bill provision. It is not a provision that we put in.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; that is the Dowell or House bill provision.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That they have already agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is a provision that I think is very wise. The Senator will recall that the Townsend bill provided that the Federal commission here should select the roads, subject to the approval of the State commission, which would do away with the State commission.

Mr. SIMMONS. To which I was unalterably opposed.

Mr. McKELLAR. And to which I was unalterably opposed. This is a compromise arrangement made between those of us who felt as the Senator from North Carolina does and those of us who felt as the Senator from Michigan does.

Mr. SIMMONS. I recognize that it was necessary to have some compromise in connection with this matter, and I am not complaining. I think the friends of the system as I wanted it have done well. I am sorry, however, that they did not get a little more.

Mr. McKELLAR. We did the best we could—that is all.

Mr. SIMMONS. I simply did not want to express my full approval—

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ASHURST. I should like to have this amendment read. It is the first reading. The amendment never has been read.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President—

Mr. ASHURST. I should like to know first if the Chair will pass on the parliamentary question: Is or is not the Senate entitled to have the amendment read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that the reading of the amendment by the Secretary had not been concluded when interruption was made.

Mr. LODGE. Then the regular order is the reading of the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the reading of the amendment.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is demanded. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the amendment.

Mr. ASHURST. That is what I want.

The Assistant Secretary continued the reading of the amendment, as follows:

The commissioners first appointed shall continue in office respectively for terms of one, two, and three years from the date of the taking effect of this act, the term of each to be designated by the President at the time of appointment, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of three years, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the commissioner whom he succeeds. Each commissioner shall receive an annual salary of $10,000.

No commissioner shall, during his term of office, engage actively in any other business, vocation, or employment, or be interested directly or indirectly in any business enterprise connected with the production or sale of highway materials, or with the construction, maintenance, or operation of other highways, or with any form of organized highway transport.

Any commissioner may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. A vacancy in the commission shall not impair the right of the remaining commissioners to exercise all of the powers of the commission. Two commissioners shall constitute a quorum. The commission shall annually choose a chairman from its own membership, and it shall have an official seal, which shall be judicially noticed.

SEC. 4. That all powers, duties, and obligations relating to highways or public roads, excepting forest roads and trails, that are conferred or imposed upon the Secretary of Agriculture by the Federal aid act, or by any act of Congress making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for such purposes, are hereby transferred to the commission, and the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to transfer to the commission within 30 days after the appointment and organization of such commission the equipment, material, supplies, papers, maps, and documents utilized in such work. The commission is hereby authorized to take over any of the employees of the Department of Agriculture engaged upon public road work. The appropriations now available to the Secretary of Agriculture for highway purposes other than forest roads and trails shall continue in force and effect under the control of the commission in the same manner as they were in force and effect under the control of the Secretary of Agriculture prior to the passage of this act. If, under the laws of any State providing for cooperation with the Secretary of Agriculture in the administration of the Federal aid act, the commission can not be legally substituted for the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary shall, pending a revision of such State laws, act jointly with the commission in the exercise of such powers of approval or disapproval as are incident to the administration of such act. All powers and duties of the Council of National Defense under the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved August 30, 1916, in relation to highway or highway transport, are hereby transferred to the commission, and the Council of National Defense is directed to turn over to the commission within 30 days after the appointment and organization of the commission the equipment, material, supplies, papers, maps, and documents utilized in the exercise of such powers. The powers and duties of agencies dealing with highways in the national parks or in military or naval reservations under the control of the United States Army or Navy, or with highways used principally for military or naval purposes, shall not be taken over by the commission, but such highways shall remain under the control and jurisdiction of such agencies.

The commission is authorized to cooperate with the Secretary of Agriculture in the construction of forest roads and trails, the State highway departments, and with the Department of the Interior in the construction of public highways within Indian reservations, and to pay the amount assumed therefor from the funds allotted or apportioned under this act to the State wherein the reservation is located.

SEC. 5. That the commission shall employ and fix the salary of a chief engineer, a secretary, and such accounting, engineering, legal, clerical, and other assistants and employees as it may from time to time find necessary, any of whom it may discharge: Provided, That no salary excepting that of the chief engineer shall be fixed at an amount exceeding $5,000 per annum, and in fixing salaries the commission shall be governed by the salaries paid to employees performing similar services in other departments of the Government. With the exception of the secretary, the chief engineer, and such laborers as may be employed by the commission, all employees shall be appointed from lists of eligibles to be supplied by the Civil Service Commission and in accordance with the civil service law: Provided, That, other conditions being equal, preference shall be given to honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines.

SEC. 6. That the commission shall establish an accounting division in its organization which shall devise and install a proper method of keeping the commission's accounts.

SEC. 7. That all of the expenses of the commissioners made necessary in the performance of their duties, including all necessary expenses for transportation incurred by the commissioners or by their employees under their orders upon official business in any other place than at their respective headquarters, shall be allowed and paid upon the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor, duly sworn to, and approved by the secretary of the commission.

Unless otherwise provided by law, the commission may rent suitable offices for its use and make necessary expenditures for furniture, equipment, and supplies, and for the printing and distribution of such publications and maps as it may prepare. The principal office of the commission shall be in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 8. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transfer to the commission upon its request all surplus war material, equipment, and supplies not needed for the purposes of the War Department but suitable for use in the improvement of highways, and that the same shall be distributed among the highway departments of the several States to be used in the construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of highways, such distribution to be upon the same basis as that hereinafter provided for in this act in the distribution of Federal-aid fund: Provided, That the commission, in its discretion, may reserve from such distribution not to exceed 10 per cent of such material, equipment, and supplies for use in the construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of national forest roads or other roads constructed, reconstructed, or maintained under its direct supervision.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I do not wish to stop the reading; I want it to go on, but I have thought it might be possible for the Senate to get a unanimous-consent agreement to vote on this amendment, and I thought before 2 o'clock I would bring it up and see if we could not get such an agreement to vote on the measure, and all amendments to it, at some hour some day this week.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator will name the day and hour, I feel quite sure we can arrange it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I was going to suggest that the vote be taken on Friday.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. It is true that I called for the reading of the committee amendment; but if I may be indulged a moment, I will explain why I am willing to engage in debate at this time.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I want the amendment read. I think it ought to be read.

Mr. ASHURST. My asking for the reading of the amendment of course must not be construed as hostility to the legislation. It happens to be my view that any bill appropriating over $99,000,000 ought to be read.

I believe the Senator from Michigan, the chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, has been diligent. But, Mr. President, let me lay before the Senate—and I will do it briefly—a situation respecting some of the Western States. Consider Arizona, which so many people of the country—

Mr. LODGE rose.

Mr. ASHURST. I think I can finish in three or four minutes.

Mr. LODGE. I know, Mr. President, but the Senator is now breaking to pieces the very proper point of order which he made—

Mr. ASHURST. I realize that.

Mr. LODGE. He is insisting that the amendment be read, which I think is desirable, even if it should call for no more than $98,000,000.

Mr. ASHURST. I stand corrected, but I desire to enter debate if debate is to be had.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I wanted to get a unanimous-consent agreement that we should vote at some hour on Friday.

Mr. ASHURST. I can not agree to such request until I have an opportunity at least to ascertain what the amendment contains.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Very well. Let the amendment be read.

The reading of the amendment was resumed and concluded, as follows:

SEC. 9. That in approving projects to receive Federal aid under the provisions of this act the commission shall give preference to such projects as will expedite the completion of an adequate and connected system of highways interstate in character.

Before any projects are approved in any State such State, through its State highway department, shall select or designate not to exceed 7 per cent of the total highway mileage of such States as shown by the records of the State highway department at the time of the passage of this act.

Upon this system all Federal-aid apportionments shall be expended. Highways which may receive Federal aid shall be divided into two classes, one of which shall be known as primary or interstate highways, and shall not exceed three-sevenths of the total mileage which may receive Federal aid, and the other which shall connect or correlate therewith and be known as secondary or intercounty highways, and shall consist of the remainder of the mileage which may receive Federal aid.

The commission shall have authority to approve in whole or in part the systems as designated or to require modifications or revisions thereof: Provided, That the States shall submit to the commission for its approval any proposed revisions of the designated systems of highways above provided for.

Not less than 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary or interstate highways until provision has been made for the improvement of the entire system of such highways.

The commission may approve projects submitted by the State highway departments prior to the selection, designation, and approval of the system of Federal-aid highways herein provided for if it may reasonably anticipate that such projects will become a part of such system.

Whenever provision has been made by any State for the completion and maintenance of a system of primary or interstate and secondary or intercounty highways equal to 7 per cent of the total mileage of such State, as required by this act, said State, through its State highway department, by and with the approval of the commission, is hereby authorized to add to the mileage of primary or interstate and secondary or intercounty systems as funds become available for the construction and maintenance of such additional mileage.

SEC. 10. That before any project shall be approved by the commission for any State such State shall make provision for State funds required each year of such State by this act for construction and reconstruction of highways, and shall also make adequate provision for maintenance of all Federal-aid highways within the State.

SEC. 11. That only such durable types of surface and kinds of materials shall be adopted for the construction and reconstruction of any highway which is a part of the primary or interstate secondary or intercounty systems as will adequately meet the existing and probable future traffic needs and conditions thereon. The commission shall approve the types of construction and reconstruction and the character of improvement, repair, and maintenance in each case, consideration being given to the type and character which shall be best suited for each locality and to the probable character and extent of the future traffic.

SEC. 12. That all highways constructed or reconstructed under the provisions of this act shall be free from tolls of all kinds.

That all highways in the primary or interstate system constructed after the passage of this act shall have a right of way of ample width and a wearing surface of an adequate width, which shall not be less than 20 feet, unless, in the opinion of the commission, it is rendered impracticable by physical conditions, excessive costs, probable traffic requirements, or legal obstacles.

SEC. 13. That when any State shall have met the requirements of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury, upon receipt of certification from the governor of such State to such effect, shall immediately make available to such State, for the purpose set forth in this act, the sum apportioned to such State as herein provided.

SEC. 14. That any State having complied with the provisions of this act, and desiring to avail itself of the benefits thereof, shall by its State highway department submit to the commission project statements setting forth proposed construction or reconstruction of any primary or interstate or secondary or intercounty highway therein. If the commission approve the project, the State highway department shall furnish to it surveys, plans, specifications, and estimates therefor as it may require; items included for engineering, inspection, and unforeseen contingencies shall not exceed 10 per cent of the total estimated cost of the work. That when the commission approves plans, specifications, and estimates, it shall notify the State highway department and immediately certify the fact to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon set aside the share of the United States payable under this act on account of such projects, which shall not exceed 50 per cent of the total estimated cost thereof, except that in the case of any State containing unappropriated public lands exceeding 5 per cent of the total area of all lands in the State, the share of the United States payable under this act on account of such projects shall not exceed 50 per cent of the total estimated cost thereof plus a percentage of such estimated cost equal to one-half of the percentage which the area of the unappropriated public lands in such State bears to the total area of such State.

This provision shall apply to all unobligated or unmatched funds appropriated by the Federal aid act and payment for approved projects upon which construction work had not actually begun on the 30th day of June, 1921.

SEC. 15. That the construction and reconstruction of the highways or parts of highways under the provisions of this act, and all contracts, plans, specifications, and estimates relating thereto, shall be undertaken by the State highway departments subject to the approval of the commission. The construction and reconstruction work and labor in each State shall be done in accordance with its laws and under the direct supervision of the State highway department, subject to the inspection and approval of the commission and in accordance with the rules and regulations pursuant to this act.

SEC. 16. That when the commission shall find that any project approved by it has been constructed or reconstructed in compliance with said plans and specifications, it shall cause to be paid to the proper authorities of said State the amount set aside for said project.

That the commission may in its discretion, from time to time, make payments on such construction or reconstruction as the work progresses, but these payments, including previous payments, if any, shall not be more than the United States pro rata part of the value of their labor and materials which have been actually put into such construction or reconstruction in conformity to said plans and specifications. The commission and the State highway department of each State may jointly determine at what time and in what amounts payments as work progresses shall be made under this act.

Such payments shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury, on warrants drawn by the commission, to such official or officials or depository as may be designated by the State highway department and authorized under the laws of the State to receive public funds of the State.

SEC. 17. That should any State fail to maintain any highway within its boundaries after construction or reconstruction under the provisions of this act, the commission shall then serve notice upon the State highway department of that fact, and if within 60 days after receipt of such notice said highway has not been placed in proper condition of maintenance, the commission shall proceed immediately to have such highway placed in a proper condition of maintenance and charge the cost thereof against the Federal funds allotted to such State, and shall refuse to approve any other project in such State.

Upon the reimbursement by the State of the amount expended by the Federal Government for such maintenance, said amount shall be paid into the Federal highway fund for the benefit of said State in the construction of other roads under this act, and the commission shall then approve further projects submitted by the State as in this act provided.

Whenever it shall become necessary for the commission under the provisions of this act to place any highway in a proper condition of maintenance the commission may contract with some responsible party or parties for doing such work, or may purchase, lease, hire, or otherwise obtain all necessary supplies, equipment, and labor, and may operate and maintain such motor and other equipment and facilities as in its judgment are necessary for the proper and efficient performance of its functions.

SEC. 18. That within two years after this act takes effect the commission shall prepare, publish, and distribute a map showing the highways and forest roads that have been selected and approved as a part of the primary or interstate and the secondary or intercounty systems, and at least annually thereafter shall publish supplementary maps showing its program in selection, construction, and reconstruction.

SEC. 19. That for the purpose of this act the consent of the United States is hereby given to any railroad or canal company to convey to the highway department of any State any part of its right of way or other property in that State acquired by grant from the United States.

SEC. 20. That if the commission determines that any part of the public lands or reservations of the United States is reasonably necessary for the right of way of any highway or forest road or as a source of materials other than timber for the construction or maintenance of any such highway or forest road adjacent to such lands or reservations, the commission shall file with the Secretary of the department supervising the administration of such land or reservation a map showing the portion of such lands or reservations which it is desired to appropriate.

If within a period of four months after such filing the said Secretary shall not have certified to the commission that the proposed appropriation of such land or material is contrary to the public interest or inconsistent with the purposes for which such land or materials have been reserved, or shall have agreed to the appropriation and transfer under conditions which he deems necessary for the adequate protection and utilization of the reserve, then such land and materials may be appropriated and transferred to the State highway department for such purposes and subject to the conditions so specified.

If at any time the need for any such lands or materials for such purposes shall no longer exist, notice of the fact shall be given by the State highway department to the commission, and such lands or materials shall immediately revert to the control of the Secretary of the department from which they had been appropriated.

SEC. 21. That the commission shall prescribe and promulgate all needful rules and regulations for the carrying out of the provisions of this act, including such recommendations as the commission may deem necessary for preserving and protecting the highways and insuring the safety of traffic thereon.

SEC. 22. That on or before the first Monday in December of each year the commission shall make a report to Congress, which shall include a detailed statement of the work done, the status of each project undertaken, the allocation of appropriations, the expenditures and receipts during the preceding fiscal year under this act, an itemized statement of the traveling and other expenses of the commissioners, including a list of employees, their duties, salaries, and traveling expenses, if any, and its recommendations, if any, for new legislation amending or supplementing this act. The commission shall also make such special reports as Congress may request.

SEC. 23. That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is hereby appropriated out of the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $100,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, $50,000,000 of which shall become immediately available, and $50,000,000 of which shall become available six months after the passage of this act.

SEC. 24. That so much, not to exceed 1½ per cent, of all moneys hereby or hereafter appropriated for expenditure under the provisions of this act, as the commission may deem necessary for administering the provisions of this act and for carrying on necessary highway research and investigational studies independently or in cooperation with the State highway departments and other research agencies, shall be deducted for such purposes, available until expended.

Within 60 days after the close of each fiscal year the commission shall determine what part, if any, of the sums theretofore deducted for such purposes will not be needed and apportion such part, if any, for the fiscal year then current in the same manner and on the same basis as are other amounts authorized by this act apportioned among all the States, and shall certify such apportionment to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the State highway departments.

The commission, after making the deduction authorized by this section, shall apportion the remainder of the appropriation made for expenditure under the provision of the act for the fiscal year among the several States in the following manner: One-third in the ratio which the area of each State bears to the total area of all the States; one-third in the ratio which the population of each State bears to the total population of all the States, as shown by the latest available Federal census; one-third in the ratio which the mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes in each State bears to the total mileage of rural delivery and star routes in all the States at the close of the next preceding fiscal year, as shown by certificate of the Postmaster General, which he is directed to make and furnish annually to the commission: Provided, That no State shall receive less than one-half of 1 per cent of each year's allotment. All moneys herein or hereafter appropriated for expenditure under the provisions of this act shall be available until the close of the second succeeding fiscal year for which apportionment was made: Provided further, That any amount apportioned under the provisions of this act unexpended at the end of the period during which it is available for expenditure under the terms of this section shall be reapportioned within 60 days thereafter to all the States in the same manner and on the same basis and certified to the Secretary of the Treasury and the State highway departments in the same way as if it were being apportioned under this act for the first time.

SEC. 25. That within 60 days after the approval of this act the commission shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury and to each of the State highway departments the sum it has estimated to be deducted for administering the provisions of this act and the sums which it has apportioned to each State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and on or before January 20 next preceding the commencement of each succeeding fiscal year, and shall make like certificates for each fiscal year.

SEC. 26. That out of the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, there is hereby appropriated for the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of forest roads and trails the sum of $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, available immediately and until expended, and $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, available until expended.

(a) Fifty per cent, but not to exceed $3,000,000 for any one fiscal year, of the appropriation made herein or that may hereafter be made for expenditure under the provisions of this section shall be expended under the direct supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture in the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of roads and trails of primary importance for the protection, administration, and utilization of the national forests, or when necessary, for the use and development of resources upon which communities within or adjacent to the national forests are dependent, and shall be apportioned among the several States, Alaska, and Porto Rico by the Secretary of Agriculture according to the relative needs of the various national forests, taking into consideration the existing transportation facilities, value of timber, or other resources served, relative fire danger, and comparative difficulties of road and trail construction.

The balance of such appropriations shall be expended by the commission in the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of forest roads of primary importance to the State, counties, or communities within, adjoining, or adjacent to the national forests, and shall be prorated and apportioned by the commission for expenditures in the several States, Alaska, and Porto Rico according to the area and value of the land owned by the Government within the national forests therein as determined by the commission from such information, investigation, sources, and departments as the commission may deem most accurate.

(b) Cooperation of Territories, States, and civil subdivisions thereof may be accepted but shall not be required by the Secretary of Agriculture or the commission.

(c) The commission and the Secretary of Agriculture may enter into contracts with each other or with any Territory, State, or civil subdivision thereof for the construction, reconstruction, or maintenance of any forest road or trail or part thereof.

(d) Construction work on forest roads or trails estimated to cost $5,000 or more per mile, exclusive of bridges, shall be advertised and let to contract.

If such estimated cost is less than $5,000 per mile, or if the bids are deemed excessive, the work may be done by the commission or the Secretary of Agriculture on their own account; and for such purpose the commission or the Secretary of Agriculture may purchase, lease, hire, rent, or otherwise obtain all necessary supplies, materials, tools, equipment, and facilities required to perform the work.

The appropriation herein or that may hereafter be made for expenditure under the provisions of this section may be expended for the purpose herein authorized and for the payment of wages, salaries, and other expenses for help employed in connection with such work.

SEC. 27. That in any State where the existing constitution or laws will not permit a State fund for the construction, reconstruction, or maintenance of highways, the commission shall continue to approve projects for said State until two years after the passage of this act, if such State will comply with the provisions of this act in so far as its existing constitution and laws will permit.

SEC. 28. That if any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, shall be held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 29. That all acts or parts of acts in any way inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect on its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The READING CLERK. A bill (S. 665) to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the unanimous-consent agreement the unfinished business will be temporarily laid aside and Senate bill 2131 laid before the Senate. The title of the bill will be stated.

The READING CLERK. A bill (S. 2131) to extend for the period of seven months the provisions of Title II of the food control and the District of Columbia rents act, approved October 22, 1919, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read three times, the question is, Shall it pass?

Mr. ASHURST. I was interrupted while discussing the roads bill a moment ago by a ruling which I had previously invoked. In other words, I shut myself off, which is a commendable procedure in the Senate at all times, but I shall now conclude what I attempted to say when the rule I myself previously invoked shut me off.

The good roads bill, which has just been read, is an important bill, but let me lay before the Senate a situation to which we may not close our eyes, to which we must not be oblivious, respecting roads in the State of Arizona.

It is the habit of some persons who have never visited the State of Arizona to look upon it as composed in part of a desert, forgetting that there are 17,763 square miles of national forests within that same State. Under the present law the matured timber within the national forests of Arizona and other States is sold and sheep and cattle are grazed upon the national forests throughout the West. The owners of sheep and cattle are required to pay huge sums to the Federal Government for the privilege of grazing their sheep and cattle upon such forests.

I wish the chairman of the committee to hear me on this, because I address myself to him, and I expect him to answer the question which I am about to propound. His reply will control me somewhat in this matter, because I have confidence in him.

What I am seeking to know is whether the bill, directly or indirectly or by any intendment, precludes the various States of the West from receiving, as they have in the past, the percentage of those moneys that are repaid to the States out of the avails or receipts paid to the Federal Government for grazing live stock upon the national forests and for the sale of matured timber?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, it does not interfere with that at all. I will say to the Senator that my understanding is it is 35 per cent that is turned over to the States, and out of the public funds $1,000,000 is already appropriated, I think, for the purpose.

Mr. ASHURST. That will be continued?

Mr. TOWNSEND. That will be continued, and we have added $5,000,000 this year in addition to the $1,000,000 and in addition to the 25 per cent which comes from the avails of the public lands.

Mr. ASHURST. That is a most gratifying answer, and it is so clear that further argument or statement is unnecessary.

I want assurance that the funds the States are now receiving from grazing fees and the sales of matured timber shall be continued to be repaid to the various States.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will say to the Senator, as I said a moment ago, that not only will they get the $1,000,000 for the forest surveys which are going to come but they will get $5,000,000 more next year.

EXTENSION OF RENTS ACT.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2131) to extend for the period of seven months the provisions of Title II of the food control and the District of Columbia rents act, approved October 22, 1919, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Glass	McCumber	Shortridge
Baird	Gooding	McKellar	Simmons
Borah	Hale	McNary	Smoot
Brandegee	Harrell	Nelson	Stanley
Broussard	Harrison	New	Sterling
Calder	Heflin	Nicholson	Sutherland
Cameron	Johnson	Norbeck	Swanson
Capper	Jones, N. Mex.	Oddie	Townsend
Caraway	Jones, Wash.	Overman	Walsh, Mass.
Culberson	Kellogg	Phipps	Watson, Ga.
Curtis	Ladd	Pittman	Watson, Ind.
Dillingham	La Follette	POINDEXTER	Williams
Ernst	Lenroot	Pomeroy	Willis
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Sheppard

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to announce the absence of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] on account of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-five Senators having responded to their names, a quorum is present. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I submit two letters to the Senate and ask that they may be read by the Secretary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letters will be read as requested.

The letters were read, as follows:

COPY OF LETTER MAILED TO SENATORS BAIL AND LENROOT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 12, 1921.

Hon. L. H. BAIL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I read in this morning's Herald that you stated in the Senate yesterday that the Rent Commission had dealt justly with the property owners.

I wish to state my case to you and ask you if you think I have been justly dealt with by the Rent Commission.

I am the owner of a nine-room house at 2007 H Street NW., rented to Edward Bradley at $40 per month. His lease expired August 1, and I asked the Rent Commission, as I had not received an adequate rental, to give me possession of my property so that I could remodel the house, put in another bathroom, and rent it to two families. I told them that I had two married children that I would like to have occupy it; one of whom, a son, works for me, and as I live next door I would like to have him as near me as possible.

Mr. Bradley hired an attorney and asked the Rent Commission to refuse me a hearing, which they did. So I did not even get a hearing on my own property. They said they could do nothing for me under the Ball Act.

I spent last year about $200 on this house for repairs, $66 for taxes, $150 interest on $2,500, getting no interest on the $2,500 I have paid on the property.

Mr. Bradley has nothing invested. There has been no time that he hasn't received $50 per month which he gets at the present time and up to the last two weeks he has received $70 per month, $30 above what his rent is and a house to live in.

I understand there is nothing in the Ball Act about tearing a house down to the ground, this ruling being made by the Rent Commission.

I told the Rent Commission that I would like to have asked for possession on the ground that the tenant was undesirable, but they told me as long as he paid his rent they could do nothing.

I offered to pay for the services of an investigator to look the whole matter up and give us both justice; to this they made no reply. I know you are a busy man and do not want to tire you with any longer letter, but will say that I long for the day when I can sell my property in the District of Columbia and move back to Illinois, where people have a vote and where, if they do not get justice, they do not have to stand by and have their property confiscated. I am,

Yours, respectfully,

JUDSON I. KINGMAN.

1006 C STREET SW.,
Washington, D. C., August 12, 1921.

Senator POINDEXTER, of Washington State.

DEAR SIR: Will you allow me to write you in regard to the extension of the Ball rent law? Knowing you are opposed to the extension, I feel that the property owners still have one friend left at the Capitol. I bought a house located at 615 Maryland Avenue SW. on May 28, 1920, and have been fighting ever since that time for possession. I have not received one cent of rent; the tenant refusing to move, was put under bond for the rent, he paying same to a bonding company since July, 1920. He pays $20.50 a month, with one room rented out for $20 a month, while I am compelled to pay $37.50 for a small apartment and keep up payments on the house. In July I was unfortunate enough to lose my position in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing after being a faithful employee for 14 years. After waiting for an appeal to be heard in the United States Supreme Court, which took from July, 1920, to May, 1921, I finally reached the Rent Commission, which on June 20 last refused me possession. The tenant is still in the house and has no idea of moving, so I see nothing else in sight but lose all. There are hundreds of just such cases, while tenants take advantage of the privileges given them by the Ball Act.

All good wishes for your opposition to win out and October 22 be the last of the Ball Act. I thank you.

Very respectfully,

CATHERINE E. COLLINS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, just one word I have to say in regard to this remarkable piece of legislation. I do not think it goes so far as it should go in order to be entirely harmonious and consistent. It provides houses for people at the expense of their neighbors; compels the owners of houses to share them with other persons who may want them, but of course the occupants of a house can not live on a house alone. It seems to me that in pursuance of the principle embodied in the bill, it ought then to require their more fortunate neighbors to share their incomes with them in order that they may be enabled to live in the houses which they get from their neighbors. If the bill were amended in that respect, it would present a complete and harmonious example of communistic legislation instead of the rather half-hearted and one-sided measure that it is in its present form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, is there an amendment to the bill pending at the desk to extend the life of the measure for the year 1923?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not. The Chair will state that the bill is beyond the stage of amendment; it has passed the stage of engrossment, and has been read the third time. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Does the Senator from Mississippi desire to occupy the floor?

Mr. HARRISON. No.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Then I ask for a yea-and-nay vote on the bill.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, as somewhat explanatory of the vote I shall cast on the pending measure, I wish to say that I shall vote against it, first, upon the legal question which has been discussed. With great deference to the learning of Senators and having in mind the decision of the Supreme Court, though I was willing to be persuaded, and came very near being persuaded, I am far from being convinced. I do not believe it is competent for Congress to enact this proposed law. I have in mind and do not overlook the very learned discussion and the remarks of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] now occupying the chair.

Whatever reasons may now be assigned in support of the decision of the Supreme Court, or whatever reasons may now be assigned for the validity of this proposed act, manifestly the original act was passed during the war, and was supported in argument chiefly upon the theory that Congress had the power to pass the law in aid of the carrying on of the war. If Senators have turned to the briefs which were filed with the Supreme Court they have found that such was the main contention of those who argued in favor of the constitutionality of the law.

The war having ceased in fact as well as in law—and I have wondered at that proposition being questioned; I have sometimes thought that perspiration had been mistaken for inspiration during the argument upon that question here some days ago—the war having ceased, having terminated, having come to an end, and we being in a state of peace, the so-called war power of Congress no longer or as of this moment exists or can be called into exercise.

Of course, I do not wish to appear dogmatic, but inasmuch as it has been said that reference may be made to this day's proceedings, I wish it to be then seen, if the Supreme Court shall ever have occasion to pass upon this day's work, that I respectfully contended that under present circumstances these latent powers in the Constitution may not now be called into exercise by the enactment of legislation of this character.

Secondly, as a matter of policy, I am unalterably opposed to this type or character of legislation. I think we are moving in a dangerous direction, and I think the time is now to pause.

I heard it stated that because the Supreme Court had upheld the original act—such seemed to be the reasoning—we should no longer question the power of Congress in the premises; or, rather, that, inasmuch as the Supreme Court had upheld the original legislation, we should take that as an approval of it. Of course, the Supreme Court, made up of learned men, were not concerned with the policy of the legislation; they were called upon to pass on the power of Congress to enact that particular law. I can not look into the minds of those judges to determine what they thought concerning the wisdom or the folly of such legislation.

So, not to detain Senators longer, I am opposed to this measure upon constitutional and legal grounds; I am opposed to it because I think it is an unwise type or character of legislation. It can do no good. The fruits of it are evil. If Congress, as a matter of policy, having, it is true, exclusive legislative jurisdiction over this District, may enact laws of this character upon the theory that it has and may exercise what is not very aptly called the police power, then every village, every municipality, every great or small city in America may—and, probably, some will—cite our example to-day and seek to follow it. Are Senators willing here this day to establish this example and to say to America—to all the subdivisions of States and counties down to municipalities—that each individual municipality may, under the stress of excitement, led away by passion, wrought up by fear, enact legislation of this character? Senators should remember the wise words of Portia:

"Twill be recorded for a precedent;
And many an error, by the same example,
Will rush into the state; it can not be.

I think Senators charged with grave duties might a little longer consider the policy of this type of legislation before proceeding to extend the original so-called Ball rent law or any law of similar character.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are demanded. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, if I felt about this matter as does the Senator from California, I should vote against the bill. I do not agree with the statement which has been made here that this proposed legislation is based wholly on the war power of the Constitution. Under the Constitution the Congress is given exclusive jurisdiction of legislation within the District of Columbia. Of course I understand very fully that provision is hemmed in by the other restrictive rules which are contained in the Constitution. I do not understand that Mr. Justice Holmes, who delivered the majority opinion for the Supreme Court, based it upon the war power. He speaks of an "existing exigency." Let me read just a few sentences from the opinion. After quoting certain decisions of the Supreme Court in somewhat analogous cases, he says:

But these cases are enough to establish that a public exigency will justify the legislature in restricting property rights in land to a certain extent without compensation. But if to answer one need the legislature may limit height, to answer another it may limit rent. We do not perceive any reason for denying the justification held good in the foregoing cases to a law limiting the property rights now in question if the public exigency requires that. The reasons are of a different nature, but they certainly are not less pressing. Congress has stated the unquestionable embarrassment of Government and danger to the public health in the existing condition of things. The space in Washington is necessarily monopolized in comparatively few hands, and letting portions of it is as much a business as any other. Housing is a necessary of life. All the elements of a public interest justifying some degree of public control are present.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. POMERENE. Only for a question, because my time is limited.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I wish to ask the Senator if he bears in mind, on the aspect of the question that he is just discussing, the fact that this bill is not limited to a regulation of rents, the chief objection to it being that it goes beyond regulation of rents and takes property without the consent of the owner at all; furthermore, that it is not limited to those who are engaged in the business of leasing houses, but that it applies to every private citizen as to his private domicile, whether he is in such business or not?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I think it applies broadly to all property which is subject to rent; and when it is subject to rent it is subject, in my judgment, to a public use in the proper sense of the word.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. POMERENE. As I am limited to only 10 minutes—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not ask the Senator to yield if he does not want to.

Mr. POMERENE. I should prefer to go on, then, without interruption, because I want to call the attention of the Senate to another matter.

A good many years ago the State of Illinois passed a statute charging warehouses with a public use, and under that law they regulated the price that could be charged for the storing of grain. I do not intend to take the time of the Senate to discuss that case in extenso, but I want to read only a sentence or two from the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Waite in Munn v. Illinois (94 U. S., 126):

Property does become clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence and affect the community at large. When, therefore, one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest he in effect grants to the public an interest in that use and must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good to the extent of the interest he has thus created. He may withdraw his grant by discontinuing the use, but so long as he maintains the use he must submit to the control.

Now let us see what the situation is here in the District of Columbia. There is only one great business in the District of Columbia, and that is the business of the Government. There is only one great plant here, and that is the plant of the Government. It takes men and women to run this plant. These men and women must be housed in the District in order that they may perform their functions as a part of the equipment of this plant. Under these circumstances can it not be said that these buildings that are used for the purpose of housing these men and women are chargeable with a public use, and that it is just as much a public use to rent them out for human beings to live in as it is to store grain in a warehouse?

I think the two cases are entirely analogous. Shall it be said that those who hold and control these houses can place these rentals at so high a point that it is going to impoverish the tenants, or, if not that, that the rate of salaries and wages shall be raised so high as to be out of all proportion to what reason would suggest in order to enable the tenants to pay their rent?

I should not be so much concerned about this if the landlords of the city had shown a different disposition at the time the Supreme Court of the District, by a majority vote, held the present law unconstitutional. Immediately notices were served upon tenants to vacate; immediately ouster proceedings were begun; immediately notices were given that the rents would be raised; and now, when it is known that the present law is about to expire on October 1, similar notices are being given. I do not want to have any landlord rent his property without getting a reasonable compensation for it, but I do want equitable treatment for the tenants.

Senators the other day suggested that this was interfering with building; that no building would be done if this law should be extended. Senators, observations in other cities demonstrate conclusively, it seems to me—and I speak of cities where there is no statute regulating rents—that the one thing which interferes with building is the high price of material and the high price of labor, and the same economic conditions prevail here in the District; yet, notwithstanding this condition, there is quite a good deal of building going on.

It has been urged that there are rooms and buildings now being advertised for rental. If this were true to any very great extent, it seems to me that there would be a reduction in rents; but has anyone heard of any reduction in rents?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Ohio has expired.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] states that the argument of those opposed to this legislation is that the legislation could be justified only as an exercise of some war power possessed by Congress. That is not so, Mr. President. It may be that the proponents and advocates of the legislation base it upon the police power; but whichever power it is based upon, in my opinion, the enactment of this bill at this time has no warrant of law whatever.

Even if it be so that Congress has all the police power to regulate the affairs of the District of Columbia that a sovereign State would have over its own territory, it does not follow that this bill would be held to be constitutional. I am not prepared to say that Congress would not have the power to regulate rentals. As I said the other day, if we can regulate the amount of interest that a creditor may charge upon a loan, it may well be that we could regulate rentals. I do not know why we would not have the same power to regulate the return that real estate should bring to its owner that we would to regulate the return that personal property should bring to its owner; but, however that may be, my objection to this measure is that it reaches out and attempts to impair the obligation of a contract.

You might pass a bill, perhaps, providing a permanent rental commission and that the rents should be fixed by the commission as between landlord and tenant. That would be notice to all in advance that their real estate was to be held upon that condition; but this legislation reaches out and impairs an obligation of contracts already made, when the law did not warrant any interference at all by the Government with the making of those contracts.

If I understand the effect of the prolongation of this act, at least one of the effects is that if two persons have entered into a written contract under seal, and the contract has been partially if not entirely executed, and the tenant has agreed in the contract under seal to get out of the premises on a certain day, this law undertakes to lay the strong hand of the Government upon the action of the landlord and say: "You shall not eject this tenant. You shall not have advantage of the ordinary processes of law to evict this tenant when you have performed your contract and he is violating his. You have lived up to your contract. You have let him stay there for a year at the rent agreed upon by you." Now, this law steps in and says: "You shall consent to his staying there longer, and you shall consent to the breaking of his contract by the tenant, because we think there is an emergency."

Under that, the tenant becomes the master of the property, and the owner is subjected to the decisions of the Rent Commission. The landlord has nothing further to say about the enforcement of the contract he has made with his own tenants, and the tenants who decline to get out are put in control of the situation and are allowed to stay there indefinitely, so long as the law may exist.

Whatever necessity there may be in the District for more houses is of no concern so far as the establishment of that sort of a principle is concerned. My own personal opinion is that the very worst that you could do so far as encouraging additional building in Washington is concerned is to prescribe that those who put their money into new buildings shall not have anything to say about their property, but that Congress shall prescribe what the rents shall be. In other words, I think this sort of legislation would produce and continue the evil which is complained of, because capital will not go into business to be run by the Government, and to have the natural laws of supply and demand violated, so that a thing shall no longer be worth what the buyer and the seller agree it is worth, but shall be worth and shall be taken at what a governmental instrumentality says it is worth.

That is an attempt which has always failed—to repeal the irreparable law of supply and demand. If the Government would take its hands off of the housing situation in Washington, capital would flow in here, and more buildings would be built, and the situation would be immediately relieved. But you can not expect that people in outside cities, with plenty of capital, are coming here to invest it, where the rent is fixed by a commission and the tenant stays as long as he is willing to pay the rent fixed by the commission, when they can invest it subject to their own management in their own cities.

As I have said, there is no such emergency here now as existed during the war. The population of the city is at least 30 per cent less than it was then. More than 200,000 people have left the Capital since the war, and many new buildings have been constructed, and yet we are holding the real estate owners, who have rental property in the city of Washington to rent under the same conditions we imposed on them when this city had a third more in population than it has now, and when the Nation was fighting for its existence.

It seems to me to be perfectly absurd, Mr. President. I can not believe that it is constitutional, and if it is, I am sure it is not wise legislation. I have no idea of attempting to delay a vote upon this, but I feel that Senators will be rendering a public service if they would, by their votes, put their seal of disapproval upon this kind of interference with private business by the National Government.

This sort of a tendency toward socialism, perpetrated here in the National Capital by Congress, encourages similar attempts all over the Union. There is a growing tendency to regard whatever is done here in the District of Columbia as a pattern and a paragon to be imitated in other portions of the country. It is one of the things which, in my opinion, is to be most regretted about the terrific centralization of power in this city. It is derogatory to self-development and self-government, to individual reliability and development.

The things we are doing here now are all wrong in my opinion in the way of cooperating with all the States to do the things the States ought to do for themselves, and taxing all the people, and then doling out of the total of the taxes back to the very people we take them from, trying to devise some formula based on the proportion of the square miles of the territory of the States to the miles of good roads they have, or on the male and female population thereof, trying to make a formula by which we can redistribute to the States what we have wrung from them.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I think it very unfair for the Senator from Connecticut to state that the property is taken entirely out of the hands of the owner. The property is not taken out of the hands of the owner. The owner still controls the property, with only one condition under which he does not get possession, and that is if the present tenant is unwilling to continue to pay the rent considered reasonable rent. A form of contract is prepared by the Rent Commission satisfactory to the real-estate owners of Washington, and every part of that contract must be lived up to by the tenant or he can be gotten out at any time. There is only one condition under which he can continue in possession of the property, and that is that he is willing to pay the reasonable rent which is fixed by the Rent Commission.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Is it not a fact that the tenant can remain in the property even though the owner of the property does not want to rent it at all?

Mr. BALL. Not if he wants it for himself for a dwelling house or for any of his family, for the repair of the building, or for any other purpose. Of course, it prevents him from taking it out of the category of rental property, because such property was needed at the time of the passage of this act.

We ask for an extension of this act for seven months, with certain amendments. We ask that because we believe the conditions in Washington require it. There is to be a disarmament conference within the next seven months in this city, and winter is approaching. We have had some experience with our housing proposition in Washington during the inauguration period. The hotels doubled the charges for every room during the time of the inauguration.

A few weeks ago an appeal was made to the hotel people of Washington to prepare to house the Elks during their convention. They made the same reply to the Elks that was made at the time of the inauguration, that no rooms would be let during the Elks' convention except at double the ordinary charges for each room. As a result of that I had a bill prepared to compel all hotels to fix the charges for the rooms and post them in the rooms, and that they should not be permitted to change them unless a notice was given a certain length of time. I failed to push that bill.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the passage of the bill. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CALDER (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS], and in his absence I shall have to withhold my vote. If permitted to vote I would vote "nay."

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES], and vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK], and vote "yea."

Mr. KELLOGG (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SMITHSON], and in his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE], and vote "yea."

Mr. POMERENE (when his name was called). I have made a temporary general pair with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. SPENCER], but on this question I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. KING. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER]. Not knowing how he would vote on the passage of the bill, I withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. BROUSSARD. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES]. I am unable to secure a transfer, and therefore withhold my vote. If privileged to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. BALL (after having voted in the affirmative). Has the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. BALL. I have a general pair with that Senator, which I transfer to the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] and let my vote stand.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLER], and vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of New Mexico (after having voted in the affirmative). I have voted, but I wish to announce that I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD]. I am advised that if he were present he would vote as I have voted, and I therefore permit my vote to stand.

Mr. CARAWAY. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], who is detained by illness. If present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURSUM] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL];

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL];

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN];

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. NEWBERRY] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED];

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN] with the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]; and

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK] with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK].

The roll call resulted—yeas 38, nays 8, as follows:

YEAS—38.

Ashurst	Harrison	McNary	Sheppard
Ball	Hedlin	Nelson	Stanley
Cameron	Johnson	New	Sutherland
Capper	Jones, N. Mex.	Nicholson	Swanson
Culberson	Jones, Wash.	Norbeck	Townsend
Curtis	Ladd	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Dillingham	La Follette	Overman	Warren
Glass	Lenroot	Phipps	Willis
Gooding	Lodge	Pittman
Hale	McKellar	Pomerene

NAYS—8.

Brandege	Harreld	Polindexter	Wadsworth
Ernst	Knox	Shortridge	Watson, Ga.

NOT VOTING—50.

Borah	France	McLean	Smith
Broussard	Frelinghuysen	Moses	Smoot
Bursum	Gerry	Myers	Spencer
Calder	Harris	Newberry	Stanfield
Caraway	Hitchcock	Norris	Sterling
Colt	Kellogg	Owen	Trammell
Cummins	Kendrick	Page	Underwood
Dial	Kenyon	Penrose	Walsh, Mont.
du Pont	Keyes	Ransdell	Watson, Ind.
Edge	King	Reed	Weller
Elkins	McCormick	Robinson	Williams
Fernald	McCumber	Shields
Fletcher	McKinley	Simmons

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 38, the nays are 8, and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. KELLOGG], and the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] have answered "present." So the bill is passed.

MAJ. FRANCIS M. MADDOX.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I present a concurrent resolution providing that when the two Houses adjourn on Wednesday, the 24th day of August, 1921, they stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Wednesday, the 21st day of September, 1921. I move its adoption. I have modified the concurrent resolution as to the date so as to give ample time for disposing of conference reports now pending.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Massachusetts if he will withhold his concurrent resolution for a moment? We had an understanding, I believe, that we would at this time pass the bill for the relief of Maj. Maddox. It will take but a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Alabama for that purpose?

Mr. LODGE. I have no objection. I withhold my motion for that purpose.

Mr. HEFLIN. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6407) for the relief of Maj. Francis M. Maddox, United States Army.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to credit the accounts of Maj. Louis C. Wilson, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, the sum of $1,875.14, to be paid Maj. Francis M. Maddox, Fourth Regiment Alabama National Guard, for pay, commutation of quarters, light, heat, and longevity pay, and for services rendered while detailed for duty as assistant to the Chief of the Militia Bureau, War Department, Washington, D. C., from June 4, 1920, to September 30, 1920, inclusive.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPOSED RECESS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I renew my motion to agree to the concurrent resolution which I have presented. I have modified it as originally offered by changing the date of adjournment to Wednesday, the 24th day of August, and the date of re-assembling to Wednesday, the 21st day of September, 1921.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The concurrent resolution will be read as modified.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the two Houses adjourn on Wednesday, August 24, 1921, they stand adjourned until Wednesday, September 21, 1921.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if it is expected that this adjournment shall take place if it should happen that by that time what is known as the farm relief bill has not been acted upon finally?

Mr. LODGE. I can say personally and I think I can answer for a great many Senators that I certainly should never assent to adjournment unless that bill is passed and has gone to the President.

Mr. SIMMONS. I desire to ask a further question of the Senator. Would it not then be perfectly proper to have some understanding with the House that they should not act on the concurrent resolution until that bill has been disposed of?

Mr. LODGE. That understanding has already been reached, I am informed.

Mr. SIMMONS. They are not to act upon it until the bill is finally passed?

Mr. LODGE. They are not to act upon it until the bill has finally passed both Houses and gone to the President.

Mr. SIMMONS. Relying absolutely upon that statement, I shall make no objection to the adoption of the concurrent resolution, although there is another measure that I should like very much to see acted upon before the Senate takes a recess, and that is the good roads bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not desire to have the Senator yield to me if he has the floor. I did not know that he had the floor.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Nevada may take the floor, and I will make my point of order.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, in the first place I wish to congratulate the Senator, or rather to thank the Senator, for at least extending the life of this Congress from Saturday until Wednesday. It is possible, by virtue of the speed that the chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads has demonstrated, that we may by that time pass the good roads legislation that is so essential, but it is not certain that it will pass within that length of time, nor is it certain that the farmers' relief bill will pass within that time.

It is probably very certain that the irrigation measures pending will not pass, and it is also very certain that a number of other important bills which the Senator from Massachusetts had in mind when he stated there was other important legislation pending will not pass in that time. For that reason I insist that if the Senator is willing to offer a resolution now—

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if the Senator is going to discuss the resolution at length I make the point of order that it is not now debatable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts makes the point of order that the concurrent resolution is not debatable. The parliamentary situation is now very different from what it was when previously offered. The unfinished business is before the Senate. The concurrent resolution was presented while the unfinished business was pending. Therefore, in the opinion of the present occupant of the Chair, it comes clearly within the express terms of Rule XXII and is not debatable. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I agree with the Chair in the ruling and therefore I shall certainly not appeal from the decision of the Chair. I realize that it is within the power of the Senator from Massachusetts at the proper time under the rules to make this objection if he sees fit. I regret very much that he has seen fit to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. JONES of Washington. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CALDER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS], who is absent. If permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement of my pair and its transfer as on the previous vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS]. I understand if he were present he would vote as I intend to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of New Mexico (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD]. I have no intimation as to how he would vote upon this question, and therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before of my pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], I transfer that pair to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE], and vote "yea."

Mr. McCORMICK (when his name was called). I have a standing pair with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK], which I transfer to the Senator from Maryland [Mr. FRANCE], and vote "yea."

Mr. POMERENE (when his name was called). I have a temporary general pair with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. SPENCER]. I do not know how he would vote on this question, and therefore I am obliged to withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BALL. Making the same announcement as to my pair and its transfer as before, I vote "yea."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. As he is absent, I am not at liberty to vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. McLEAN. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLER], and vote "yea."

Mr. CALDER. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS] to the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. STANFIELD], and vote "yea."

Mr. LODGE. I inadvertently announced a transfer of my pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], because on this question he would vote as I did. Therefore I am at liberty to vote without a transfer.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE], and vote "yea."

Mr. BROUSSARD. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES]. I am informed that if present he would vote as I shall vote. Therefore, I shall vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CARAWAY. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. McKINLEY]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], and vote "nay."

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I find that I can transfer my general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK], which I do, and vote "nay."

Mr. STERLING (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH]. That Senator, I understand, has not voted. Not being able to obtain a transfer, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] on account of illness.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURSUM] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANDELL];

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL];

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN];

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. NEWBERRY] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]; and

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 18, as follows:

YEAS—38.

Ball	Glass	Lenroot	Oddie
Brandegee	Gooding	Lodge	Overman
Broussard	Hale	McCormick	Phipps
Calder	Harrell	McCumber	Polindexter
Cameron	Harrison	McLean	Smoot
Capper	Johnson	McNary	Wadsworth
Curtis	Kellogg	Nelson	Warren
Dillingham	King	New	Watson, Ind.
Ernst	Knox	Nicholson
Frelinghuysen	Ladd	Norbeck

NAYS—18.

Ashurst	Jones, Wash.	Shortridge	Walsh, Mass.
Borah	La Follette	Simmons	Watson, Ga.
Caraway	McKellar	Stanley	Willis
Heflin	Pittman	Swanson
Jones, N. Mex.	Sheppard	Townsend

NOT VOTING—40.

Bursum	France	Newberry	Smith
Colt	Gerry	Norris	Spencer
Culbertson	Harris	Owen	Stanfield
Cummins	Hitchcock	Page	Sutherland
Dial	Kendrick	Penrose	Trammell
du Pont	Kenyon	Pomerene	Underwood
Edge	Keyes	Ransdell	Walsh, Mont.
Elkins	McKinley	Reed	Weller
Fernald	Moses	Robinson	Williams
Fletcher	Myers	Shields

So the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

APPOINTMENT OF ARMY OFFICERS TO CIVIL OFFICE.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to report from the Committee on Military Affairs favorably and without amendment the bill (S. 2387) making Army officers on active duty eligible for appointment to civil office in the government of Territorial possessions of the United States. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and for the immediate consideration of the bill just reported by him. Is there objection?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me a few moments to have the unfinished business read—it consists of only two short paragraphs—then I shall ask that it be temporarily laid aside, and the Senate may transact other business without any further disturbance. I now ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is asked for, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

TRANSIT THROUGH PANAMA CANAL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 665) to provide for free tolls for American ships through the Panama Canal.

Mr. BORAH. I ask that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with and that the bill be read for amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The bill will be read.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter no tolls shall be levied upon vessels passing through the Panama Canal engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States.

SEC. 2. That section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend section 5 of an act to provide for the opening, maintenance, protection, and operation of the Panama Canal, and the sanitation and government of the Canal Zone, approved August 24, 1912," which said amendatory act was passed and approved June 15, 1914, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. BORAH. I ask that the unfinished business may now be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside. Is there objection? There being no objection, it is so ordered.

APPOINTMENT OF ARMY OFFICERS TO CIVIL OFFICE.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate bill 2387, previously reported by me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the Senate bill referred to by him.

Mr. PITTMAN. What bill is that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the bill by title.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. A bill (S. 2387) making Army officers on active duty eligible for appointment to civil office in the Government of Territorial possessions of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York for the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. PITTMAN. I presume the Senator from New York does not anticipate there will be any debate.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to have the bill read.

Mr. LODGE. The bill has been once read.

Mr. SMOOT. I want it again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill will be again read by the Secretary.

The Assistant Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter officers of the Army on the active list shall be eligible for appointment to any civil office of the Government of any Territorial possession of the United States the chief executive of which is required by law or by order of the President to render reports to the War Department, and sections 1222 and 1860, Revised Statutes, shall not apply to the acceptance or the exercise of the functions of any such office: Provided, That this act shall apply only to officers filled by appointment by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I desire to say a few words in explanation of the bill. Under the statutes an officer upon the active list of the Regular Army may not be appointed to any civil place. That particular phase of the law will be found in section 1222 of the Revised Statutes. In addition to that, in section 1860, as I recollect, there is an express prohibition against officers of the Army being appointed to any civil position in our Territorial possessions. This bill, which has been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, proposes to repeal those two sections of the Revised Statutes in so far as they would affect the appointment of an officer on the active list of the Army to a civil position in the Territorial possessions of the United States, which position must be filled under the statute by appointment by the President by and with the consent of the Senate.

Frankly, the purpose of the bill is to make it possible for the President to appoint and the Senate to confirm, if it sees fit, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood as governor general of the Philippines. Gen. Wood, as Senators know, is now a major general upon the active list of the Army. It has been his intention, as Senators doubtless also know, to retire from active service shortly and to accept a position with the University of Pennsylvania. Prior, however, to his retirement he consented to make a visit of inspection and investigation to the Philippine Islands, accompanied by former Gov. Forbes, to look into conditions existing in that archipelago.

As a result of that inspection, which involved an extensive journey and which, I may say, is not yet completed in full to all of the important islands, Gen. Wood and the administration here at Washington have reached the conclusion that the situation in the Philippines is such as to constitute a serious condition of affairs, one requiring the best talent and experience which the country can produce in order that it may be handled wisely.

Senators, of course, recollect that Gen. Wood's experience in the Philippines in former years was most comprehensive and most valuable; that he is exceedingly well known there; that he enjoys the confidence of the natives to an extent, perhaps, enjoyed by no other American citizen, either in or out of the Army. At considerable personal sacrifice, in view of the prospect which had opened before him previous to the time when he went to the Philippines, Gen. Wood has indicated his willingness to accept the appointment of Governor General of the Philippines. I think I am not betraying any confidence when I say that the Secretary of War is exceedingly anxious that Gen. Wood may be made eligible for such a position. This bill proposes to make Gen. Wood eligible for such an appointment. It also makes eligible, as it is couched in general terms, the appointment of an Army officer on the active list to the position of vice governor. The only other place of which I can conceive as being affected by this proposed legislation would be that of Governor of Porto Rico. Those three places fall within the provisions of this bill. First, they are civil appointments in the Territorial possessions; and, second, the appointments to each of those three places must be made by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. It was deemed—

Mr. OVERMAN. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I will yield in just a moment. It was deemed wise to couch the bill in general language rather than have it apply specifically to one person, but the effect of the bill or the field which the bill covers is very narrow, embracing only the Governor General of the Philippines, the vice governor, and the Governor of Porto Rico. I now yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I am in favor of the bill, but I wish to ask the Senator a question. If appointed, will the salary of Gen. Wood, as an officer of the Army, continue, or will he take the civilian salary in lieu of his Army salary, or will the salary of the Governor General be added to his salary as major general?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It will not be added; there is a specific provision of law which prohibits the drawing of two salaries by an Army officer or any other Federal official. If Gen. Wood is appointed—

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President—

Mr. WADSWORTH. I will yield in a moment. If Gen. Wood is appointed and confirmed as Governor General of the Philippines he thereby surrenders his Army pay and is accorded the pay of Governor General.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President, I wish that the Senator from New York would explain to the Senate why it is necessary to provide, in lines 5, 6, and 7, that these appointments shall be made only to Territorial possessions the chief executive of which reports to the War Department?

The Senator knows that some of the authors of the reorganization bill contemplate the transfer of general jurisdiction over the insular possessions from the War Department to the Department of the Interior or to the State Department. That transfer might very well take place before Gen. Wood's term of office expires.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I know of no such bill pending.

Mr. McCORMICK. There is no such bill pending.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Nor do I know of the authors of any such proposed bill. It so happens that I am a member of the joint committee of the Congress on the reorganization of the executive departments. That committee so far has made no suggestions about any department.

Mr. McCORMICK. The members of the Cabinet have made suggestions.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That may be so.

Mr. KING. Let me suggest to the Senator from Illinois—

Mr. McCORMICK. If the Senator from Utah will allow me to continue for a moment, I will be through. It seems to me that the language to which I have referred is not necessary to accomplish the purpose the Senator from New York has in mind.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The language was meant to be restrictive of the field of this proposed legislation. For example, if we do not put in a provision to the effect that it shall apply only to the "Territorial possessions of the United States the chief executive of which is required by law or by order of the President to render reports to the War Department," it might thereby include Santo Domingo and Haiti and perhaps by order of the President—

Mr. McCORMICK. Surely Santo Domingo and Haiti are not yet territorial possessions of the United States?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Surely not, but in some respects the administration of their Governments to-day is under the jurisdiction of some department of the Federal Government. Undoubtedly, the Senator is right in the assertion which he has just made, and undoubtedly the example which I have just cited is not an accurate one; but I might refer to the Virgin Islands, for example.

Mr. McCORMICK. Would it not be enough, then, to say the "Philippine Islands," without using the expression, "territorial possessions of the United States"? Is it contemplated to appoint an Army officer in Gov. Riley's place so soon?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is not.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from New York, in charge of the bill, a question. As I understood him, he said there was a general statute forbidding an officer drawing two salaries. Has he examined the statute so that he knows it positively?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes; there is such a statute applying to officers on active service.

Mr. POMERENE. I know that there was a statute passed having in mind a certain official, but I thought it was special in character. It may be that there is a statute applying to Army officers.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It applies to Army officers on active service.

Mr. POMERENE. It ought to be general and apply to everybody.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I think the Senator from New York made plain what was in my mind. As I understand, the effect of this bill is simply to limit these appointments to our territorial possessions?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. Such an appointment could not be made with reference to anyone who is performing service in continental United States.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Oh, no. It applies only to civil appointments in the territorial possessions, the occupant of the office to be confirmed by the Senate. That is the restriction.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I merely want to say about the bill that ordinarily I think it would be a very bad practice. I think the law as it now stands is right, that as a general rule it is not advisable in any sense for an Army officer to hold a civil position; but in this particular case the facts warrant a departure from that rule. Gen. Wood has had a long experience in the Philippine Islands, as has been stated by the Senator from New York. He is a man thoroughly familiar with the questions out there. I imagine that he will make a most efficient governor general, and I hope the bill will pass.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from New York why it would not have been better explicitly to say that hereafter officers of the Army on the active list shall be eligible for appointment to the office of Governor General of the Philippine Islands?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, the legislation, I believe, is sufficiently restricted in its field to cover the purpose in view. We may encounter a problem connected with the vice governor. It may be that as time goes on, while Gen. Wood is governor general—as, let us assume, he will be—an exceedingly able officer of the Army may assist him as vice governor. The authors of the legislation—I discussed this matter with the Secretary of War and with a good many people in addition to the members of the Military Affairs Committee—believe that we should not limit it to the one place but should make it so that it could take care of the situation as it arose in these troublous times. The only other place that I recollect to which it would apply is that of Governor of Porto Rico.

Mr. McCORMICK. And of Hawaii?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No; the Territory of Hawaii, through its chief executive, does not report to the War Department.

Mr. NEW. No; under a distinct provision of law which requires the governor of Hawaii to be a resident of the islands.

Mr. McCORMICK. The Senator from Indiana is chairman of the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions. Does he believe that the governorship of Porto Rico should be thrown open under these circumstances?

Mr. NEW. I see no particular objection to it. I am in favor of the passage of this bill.

Mr. McCORMICK. In order to make Gen. Wood eligible for the governorship of the Philippines?

Mr. NEW. Yes.

Mr. McCORMICK. Why should we not provide that the governor of Hawaii might be an Army officer, in view of the situation in the islands at this time, no less than the Governor of Porto Rico?

Mr. NEW. In the first place, the population of the Hawaiian Islands differs in many essential respects from that of the Philippines or Porto Rico. They are in a class by themselves; and there is a very distinct provision of law now to the effect that the governor shall have been for a statutory period a resident of the islands, which I believe is a wise provision. I do not think this ought to be made to apply to the Hawaiian Islands, but I would not interpose any objection of my own to its applying to Porto Rico.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no amendments to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNIVERSARY OF DANTE'S DEATH.

Mr. TOWNSEND obtained the floor.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. CALDER. I ask permission to introduce a concurrent resolution which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the concurrent resolution will be received and read.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 10) was read, as follows:

Whereas on September 14, 1921, there will be celebrated the six hundredth anniversary of the death of the Italian poet Dante; and Whereas the Congress of the United States desires to associate itself with the Italian Parliament in doing honor to his memory on this occasion; and Whereas the great literary genius of Dante is recognized by the people of the United States, who, in common with the peoples of all civilized nations, have received large intellectual benefit from his classic masterpieces: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the Congress of the United States hereby formally gives expression to the great regard and veneration in which it and the people of the United States hold this illustrious son of Italy.

That an attested copy of this resolution be transmitted, through the Secretary of State, to the ambassador of the United States at Rome, to be by him communicated, through the diplomatic channel, to the presiding officer of each of the chambers of the Italian Parliament.

Mr. CALDER. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate for the present consideration of the concurrent resolution just read.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

INTERSTATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I ask unanimous consent that the road bill, S. 1072, be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate resumed the consideration of the amendment of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1072) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee to the amendment of the House.

AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION ACT.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask to be relieved from further service on the conference committee on the Campbell-Willis bill, known as the beer bill, inasmuch as I have to leave the city.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina? There being no objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I ask that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] be substituted in place of the Senator from North Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered, and the Senator from Arizona is appointed a conferee in place of the Senator from North Carolina.

STABILIZATION OF INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I offer the joint resolution which I send to the desk. I ask to have it read and lie upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McNARY in the chair). Without objection, the joint resolution will be received and read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 102) authorizing the President of the United States to call a conference of the leading mercantile nations to consider ways and means to stabilize international exchange was read the first time by title and the second time at length, as follows:

Whereas the instability, uncertainty, and undependability of international exchange, and of the values of foreign money, is impeding commerce between nations and entailing great loss and risk of loss upon the part of exporters who may venture their cargoes on foreign shipments; and

Whereas it is imperative that public governmental measures be taken to stabilize international exchange, to promote commerce between nations, and to facilitate the settlement, clearing, and collection of international mercantile bills: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That the President is authorized to call a conference of the leading mercantile nations to consider ways and means to stabilize international exchange, and the value of foreign money entering into exchange; to consider the advisability of establishing international clearing houses at New York and London to facilitate the clearing of international mercantile bills and the ascertainment and settlement of international trade balances, and to provide means of payment of such balances in gold or some supplementary form of international funds; to consider the possibility of establishing an international bank of issue, and of establishing uniformity or coordination of coinage, weights, and measures; and generally to take such measures as may be advisable for the promotion and expansion and security of international trade.

Mr. KING. I ask that the joint resolution may lie upon the table for the present. I desire to submit a few observations before its reference, but I shall not interrupt the consideration of the pending measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will lie on the table.

INTERSTATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the amendment of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1072) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, it will be remembered that about two hours ago I propounded some inquiries to the distinguished chairman of the committee, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND], and that I manifested a concern and a zeal which the Senator might think was inordinate, but I assure him it was not; and I laid before him and the Senate facts which disclosed that it was imperative that I should know exactly what the bill provided.

I shall now read a communication I have received from the Department of Agriculture.

I was trying to ascertain whether or not the moneys that were returned to the States as their part or percentage of the grazing fees and timber sales would be shut off by this bill, and the chairman has assured me that the various sums of money that the States of the West have been receiving in the past by reason of the sales of matured timber and by reason of the payment of grazing fees for grazing stock on national forests will be continued to be paid to the States as far as this bill is concerned.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, July 11, 1921.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR ASHURST: I am in receipt of your letter of July 5, requesting certain information as to area of and other matters connected with the national forests in your State.

The total area of national forests in Arizona in acres and square miles is: Acres, 11,307,632; square miles, 17,763.

The names and areas in square miles and acres of each particular forest in Arizona are as follows:

Forest.	Acres.	Square miles.
Apache.....	1,243,142	1,942
Cocconino.....	1,771,971	2,769
Coronado.....	1,304,888	2,039
Crook.....	892,487	1,395
Dixie.....	17,680	28
Kaibab.....	752,339	1,176
Prescott.....	1,447,850	2,262
Sitgreaves.....	650,350	1,016
Tonto.....	1,988,806	3,108
Tusayan.....	1,298,119	2,028

The amount of money paid to the United States for grazing-livestock on each national forest in Arizona during the year 1920 was as follows:

Apache.....	$49,613.90
Cocconino.....	67,351.90
Coronado.....	59,902.95
Crook.....	32,721.13
Dixie.....	230.61
Kaibab.....	8,249.25
Prescott.....	71,262.04
Sitgreaves.....	17,856.58
Tonto.....	53,706.95
Tusayan.....	37,042.05

397,937.36

The aggregate amount of money paid for the same purpose during the years 1911 to 1920, inclusive, is $2,035,029.40.

The total amount returned to Arizona as the State's percentage of the grazing fees received was $678,975.19.

The statutes requiring the above payments to the State are as follows: Thirty-sixth Statutes, 562, section 6, and 573, section 24; Thirty-fifth Statutes, 260; and Thirty-seventh Statutes, 843.

The national forests in Arizona cover 15.6 per cent of the total area of the State, and the area of the national forests in Arizona is equal to 7.3 per cent of the total area of the national forests in the United States, excluding Alaska.

In connection with these figures it should be understood that the information as to receipts pertains only to grazing fees, as does also the amount shown as payment to the State. The total receipts from all sources in the State of Arizona for the years 1911 to 1920 were $3,531,083.37, and the total amount paid to the State from these receipts was $1,170,946.67. Of the latter amount, $386,043.96 was for the school fund, in accordance with the act of June 20, 1910 (36 Stat., 562 and 573), and $784,902.71 was for schools and roads, as provided in the agricultural act of May 23, 1908 (35 Stat., 260). In addition to the above amounts the sum of $293,963.62 has been returned to the Department of Agriculture for expenditure on roads and trails within the State of Arizona in accordance with the provision of the act of August 10, 1912 (37 Stat., 288), and March 4, 1913 (37 Stat., 843).

Very sincerely, yours,

E. D. BALL, Acting Secretary.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, since I have received the assurance of the chairman and various members of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads that the States of the West will continue to receive, as they have in the past, their proper percentages of the money from the Federal Government from the sales of timber, and from the various percentages of the money the Federal Government derives from the fees paid for grazing sheep and cattle on forest reserves, it seems to me that the committee has been as reasonable as any committee could be, and indeed it seems to me that I would be justified in employing the word "generous."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am loath to offer an amendment to the bill, but there is one provision about which the committee differs very seriously, though I do not remember just exactly what the vote was. I refer to the subject of the annual compensation of the three commissioners who are provided for. The bill provides that each commissioner shall receive an annual salary of $10,000.

Mr. President, during the war we got into the habit of creating commissions, with very large salaries attached to the offices. I think this is too much. I think $7,500 is enough for these commissioners, and that we will get just as good service and just as good men by paying them $7,500 as $10,000. I therefore move to amend, in line 22 on page 3, by striking out "$10,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$7,500."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. On page 3, line 22, the Senator from Tennessee proposes to strike out "$10,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$7,500."

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I am just a little sorry that this matter is being pressed without an opportunity for Senators who are not on the committee to investigate it. I knew in a very general way, of course, that there was the Phipps bill, which passed the Senate, and that there was the Dowell bill, which passed the House, and now there is presented here, as of yesterday, this amendment, which is, as I understand it, to be in lieu of the Phipps bill and the Dowell bill. Am I right about that?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Practically the Senator is correct about it. May I remind him, however, that there has been before the Senate, and on the Senate calendar, another bill which had been discussed for a long time? We reported that, and it is on the calendar.

Mr. POMERENE. Yes.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I can explain in a very few minutes what the differences are. There is nothing in this bill that is not in one or the other, or a modification of one or the other.

Mr. POMERENE. I rose for the express purpose of asking the chairman to explain wherein the proposed amendment differs from or is like either the Phipps or the Townsend bill on the one hand, or the Dowell bill on the other, and what new features there are. I did not know this was to be presented until yesterday, and I have had no opportunity to examine it. I do not like to vote on a bill of this importance without being able to give the reasons for the faith that is in me.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will be very glad, indeed, to explain the bill. Perhaps I may not be able to explain it in just the order the Senator would suggest. If I could assume that Senators were acquainted with both the bills, the Townsend bill and the Dowell bill, my task would be very easy.

Mr. KING. We are not.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I assume Senators are not. The bill we reported to the Senate some months ago, and which is now on the calendar of the Senate, was a bill which rewrote the present roads law.

Mr. POMERENE. That is, Senate bill 1355?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Senate bill 1355. That bill created a commission of three members, instead of having the law administered, as it is now, through a bureau of the Agricultural Department under what is known as the director of roads.

That change seemed to be very desirable, because the road question is already a very large one, and is growing larger all the time. The duties which we impose upon that commission are most important, and their proper performance are more than one man operating as a bureau chief can perform. Our amendment provides for three men and that they shall devote their whole time to the work of the commission. I do not think I need to stop to argue that question with the Senator now. I am just mentioning the changes.

Mr. POMERENE. If the Senator will allow me to interpolate, I think it is very wise to create a commission instead of depending upon the judgment of one man to take up road propositions in 48 different States.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I think that principle is generally conceded now by all men familiar with the road proposition, although it was a hotly contested question during the early part of the committee's deliberations.

That original bill provided that this commission should lay out a system of interstate connecting roads, roads across the States, connecting at the borders and at water points and international boundaries. It provided that all Federal money should be expended upon those roads. The work was to be done by the State commission, but approved by the Federal commission.

The Dowell bill provided that States should lay out the system of roads in the first instance instead of the Federal commission, to be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, and he could approve or disapprove the selection by the State commission.

We adopted the House provision as a compromise. But the House bill went further. It provided that the States should lay out a system of roads consisting of not more than 7 per cent of the highways of the State, three-sevenths of that 7 per cent to be interstate roads, four-sevenths to be intercounty roads connecting with these interstate roads that were to be constructed.

The House bill further provided that not less than 60 per cent of the Federal appropriation should be expended on the interstate connecting roads until they were constructed and the balance on the intercounty roads.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let me make an inquiry of the Senator. The Senator refers to page 9, line 13, where it provides:

Not less than 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary or interstate highways.

It has been called to my attention that that would mean that the entire amount was to be spent on interstate highways. I do not know whether that is modified in a subsequent section or not where it is provided that 40 per cent shall be applied on the intercounty roads.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It does not specify any amount for intra-county roads. It provides that not less than 60 per cent shall be spent for primary or interstate roads, although the clear assumption is that the fund is to be divided on a 60-40 basis.

Mr. McKELLAR. Should not those three words, "not less than," be stricken out, so as to limit it to 60 per cent? I think that is a fair statement. I am just calling the Senator's attention to it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not think that ought to be changed, because I am quoting from the Dowell bill, and we clearly agreed to it in the compromise.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. TOWNSEND. And that provides also that in laying out these roads or in expending the money preference shall be given to the interstate connecting roads; that preference shall be given to the construction of these roads.

Mr. POMERENE. Over the intercounty roads?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Over the intercounty roads, until these interstate roads are constructed. There is a provision in the Dowell bill that they may lay out an additional mileage above the 7 per cent when that has been constructed under practically the same conditions under which the original roads were constructed.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, it seems to me it is the intracounty roads and intrastate roads that will serve the farmer and producer in getting his produce to market. Let me submit, for the consideration of the Senator in charge of the bill, if the word on line 14, page 9, should not be "intrastate" instead of "interstate"? In other words, it should read, in my judgment:

Not less than 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary or intrastate—

And so forth.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Oh, no.

Mr. ASHURST. If that change is not made, would it not happen that great systems of roadways—"peacock alleys"—from one State to another would be built at the expense of the little county roads which serve the farmers? It seems to me that the word "interstate" should be changed to "intrastate," so that the 60 per cent will be spent within the State.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. KING. Where does the Senator find his authority for the utilization of Federal funds, wrung from the people by taxation, to construct farm-to-farm roads or lanes that are purely local in character? Remember, we are asked now to appropriate $100,000,000 of Federal funds. There must be some Federal concern in the appropriation to give jurisdiction.

Mr. ASHURST. With the permission of the Senator from Michigan, the Senator from Utah asks a question so deep and vital that I could not answer in a sentence, more than to say that under section 8 of Article I of the Constitution authority is given to construct post roads. But if the appropriation of $100,000,000 is illegal, the payment of $10 would be; the principle would be the same. I thought, of course, the question of the constitutionality had been settled some time ago. That is my judgment. I do not want to take the time and impose on the patience of my friend from Michigan in going into that question now. I have not examined the question lately, but I assumed it was settled.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator has hit upon one of the differences that has disturbed the committee and is disturbing the country, when he asks, why not spend this money on the little roads, the intrastate roads?

Mr. ASHURST. Intrastate, within the State.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The two bills originally were directly opposite on that subject. I maintained, with the Senator from Utah, that the Federal money should be expended in the States on interstate highways. I stated to the Senator from Arizona that under existing law and under the proposed bills all of the money assigned to a State is to be expended within that State. None of it is expended out of the State. But I contended that the money which the Federal Government paid should be expended for a distinctly Federal purpose. Spending it on a post road is for a Federal purpose, and using it to carry the mails would make it a post road. We may be justified in expending money on it because of that, but that does not meet the argument which I have to make against that kind of a proposition.

I felt that it was our duty first to construct the connecting interstate roads, because they serve more people in the States than any other similar mileage that could be constructed and facilitate interstate commerce. I contended for that principle which I felt ought to be carried out, but we could not agree on that. The great majority of our committee were agreed on it, but when the Phipps bill amended by the House came back the Senate felt that it ought to enact some legislation at this session of Congress, and therefore it sent the bill to the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads where it was hoped that out of all the bills a comprehensive measure might be evolved. I am fairly well satisfied that such is the amendment before the Senate. It provides, first, that there shall be a system of roads in each State selected by the State departments with the approval of the commission, and all the roads receiving Federal aids shall form a connected system. Not all of the roads in a State can get Federal aid. Only the 7 per cent that are approved by the commission can obtain it. Of that 7 per cent, three-sevenths shall be interstate roads—those connecting roads to which I am favorable—and four-sevenths shall be intercounty roads connecting with the interstate highways.

Mr. POMERENE. If I may interrupt the Senator right there, why did they decide on 7 per cent?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not know why they decided on 7 per cent, except that that is about the proportion of roads within a State which could reasonably receive Federal aid. Indeed, that is about as large a percentage as could receive State aid. Most of the States now without this law have selected a limited mileage, upon which they will expend even State money. The State of Ohio has a limited mileage that has been selected, upon which she is expending State aid. She does not attempt to build all of the roads in the State. She leaves local roads to be built by counties and communities.

Mr. POMERENE. No; they have worked out a sort of general scheme which they are following, making a suitable distribution of the roads throughout the 88 counties embraced within the State. I am very frank to say to the Senator that I would prefer that equitable division—as I believe it to be—rather than the plan which was proposed by the distinguished Senator from Michigan.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have such faith in the Senator that I am sure if he understood it and gave his attention to it he would more nearly agree with me.

Mr. POMERENE. I think I do understand it. I realize there is room for honest difference of opinion upon it. For instance, the Lincoln Highway, which passes directly through my county in Ohio—Stark County—is going to be a splendid proposition, and for those who have magnificent cars it will be a splendid thing; but it occurred to me that if we were to improve that road and, perhaps, several other roads that might be selected across the State, from east to west and from north to south, the people of the State of Ohio would get less benefit from it than if the fund which is furnished by the Federal Government were equitably distributed so that each of the 88 counties could get a portion of it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. And by that means the State would get no completed roads—no connected road system.

Mr. POMERENE. No; I do not agree with the Senator at all in that, because I think it would encourage the county commissioners and the other road-building authorities of the State to continue the State and the county aid. We have a scheme whereby they have first the Federal aid, then they have the aid furnished by the State, a portion by the county, and a portion by the township, and a part is assessed upon the abutting land-owners, and so forth. I think it is working out splendidly. It has encouraged road building tremendously in Ohio.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Let me tell the Senator about Ohio. Ohio for some time has been working exactly along the lines that my bill originally provided. When the present Ohio road administration came into power in that State it found that a lot of the Federal aid had been prorated among the counties as the Senator has suggested. The State highway commissioner immediately revoked every one of those propositions where it was possible for him to do it, and said what they were going to do was to build two roads with Federal aid, one east and west across the State and one north and south across the State, and that is what the Senator's State is doing to-day. My State, the State of Michigan, without such a law, without anything of that kind, is devoting all of its Federal aid to the interstate highways across that State.

These are the most expensive roads, the most used roads we have in any State; the roads serving the most people are the interstate roads. Of course, the automobiles pass over these roads. They have been the inspiration for road building. They almost entirely maintain them.

Mr. POMERENE. I did not point to that fact so much in criticism, as I intended to point out, if I did not, the fact that if this money can be equitably distributed so that some of the roads in each of the 88 counties will get some of the Federal aid, it is going to encourage the local authorities to continue the building of roads in those counties and thereby it will confer a greater benefit upon the people by enabling the farmers to get their produce to market.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That argument has been made and, of course, is a very greatly disputed point. There were members of the committee who held with the Senator on that point.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan yield to me at that point?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Certainly.

Mr. ASHURST. As I view the duties of a Senator, we have our various committees and I do not think any Senator is to be criticized for displaying unfamiliarity with matters that are investigated by a committee of which he may not personally be a member. When I am on a committee it is my business to understand the bills before that committee and I welcome Senators when they ask me questions concerning the bill upon which I am informed, and I know my friend, the Senator from Michigan, will adopt the same attitude. He has worked on this bill and he understands it, and those of us who have not been on the committee must be pardoned if we appear to be intractable and ask questions that seem simple to the Senator who has studied the bill for three months.

I wish to analyze that part of the bill contained in lines 13 to 16, inclusive, on page 9, and ask the Senator's help and his view.

Not less than 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary.

What does the word "primary" mean in that sense?

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is the principal road.

Mr. ASHURST. That word is eligible for that purpose.

Or Interstate highways.

We all know what the term "interstate highways" means—until provision has been made for the improvement of the entire system of such highways.

Am I correct when I assume that this language means that of the Federal aid allotted to the State not less than 60 per cent of the sum so allotted must be spent upon the primary or interstate road, the principal road, until the State engineer or the other officer having appropriate authority makes out and files and secures approval for a comprehensive system of State highways?

Mr. TOWNSEND. They are not to use this until those systems of interstate roads in that State have been laid out and approved by the State and Federal commissions have been completed, and that ratio of 60 to 40 is maintained.

Mr. ASHURST. Until the State engineer or other appropriate officer has completed the interstate or principal highway the ratio of 60 to 40 prevails, but when he has completed, we will say, a certain national highway or certain primary road, then are we to assume that such other roads as may be within the State, whether primary, interstate, or intrastate, are eligible for part of these funds without regard to the 60-40?

Mr. TOWNSEND. No; it will always be divided 60 and 40, but there is the division by the State authorities that must be considered. The State highway commission lays out that system of roads which is approved by the Federal commission. When some of those roads have been completed, it is then agreed that certain other roads are to be completed.

Mr. ASHURST. Then, after the new road is agreed upon, 60 per cent of the money allotted must be spent upon that particular road if there be only the one?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Or if it be several roads, it will be spent on the several roads.

Mr. ASHURST. If it be several, then 60 per cent of the Federal aid allotted must be expended on those particular primary or interstate roads?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. Does the Senator believe that in this connection the word "primary" must of necessity mean interstate also?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I think it will be so construed, although it might not be. That is the primary road. The commission and State authorities might decide that here is a road of primary importance that goes to some place in particular that ought to be built.

Mr. ASHURST. The disjunctive "or" is used. I would think a main road running from one part of the State to another that is really not interstate would fall within the purview of that language. It might be worded "primary and interstate highway."

Mr. TOWNSEND. That might be.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McNARY in the chair). Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Certainly.

Mr. HEFLIN. The bill provides that three-sevenths of the roads to be built in a State shall be interstate roads and four-sevenths shall be intercounty roads. It is provided in line 13 on page 9 that—not less than 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary or interstate highways—

And so forth.

If that is done, there will be only 40 per cent that can be used on the intercounty or intrastate roads. Then what becomes of our proposition of having four-sevenths for intercounty roads and three-sevenths for interstate roads?

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator favored the proposition, of course, in the Dowell bill. This is the Dowell provision. We are not discussing the bill which I have introduced. This is the Dowell provision that was thrashed out and which the Senator favored.

Mr. HEFLIN. I am in favor of a great many of its provisions, but I wish to say to the Senator that I am in favor of striking out, in line 13 on page 9, the word "less" after the word "not" and inserting the word "more," and instead of 60 in the same paragraph inserting the numerals 50, so that we would have a half-and-half proposition. The State would be aided in the intercounty roads in having an expenditure of 50 per cent of the money and the Federal system would have 50 per cent. That seems to me to be a fair division of the Federal fund.

Mr. TOWNSEND. We discussed the matter very fully and agreed to the proposition that we would adopt what the House had done. As I said, I think it is a step in the right direction. It does not go as far as I would like to have it go. I would like, until we have had at least two interstate highways, one north and south and the other east and west connecting at State lines, to have all Federal aid devoted to those roads. I think it would give more encouragement to the States. The Government would help construct the most expensive roads in the State in that way. Those are the roads over which I think from 70 to 85 per cent of the traffic of the State would pass. Those are the roads which Michigan is willing to assist in constructing in Alabama.

We have agreed upon the proposition that not less than 60 per cent of the Federal aid shall be expended on interstate roads. We have agreed that the State shall lay out the roads in the first instance; that they shall select the 7 per cent of the roads in the State to be approved by the commission. We have changed the committee's plan as reported to the Senate and provided that the States shall have the initiative. It first lays out the plan of roads, which shall be confined to 7 per cent of the roads in the State.

Mr. SWANSON. If the Senator from Michigan will permit me, I desire to say that what he says is true, except in this respect, that under line 13, page 9, the commission which is proposed to be created under the pending bill could spend all of the money on the "three-seventh roads."

Mr. TOWNSEND. They probably could.

Mr. SWANSON. It is stated in the bill, on page 9, line 13: Not less than 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary or interstate highways—

And so forth. What does that mean? It means that the commission may take the entire amount of money which is appropriated by this bill and spend it on the "three-seventh roads," the depot roads.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Until those roads shall have been completed.

Mr. SWANSON. The effect would be that we should have no roads going to the depots, going to the towns and cities, except the great highways, unless the other roads connected with them. If this is to be a fair compromise, it should say that not more than 60 per cent of all Federal aid money shall be expended on interstate roads. Now, indirectly, it is proposed to do exactly what some of us have always contended should not be done; that is, that all the road money should be spent on the "three-seventh roads."

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will say to the Senator from Virginia that I did not insert the language to which he refers.

Mr. SWANSON. The language ought to be changed if we are going to do anything for the "four-seventh road," which is the road that would go to the towns and cities, to the depots, and to the markets. As I understand the Senator, his committee made a compromise, which was acceptable, to the effect that the money was to be divided 60-40. If that was the compromise, why does not the language carry out the compromise?

Mr. TOWNSEND. The provision is in the compromise bill in accordance with the idea that everyone had, I think. Our committee has not changed that matter as to a single word.

Mr. HEFLIN. I have never consented to the words that "not less than 60 per cent" should be expended on the interstate highways. Those words must be changed. The language should read "not more than 60 per cent."

I certainly would not vote for a bill that would turn over to the commission the power to use all of this money on an interstate system of roads.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The commission will not have the power to do that unless the State shall consent to it; unless the State takes the initiative in this matter that can not be done.

Mr. HEFLIN. I want it clearly understood and specifically set out in the bill that Federal funds shall be available for use in the States for the construction of the four-sevenths per cent of intercounty roads provided for in the bill.

Mr. POMERENE. Permit me to make a suggestion. It is true the State commission must first lay out the plans and select the highways; but, on the other hand, it would be within the power of the Federal commission to say, "We will not allow any of this money to be expended upon any of the roads except those which meet our approval." If they were of the same opinion as our good friend, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND], as to the scheme which should be adopted, it would be possible for them to spend 100 per cent of these Federal funds upon interstate highways. The result would be that the outlying counties away from the interstate highway would not have any Federal aid at all. I am very frank to say that if that were done, it would be to the special delight of the people in my own county and in certain other counties, but it seems to me that the farmers in the outlying counties, down in the southern and western portions of the State, ought in each county to have the same encouragement which the others have who happen to live along a great highway.

Mr. TOWNSEND. If the Senator maintains that, he is very widely apart from me. I am very much opposed to prorating the Federal money among the counties. I do not believe we have any right to do that. The States may do with their money as they please, but I do not believe in prorating the Federal money amongst the counties.

Mr. POMERENE. The Senator from Michigan says we have no right to do that. If he refers to the question of policy, then there is room for difference of opinion; but if it is purely a constitutional question we have the authority to build post roads anywhere, in any county.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I mean that we ought not to make appropriations for such a purpose.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I understood that there was a compromise by which three-sevenths of the roads were to be selected as interstate roads and four-sevenths as depot, market, and city roads. We made a concession to those who wanted great, long, expensive highways constructed under which 60 per cent of Federal aid would go to them and 40 per cent would go to the other roads, which are known as farm and market roads in the common parlance as used. The language as it is now drawn in the bill does not carry out that compromise at all. It would enable the commission which is created under the bill to spend not less than 60 per cent of what they are authorized to spend on the "three-sevenths roads." It seems to me, if the understanding was as I have indicated—and that was the understanding of a great many Members—the language ought to carry out that understanding.

The language ought to read that 60 per cent of all Federal aid allotted to any State road shall be expended upon primary roads, neither more nor less, and 40 per cent on the farm and market roads. What would be the objection to that?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Let me state what the objection would be and correct the Senator as to a part of his understanding. The Senator speaks about a compromise. We had before us two bills. The Dowell bill contained certain provisions for which the Senator wanted to vote.

Mr. SWANSON. I am not familiar with the Dowell bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That was the bill which came over here from the other House and which there was objection to sending to our committee in the first place. We went into the committee, and those who favored the Dowell bill and those who favored our proposition compromised on two features which I, myself, did not like to compromise, but we yielded because we wanted legislation. We took those provisions of the House bill just as they were written and as they passed through the House.

The Senator from Ohio says that if I were a member of the commission and had my way I would spend all of the money on interstate roads.

Mr. POMERENE. I mean that the Senator from Michigan could do so.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I should assume that the provisions of this bill established that the money should be divided as nearly sixty-forty as it could be done, but I could understand, for instance, where it was desired to complete an interstate road—and that is the kind of road the highway commissioners had in mind when they drew the Dowell bill.

Mr. POMERENE. The State highway commissioners?

Mr. TOWNSEND. The State highway commissioners. What they wanted was to give preference to interstate roads, and they provided that until they are completed, or some particular interstate project is completed, the commission, with the consent of the States—for that they can not spend a dollar without the consent of the States—may spend not less than 60 per cent.

Mr. SWANSON. But, if the Senator will permit me, there is this exception: The State can not get any of the 40 per cent to spend on the intrastate roads without the consent of the commission; and if they have not the consent of the commission, if the commission desires all of the money to be spent for great automobile roads or interstate roads—I do not mean to disparage automobile roads—if all of this money is going to be spent for the construction of great highways through the State and a commission in favor of that policy be appointed, it simply means that the farm market road will not get a cent under the provisions of the bill.

I was told that a compromise had been reached by which there was to be a division of the fund to the "three-sevenths" and the "four-sevenths" roads, according to the character of the road, and then that 60 per cent should go to the "three-sevenths" roads, which was a concession to the Senator who had an idea more ought to be expended in that way. Now, I want the language to be written to carry out that view.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator might have had that view, but in the committee those of us who talked this over did not so understand it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield I wish to call attention—

Mr. SWANSON. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] as to his impression of that matter.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I call attention to the fact that that was the view of the committee expressed in unmistakable language in a report which the Senator himself filed. I read from his report which was filed yesterday.

Mr. POMERENE. On what bill?

Mr. McKELLAR. On this bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What report was filed yesterday? I have not seen any report that was filed yesterday. I certainly filed none; I have made none.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have the report here to accompany Senate bill 1072, and I read from it as follows:

This system for a beginning shall not exceed 7 per cent of the total mileage of any State. Sixty per cent of each year's allotment of Federal funds shall be expended on the primary system and the remainder on the secondary system until the same have been completed.

That is language that is absolutely unmistakable.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What is that report?

Mr. McKELLAR. I will give it to the Senator. It is in keeping with the understanding. It does seem that the language contained in the pending measure does not carry out the understanding the committee has had and does not carry out the understanding the Senator had when the report was written.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The report from which the Senator has quoted was submitted to the House of Representatives weeks ago. It is not a report submitted on the pending measure; it was presented to the other House when the Phipps bill was reported.

Mr. SWANSON. Will the Senator accept an amendment striking out the words "not less" and providing that 60 per cent shall be spent in this way? That is the understanding, according to my impression—that 60 per cent of it shall be expended on interstate roads and 40 per cent on intrastate roads.

Mr. TOWNSEND. There will have to be an exact division in that event.

Mr. McKELLAR. Make it read "not more than"; strike out "less" and insert the word "more."

Mr. TOWNSEND. How many other changes does the Senator want to make than those which we have agreed upon? I do not like the suggestion at all, although I do not want anybody to understand that the commission would arbitrarily expend all the money on interstate roads unless the State commissions and the Federal commission felt that there were some such roads that ought to be completed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then put in the words "not more than."

Mr. SWANSON. I will ask the Senator to consider this view of it: Suppose the Federal commission should reach the conclusion that they wanted to expend all of this money, as the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] has suggested, on interstate roads; they could coerce the State commissions by saying, "We will not approve any plan that does not do that."

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Secretary of Agriculture can do that to-day if he wants to do it in connection with any road, for he need not approve it unless it is located just where he wants it.

Mr. SWANSON. But there is not such language as that provided in this bill under which they may act.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Temporarily we will pass that. I will consent to the elimination of the words "not less"; but I want to see how we are coming out and what other departures from the agreement are to be proposed.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. HEFLIN. I wish to suggest that I think we ought to amend the title of the bill so that it will read, "Federal and State highway act" instead of the "Federal highway act." We are going to have a Federal commission; we are going to have State authorities who are going to act in concert in the building of roads; some of the roads provided for are intrastate roads and some are interstate roads; so I think we ought to amend the title as I have suggested.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I object to that.

Mr. HEFLIN. Let it be known as the Federal and State highway act. That will carry the idea in the very title of it as to what the bill means. It is intended to build a system of Federal roads, and it is intended to build a system of intrastate roads, and the State authorities are to designate where these roads shall be built with the approval of the commission here in Washington. I think the title of the bill ought to convey that idea.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The original act, according to the same token, ought to have been worded the "Federal State aid law." The original law was the Federal aid act.

Mr. HEFLIN. What was the title of the original act?

Mr. TOWNSEND. As I remember, it was the Federal aid act. There is not much in a name, but there is no use of trying to confuse matters in that way. The power is all in the bill just the same, and instead of confusing the title by calling it a Federal and State highway bill I think it is better to leave it as it is.

Mr. HEFLIN. I realize that if we can have an understanding as to how much of this money shall be expended on intrastate county roads the title will not prevent us from getting the money for that purpose.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will for the time being consent that it shall read, 60 per cent shall be expended on interstate roads, although that might possibly interfere with what the States themselves want.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then, Mr. President, in order to have the amendment agreed to by the Senate, I offer the following amendment: In line 13, page 9, strike out the word "less" after the word "not" and insert the word "more."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Tennessee that there is already an amendment pending.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will withdraw the first amendment for the present, so that this one can be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator restate his amendment, so that the Secretary can hear it?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, before these amendments are voted upon, I ask the Senator from Michigan to go ahead and explain this bill. He was right in the midst of that explanation. I should like to have a general explanation of the bill before we vote on any of these amendments.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, before a project is approved in any State, the road department of that State, as I have said, shall designate 7 per cent of the roads and submit them to the Federal Commission. Three-sevenths shall be interstate roads, and four-sevenths intercounty roads connecting with this interstate system of roads.

Now, we have a new provision that is in neither one of the bills:

The commission may approve projects submitted by the State highway departments prior to the selection, designation, and approval of the system of Federal-aid highways herein provided for if it may reasonably anticipate that such projects will become a part of such system.

That means that in the change from the director of roads under the Department of Agriculture to the commission there will be an interim. The State has not had time to act under the new law, but if the State highway department and the commission agree that here is a piece of road that ought to be improved, and that it will be included in the system to be selected, the State could proceed with construction at once.

It is provided in both bills—there is very little difference between them in this regard—for a State fund to match the Federal money that is put up and to meet the requirements of maintenance. We do have a provision that a State that has not any constitutional authority to provide money to make internal improvements can use the money as it is being used now in six of the States, obtaining it from the counties, until two years after the passage of this bill. That obviates the objection which the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and others had, that we were invading the constitutional rights of a State; we have inserted this provision.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. WILLIS. The Senator will recall, I think, that certain of our people in Ohio who are interested in this matter suggested an amendment to the bill. I have not a copy of it now. I gave it to the Senator. Does he remember whether that amendment has been embodied in the pending committee amendment?

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is the very matter I am talking about now. We do make provision that the State must put up the money, but it can obtain it from any source it may select.

Mr. WILLIS. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not hear all of his statement. That is covered in this amendment?

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is covered in this amendment.

Mr. WILLIS. In what section? Will the Senator state the section?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Section 27:

That in any State where the existing constitution or laws will not permit a State fund for the construction, reconstruction, or maintenance of highways, the commission shall continue to approve projects for said State until two years after the passage of this act, if such State will comply with the provisions of this act in so far as its existing constitution and laws will permit.

I think that will be satisfactory to all. I have not heard any complaint from anybody on that score.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I think I have in mind now, perhaps, the amendment to which my colleague referred. In one of the drafts of the bill it distinguished between Federal funds and funds payable by the State or raised by State taxation. In Ohio, under our scheme of road building, a part of the funds is furnished by the State by the act of the legislature, a part by the counties through the act of the commissioners, and a part by the townships or other subdivisions, as the case may be; and I know that in some correspondence I had with these authorities—I have not my files with me now—I suggested that they add to the words "State funds" words something like these:

Or funds raised in any other political subdivision of the State.

So as to make it perfectly clear that it took care of the situation as it now exists under the laws of our State.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I think if the Senator looks over this amendment he will find that we provide that the State shall match the Federal fund. The State can get its money where it pleases. There is no objection at all to that. We can not prescribe where it shall get its money, but we are going to deal with the State. When we come to apportion money to a State for the construction or maintenance of roads we provide that we must deal with the State authorities on that subject and not with its subdivisions.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator for a moment?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. KING. Is it not a fact that the plan suggested, as I understand the Senator from Ohio as well as other Senators and perhaps other people, seems to contemplate that the States may not expend any of their taxes except upon roads contribution to the construction of which shall be made by the Federal Government?

Obviously the States will be compelled to classify their roads. They will make contribution to the roads to which the Federal Government makes contribution; and if the 40 per cent or the 50 per cent which they appropriate to match the Federal Government's appropriation shall be expended as will the appropriation made by the Federal Government upon certain interstate roads and certain county interstate roads—if I may be permitted that expression—they will have to resort to other taxes and to other methods of obtaining funds to construct their other roads.

For instance, they may have a road fund of $100,000 in a State, $50,000 of which matches the Federal Government's $50,000. They may appropriate that $50,000 upon the same roads upon which the Federal Government appropriates its $50,000, and then they will have their other $50,000 or such other sum as they may see fit to appropriate upon their farm-to-market roads, or upon any trails or roads or highways, inconspicuous and unimportant, that they may see fit in any part of the Commonwealth.

So that we must keep in mind, it seems to me, the powers of the Federal Government and the character of highways for which the Federal Government shall make appropriation, and not concede, as I understand the chairman of the committee does not concede, the obligation to rest upon the Federal Government to make contribution to every highway or road or trail within a State upon which the State may be willing to make some expenditure.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is correct.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator with reference to the paragraph as to approving projects before their designation into the two classes.

Mr. POMERENE. To what section does the Senator refer?

Mr. LENROOT. Page 9, line 17.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is the one to which I have just referred.

Mr. LENROOT. Yes; the Senator has just referred to it. I should like to ask the Senator what effect that would have upon the limitation of three-sevenths and four-sevenths. For instance, we will assume that the highways designated have been properly divided so that three-sevenths of them are interstate. Then here are one or more projects that have been approved but not been designated but which clearly should be designated as a part of the interstate system.

Mr. TOWNSEND. If the Senator will notice, the language is that this can be done if the commission is convinced that this road will become a part of the system which is to be laid out. That is, in the interim, where, for instance, if the commission comes into power and takes over authority formerly exercised by the Department of Agriculture, it may be desirable to do some work immediately. There is a road to be constructed or improved. Then undoubtedly, if the State department impresses the commission that the road will be included in the system when it is finally laid out by the State authorities, it will approve it.

Mr. LENROOT. Yes; but we will assume that the system is laid out and these limitations apply, three-sevenths to interstate. Then here are certain projects that are approved that never have been designated as a part of the system, but we will assume that those projects are clearly interstate. What effect has that upon the limitation? They have gotten their money. They are entitled to their money under this paragraph. They have already reached the limitation under the general system.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator means if they have used up all of their money on the interstate system?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes; or they have allotted three-sevenths under the interstate system.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I assume that this commission, starting in—it will only be at the very beginning that this emergency can arise, anyway—will have all that in mind and will take into consideration the fact that this road is to be a part of the interstate system. If it becomes a part of that system it will be included and will constitute a part of the three-sevenths.

Mr. LENROOT. It might or might not be. Under the language of the bill they would be entitled to go to three-sevenths of the roads designated by them.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. In addition to that they would be entitled to approved projects that have not been turned into the system, although they might clearly be interstate roads.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Does not the Senator understand that this means that the road is to become a part of the system?

Mr. LENROOT. But if it does become a part of the system your three-sevenths have been exceeded. That is the point I make.

Mr. TOWNSEND. But that would be included in the three-sevenths.

Mr. LENROOT. It might or might not be.

Mr. TOWNSEND. If it does not, if they were not contemplating that this road would be in the three-sevenths, they could get no aid. The commission would not approve it.

Mr. LENROOT. They would have authority to approve it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Well, I know; but the language is that if they are convinced—what is that expression?

Mr. LENROOT. (Reading:)

The commission may approve projects submitted * * * if it may reasonably anticipate that such projects will become a part of such system.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes; "a part of such system." It will be in the three-sevenths or the four-sevenths, according as the circumstances would indicate. It would become a part of that. It is simply adopting that fraction of the three-sevenths or the four-sevenths before those fractions of the 7 per cent of the roads are finally decided and officially laid out.

Mr. LENROOT. Does not the Senator think that they would be authorized to designate three-sevenths and expend 60 per cent upon the roads designated by them in the first instance as a part of the interstate system?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. Then does not the Senator think that in addition to that, under the language of the amendment, they would be authorized to approve projects upon which the money would be paid that had not been designated as a part of the interstate system, but which would in fact be a part of the interstate system? I am speaking now of power and authority.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not believe I follow the Senator. All of this is done prior to the selection of this system.

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Here is a piece of road that they want to complete right now. The State has agreed to it. The commission says no doubt that will be included in this system. Now, that does not add to or subtract from the three-sevenths. It is a part of it.

Mr. LENROOT. The Senator does not think, then, that this three-sevenths or four-sevenths, or a part of this, could be adopted, adding other roads to it later on?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not think so.

Mr. LENROOT. If the Senator is correct about that, I concede his provision, of course.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Maybe the language is not as clear as it ought to be.

Mr. LENROOT. Does the Senator think, then, that if the commission once acts they can not be enlarged thereafter as the system may demand without further legislation?

Mr. TOWNSEND. The legislation provides that when that has been used up—

Mr. LENROOT. For this particular allotment it could not be?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Could not be changed?

Mr. LENROOT. Enlarged.

Mr. TOWNSEND. No; it could not be enlarged.

Mr. LENROOT. Whether for this particular allotment or not, this is permanent legislation, which would apply to any allotment, would it not?

Mr. TOWNSEND. It provides that when this allotment is used up you can add more mileage to the 7 per cent.

Mr. LENROOT. Until provision shall be made for the improvement of all the highways?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Of all the highways.

Mr. LENROOT. But until that is done, the Senator thinks that new roads could not be added?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I think not. I agree with the director of roads that 7 per cent is pretty big. I would like to confine it to a still greater extent.

Were there other questions any other Senator wanted to ask me?

Mr. OVERMAN. I want to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator suspend? The Chair desires to know if the Senator from Tennessee has withdrawn his amendment on page 3, line 22?

Mr. McKELLAR. I did, and offered an amendment to strike out the word "less" in line 13, on page 9, and to insert in lieu thereof the word "more."

Mr. OVERMAN. There is a provision for building roads through our national forests, and an appropriation of some $3,000,000. I construe that to include the forests which have been purchased under the Weeks Act, the Appalachian forests.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not think there is any doubt about it including that.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is included in the words "national forests"?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is the construction of the Senator, and I just want it to appear in the Record.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Oh, yes; that is a part of the national forest. But I wish to state to the Senator that Congress has heretofore made an appropriation of a million dollars a year for the forests. This last year we had four million, three plus one, but that three million appropriation ended on the 30th of June last. In this bill we carry an appropriation of five million additional to the one million, which would make it six million for the national forests.

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to ask the Senator if he knows whether or not this $100,000,000 is included in the estimates of expenditures for next year, upon which the tax bill now pending in the House is based?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not know. I have talked with representatives of the administration in reference to this bill, and I have been advised by the President, "Do not make it too large." I think it is believed and expected that an appropriation for roads will be made, but no amount has ever been indicated. We put this in at $100,000,000, which is the amount of last year's appropriation for roads.

Mr. LENROOT. Does not the Senator think, in view of the present condition of the Treasury, and in view of the income for the next year, that that ought to be reduced?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have given a good deal of thought to that, I will say to the Senator. If I did not believe that a proper expenditure of money for good roads constructed along main lines was the best investment we could make in the interest of general prosperity of revived industry, I would say by no means should we vote any appropriation. But believing, as I do believe, that it is for the best interests of the country—that the construction of roads will not only give employment to idle labor but that it will furnish a means of transportation which the country needs and will be an incentive to production—I unhesitatingly advise this seemingly large appropriation.

We divided it, as the Senator notices. We make $50,000,000 immediately available and $50,000,000 available six months later. It, of course, is a question of opinion whether we would be warranted in appropriating this amount of money at this time or not. I think it is advisable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment, on page 9, line 13, to strike out the word "less" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "more."

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I do not address myself to that amendment, as I think I agree with the proponent of the amendment, but I want to know something more about this bill before we get through with it; and I want to call the attention of the Senator from Michigan to the provision, on page 18, as to how these funds shall be distributed among the several States. Of course, I am not unmindful of the fact that under this situation the more forward States, like New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, and Illinois, will be bearing the greatest part of this burden, and they are paying more toward highways than, in fact, they are getting under this bill. There is not any doubt about that.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Several times what they are receiving.

Mr. POMERENE. Are these provisions identical with those in the Bankhead Act?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Exactly.

Mr. McKELLAR. Precisely. They have not been changed.

Mr. POMERENE. I know they have not been changed, and that is one of the objections to it. I would like to know what the reasons were for this particular scheme.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It was an arbitrary division, taking into account territory, population, and mileage. It was believed that it would be, perhaps, more equitable than any other scheme which could be employed. I did not think it was entirely equitable at the time it was inaugurated. I am in favor of it now that it has been established, especially when you allow Ohio and Michigan and New York and these other States which contribute the largest part of this fund to say, "We pay to this fund much more than we receive from it, and therefore we insist that the money which we contribute for Virginia, for North Carolina, for Alabama, for Georgia, or for any of the other States shall be expended for the common good, for a Federal purpose, serving the commerce of the whole country." For the benefit of the national defense and interstate commerce the Government has a right to take money from the taxpayers of Michigan and spend it in Virginia.

Congress adopted this scheme of division originally, and it has worked pretty well. A State that has a large area may have a small population, comparatively, and a State that is small in area generally has a very condensed population. So one tends to offset the other, and we have made provision in this bill, as has been said a number of times, for the public-land States, which I think ought to have favorable consideration. We have provided for these States. The original bill which I introduced on the road subject provided for this special aid to the public-land States, and every bill providing for Federal aid to the States has contained this provision.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, this amendment was reported yesterday, and we have had about two hours consideration of it. I have not had an opportunity even to read it, except after it was made the unfinished business, and as there are only about two dozen Senators here, I suggest that at this time we adjourn until to-morrow, so that we can have an opportunity to study the measure a little further.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. It is desired that there shall be an executive session, and if the chairman of the committee will allow the bill to be laid aside, I will move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Of course, I will consent to that. The Senator from Ohio asks for more time. I had supposed we were in quite general accord that we must have legislation on this subject. There has been some hard work, some very difficult work, on this matter. If the Senate agrees to this committee amendment we ought to get it to conference, because the two bills differ, and it will take some time to adjust the differences. There is an appropriation bill ready to be brought up, and Senators may want the right of way for that. But I do not want to ask the Senate to vote on a bill of this importance unless Senators understand it. I shall insist, however, that a recess be taken and that the Senate proceed with the consideration of this pending measure in the morning, when I hope it will be passed as promptly as possible.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I believe in speed, but I do not believe in exceeding the speed limit in matters of this kind. It may be perfectly satisfactory to Senators who have studied it, and it may be satisfactory to me when I have studied it; but I am not in the habit, in the consideration of measures of this kind, of voting either for or against them without having an opportunity to at least read the measure over carefully, and that I want to do in this case.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CURTIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

RECESS.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Wednesday, August 17, 1921, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 16, 1921.

POSTMASTERS.

ARKANSAS.

Homer H. Goodman to be postmaster at Cotter, Ark., in place of W. T. Beaver. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1921.

Helen Porter to be postmaster at Horatio, Ark., in place of W. L. Greer, resigned.

IDAHO.

Samuel J. Linder to be postmaster at Craigmont, Idaho, in place of S. J. Linder. Office became third class October 1, 1920.

ILLINOIS.

Benjamin A. Miller to be postmaster at Geneva, Ill., in place of D. M. Flynn, resigned.

James F. Harrison to be postmaster at Leaf River, Ill., in place of J. F. Harrison. Office became third class January 1, 1920.

Bailey H. West to be postmaster at Makanda, Ill., in place of H. R. Row, removed.

INDIANA.

Lyman R. Ramforth to be postmaster at Leavenworth, Ind., in place of T. T. Gobbel, resigned. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

IOWA.

Jesse O. Parker to be postmaster at Keosauqua, Iowa, in place of G. F. Smith, deceased.

Purley Jennison to be postmaster at Maynard, Iowa, in place of Purley Jennison. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Bess J. Cuff to be postmaster at Rolfe, Iowa, in place of P. A. McCray, resigned.

Howard W. Edwards to be postmaster at Tingley, Iowa, in place of H. W. Edwards. Office became third class October 1, 1920.

Clifford C. Clardy to be postmaster at Valley Junction, Iowa, in place of R. I. Juneau. Incumbent's commission expired April 24, 1921.

Everett H. Moon to be postmaster at New Providence, Iowa, in place of E. H. Moon. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

KANSAS.

Edmond Houdyshell to be postmaster at Pawnee Rock, Kans., in place of N. M. McKechnie, resigned.

John H. Sunley to be postmaster at Ransom, Kans., in place of Caroline Doerschlag, resigned.

MARYLAND.

Richard H. Williams to be postmaster at Midland, Md., in place of E. R. Grant, resigned. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

MINNESOTA.

Thorwald O. Westby to be postmaster at Avoca, Minn., in place of T. O. Westby. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

Arthur F. Johnson to be postmaster at Barrett, Minn., in place of A. F. Peterson, resigned. Office became third class October 1, 1921.

MISSOURI.

Herbert T. Wilson to be postmaster at Brashear, Mo., in place of F. R. Moore, resigned. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Orville J. White to be postmaster at Fairfax, Mo., in place of H. H. Schooler, removed.

NEW YORK.

Charles R. Diehl to be postmaster at Brewster, N. Y., in place of J. W. Thorp, resigned.

Nellie MacMorran to be postmaster at Firthcliffe, N. Y., in place of C. T. Chadeayne, resigned. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

NORTH CAROLINA.

William J. Mode to be postmaster at Rutherfordton, N. C., in place of B. F. Dalton, resigned.

NORTH DAKOTA.

James O. Lewis to be postmaster at Norma, N. Dak., in place of J. O. Lewis. Office became third class July 1, 1921.

PENNSYLVANIA.

John L. Knisely to be postmaster at Bellefonte, Pa., in place of P. H. Gherrity. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1920.

Ella T. Cronin to be postmaster at Centerville, Pa., in place of E. T. Cronin. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1921.

RHODE ISLAND.

Beatrice M. Kelly, to be postmaster at Little Compton, R. I., in place of B. M. Kelly. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Tully A. Sawyer to be postmaster at Chesnee, S. C., in place of T. A. Sawyer. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

John B. O'Neal to be postmaster at Fairfax, S. C., in place of L. H. Floyd, resigned.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Alfred J. Soukup to be postmaster at Lesterville, S. Dak., in place of Laura Larson, resigned.

VIRGINIA.

Creighton Angell to be postmaster at Boone Mill, Va., in place of Creighton Angell. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 16, 1921.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

ASSAYER IN CHARGE.

William L. Hill to be assayer in charge United States assay office, Helena, Mont.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES.

Thomas M. Reed to be United States district judge, first division, district of Alaska.

Elmer E. Ritchie to be United States district judge, third division, district of Alaska.

CIRCUIT JUDGE.

Hoimer L. Ross to be circuit judge, fourth circuit, Territory of Hawaii.

UNITED STATES MARSHALS.

George D. Beaumont to be United States marshal, first division, district of Alaska.

Oscar P. Cox to be United States marshal, district of Hawaii.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

RECORDER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

Mrs. Mabel P. Le Roy, of Michigan, to be recorder of the General Land Office.

REGISTERS OF THE LAND OFFICE.

John R. Towles to be register, United States land office, Phoenix, Ariz.

Joshua B. Campbell to be register, land office, Guthrie, Okla.

Elgie K. Fritts to be register, land office, Waterville, Wash.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEY.

Mrs. Hattie Jewell Anderson to be receiver of public moneys, San Francisco, Calif.

Mrs. Eva A. Brittain to be receiver of public moneys, Leadville, Colo.

Harry K. Lewis to be receiver of public moneys, Hailey, Idaho.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

TO BE REAR ADMIRALS.

Archibald H. Scales.
Nathan C. Twining.

TO BE CAPTAINS.

David E. Theleen.	William C. Asserson.
William H. Reynolds.	Arthur St. Clair Smith.
Orin G. Murfin.	Clark H. Woodward.
Andrew T. Graham.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COMMANDERS.

John F. McClain.	John H. Everson.
Charles L. Best.	Robert E. Rogers.
Fred T. Berry.	Hugo W. Koehler.
John C. Jennings.

TO BE LIEUTENANTS.

Hamilton V. Bryan.	Hugh W. Olds.
Robert H. Maury.	Charles J. Palmer.
Harry V. Baugh.	Ross A. Dierdorff.
Harold G. Eberhart.	Robert P. Briscoe.
Gerald F. Bogan.	Walter R. Read.
Colin Campbell.	John C. Williams.
Allan P. Flagg.

TO BE LIEUTENANTS (JUNIOR GRADE).

Harold G. Eberhart.
Allan P. Flagg.

TO BE CHAPLAINS.

Hugh M. T. Pearce.	Edmund A. Brodmann.
James D. MacNair.	Le Roy N. Taylor.

TO BE PASSED ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

Aclpfar A. Marsteller.	Daniel C. Reyner.
Thomas L. Carter.	Alfred L. Gaither.
Charles L. Oliphant.

TO BE ASSISTANT SURGEON.

Lloyd Lewis Edmisten.

TO BE ASSISTANT DENTAL SURGEONS.

Rohnie A. Berry.
Robert R. Crees.
Raymond D. Reid.

TO BE PASSED ASSISTANT PAYMASTERS.

Palmer J. McCloskey.	Raymond V. Adams.
John Atwell Fields.	William T. Hopkins.
Richard C. Reed.	Ralph H. Howard.
Frederick C. Beck.

TO BE ASSISTANT PAYMASTERS.

Chester B. Peake.	Harry R. Hubbard.
Clarence E. Kastenbein.	Charles M. Garrison.
Ervine R. Brown.	Hunter J. Norton.
William R. Calvert.	John Ball.
Frank P. Delahanty.	Melbourne N. Gilbert.
Errett R. Feeney.	Nicholas J. Halpine.
Phillip A. Haas.	Edmund T. Stewart.
John N. Silke.	Leslie A. Williams.
Richard L. Whittington.

TO BE CIVIL ENGINEERS.

Gaylord Church.
Ralph D. Spalding.

TO BE ASSISTANT CIVIL ENGINEERS.

Simson C. Stengel.	Edmund B. Keating.
James D. Wilson.	Robert E. Hancock.

TO BE CHIEF PAY CLERKS.

Rufus B. Hurst.	Carl R. Fatzer.
Ransom C. Wall.	Frank E. Herbert.
Jesse A. Scott.	Lewis R. Benson.
Howard F. Bowker.	John A. Zinsitz.
Clifford W. Waters.	Theodore P. Witsil.
Jacob K. Ziesel.	William G. Nicol.

TO BE CHIEF CARPENTER.

Daniel Campbell.

POSTMASTERS.

ILLINOIS.

Carl M. Crowder, Bethany.
Warren S. Bunker, Equality.
Paul W. Gibson, Louisville.
Robert W. Gibson, Mason.
John W. Vangilder, Sumner.
Arthur W. Shinn, Toulon.

OHIO.

Lowell E. Blakeley, Botkins.
James O. Miller, Dexter City.
Olive B. Reed, Jacksonville.
Howard H. Collins, South Zanesville.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Oscar I. Bierman, Groton.
Florence F. Cheatham, Mellette.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, August 16, 1921.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we thank Thee that Thy laws and Thy providences are still watching over all that is near and dear to us. As Thy children and as servants of the Republic lead us to our duties this day. Bestow the richest blessing of Thy wisdom upon our President and upon all those who are united with him in authority; also upon the governors of all the States. May justice, truth, and righteousness shine throughout our land, and more and more lift us to the mount of moral excellence. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I submit a privileged report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas submits a resolution reported by the Committee on Rules, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 173.

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7294) entitled "An act supplemental to the national prohibition act," under the five-minute rule. After the completion of such consideration the committee shall arise and report the amendments of the Senate to the House with such recommendation as may have been adopted, whereupon the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the Senate amendments and all motions incidental thereto recommended by the committee to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, this resolution is unanimously reported from the Committee on Rules, and provides for the consideration of the Senate amendments to the act amendatory of the Volstead Act. I see no reason for discussing the rule, and therefore move the previous question upon it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman withhold his motion for the previous question to allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. Yesterday the majority leader stated that the program would be the consideration of the amendment to the War Finance Corporation act and then the consideration of the amendments to the national prohibition act. There was a large membership present at that time, and I believe that a great number of Members of the House have acted accordingly, understanding that the War Finance Corporation act will be taken up first and then the consideration of the amendments to the national prohibition act will follow. Does not the gentleman think that Members may have acted upon that statement of the program and that they may be taken unawares by the altering of the order of business to-day?

Mr. WALSH. Unfortunately the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] was not a Member of the last Congress. If he had been he would know that anything touching prohibition takes precedence of anything else before the Congress, and that everybody else must give way when the juggernaut operated by Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler is to be put in operation.

Mr. STAFFORD. I wish to say in reply to the very pointed remark of my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts, that though I was not a Member of the last Congress, nevertheless I have been here long enough to know that everything yields to the dragon whip of the Anti-Saloon League, as has been demonstrated from time to time during this short session of Congress.

Mr. BLANTON. That is a mighty good situation.

Mr. ANDREWS. Does not the gentleman think it is about time to sober up?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does the gentleman mean to say he has not been sober?

Mr. ANDREWS. I was referring to the gentleman from Wisconsin. [Laughter.]

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important question, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. This is only on the adoption of the rule. I hope the gentleman will not do that now.

Mr. HILL. I withdraw the point of order for the moment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws the point of order.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it was suggested yesterday by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] that probably the minority would wish to have a conference about 4 o'clock this afternoon. Can the gentleman inform me whether the order of business is so arranged that we can have that?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. This transfer of the business of the House to-day is with a view of expediting this business so that can be done. We think this can be disposed of in a very few minutes, and that then, when the finance bill is taken up, there will be no incentive on the part of anybody to delay its consideration.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. If the gentleman will yield to me long enough, I would like to make the statement that there will be a conference of the minority at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. CRISP. Where?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. In this Hall.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LONDON. I missed a part of a reading of the resolution. The effect of the adoption of the rule will be to enable the House to take up the amendments to the Volstead Act?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. To take up and consider the Senate amendments in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. LONDON. In the way in which conference reports are usually considered?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Not in the way conference reports are considered, because this is not a conference report. We are about to consider the Senate amendments—for instance, the Stanley amendment relating to writs and entering premises without proper warrants.

Mr. LONDON. Will opportunity be given to discuss the various amendments?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Oh, yes.

Mr. KINDRED. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KINDRED. Is it the intention to consider the amendments of the Senate in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas moves the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. STAFFORD) there were—ayes 97, noes 7.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland makes the point of order that no quorum is present. Evidently no quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that does not get a yea-and-nay vote, because the gentleman did not object to the vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order. As many as are in favor of the adoption of the resolution will as their names are called vote yea, those opposed nay, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 256, nays 55, not voting 119, as follows:

YEAS—256.

Ackerman	Barbour	Black	Box
Almon	Beck	Blakeney	Brand
Anderson	Beedy	Bland, Ind.	Brooks, Pa.
Andrews	Begg	Bland, Va.	Brown, Tenn.
Appleby	Bell	Blanton	Buchanan
Arentz	Benham	Boies	Bulwinkle
Aswell	Bird	Bowers	Burroughs
Atkeson	Bixler	Bowling	Burtness

Burton	Gensman	Lyon	Rose
Butler	Gilbert	McArthur	Rosenbloom
Byrnes, S. C.	Goodykoontz	McClintic	Sanders, Ind.
Byrnes, Tenn.	Gorman	McCormick	Sanders, N. Y.
Cable	Graham, Ill.	McDuffie	Sanders, Tex.
Campbell, Kans.	Green, Iowa	McKenzie	Sandlin
Cannon	Greene, Mass.	McLaughlin, Mich.	Schall
Carter	Greene, Vt.	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Scott, Tenn.
Chalmers	Griest	McPherson	Shelton
Chindblom	Hedley	MacGregor	Sinnot
Christopherson	Hammer	Madden	Slomp
Clague	Hardy, Colo.	Magge	Smith, Idaho
Clark, Fla.	Harrison	Mann	Smith, Mich.
Clarke, N. Y.	Haugen	Mape	Smithwick
Clouse	Hawley	Michener	Speaks
Cole, Iowa	Hayden	Millsbaugh	Sproul
Collier	Hersey	Mondell	Stegall
Collins	Hickey	Moore, Ill.	Stedman
Colton	Himes	Moore, Ohio	Steenerson
Connally, Tex.	Hoch	Moore, Va.	Stevenson
Connell	Houghton	Moore, Ind.	Stoll
Cooper, Wis.	Huddleston	Morgan	Strong, Pa.
Copley	Hukriede	Mott	Summers, Wash.
Coughlin	Ireland	Murphy	Summers, Tex.
Crisp	Jacoway	Nelson, A. P.	Swank
Dale	Jeffers, Ala.	Nelson, J. M.	Sweet
Dallinger	Johnson, Ky.	Newton, Minn.	Swing
Darrow	Johnson, Miss.	Norton	Taylor, Tenn.
Davis, Minn.	Johnson, Wash.	Oldfield	Temple
Deal	Jones, Pa.	Oliver	Thomas
Dempsey	Jones, Tex.	Osborne	Thompson
Denison	Keller	Overstreet	Tillman
Dowell	Kelley, Mich.	Padgett	Timbrlake
Drewry	Kelly, Pa.	Park, Ga.	Timcher
Driver	Ketcham	Parks, Ark.	Towner
Dunbar	Kincheloe	Parrish	Treadway
Elliott	King	Patterson, Mo.	Tyson
Evans	Kinkaid	Patterson, N. J.	Underhill
Faust	Kirkpatrick	Perkins	Volstead
Fenn	Kline, Pa.	Pou	Walters
Fess	Knight	Pringey	Webster
Fields	Knutson	Purnell	White, Kans.
Fish	Kopp	Quin	White, Me.
Fisher	Kraus	Raker	Williams
Flood	Lanham	Ramseyer	Wilson
Fordney	Lankford	Rankin	Wingo
Foster	Larsen, Ga.	Rayburn	Winslow
Frear	Lawrence	Reavis	Wise
French	Layton	Reece	Woodruff
Frothingham	Leatherwood	Reed, N. Y.	Woods, Va.
Fuller	Lee, Ga.	Reed, W. Va.	Woodyard
Fulmer	Lineberger	Ricketts	Wright
Gahn	Little	Roach	Wurzbach
Garner	Logan	Robertson	Wyant
Garrett, Tenn.	Lowrey	Robison	Yates
Garrett, Tex.	Luhning	Rogers	Young

NAYS—55.

Bacharach	Hawes	Merritt	Ryan
Bond	Hill	Mills	Siegel
Campbell, Pa.	Hogan	Mudd	Stafford
Carow	Hull	Newton, Mo.	Stephens
Connolly, Pa.	Husted	O'Brien	Sullivan
Cullen	Jeffers, Nebr.	Opp	Tague
Curry	Kahn	Parker, N. J.	Taylor, N. J.
Dupré	Kindred	Porter	Tilson
Dyer	Kissel	Radcliffe	Voigt
Fairchild	Kunz	Ransley	Volk
Favrot	Lazaro	Reber	Walsh
Gerner	Lea, Calif.	Riordan	Ward, N. C.
Griffin	London	Rossdale	Watson
Hardy, Tex.	Longworth	Rouse

NOT VOTING—119.

Ansorge	Ellis	Langley	Rodenberg
Anthony	Elston	Larson, Minn.	Rucker
Bankhead	Fairfield	Lee, N. Y.	Scabath
Barkley	Fitzgerald	Leibach	Scott, Mich.
Brennan	Focht	Linthicum	Sears
Briggs	Free	Luce	Shaw
Brinson	Freeman	McFadden	Shreve
Britten	Funk	McLaughlin, Pa.	Sinclair
Brooks, Ill.	Gallivan	McSwain	Sisson
Browne, Wis.	Glynn	Maloney	Snell
Burdick	Goldsborough	Mansfield	Snyder
Burke	Gould	Martin	Stiness
Cantrill	Graham, Pa.	Mead	Strong, Kans.
Chandler, N. Y.	Hays	Michaelson	Taylor, Ark.
Chandler, Okla.	Herrick	Millet	Taylor, Colo.
Classon	Hicks	Montague	Ten Eyck
Cockran	Hudspeth	Montoya	Tinkham
Codd	Humphreys	Morin	Upshaw
Cole, Ohio	Hutchinson	Nolan	Valle
Cooper, Ohio	James	O'Connor	Vare
Cramton	Johnson, S. Dak.	Ogden	Vestal
Crowther	Kearns	Paige	Vinson
Davis, Tenn.	Kendall	Parker, N. Y.	Ward, N. Y.
Dickinson	Kennedy	Periman	Wason
Domink	Kiess	Peters	Weaver
Doughton	Kitchin	Petersen	Wheeler
Drane	Klecza	Rainey, Ala.	Williamson
Dunn	Kline, N. Y.	Rainey, Ill.	Wood, Ind.
Echols	Kreider	Rhodes	Zihlman
Edmonds	Lampert	Riddick

So the resolution was adopted.

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. KITCHIN (for) with Mr. LAMPERT (against).

Mr. DICKINSON (for) with Mr. MARTIN (against).

Mr. ANTHONY (for) with Mr. LINTHICUM (against).

Mr. HUTCHINSON (for) with Mr. VAILE (against).

Mr. KENDALL (for) with Mr. MORIN (against).

Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin (for) with Mr. PERLMAN (against).
 Mr. ZIHLMAN (for) with Mr. RAINEY of Illinois (against).
 Mr. DUNN (for) with Mr. GALLIVAN (against).
 Mr. SHREVE (for) with Mr. MEAD (against).
 Mr. WHEELER (for) with Mr. TEN ETCK (against).
 Mr. UPshaw (for) with Mr. KENNEDY (against).
 Mr. HICKS (for) with Mr. SABATH (against).
 Mr. DRANE (for) with Mr. LEHLBACH (against).
 Mr. RUCKER (for) with Mr. RODENBERG (against).
 Mr. BARKLEY (for) with Mr. GLYNN (against).
 Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH (for) with Mr. FREEMAN (against).
 Mr. HUMPHREYS (for) with Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Pennsylvania (against).

Mr. Sisson (for) with Mr. SNYDER (against).
 Mr. VINSON (for) with Mr. VARE (against).
 Mr. DOUGHTON (for) with Mr. WARD of New York (against).
 Mr. BRIGGS (for) with Mr. ANSORGE (against).
 Mr. CANTRILL (for) with Mr. COCKRAN (against).
 Mr. COOPER of Ohio (for) with Mr. O'CONNOR (against).
 Mr. BANKHEAD (for) with Mr. BRENNAN (against).

General pairs:

Mr. BROOKS of Illinois with Mr. MONTAGUE.
 Mr. EDMUNDS with Mr. BRINSON.
 Mr. FREE with Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee.
 Mr. ECHOLS with Mr. WEAVER.
 Mr. RHODES with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas.
 Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota with Mr. HUDSPETH.
 Mr. LUCE with Mr. DOMINICK.
 Mr. HAYES with Mr. McSWAIN.
 Mr. KREIDER with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.
 Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. MANSFIELD.
 Mr. KEARNS with Mr. SEARS.
 Mr. ELSTON with Mr. RAINEY of Alabama.

A quorum being present the doors were opened.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering Senate amendments to the bill H. R. 7294, an act supplemental to the national prohibition act.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering Senate amendments to a bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 7294, an act supplemental to the national prohibition act.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all the amendments that the House Judiciary Committee recommended be agreed to be considered together. There are a large number, and I think no one is opposed to any of those amendments; it will save a good deal of time to dispose of them in that way. My motion does not include the amendments recommended to be agreed to with an amendment, but simply where we recommend an agreement to the amendments as the Senate wrote them into the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, does not the gentleman consider Senate amendment No. 14 rather an important amendment that the committee should consider? I think, Mr. Chairman, it is better to take them up in their order and dispose of them.

Mr. DYER. Can not we agree to them all except amendments 14 and 15?

Mr. STAFFORD. I think the unimportant amendments can be disposed of rapidly and the important ones taken up.

Mr. MANN. But after all this would expedite it, and we want to get through fairly early if we can.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first Senate amendment.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, there was a unanimous-consent request made.

The CHAIRMAN. But objection was made.

The Clerk read the first amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 3, strike out the word "applicant" and insert the word "application."

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 3, after the word "any," insert the words "such vinous or spirituous."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the Senate amendment. The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 4, after the word "contains," insert the words "separately or in the aggregate."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 14, after the word "not," strike out the words "limit the quantity of liquor unfit for beverage purposes that may be prescribed, sold, or furnished on a prescription" and insert in lieu thereof the words "be construed to limit the sale of any article the manufacture of which is authorized under section 4, Title II, of the national prohibition act."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 19, after the word "find," insert the words "after hearing, upon notice as required in section 5, Title II, of the national prohibition act."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 22, after the word "of," strike out the word "the" and insert the word "said."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 23, after the word "being," strike out the words "purchased for use" and insert in lieu thereof the word "used."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 25, after the word "article," strike out the word "or" and insert in lieu thereof the words "and in the event that such change is not made within a time to be named by the commissioner he may."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 7, after the word "of," strike out the word "the" and insert the word "said."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 8, after the word "act" strike out the words:

"Provided, That no change of formula shall be required and no permit to manufacture any article under subdivision (E), section 4, Title II of the national prohibition act shall be revoked unless the sale or use of such article is substantially increased in the community by reason of its use as a beverage or for intoxicating purposes."

The committee proposes to insert in lieu of the words stricken out by the Senate the following:

"Provided, That no change of formula shall be required and no permit to manufacture any article under subdivision (E), section 4, Title II of the national prohibition act shall be revoked unless it shall be made to appear to the commissioner that the sale or use of such article is substantially increased in the community by reason of its use as a beverage or for intoxicating beverage purposes."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from Minnesota what the effect of the language which the Committee on the Judiciary recommends shall be inserted is upon the administration of this particular section?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I do not think it has much of any effect. It simply points out that the proof shall be made to the commissioner, which would be necessary anyway under the language of the section as it stood in the original Senate amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Then, if it does not mean anything, what is the use of going through the motions here?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It harmonizes the language in this part of the bill with the language above, and points out clearly before whom certain proof must be made. I thought it had a different effect at first, but on examining it more closely I concluded that it did not. I move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I have not yielded the floor. If I understand the gentleman correctly, he states that the words "unless it shall be made to appear to the commissioner that" do not change the meaning or the operation of the particular proviso that was inserted by the Senate. Does it not shift the burden of proof?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I do not think so.

Mr. WALSH. Was not that the purpose of the committee?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. That was the purpose, but I do not believe after careful reading that it accomplishes that purpose. It simply harmonizes the language so that it is the same now in the amendment as in the original section, of which it is made a part, and it indicates clearly to whom this proof is to be made.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALSH. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DYER. I want to ask the chairman, as well as the gentleman from Massachusetts, if this does not put the responsibility in the commissioner and give him the authority to determine that question, whereas the Senate amendment does not give it to him?

Mr. MANN. To whom does it give it?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It does not give it to anyone else. The commissioner is the only one who has the power to deal with these matters.

Mr. KINDRED. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KINDRED. As I understand it, there is now pending before the Committee of the Whole House a proposition that the committee now adopt the House Judiciary Committee amendments to the pending bill in lieu of the Senate amendment. If that be done, do I understand that that will prevent gentlemen from offering amendments, line by line, under the 5-minute rule?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not know whether he comprehends the parliamentary inquiry. The Chair would not be able to rule as to whether an amendment was in order or not until it was offered to a particular paragraph when reached. The Chair suggests to the gentleman from New York that he await the reading of the particular paragraph to which he desires to offer an amendment.

Mr. KINDRED. An amendment has already been offered proposing to adopt the House amendment, and if that be adopted, will that prevent gentlemen from offering amendment line by line?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that no amendment will be in order to any part of the bill except the Senate amendment under consideration at the moment.

The CHAIRMAN. There is no question about that.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The bill will not be read for amendment line by line, as suggested by the question of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KINDRED. That is what I wanted to have clear.

Mr. BLANTON. Regular order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment to the Senate amendment.

Mr. MANN. On agreeing to the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment with an amendment offered by the committee.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the Senate amendment as amended.

The question was taken, and the Senate amendment as amended was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 22, amendment No. 11, strike out the word "intoxicating" and insert the word "spirituous."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 24, amendment No. 12, after the word "any," strike out the words "vinous or."

The question was taken, and the Chair announced the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division on that. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 140, noes 17.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 753. An act for the relief of Oscar C. Guessaz;

S. 490. An act to consolidate national forest lands;

S. 1513. An act for the relief of Lewis W. Flaunlacher;

S. 1831. An act to amend section 237 of the Judicial Code;

S. 1408. An act authorizing the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. to sue the United States to recover damages resulting from collisions;

S. 1824. An act to provide for the relief of certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force, and for other purposes;

S. 1283. An act for the relief of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co.; the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Co.; and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co.;

S. 1733. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, to deliver to the president of the Milwaukee Press Club, of Milwaukee, Wis., the bell of the wrecked cruiser Milwaukee;

S. 561. An act to grant citizens of Washington and Kane Counties, Utah, the right to cut timber in the State of Arizona for agricultural, mining, and other domestic purposes;

S. 1099. An act to amend section 2372 of the Revised Statutes;

S. 2108. An act prohibiting the interment of the body of any person in the cemetery known as the Cemetery of White's Tabernacle No. 39 of the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, in the District of Columbia;

S. 1718. An act authorizing the distribution of abandoned or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes to hospitals maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States;

S. 2207. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia; to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia; and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1921;

S. 757. An act to validate certain declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States;

S. J. Res. 33. Joint resolution permitting Chinese to register under certain provisions and conditions;

S. 5. An act to amend an act approved February 28, 1899, entitled "An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings";

S. 2306. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to release a certain right of way no longer needed for military purposes at Springfield Armory, Mass.;

S. 65. An act to grant medals to survivors and heirs of volunteers of the Port Hudson forlorn-hope storming party;

S. J. Res. 67. Joint resolution stating the true meaning and intent of the provisions relating to the erection and use of the George Washington Memorial Building in the act entitled "An act to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings; to authorize the enlargement, extension, remodeling, or improvement of certain public buildings; to authorize the erection and completion of public buildings; to authorize the purchase of sites for public buildings; and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1913, as amended;

S. 157. An act for the relief of the Rosen Reichardt Brokerage Co., of St. Louis, Mo.;

S. 2272. An act to amend the act approved October 29, 1919, known as the national motor-vehicle theft act;

S. 2330. An act to extend the time for payment of grazing fees for the use of national forests during the calendar year 1921;

S. 2153. An act authorizing the owners of the steamship Texas to bring suit against the United States of America; and

S. 2235. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to adjudicate the claims of American citizens.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolution of the following title:

H. J. Res. 153. Joint resolution permitting the admission of certain aliens who sailed from foreign ports on or before June 8, 1921, and for other purposes;

H. R. 1945. An act for the relief of E. W. McComas;

H. R. 5621. An act for the disposal of certain lands in the town sites of Fort Madison and Bellevue, Iowa;

H. R. 6514. An act granting Parramore Post, No. 57, American Legion, permission to construct a memorial building on the Federal site at Abilene, Tex.;

H. R. 2117. An act for the relief of the city of West Point, Ga.; and

H. R. 4813. An act changing the period of doing annual assessment work on unpatented mineral claims from the calendar year to the fiscal year beginning July 1 each year.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 1942. An act for the relief of the owners of the dredge Maryland.

SUPPLEMENTAL TO THE NATIONAL PROHIBITION ACT.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 3, amendment No. 13, after the word "manufactured," insert the words "and imported."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 5, amendment No. 14, after the word "uses," insert: "Provided, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act."

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the Senate amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. VOLSTEAD moves to disagree to Senate amendment No. 14.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. In the Senate bill which has been printed there seems to be amendments Nos. 14, 15, 16 as all one amendment. I do not know whether they were certified as separate amendments from the Senate or not. I make the inquiry as to what the original Senate amendment was, whether they were separate amendments or whether they were one amendment divided up into three by the printing clerk?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has before him the amendments to the amendments to the Senate bill, which shows that these amendments were offered and voted upon separately. The gentleman moves to disagree to Senate amendment 14.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, of course I know it is unusual for any reasons to be given for legislation of this sort. Will the gentleman state what the idea is? We agreed to this, as I recall, in the committee, and now the gentleman offers a motion without any explanation.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Well, I have not had an opportunity to explain.

Mr. WALSH. But the gentleman is permitting the Chair to put the question.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No; it has not been offered yet. The object of the motion, I will state, is to transpose sections 14 and 15, so as to have 14 follow 15. Fifteen belongs to the original proposition and should come immediately following it in its logical order, and 14 relates to a subject entirely foreign and should not be inserted in the middle of the section. That is the only object.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Is it the gentleman's idea to put amendment No. 14 after amendment No. 16?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. After 15, so as to get 15 immediately following the House proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to disagree to Senate amendment No. 14.

Mr. DENISON. I would like to ask the gentleman if he intends to agree to it, or does he move to disagree to it?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I simply desire to add amendment No. 14 after 15.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I do.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to say that if we disagree to this amendment we may find ourselves in some difficulty in putting this amendment where it belongs. I would like to ask the gentleman if his amendment can not be so drawn as to read to insert lines 5, 6, and 7, composing amendment No. 14, after line 7?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I ask unanimous consent that it be transposed so as to have amendment No. 15 come in between lines 7 and 11.

Mr. GRIFFIN. And be renumbered?

Mr. STAFFORD. I suggest to the gentleman that he ask unanimous consent that amendments Nos. 14 and 15 be considered together so as to have it in the proper parliamentary shape when it is presented back to the Senate.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I ask unanimous consent that amendments Nos. 14 and 15 may be considered together.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that amendments Nos. 14 and 15 be considered together. Is there objection?

Mr. MILLS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman whether that would not have the effect of providing a separate vote on amendment 15?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I presume not.

Mr. STAFFORD. You may divide it up under the rules. Being a substantive proposition, a division could be asked for.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the committee disagree to amendments 14, 15, and 16 for the present and then later on they can be taken up.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD]?

Mr. MILLS. There is objection, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask recognition on amendment No. 14.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move to disagree to amendment No. 14.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for recognition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] does not want to agree to place Senate amendment No. 14 back into the bill after we disagree to it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order. It is too late on amendment 14. The time on amendment 14 has been exhausted.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman has just moved to disagree to Senate amendment No. 14. The gentleman has just made his motion, and I ask for recognition.

Mr. WALSH. The Chair put the request to a vote.

Mr. BLANTON. There was no debate on it. The gentleman from Minnesota has just submitted his motion to the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] occupied five minutes on this motion, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] five minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Before the motion was put.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can make some other motion.

Mr. BLANTON. I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Minnesota certainly does not want to agree to place Senate amendment No. 14 back in the bill, because if he did it, even between the time this bill is adopted by the House and goes back to the Senate for confirmation of our amendments, they could start additional shipments of any amount of intoxicating liquors to this country, and they would be permitted to land them here. Numerous shipments are now being hurriedly loaded to circumvent this bill. That would be the effect of this amendment No. 14. It does not stop any importations of liquor en route at the time the law becomes effective. Does the gentleman from Minnesota want to agree to that kind of amendment?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. So far as that is concerned, they have got to be entered under permits of the commissioner, and they would not permit anything that was not legal.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman wants to agree to Senate amendment No. 14 in black and white, that it shall not prevent the importation of liquor that is en route at the time this law goes into effect? I can not follow him on that wet platform. They would fill every boat that leaves Cuba now with liquor, and nothing in this law would keep them from landing here.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I do not anticipate any trouble of that kind.

Mr. BLANTON. It is a dangerous proposition, and I am one man who sincerely believes in prohibition who is not going to vote for it.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman knows that this proviso only refers to the first part of this section, which says that:

No intoxicating liquor shall be imported into the United States, nor shall any permit be granted authorizing the manufacture of any spirituous liquor, save alcohol, until the amount of such liquor now in distilleries or other bonded warehouses shall have been reduced to a quantity that in the opinion of the commissioner will, with liquor that may hereafter be manufactured, be sufficient to supply the current need thereafter for all nonbeverage uses.

Mr. BLANTON. And then it goes on and provides that it shall not apply to liquor that is en route at this time.

Mr. WALSH. It says:

Provided, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act.

Mr. BLANTON. I think that is a dangerous provision, and I do not think the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] ought to agree to it. It is just what every foreign brewer wants. I shall not agree to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to disagree to Senate amendment No. 14. The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee proceeded to divide.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, would it be proper for the gentleman's motion to be again reported?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has stated the motion five different times. The Chair will count.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 146, noes 6.

So the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 7, amendment No. 15: At the end of amendment No. 14 insert:

"Provided further, That no vinous liquor shall be imported into the United States unless it is made to appear to the commissioner that vinous liquor for such nonbeverage use produced in the United States is not sufficient to meet such nonbeverage needs."

Mr. VOLSTEAD moves to concur in amendment No. 15, with the following amendment: In lieu of the matter included in Senate amendment insert:

"Provided, That no vinous liquor shall be imported into the United States unless it is made to appear to the commissioner that vinous liquor for such nonbeverage use produced in the United States is not sufficient to meet such nonbeverage needs."

Provided further, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division of the question.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is—

Mr. STAFFORD. The amendment proposed states two substantive propositions.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the first portion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD].

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I move to disagree to Senate amendment No. 15.

Mr. MANN. That motion is not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that is not in order at this time.

Mr. MILLS. May I ask the gentleman from Minnesota, then, whether the bill does not provide now that wines may be prescribed for medicinal purposes? Is not that so?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I presume so. That is what is held by the Attorney General.

Mr. MILLS. May I ask the gentleman if he absolutely forbids the importation of wines?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. We do not in this bill prevent the importation of wines.

Mr. MILLS. May I ask the gentleman if he does not specifically forbid the importation of wines in line 22 on page 3?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. May I point out that it does not so prohibit, because it only prohibited to the extent that it is not necessary for nonbeverage uses?

Mr. MILLS. Yes; but the only time the wine can be imported is when it is shown that the supply for nonbeverage purposes is exhausted.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, no. It does not have to be exhausted. Whenever there is not a sufficient supply, so there is a real demand for wine or whisky or any other spirituous or vinous liquor for nonbeverage purposes, it may be imported. Beyond that the importation is prohibited.

Mr. MILLS. When the supply of wines for medicinal purposes is exhausted, then the importation of wines would be permitted?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, would not this amendment bring into consideration different kinds of wines? Suppose certain wines, foreign wines, are needed, in the judgment of physicians attending the sick, for medicinal purposes, or for sacramental purposes, such as have been used for years, and those wines come in, if they are not of the same quality?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No doubt the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the courts would construe this language to mean that if there is needed for nonbeverage purposes of any particular kind, the commissioner should permit that kind to come in.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I have serious doubts as to the correctness of the statement of the gentleman from Minnesota upon that proposition. Mr. Chairman, I ask for recognition in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment forbids the importation of wines into the United States unless the commissioner is satisfied that wines for nonbeverage use are not produced in the United States in sufficient quantity to meet nonbeverage requirements; i. e., sacramental, medicinal, and manufacturing uses.

In other words, the effect of this provision is to prevent any importation of wines into the United States so long as American domestic vintners produce wines in quantities to meet domestic requirements.

The amendment makes no distinction between wines of different characters or qualities and is, in effect, an embargo on the importation of any French, Spanish, or other foreign wine, regardless of its character, so long as any domestic wine, regardless of its character, is produced in gallonage quantity sufficient to meet the quantity requirements of American nonbeverage necessity.

American wines are of different character from French, Spanish, and other foreign wines. Even those wines such as California ports, which are supposed to be similar to port wines from Oporto in Portugal, and have been made in America in imitation of the foreign wine, are of different analysis, different therapeutic value, and different general character to their foreign prototypes.

French champagne, which is widely used in the treatment of various diseases, particularly certain of the fevers, malnutritious, alimentary disorders, and so forth, can not be duplicated in the United States except as an imitation, with the American product failing to show either the character or analysis of the French product.

Spanish sherries and the port wines, the so-called invalid ports and sherries, have always had a wide medicinal use in the United States, far greater in proportion than of any type of domestic wines, on account of their content of iron, acid, and other inherent elements creating their particular therapeutic value. No American wine has the tonic quality of these wines.

It is bad policy of legislation to exclude these articles of established and ascertained therapeutic value solely on the ground that substitutes and imitations thereof of different character can be made in volume in the United States equal to the requirements for these foreign wines which would be filled by such foreign wines if they could be imported.

The effect of this provision would be the compulsory substitution of American articles, which are admittedly imitations, incapable of meeting the therapeutic values of the genuine foreign wines. It may also be said that it is bad policy to create a domestic monopoly in the imitation substitute by embargo on the genuine foreign article, the counterpart of which can not be produced in the United States.

With respect to sacramental wines, certain foreign products have been used from time immemorial for sacramental purposes, and for many years certain of these sacramental wines have been imported into the United States in more or less constant quantity to meet the requirements of American religious organizations. These wines are known as sacramental wines, specially prepared to standard grades of purity and quality for this purpose. Regardless of the question whether a compulsory American substitute of proper quality can be manufactured, it is submitted to be the height of bad policy to place an embargo upon these sacramental wines and compel the religious organizations using them to resort under mandate of Congress to what by the very terms of the congressional action must be an American imitation of the established foreign article.

This is a topic from which statutory enactment should keep itself as far removed as possible; and while the law may be so devised as to prevent the desecration of these types of wine by beverage use, the statutes should not interfere with the natural course of importation which will secure to the users the wines which they require for these religious purposes.

The Senate provision is submitted to be unconstitutional, in that it creates an embargo unauthorized by the eighteenth amendment, under which amendment this supplemental act is passed per the provision authorizing Congress to enforce the amendment by appropriate legislation.

The eighteenth amendment creates an absolute embargo on importation of liquors for beverage use, but the same token leaves free, so far as the eighteenth amendment is concerned, importation for nonbeverage, i. e., sacramental and medicinal use, subject only to the power of Congress to regulate such importations to prevent illicit sale for beverage use.

This provision embargoing wine importations does not prohibit wine for sacramental or medicinal use, but says only that no wine shall be imported except in case of a shortage of the domestic production.

This is an embargo, and regardless of the question whether or not it is an illegal discrimination, it transcends any power of Congress so to suppress importation in favor of domestic production.

The power of Congress to enforce national prohibition by appropriate legislation does not confer the power to prohibit importation so as to confine the source of nonbeverage wines to domestic manufacture. Congress can not, under the terms of the eighteenth amendment, make distinction between importation of wine and the domestic production of wine.

We find that the House originally in this bill forbade the importation of all intoxicating liquor, including wines and spirits, save alcohol, as well as the domestic manufacture, subject to the commissioner's action. This, of course, left the matter not an absolute embargo. On a showing as to the character of wine and the necessity of importation of certain types of foreign wines, if any were to be present in the country for nonbeverage use, the Senate Judiciary Committee limited the stoppage of importation to spirituous liquors, but they also stopped domestic production of spirituous liquors by the same rule and made the limitation uniform on domestic and imported spirits.

The amendment which is here protested was added on the floor of the Senate without debate. It violates the rule of uniformity on domestic production as well as importation, which was observed in the original House provision, and which is still retained regarding spirits; this for the reason that the Senate floor amendment making no restriction on domestic manufacture of wines goes only to the proposition of placing embargo on importations forever and a day, so long as a sufficient domestic supply is being produced in gallons, regardless of character, type, therapeutic value, or quality, to meet domestic consumption.

Senator STERLING in offering this amendment said that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, 1,200,000 gallons of wine were imported, whereas the statistics show for the year ending June 30, 1920, the preceding year, that only 28,000 gallons were imported. Senator STERLING was apparently misinformed on the latter figure, as some 152,000 gallons were imported during the year ending June 30, 1920.

This, however, is altogether immaterial and shows no increase. This, for the reason that from November 21, 1918, to January 16, 1920, all importations were cut off by war-time prohibition; after January 16, 1920, importations were tolerated under the terms of the national prohibition act. The 152,000 gallons imported for the year ending June 30, 1920, were imported during the last two months of the fiscal year, permits to import having been delayed some time after the coming in of national prohibition in January, 1920.

The importation of foreign wines for the 10 years prior to 1914 averaged 7,250,000 gallons per annum, and, as has been frequently stated, a greater proportion of foreign wines have always been used for sacramental and medicinal purposes than of domestic wines. Sacramental uses probably would consume more than 1,000,000 gallons of imported wine per annum in this country, to say nothing of the large necessitous use of foreign wines for medicinal purposes according to long-established practice in this country.

It is admitted that as a matter of policy as well as constitutional law the Senate amendment should be rejected, it being always remembered that whether wines are manufactured in this country or imported, the prohibition laws and regulations fully control so far as the statutes and regulations can govern the use and consumption thereof within the permitted field.

In one sense imported wines are capable of greater control than the domestic production, and certainly can not when imported under the laws and regulations add more greatly to the burden of prohibition enforcement than would be the situation in case of unlimited production by an American domestic monopoly.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, when the prohibition act was passed the California wine growers, who produce 90 per cent of the native wines consumed in this country, did not take the trouble to look into the matter of imported wines for medicinal or sacramental purposes, because they believed that the law would be so enforced that they would have no competition with the foreign producers. As a matter of fact, within the period between the present time and the time when the law was enacted certain wines intended for medicinal or sacramental purposes had been pouring into this country from Argentina, from France, from Spain, and from Italy.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KAHN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Does the gentleman know the quantity that has been imported?

Mr. KAHN. The wine growers of California have stated to me that it has been coming in in very great quantities. I do not know the exact number of barrels, or anything of that kind, but they complain seriously of this competition.

Mr. WALSH. Are they making wine in California now?

Mr. KAHN. Oh, yes; for sacramental and medicinal purposes. [Laughter.] And I will say to the House frankly that under the Volstead law a man can make his own wine for his own use in his own home; and I want to say that has saved the wine industry—the grape industry—of California.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KAHN. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. As a matter of fact, they are making a great deal more wine in California than they ever did?

Mr. KAHN. No; I deny that. I know that they are not making nearly as much.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman means the illicit manufacture.

Mr. KAHN. I decline to yield further, Mr. Chairman. Now, in view of that fact, and in view of the great quantity of medicinal and sacramental wine that is being imported, I certainly believe that this amendment, if adopted, will be of benefit to the actual grape growers of this country.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman tell us whether the church membership has increased materially within the last year in California?

Mr. KAHN. Oh, we have always had a good church membership in that State, and as good church members we abide by the law of the country. [Applause.]

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I call for a vote.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the amendment by adding, on page 4, line 11, after the word "sufficient," the words "in quality and quantity." I make that motion for the reason that I am informed on the best of authority—

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, let us have the amendment reported again.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MILLS].

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. MILLS. I make that suggestion for the reason that I am informed that certain foreign wines are almost essential to sacramental purposes by reason of long-established custom, and in the second place because it is well recognized that certain of the foreign wines, particularly of the port and sherry varieties, are of a much better quality for medicinal purposes than our homemade wines.

Mr. KAHN. Oh, Mr. Chairman, we deny that in toto. [Laughter.]

Mr. MILLS. I will say to the gentleman from California that I limited that remark to medicinal purposes. I did not say for ordinary and pleasurable purposes.

Mr. KAHN. We do not concede that foreign wines are better for medicinal purposes.

Mr. MILLS. As medicine. It seems to me that if we are going to permit the manufacture of wines as medicine, then we should permit the importation of a superior quality of wine as medicine, and I can see no reason for the distinction between the importation of medicine wine and the manufacture of medicine wine.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. DYER. I think that would be a cure for the situation, and, as I understand it, would meet the views expressed by the chairman of the committee [Mr. VOLSTEAD] in answer to the interrogatory I made a few minutes ago. It is not intended to shut out the wines that are specially needed for medicinal and sacramental purposes.

Mr. MILLS. The commissioner would still have to determine whether these wines were actually needed or whether the American manufacturer was able to supply a sufficient quantity and quality to satisfy the needs of the sick.

Mr. LAYTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. LAYTON. I would like to ask the gentleman from New York in good faith whether or not all importations of wine or liquors of every sort should not be forbidden if we are going to uphold the constitutional amendment?

Mr. MILLS. I will answer that question by saying "yes," for the time being, until our home supply has been exhausted; but the day will come under the influence of this beneficent act when there will be no more wine in this country. Other less enlightened nations will still continue to enjoy it, but it does seem to me that when that happy day arrives we should be allowed to import small quantities for our sick.

Mr. LAYTON. What do you want it for?

Mr. MILLS. For the sick.

Mr. LAYTON. Oh, the sick!

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. I think there is some force in what the gentleman has said, but why use the word "quantity"? The main suggestion is the quality. Why not omit the word "quantity"?

Mr. MILLS. I do not know whether the situation will arise, but I think every gentleman who believes in prohibition hopes it will arise when no more wine will be manufactured in the United States, and then we will have to import this wine in quantities sufficient for these purposes.

Mr. DENISON. Gentlemen, we have been considering this matter in a spirit of levity, but I think there is a good deal in what the gentleman from New York [Mr. MILLS] says if you are going to look at it seriously. As this Senate amendment is now it makes the commissioner the judge of the kind of wine which can be used for medicinal purposes. If the physicians of the country want to prescribe a wine that is of a quality not made in this country, it can not be imported if the commissioner can find somebody in this country who can make some sort of a wine that in his judgment can be used without regard to the judgment of the physician.

Mr. LAYTON. It strikes me as very amusing to hear talk about wine for medicinal purposes. I practiced medicine for 30 years, and I can not recall half a dozen times in those 30 years when I fell back on wine to cure my patients. [Applause.]

Mr. DENISON. I never practiced medicine and never use wine, but the law recognizes the use of wine for medicinal purposes without regard to the gentleman's experience, and if the law recognizes the right to use wine for medicinal purposes it ought not to be left to the commissioner to decide what kind of wine is to be used. It ought to be the physician who decides that.

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DENISON. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. REAVIS. What discretion would the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MILLS] take away from the commissioner?

Mr. DENISON. As the amendment now stands, if there can be enough made in quantity of any kind in this country then none of any kind can be imported.

Mr. REAVIS. The amendment does not say so.

Mr. DENISON. I think it does.

Mr. REAVIS. The gentleman from New York offered an amendment which contains the words "in quantity and quality." What discretion of the commissioner to determine the character of wine to be used by the physician does that amendment take away?

Mr. DENISON. I will explain to the gentleman. If there is not enough on hand of the right quality, then it can be imported under the amendment of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. REAVIS. Does not the commissioner have the same discretion to say to a physician, "If there is not enough on hand of the character of wine you demand, then use the other," with the amendment of the gentleman from New York as well as he could now?

Mr. DENISON. No, sir; because the Senate amendment now says if, in the judgment of the commissioner, there is enough wine of any kind in this country—that is, of the kind that can be made in this country—then none can be imported.

Mr. REAVIS. The amendment as it now stands does not say if there is sufficient wine of any kind.

Mr. DENISON. That is what it means, and if the gentleman will read it I think he will reach that conclusion. We might as well be reasonable about this thing. Why should we transfer to the commissioner the right to determine the kind of wine that shall be used? That is what is done by this amendment. I think we ought to be reasonable about it. I think the amendment of the gentleman from New York ought to be adopted. Since the use of wine for medicinal or sacramental purposes is clearly recognized by the law, the question of what kind of wine may be prescribed by physicians or used for sacramental purposes ought to be left to the physicians and those who desire its use for sacramental purposes, and if such kinds of wine are not made in this country, their importation from abroad ought to be permitted. The commissioner ought not to be given the authority to compel, if he should desire to do so, the use of the inferior kinds of wine that may be made in this country. Under this Senate amendment he can prevent any importation of wine, if there is sufficient wine of any kind made in this country for the permitted uses.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto be now closed.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to change the amendment so that it shall only read "in quality."

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Oh, no; that will change it.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw that request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that all debate on the Senate amendment and amendments thereto be now closed. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MILLS) there were 66 ayes and 84 noes.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 11, after the word "sufficient" insert the words "in quality."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was considered and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota. A division was asked for, and if there is no objection, the Chair will put the question on the first part of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. WALSH. May we have that reported?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment was again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin has asked for a division of the question. The question is on the first part of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the first part of the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the second part of the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 140, noes 7.

So the second part of the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 12, insert: "And provided further, That the commissioner may authorize the return to the United States under such regulations and conditions as he may prescribe any distilled spirits of American production exported free of tax and reimported in original packages in which exported and consigned for redeposit in the distillery bonded warehouse from which originally removed."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 130, noes 11.

So the Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 19, after the word "act," insert the words "and the national prohibition act."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move to disagree to the Senate amendment.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the gentleman a question. When this bill was before the House the other day some controversy arose in respect to the effect of this amendment, being the insertion of the words "and the national prohibition act." The gentleman from Minnesota at that time could not point out whether the national prohibition act covered the Philippine Islands and our other insular possessions. What has the gentleman been able to find since that time in respect to that provision of the bill?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, the provision which I had in mind at that time was lost in the shuffle between the two Houses, but the reason why I was very confident that the law applied to these Territories was because I had been so informed and because of a provision which I shall call to the attention of the House. I have had occasion since to examine the statute to some extent. There is a statute which has been in force for a great many years to the effect that the Constitution and laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within all organized Territories and every Territory hereafter organized as elsewhere within the United States. In respect to Hawaii there is no doubt but that the law applies, because the act under which that Territory is operating to-day makes the laws of the United States applicable. There is some question as to whether the Virgin Islands are sufficiently organized so as to be called an organized Territory under that act. It does not apply, as I understand, to the Philippine Islands because there is a provision in the statute now that the statutory laws of the United States hereafter enacted shall not apply to the Philippine Islands except when they specifically so provide, and this bill does not specifically so provide.

Mr. DENISON. I think it does.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I do not think so.

Mr. DENISON. How does the gentleman construe this?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The bill contains general language applicable to the country as a whole and contains no language specifically applicable to that particular Territory.

Mr. DENISON. But this says "and to all territory subject to its jurisdiction."

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I am moving to disagree to this amendment so that we may take the matter up in conference with a view of determining what ought to be done with it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to disagree to the Senate amendment No. 17.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 20, amendment No. 18, after the word "apply," insert the words "not only."

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move to disagree to Senate amendment No. 18.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 21, amendment No. 19, strike out the word "and" and insert in lieu thereof the word "but."

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move to disagree to the Senate amendment No. 19.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 1, amendment No. 20, strike out the word "islands" and insert the word "Islands."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 21, page 5, line 3, after the word "made" insert the words "by the commissioner."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 11, amendment No. 22, strike out the word "continued" and insert in lieu thereof the word "continue."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 13, amendment No. 23, strike out the word "that" and insert in lieu thereof the word "as."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 15, amendment No. 24, after the word "act," insert the words "or of this act."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 16, amendment No. 25, after the word "of," insert the words "any of."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 17, amendment No. 26, after the word "act," insert "or this act."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 2, insert after the word "manufacture," the word "of."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 24, amendment No. 28, after the word "spirits," insert "upon which the internal-revenue tax has not been paid."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 6, line 2, amendment No. 29, after the figures "1920," insert "or the merchant marine act, 1920."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 6, line 4, after the word "warehouse," strike out "and the person guilty of the theft has been convicted of the offense."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 6, line 17, amendment No. 31, after the word "hereafter," insert "nothing in this section shall be construed as in any manner limiting or restricting the provisions of Title III of the national prohibition act."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 20, amendment No. 32:

SEC. 6. That any officer, agent, or employee of the United States engaged in the enforcement of this act, or the national prohibition act, or any other law of the United States, who shall search or attempt to search the property or premises of any person without previously securing a search warrant as provided by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not to exceed $1,000 or imprisoned not to exceed one year, or both so fined and imprisoned in the discretion of the court.

Any person not a duly authorized officer, agent, or employee of the United States, who, under color or claim to be acting as such, in the enforcement of this act, or the national prohibition act, or any other law of the United States, subjects or causes any person to be subjected to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured or guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for a period of not more than five years or by fine not exceeding $10,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Mr. VOLSTEAD moves to concur in amendment No. 32 with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 6. That no officer, agent, or employee of the United States, while engaged in the enforcement of this act, the national prohibition act, or any law in reference to the manufacture or taxation of, or traffic in, intoxicating liquor, shall search any private dwelling without a warrant directing such search, and no such warrant shall issue unless there is reason to believe such dwelling is used as a place in which liquor is manufactured for sale or sold. The term "private dwelling" shall be construed to include the room or rooms occupied not transiently but solely as a residence in an apartment house, hotel, or boarding house. Any violation of any provision of this paragraph shall be punished by a fine of not to exceed $1,000 or imprisonment not to exceed one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I just want a few minutes to explain the situation in reference to this amendment.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I would like, if possible, to agree on the length of time that may be occupied in the discussion of this amendment.

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman from Minnesota ought to make some motion before we agree on time.

Mr. MANN. Did not the Clerk report the motion?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment to the Senate amendment, and the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota in support of the committee amendment.

Mr. MANN. That would be to agree to the Senate amendment with an amendment to strike out and insert.

Mr. WALSH. That is not what the Chair said. The Chair said the question is upon the committee amendment. Now, if the question is upon the committee amendment it does not involve agreeing to the Senate amendment.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Minnesota and at the end of that time will recognize the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important amendment, and I want the committee to thoroughly understand what it means. I do not know whether you have had occasion to read the report made on these amendments. I tried in a general way in that report to present to you the effect it would have if agreed to. There is no doubt in my mind that if we adopt the Senate amendment as it has been written into the bill we might as well quit trying to enforce any prohibition law. [Applause.] The object of that amendment is clearly to take from the officers the power to enforce it. It makes it a criminal offense if an officer makes search anywhere, even if it is in an open field out in the country away from buildings. It makes it illegal to search an automobile. It makes it illegal to search a bootlegger or a man in the act of violating the law, a right which has always been recognized throughout this country and England. It must have been for the purpose of hamstringing enforcement that this amendment was written into this bill. If it is adopted it will absolutely paralyze every effort of the enforcement officers. This amendment is an illustration of what inconsiderate action can take place where an amendment is offered and accepted on the spur of the moment in a debate. This amendment is not only an attack on the prohibition law but on the enforcement of several other laws. This amendment is so broad that it not only covers the prohibition law but covers other statutes under which the Government has a right to search without a warrant. How can you stop an automobile running at the rate of 60, 70, or 80 miles an hour if you must first get a search warrant to do it? This makes the rum-running auto immune. This amendment should be called the rum runners' and bootleggers' amendment. This provision would prohibit the search of your baggage if you came across from England with all sorts of goods that you can not legally import and would be a boon to the smugglers. It will prevent the search under half a dozen different statutes where it is absolutely necessary to have search without a warrant. Just note the language; it prohibits the search of property and premises. The word "premises" means land. See Bouviers Law Dictionary or any dictionary defining the word "premises." You could not search a quarter section in my country, out on the open prairie. You could not make any sort of search without a warrant because all search must of necessity be of some property or premises.

It is of the utmost importance in this case that you should consider this carefully and not be carried away with the constant cry that is going up from the wet element. There is no doubt, from the letters and information I am receiving, that the country is gradually but steadily lining up in support of the prohibition policy. Nowhere is there a demand for the return of whisky or the saloon.

I have no sympathy with those who are so thin skinned that they must shield the lawbreaker for fear that they may possibly be stopped and searched. I suspect that the reason some of them are raising such a fuss is their fear that they may be caught violating the law. If the search is made by an officer in an honest effort to enforce law and perform his duties, it would be ridiculous to punish him criminally as is proposed by this amendment. If the officers are not to search for illegal liquor until they can get a search warrant, we had better discharge them all.

Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Pardon, no. We are trying to make certain, however, that no one shall search the home without a warrant, and it seems to me that that is as far as we ought to go. It can not be searched under this amendment unless it is used as a place for the manufacture for sale or for the sale of intoxicating liquor. As to other property, he should have a right to search when he finds a person in the act of violating the law; that is, make the search which the law allows.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman yield? I ask that the gentleman have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment to the Senate amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, Article IV of the Constitution reads as follows:

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized.

If you will examine the Senate amendment, you will find that it complies much more nearly with the Constitution of the United States than does the amendment proposed by the committee, and the question before this House is whether you want to continue to follow the Constitution of the United States or to be led away always by the cry of prohibition, and disregard the Constitution.

Mr. ANDREWS. Will the gentleman read Article XVIII?

Mr. HILL. I will let the gentleman read Article XVIII. [Laughter.] But, as the gentleman desires, I will read it.

Mr. MILLS. It is pretty dry reading.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Also read Article XIX while you are discussing this matter.

Mr. HILL. Gentlemen, there seems to be such an obvious desire to hear Article XVIII, and as I have been convinced during my short membership here that many Members, especially on the prohibition side, have not read it, that I am glad to read it. Section 1 reads:

After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territories subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

[Applause.]

I only desire further at this moment to insert a repetition of my remarks made when this supplemental Volstead bill originally came up, that this supplemental bill is not constitutional.

Mr. ANDREWS. Let the gentleman read on.

Mr. HILL. I will read:

Sec. 2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Sec. 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

Mr. ANDREWS. How many States ratified it?

Mr. HILL. I want to say to the gentleman one thing. There is not a word in this eighteenth amendment which repeals one word in the fourth amendment, which was passed under the auspices of George Washington, who was not a prohibitionist. I hope you will adopt the Senate amendment, because it more closely follows the Constitution. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FIELDS] is recognized.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask unanimous consent—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. FIELDS. If I do not lose my right.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I would like to ask unanimous consent for an agreement as to length of time debate ought to last on this. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 10 minutes.

Mr. REAVIS. As a member of the committee, Mr. Chairman, I want five minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I suggest that the gentleman allow the discussion to run a little while before he makes his motion.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate close in 20 minutes.

Mr. McARTHUR. I object.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield further at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report an amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. FIELDS: Page 7, line 23, after the word "manufactured," strike out the words "for sale."

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I am for the committee amendment in lieu of the Senate amendment, but the committee amendment should be amended by the language that I have offered. If the committee amendment is adopted as written in this bill, a search warrant can not be issued to search a home that is manufacturing liquor where the manufacturer is manufacturing it for his private use. Now, there is not a dry man on the floor of this House or anywhere else that wants to say by legislation that an individual can manufacture liquor in his own home for his own use. That is giving to the illicit manufacturer of liquor protection that was not extended to him prior to the enactment of the Volstead Act. And, gentlemen of the committee, I ask you who have voted for prohibition, and who believe in it and want to see it enforced, to think seriously about this amendment before you vote against it. I want to ask you what the country will say if Tom Brown, Tom Jones, and Sam Smith shall in your communities establish a home distillery for the manufacture of liquor, not for sale, but for home use—or, you might go so far as to say, to give away to their friends—and an officer appears and, having knowledge of the fact that that liquor is manufactured in these places, attempts to sue out a search warrant and is estopped by this language, what explanation will you gentlemen who vote for it give to your neighbors and to friends of prohibition throughout the country? The section reads, "And no such warrant shall issue unless there is reason to believe such dwelling is used as a place in which liquor is manufactured for sale or sold." If my amendment is adopted it will read:

And no such warrant shall issue unless there is reason to believe such dwelling is used as a place in which liquor is manufactured or sold.

Why should any man be protected in the manufacture of liquor so long as he is not manufacturing it for sale? He can drink it himself, debauch himself, give it away to his neighbors and debauch the young manhood of the community, and under the provision of this section there is no law which can reach him or, at least, an officer can not invade his home with a warrant if this section is written into law as reported by the committee.

Mr. DYER. In other words, unless the gentleman's amendment or some similar amendment is agreed to, there will be no way to stop the thousands and thousands of private saloons and manufacturing establishments for intoxicating liquor?

Mr. FIELDS. There is no doubt in my mind, and it was expected by all who voted for prohibition, that there would be illicit manufacture of liquor following the enactment of the Volstead Act. Everyone expected that. Everyone supported the Volstead Act believing that that fight would come.

Mr. ROSSDALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. Not now. The fight was foreseen at the time of the enactment of the Volstead law, and it is on now; and, gentlemen, if you say by this section as it comes from the committee that a distillery may be established in every home in this land for the manufacture of liquor for private use, you kill the Volstead Act. You issue to men licenses to manufacture, which they did not have, as I said a moment ago, before the Volstead Act was placed on the statute books.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes.

Mr. HILL. Does the gentleman want the House to understand that he is charging the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary with being against the Volstead Act?

Mr. FIELDS. No. I think it is an oversight. They say they want to protect the private home against invasion by officers of the law without first securing a search warrant, but the language to which I particularly object provides that a search warrant shall not issue unless liquor is being manufactured for sale or sold. As I said before, the individual was not permitted to manufacture liquor for his own use, nor was he immune from arrest under the law for doing so before the Volstead Act was placed upon the statute books. Gentlemen, I hope my amendment will prevail.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I have no controversy with the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FIELDS] nor with his amendment. I believe the adoption of the amendment will further the enforcement of the prohibition act. But I have very serious controversy with the action of the Senate with reference to the search of premises and other places designated in the Senate amendment.

The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL], reading the fourth article of the Constitution, sought, as I gathered from his remarks, to demonstrate the fact that the House proposition was in violation of the Constitution.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for just a moment?

Mr. REAVIS. Yes.

Mr. HILL. Not a violation, but not as complete a carrying out as the Senate amendment.

Mr. REAVIS. It is either constitutional or unconstitutional. It is not a question of degree. It is either within the Constitution or without the Constitution, one or the other. The only protection granted by the Constitution against the search of one's premises, papers, and so forth, is the protection against unreasonable search, the language of the Constitution being "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures." [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. With pleasure.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Emphasizing the gentleman's argument, the Supreme Court, in the Boyd case, One hundred and sixteenth United States, stressed the point that the Constitution condemns not all searches and seizures, but unreasonable searches and seizures, showing the extent of the discretion left in the legislative body.

Mr. REAVIS. That is correct, Mr. Chairman, and I would not vote for a bill that would permit any man, officer or otherwise, to invade the privacy of my home without a search warrant. There are two things, among many others, that civilization has done for the race, and among them has been to teach men to say, "This is my home and this is my woman. Keep your hands off both." [Applause.] I would not vote for any bill that would permit an officer to invade the sanctity and the privacy of my home. The right of castle is most sacred to the Anglo-Saxon race, and for that reason the Committee on the Judiciary has placed in this bill, as an amendment to the Senate bill, a provision that no law officer, under the guise of enforcing the prohibition law, shall be permitted to go into a private dwelling without a warrant authorizing him to make a search.

Mr. COCKRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. Yes.

Mr. COCKRAN. The gentleman surely does not hold the home to be more sacred than the person?

Mr. REAVIS. Yes. I hold the home to be more sacred than the person. I would not place my home on the low level of my luggage or my automobile, as the Senate amendment does. If you are not permitted to search an automobile or grip in the enforcement of the prohibition law you might as well wipe the law from the statutes. [Applause.] Those who live near the Northern border realize that almost daily automobiles are coming across the Canadian line loaded with liquor for the purpose of engaging in the traffic in violation of law.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. Yes.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Volstead] did not discuss the substitute offered by him for the Senate amendment. The substitute provides: "Any violation of any provision of this paragraph shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

There are three things set out. One thing is that he dare not search without a warrant. Another is that such warrant shall not be issued without reason to believe that the liquor is being manufactured in the home, and, third, that nothing shall be construed as a private residence except where a man permanently resides. Is it intended that the penalty shall be attached for the violation of any one of these three things?

Mr. REAVIS. The gentleman is entirely too technical in his construction. There is only one probative act, and that is the act of search.

Mr. STEAGALL. Either one of these three things is prohibited: Either the search without a warrant, or the issuance of a warrant without reason to believe that the liquor is being manufactured in the home, and the liquor must not be manufactured in the home for sale.

Mr. REAVIS. I disagree with the gentleman, because there is just one thing prohibited by the amendment offered by the Committee on the Judiciary. There is only one probative thing provided in the amendment, and that is the act of search without a warrant, and anyone violating that prohibition subjects himself to the penalty of the amendment.

Now, as I was saying with reference to the automobile, the same applies to luggage. If you deny to the officers charged with the enforcement of this law the right of search of an automobile without a warrant, you deprive him of the certain means of ascertaining whether the driver of that automobile is violating the law or not. These crimes are not committed with any undue publicity on the part of the offender. The officers are not warned in advance, nor will the culprit stop his car to await the convenience of the officer in securing a search warrant.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the House committee substitute for the Senate amendment No. 32, which would vitiate the entire enforcement law. But, Mr. Chairman, I want to call the attention of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary to what appeared in last Sunday's paper. Let me read from the Birmingham Age-Herald of Sunday, August 14:

Canadian beer pours into the United States by boatloads. Dozen booze boats an hour departed all day yesterday from Ontario ports to the United States. Beer hauled to piers by truck load after truck load. Business continues after report of capture of liquor boats by Michigan State police.

Just one headline after another along the above lines appears in the daily press, showing the intent on the part of liquor dealers to circumvent this proposed law, which has been pending so long.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Let me also call the gentleman's attention to the language of Senate amendment No. 14, which he has switched around and put into this bill following amendments 15 and 16 after we had once voted it out of the bill. Amendment 14 reads as follows:

Provided, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act.

Do you see the connection between this language and the above newspaper headlines?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman is not discussing the amendment of the committee. He is discussing something that the House has already done, two amendments that the House has already acted on.

Mr. BLANTON. It is so intimately connected with the prohibition of beer—

Mr. WALSH. It has no relation to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. BLANTON. I think I am proceeding in order. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] has been very technical. I do not blame him, because he is representing a certain constituency in Massachusetts who are technical on this beer question. They are very much interested in defeating this law, and he has been technical ever since this bill came back from the Senate. Here at the end of the proceedings with reference to this bill he is trying to circumvent the passage of it.

Mr. DYER. I make the point of order that the gentleman is not discussing the bill. He is discussing the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. BLANTON. That is just a prelude to getting back to the bill. The purpose of this bill is to stop the dispensation of beer for beverage purposes in the United States of America. We are told that boatload after boatload is being shipped now and is to be rushed in here before this bill passes. Therefore I say I am discussing the intent of the bill itself and of this particular amendment that would seek to stop admitting large importations and dispensation of beer, when I say that the language of Senate amendment No. 14 ought to come out of this bill, and the chairman of the committee ought to see that it is voted on when we get back into the House, and that it is taken out of this bill, because if you leave it in here it is going to cause boatload after boatload to be landed lawfully in the United States after this act passes.

Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield to the distinguished rider of the milk-white charger of Baltimore. [Laughter.]

Mr. HILL. I thank the gentleman for removing from the minds of many people any doubt as to the character of the horse. Some gentlemen said he was a flea-bitten gray.

Mr. BLANTON. I heard, Mr. Chairman, that it was a flea-bitten filly. But there is one thing that has been accomplished here this morning. We have gotten the gentleman from Maryland at last to read the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. It is the first time in his life he has ever read it, and I want him to take it back to his office and ponder over it, because it is a part of the fundamental law of this land which he is sworn to uphold. [Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. HILL. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Texas be extended two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. I rose to ask the gentleman whether he was in favor of the Senate amendment or the House amendment?

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman ought to know that I am in favor of the House amendment, as it is the dry amendment, while I deem the other decidedly wet.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not rise to discuss the merits of prohibition. The merits or demerits of that new departure from our ancient political system are not germane to the question now before us at all, which is the very important constitutional question that has been raised by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL], the importance of which the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. REAVIS] recognized in one particular, but I think grievously belittled in another. The gentleman has referred with great force to the importance—the capital importance—of maintaining the immunity of the subject or citizen from search of his house. At the same time he seemed to treat as negligible the importance of guarding the security of the citizen's person. Yet, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman has studied the historic evolution of that principle in our common-law jurisprudence (which did not belong to the civil law) he will find that immunity of the house is but one feature of the immunity which Anglo-Saxon law extends to the person. [Applause.] There are two essential elements in which the civil law differs from the common law, and they in turn may be resolved into one—the widely different regard in which each held the individual. The common-law system holds government valuable mainly, if not entirely, for the protection it affords first to the person and then to the property of the citizen. The civil law holds the citizen valuable only as he serves and helps maintain the government. Under the common-law system the citizen is always presumed innocent until his guilt is established by proof which the State itself must adduce, and the law, the State, the king may not touch even one article of his clothing, much less disturb the integrity of his person, unless there is proof sufficient to overcome the presumption of innocence with which the law clothes him.

Under the civil law accusation raises a presumption of guilt against the prisoner. The State instead of proving his guilt by independent evidence seeks always to establish it by himself, and he and his house are subject to search. He is subject even now to what has achieved an evil significance in the literature of the world—the question.

Does the gentleman realize the significance of the "question" under the civil law? Why, the "question" was the euphonious term employed to describe torture. Torture was never inflicted upon any person as a punishment for crime, but only to force him to confess, to acknowledge guilt, to testify against himself by overcoming through pain and fear of pain his own natural reluctance to give evidence that might justify his condemnation. In the terminology of the civil law the torture was called the question—the question ordinary and the question extraordinary. And now in an effort to enforce this law, which is incapable of enforcement, you propose to tear down this Constitution of ours, which is built upon that immunity, that sanctity of the person of the citizen.

All that this amendment of the Senate provides is that the constitutional provision requiring a search warrant before a citizen's house can be invaded, which the Judiciary Committee acknowledges here to be proper, shall also apply to that vastly more sacred thing than a house—a dwelling—a building—the creation of human hands—to the man himself, the creation of Almighty God. [Applause.] And in upholding that amendment of the Senate, sir, we are defending and upholding the principle that constitutes the whole difference between the two systems of government, the system of the common law and that of the civil law, and the two systems of civilization, which these different forms of government embody.

Those of us who insist upon supporting the Senate amendment are not here discussing the abstract merits of prohibition, but we are here standing for the integrity of the principle which underlies the whole of our Constitution. There is not a line of it that does not come back to the great object and purpose of securing to the citizen that immunity from invasion of his house or interference with his person—

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCKRAN. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. REAVIS. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from New York may be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman point out in the Senate amendment anything with reference to a prohibition against the search of one's person without a warrant?

Mr. COCKRAN. Why, it requires that there must be a warrant issued before an officer of the Government can undertake any of the various actions that you insist he shall be allowed to perform without a warrant. Your complaint is—at least I so understood you—that under the Senate amendment there shall be no right in any person, officer or not, to interfere with a man's person and examine him without a warrant. I asked you the direct question whether you placed immunity of a man's house above immunity of his person and you answered that you did. You stated distinctly that immunity of the person was not in your judgment to be compared in importance with immunity of the home, and I say now that in taking such a position you violate and fly in the face of every precedent and every principle upon which this constitutional system is built.

Mr. REAVIS. If the gentleman will permit me, I do not remember having stated that the Senate amendment carried anything with respect to the protection of one's person.

I do not remember of having stated that the Senate amendment carried anything that applies to the person. The language of the Senate amendment is that "shall search or attempt to search property or premises of any person without previously securing a search warrant." There is nothing in that—

Mr. COCKRAN. Then why do you object to it?

Mr. REAVIS. I object to the Senate amendment because it prevents the search of property other than the dwelling or his premises.

Mr. COCKRAN. Even though it be on the person of the citizen, and there is where we differ. There is where I think the Senate amendment is valuable as a safeguard not merely for the individual citizen but for the Constitution of the country.

Mr. HILL. One question more. The Senate amendment says "search of property or premises of any person." Will the gentleman from New York tell the gentleman from Nebraska how anyone could search me without going through my clothes?

Mr. COCKRAN. I will not undertake to enlighten the gentleman from Nebraska with respect to what he might discover in the clothes or on the person of the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCKRAN. Yes; I am here for the purpose of yielding.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. In answer to the question of the gentleman from Nebraska, I find in lines 4 to 11, on page 7, this provision:

Any person not a duly authorized officer, agent, or employee of the United States, who, under color or claim to be acting as such, in the enforcement of this act, or the national prohibition act, or any other law of the United States, subjects or causes any person to be subjected to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured or guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, shall be deemed guilty of a felony.

Now that does protect a person.

Mr. COCKRAN. I believe so, and for that reason I want the provision retained in the bill. All we ask is what the Constitution provides, that neither a man's house nor his person shall be invaded by officers of the law without a warrant; and a warrant itself would be a negligible quantity if issued on anything less than proof showing probable cause to believe a crime has been committed. That is all this Senate amendment requires before the person of a citizen can be invaded. If you discard that constitutional safeguard of individual safety and undertake to override it, you are sacrificing not only the principle embodied in this fourth amendment, but the whole body and spirit and life of this Constitution and of the civilization of which the Constitution is the fairest and most valuable fruit.

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman yield once more?

Mr. COCKRAN. Certainly.

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman call to my attention the provision of the Constitution that inhibits the right of reasonable search without a search warrant?

Mr. COCKRAN. I have not the Constitution available, but I have Judge Bradley's decision in the case of Boyd v. United States (116 U. S. Rept.), which quotes it, and it is—

That the right of people to be secure in their person, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized.

Now, surely the gentlemen will not question that this provision distinctly provides for the issue of a warrant, mentioning it specifically. And not only does it prohibit a search without a warrant but it prohibits the issuing of a search warrant except on evidence establishing probable cause to believe in the commission of crime.

Judge Bradley in this decision reviews the leading English case of Entick versus Carrington, and holds that the doctrine there laid down by Lord Camden with respect to seizures of books and papers for the purpose of using them as evidence was incorporated in the fourth amendment to our Constitution. That case grew out of the long conflict between the Crown and John Wilkes, which bore many fruits of great value, among others some letters of Junius Wilkes's paper, the North Briton, had been raided—as we would say nowadays—and he recovered damages against the officers. In the Entick case, as it is reported in Howell's State Trials, officers of the law had broken in and seized books and papers belonging to the plaintiff under color of a warrant issued by the Secretary of State. Action was brought for trespass against the officers making the seizure. The defendants attempted to justify under the warrant. It was conceded that such warrants had been issued for many years and executed without question. The case was argued before the full court, and Lord Camden delivered the decision, holding that such a seizure could not be justified except by a warrant issued by a court upon proper proof, and that even on a warrant issued by the Secretary of State it was utterly in violation of the English common law. Justice Bradley, by applying that doctrine, held a law of Congress providing that in actions of the Government to recover penalties the person pursued could be required to produce his books and papers unconstitutional and void. And that doctrine remains the constitutional law of this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment now close.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, if that motion prevails, would that preclude an amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It precludes no amendment, only debate. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota that all debate on this amendment now close.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GRIFFIN) there were—ayes 130, noes 22.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LONDON. I desire to offer a motion to concur in the Senate amendment. Is it in order to make that motion now?

The CHAIRMAN. Not at present, because the question now is on a perfecting amendment.

Mr. LONDON. And the last vote deals only with the motion now before the House?

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FIELDS].

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Chairman, may we have that amendment again reported?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the Fields amendment.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the Fields amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FIELDS) there were—ayes 54, noes 96.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky demands tellers. Those in favor of ordering tellers will rise and stand until counted. (After counting.) Sixteen Members have risen; not a sufficient number, and tellers are refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WARD of North Carolina: Page 8, at the end of line 6, amend by adding:

"No execution or other process shall be levied on the property of any person for collection of penalties or forfeitures alleged to have been incurred by violation of this act or the national prohibition act until such person shall be duly convicted or shall plead guilty to the charge for which penalty or forfeiture shall arise."

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is out of order; that it is not germane to any part of the Senate amendment.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. Will not the gentleman withhold that for a moment?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota reserve or make the point of order?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I make the point of order.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard upon the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I do not throw the challenge of debate at the feet of any gentleman on this floor upon the question of parliamentary law. In this Hall many years ago Mr. Blaine said that a man who knew parliamentary law did not know any other law. I will not say that Mr. Blaine was right, but the majority of those here are probably estopped by the source from which that proposition proceeds. Such law as I think I do know leads me to the conclusion that this is a germane and a proper amendment. I insist, members of this committee, that you are going a little bit further than you really know you are going. Your prohibition law is doing some things out yonder among the people that you did not intend it to do and that you do not know it is doing, or at least I prefer to assume that you do not know the extent to which it is working great annoyance to the courts and the people from the causes indicated by the proposed amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not discussing the point of order.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. I am showing why it is germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. You are endeavoring by the national prohibition act and by this act to enforce the Constitution. Anything in the national prohibition act or in this act, which is amendatory thereto, which is germane to that constitutional requirement and in furtherance of its purpose and spirit ought to be held germane and proper. Any amendment offered to this act which is in furtherance of the purpose of so enforcing the eighteenth amendment as to harmonize it with the commonly recognized rights of the citizen, the broad and wholesome provisions of the Bill of Rights, and the usual procedure of the courts is germane to the whole text of the bill and proper. You are now by this act attempting to say what an officer of the law—called your enforcement officer—shall and what he shall not do, and in order that his official acts shall not so infringe upon the common rights of citizenship as to invoke the resentment of the best thought of the country, upon whose assistance and approval you are at last dependent for the enforcement of the law, and in order that the acts of that officer shall not so embarrass the courts as to obstruct the enforcement of this law on legal principles I offer this amendment. In the Federal courts of North Carolina there are pending to-day two injunctions, one in each district, restraining the internal-revenue collector from going by his officer upon the property of a man and levying upon same and summarily making sale in pursuance of the levy, because that officer received notice that the sheriff had found somewhere on or about him evidence of a violation of the prohibition law, which evidence had never been reduced to the crucible of judicial examination.

Officers are levying on automobiles before the defendant has had an opportunity of even being carried before the commissioner for an investigation and ordering it sold for enforcement of the penalty without giving that defendant any opportunity whatever to even plead in a court of competent jurisdiction, and the Federal courts are restraining that practice. The bankers are saying that it is embarrassing their business as bankers. They have mortgages on the farms or on the automobiles, and the internal-revenue collector levies execution on the whole farm, on the automobile, and everything else, and the defendant has never been in court and had a chance to plead. I submit that this amendment is germane to the spirit of this bill.

Now, Mr. Chairman, having joined in the campaign that swept prohibition over North Carolina, having given seven years of my life as a State's attorney to the enforcement of that law, and incurred the displeasure of the liquor forces to the extent that I came near being defeated for renomination; having come into this House and voted with Mr. VOLSTEAD that a doctor should not even give beer to a sick man if he wanted to, I feel that I have gone where I have the right to say thus far shall I go and no further.

It is apparent to everybody that prohibition proponents in the Halls of Congress, its advocates here, as well as those out among the people and in other fields and forums of its activities, that set in motion these acts of official tyranny of which I complain, have gone on and on, their progress advancing step by step toward the attainment of supreme authority, their appetite for power growing on what it feeds on, until to-day in their arrogance and self-righteousness they proclaim it boldly to the world, "By the strength that is in my arm and the righteousness that is in my name, I dare do anything I please." It has come to the point and place where in the name of orderly government and the common rights of citizenship we should call a halt. [Laughter and applause.] I ask you, sir, why should not a man be tried in court or be given opportunity to be tried before his property is confiscated? [Applause.]

I oft have heard of Lydford law,
Where in the morn they hang and draw,
And sit in judgment after.

This Scotch verse is now Americanized so as to read—

I oft have heard of Volstead law,
How in the morn they hang and draw,
And sit in judgment after.

[Laughter and applause.]

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from North Carolina is not discussing the point of order.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. The gentleman is too late. [Laughter.] I have said all I want to say right square to the point as sharply and directly as words can be pointed. The gentleman says this is not germane. Mr. Chairman, gentlemen do not receive in debate of prohibition, even in this Hall, the recognition and respectful attention at the hands of their friends and hearers that they do in debating other questions. Twice this morning a gentleman arose in his place to a question of parliamentary inquiry—

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order the gentleman is not discussing the point of order.

Mr. WARD of North Carolina. And whispers of "give him a drink" went over that side of the Hall. He was entitled to respectful recognition here, and the point I make now by this amendment is borne out by the attitude of gentlemen toward one of opposing views indicated by that unfortunate incident. Gentlemen should not make the point that the amendment is not germane and thus attempt to evade a vote on its merits, which is the only purpose of the point. It is an effort like other efforts, as in the call or report of the bill, when the gentleman stood up at his place and suggested unanimous consent of the House to run over the amendments of the Senate, and send the bill to conference without the usual consideration and debate, and if it had not been for the alertness of the distinguished parliamentarian from Illinois, the House would have done it, and not known it had done it. Mr. Chairman, I insist the amendment is germane, and I hope it can be considered on its merits. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The committee is considering the Senate amendments and particularly this amendment which relates to search and seizure and limits the powers of Government officials in relation to search and seizures. It appears to the Chair that any amendment offered which is not germane to the subject covered by this amendment, even though it might be legitimate to the bill as a whole, is not in order, and the Chair sustains the point of order made.

Mr. KINDRED. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KINDRED: Page 7, line 20, after the word dwelling, strike out "baggage or packages" and after the word "warrant," page 7, line 20, the word "stating the location of the dwelling or premises to be searched." Also insert, in lieu thereof, the following: In line 19, after the word "any," insert the word "person."

Mr. KINDRED. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit only a few remarks.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I make the point of order that there is no debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The time for debate was limited to debate on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROSSDALE. The gentleman from Minnesota did not ask that.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The Chair must have restated it incorrectly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understood it and so stated. Mr. TILSON. The Chair is correct.

Mr. ROSSDALE. There was no time stated. The chairman of the committee asked for 10 minutes, and there was no time stated.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I moved that debate on this amendment and all amendments to it close.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota did not make that as the Chair heard it.

Mr. KINDRED. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I desire to submit in support of the amendments which I propose here some very brief fundamental remarks. The language proposed comes clearly within the argument which has just been made here by my distinguished and eloquent colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKBURN]. The changes which I have proposed do come clearly within the most essential part of the Constitution, namely, within Article IV, and within the provisions of Article XVIII itself—the so-called prohibition amendment—and I believe, although not a constitutional lawyer, that my proposed amendment will not only strengthen respect for the law but will strengthen what is regarded by the Senate and by the House in long discussions the constitutional rights and immunities guaranteed to the citizen. I submit, therefore, that even prohibitionists, who should desire as much as I do to secure full constitutional rights and immunities for every citizen, will see the force and efficacy of supporting my amendment.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I now move to close all debate on all amendments to this Senate amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that all debate upon this amendment and all amendments thereto do now close.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced the yeas appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. KINDRED) there were—ayes 39, yeas 90.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment to the Senate amendment.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced the yeas appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. VOLSTEAD and Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 120, yeas 55.

So the committee amendment to the Senate amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on agreeing to the Senate amendment as amended.

The question was taken, and the Senate amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the amendments to the House, with the recommendation that the House concur in the action of the committee and the House agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, while the Chair stated the motion all right, I do not think the gentleman could move with reference to a conference in the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman make the point of order?

Mr. WALSH. That was not the motion the gentleman from Minnesota made.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman left out something.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair had some difficulty in hearing. Will the gentleman from Minnesota send his motion to the desk?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I will.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. VOLSTEAD moves that the committee do now rise and report the amendment to the House, with the recommendation that the House concur in the action of the committee and that the House agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the latter part of that motion is not in order. The House acts on the question of the conference. All the committee can do is to act on the Senate amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair reads it, it occurs to him that the action is no more than the recommendation both as to the amendments and as to the agreement of a conference.

Mr. MANN. I know; but the committee has no authority to recommend to the House what it should do. That matter is not referred to the committee. The rule provides for the consideration of the Senate amendments. We report upon them. The House determines in reference to a conference. The committee has no authority to make a recommendation about a conference. Of course, the House would have that authority.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that the recommendation to agree to the conference is not authorized, in that the committee has not the power to do so. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I modify my request by striking that provision of the motion out.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD].

The motion was agreed to.

Thereupon the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the Senate amendments to H. R. 7294, and had directed him to report the same to the House with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the House concur in the action of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reports that that committee has had under consideration Senate amendments to the bill H. R. 7294, and has directed him to report the same back with the recommendation that the House agree to the action taken by the committee.

Mr. MANN. Of course, what the committee did was to recommend that certain amendments of the Senate be agreed to, and certain amendments of the Senate be disagreed to, and certain amendments of the Senate be agreed to with amendments. I take it that that is the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio reported that the House had agreed to certain amendments of the Senate. The Chair did not understand that there were any in disagreement.

Mr. MANN. The recommendation of the committee as reported by the Chairman was that certain amendments be agreed to and certain amendments disagreed to, and certain amendments be agreed to with amendment.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact, the committee agreed to certain Senate amendments, disagreed to others, and agreed to others with amendments. The Chairman did not report seriatim these various amendments that were agreed to or disagreed to, but simply—

Mr. MANN. That is not necessary.

Mr. LONGWORTH (continuing). Obeyed the instruction of the committee in the entire proceeding.

The SPEAKER. Then the question will be, Does the House concur in the recommendation of the committee?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the Volstead amendment, which added the language of Senate amendment No. 14 to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALSH. How do we get a separate vote in the House on these—on anything the committee recommended?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will look at the rule. It seems to the Chair they would have the right to have a vote on any of the separate amendments. The House is considering amendments as it would a bill, and the rule provides that—

After the completion of such consideration the committee shall rise and report the amendments of the Senate to the House with such recommendation as may have been adopted.

It seems to the Chair any Member would have a right to demand a separate vote on any individual action of the committee. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment? If not, the question is, Does the House concur in the other recommendations of the committee?

The question was taken, and the other recommendations were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. VOLSTEAD moves to concur in Senate amendment No. 15, with the following amendment: In lieu of the matter proposed in said Senate amendment insert:

"Provided, That no vinous liquor shall be imported into the United States unless it is made to appear to the commissioner that vinous liquor for such nonbeverage use produced in the United States is not sufficient to meet such nonbeverage needs: Provided further, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act."

Mr. BLANTON. Right there—that was voted upon separately.

The SPEAKER. That does not make any difference.

Mr. BLANTON. The last part of it, the second proviso, was voted upon separately and adopted separately.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 163, yeas 17.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote, because there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks there is a quorum present.

Mr. BLANTON. I raise the point that there is no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count, although the Chair is satisfied there is a quorum present. [After counting.] A quorum is present.

The Clerk will report the next amendment.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the demand for a separate vote on that.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. VOLSTEAD moves to concur in amendment No. 32 with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 6. That no officer, agent, or employee of the United States, while engaged in the enforcement of this act, the national prohibition act, or any law in reference to the manufacture or taxation of, or traffic in, intoxicating liquor, shall search any private dwelling without a warrant directing such search, and no such warrant shall issue unless there is reason to believe such dwelling is used as a place in which liquor is manufactured for sale or sold. The term 'private dwelling' shall be construed to include the room or rooms occupied not transiently, but solely as a residence in an apartment house, hotel, or boarding house. Any violation of any provision of this paragraph shall be punished by a fine of not to exceed $1,000 or imprisonment not to exceed one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit the bill, which is provided for in the rule.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. BLANTON. I am, the way it is drawn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. The rule provides, if I remember correctly, that there could be one motion to recommit.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. If it is in order.

The SPEAKER. The general rules provide for a motion to recommit before the passage of the bill. Now, the whole matter has been acted upon.

Mr. BLANTON. The resolution from the Committee on Rules adopted this morning provided, if I remember correctly, that there should be one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The rule adopted to-day provides:

Whereupon the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the Senate amendments and all motions incidental thereto recommended by the committee to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

That would intimate that the motion to recommit should be an intervening motion.

Mr. BLANTON. The motion to recommit, as the Speaker will recall, comes the last thing before the final adoption of any measure.

The SPEAKER. There has been a final adoption here. That is the point.

Mr. BLANTON. We were adopting various amendments. The bill is in the same situation now that a bill is in the House when motions are regularly made to recommit a bill; that is, right after the last reading of the bill. We have just been adopting amendments seriatim, and after the adoption of the last amendment I immediately submitted the motion to recommit.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] is laboring under a misapprehension. We are not in the same situation at all. We have been here passing upon a series of amendments to the bill in their order. The bill as a whole has not been before the House and is not before the House now, but a series of amendments.

Now, what would a motion to recommit carry? Would it carry one amendment or all amendments? I do not see what the motion to recommit can be made to apply to here. Each amendment has been passed upon seriatim and adopted and the matter closed. It seems to me we are not in a position of passing a bill through the House.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the bill is still in the possession of the House, and it seems to me that under the practice of the House, if not under the strict rules of the House, a motion to recommit is in order so long as the bill remains before the House and is not sent to conference. The rule itself is drawn, of course, in conformity with the usual provisions of rules, except the motion to recommit being cut out by the previous question.

Now, frequently it happens that a gentleman does not know, or the House does not know, whether it desires to vote for a motion to recommit until it has disposed of pending amendments. The last amendment has just been voted on by the House, recommended by the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. To say that a motion to recommit must have been made before the amendment was disposed of is to put the House in a very awkward position. It seems to me, in view of the practice and the precedents, it is not desirable to cut out the motion to recommit practically entirely, because it could not well be made until the committee amendments were acted upon.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. A motion to recommit is in order. Where this bill has been brought before the House under a special rule, can it involve anything except the amendments that were before the House for consideration, and if so, can it reverse the action of the House taken upon those amendments?

Mr. MANN. Oh, I think it is the same way. You can order the bill to be engrossed and read a third time; you can make a motion to recommit generally, or make a motion to recommit with instructions as to certain amendments. The only amendments that would be in order now would be amendments, of course, to the Senate amendments. But the House might reverse its opinion as to a Senate amendment, although it had been disagreed to or agreed to.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. But each one of these amendments to which the gentleman says this motion might apply has already been acted upon by the House. Now, can we reverse our action and vote again on those amendments?

Mr. MANN. I think we can. I think that is what the motion to recommit is for. That is the practice—under the motion to recommit to reverse the action of the House and order a bill to the third reading.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. If the House has agreed to an amendment and the motion is made to recommit the bill and strike out the amendment that has just been agreed to, is it subject to a point of order?

Mr. MANN. It is.

Mr. WALSH. The House is not permitted to vote on it again in that case?

Mr. MANN. I do not think it is desirable to restrict the right to make the motion to recommit, which has greatly grown since the Speaker and I came into the House. Liberality in regard to it has greatly grown since the Speaker and I entered the House. I do not think it is desirable to make a technical decision and say you can not make it now, but should have made it a few moments ago.

The SPEAKER. The difficulty in the mind of the Chair is that there is nothing here except certain amendments which have already been agreed to by the House. Now, it is generally held that a motion to recommit can not change action of the House on such amendments. Therefore how could a motion to recommit on that principle contain anything that would be in order?

Mr. MANN. When the gentleman makes his motion, the Chair can determine that question.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I was about to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that we are speculating now without knowing what the motion to recommit may be. I have no doubt the motion to recommit will be subject to the point of order, but I think there is no question that it is in order to offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not see how a motion to recommit that will be in order can be made. At the same time the Chair will follow the suggestion of the gentleman and hear the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. BLANTON moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on the Judiciary with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following language stricken from the bill:

"Provided further, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act."

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, is it in order to offer an amendment to that?

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against that motion, in view of the fact that the House has just adopted that very language.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to be heard on the point of order, to get the parliamentary situation before the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this identical language in the bill was stricken out of the bill and the Senate amendment embracing this language was not agreed to by the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. And the House has approved that action?

Mr. BLANTON. I want to be frank with the Chair. Later on, after the Committee of the Whole struck out this language from the bill and refused to adopt the Senate amendment No. 14, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] offered an amendment which switched this language back behind certain House amendments and incorporated them all together in one amendment, and the Committee of the Whole adopted that. There are several Members here who have indicated to me that they did not like this language and did not want it in the other amendment, but they did not want to defeat the other portions of the amendment, and they wanted a chance to vote on this particular language separately. That is the parliamentary situation. After the committee struck out this language it really had no authority to put it back; but it did put it back. That was a separate action entirely.

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the gentleman ought to say that when the language was stricken out the chairman of the committee [Mr. VOLSTEAD] who made the motion that it be stricken out had already announced his intention to move that it be inserted in another place. It was really two acts to accomplish the transportation of the order of certain sentences. It was not stricken out for the purpose of getting rid of it but for the purpose of putting it in another place.

The SPEAKER. Is it now in the bill?

Mr. BLANTON. It is now in the bill in another place, with the proviso.

Mr. TEMPLE. It was stricken out in one place for the purpose of inserting it in another, and the purpose of striking it out in one place so as to insert it in another place was announced in connection with the motion to strike it out where it first occurred.

Mr. MANN. Speaker Clark held repeatedly—and his holdings have been followed by the present Speaker—that it was not in order in a motion to recommit to direct the committee to report back striking out an amendment which had been agreed to by the House; so this motion is not in order, because that is what it proposes to do.

Mr. BLANTON. This is only a certain portion of the language in an amendment. It is not to strike out the amendment agreed to. It is only to strike out certain words that appear in the amendment.

Mr. MANN. In the amendment that has just been agreed to by the House.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. And the very language to which the motion to recommit is directed was voted upon separately just a moment ago.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that the House agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. WALSH), there were—ayes 185, noes 43.

Accordingly the motion was agreed to, and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. VOLSTEAD, Mr. DYER, and Mr. SUMNERS of Texas.

REVENUE LEGISLATION.

Mr. FORDNEY, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported the bill (H. R. 8245) to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes, which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I do not know that it is necessary to reserve points of order on this, but if it is I desire to do so. Then I ask unanimous consent that the minority have until Friday to file the views of the minority, not to interfere with the consideration of the bill by the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the minority have until Friday to print their views, not to interfere with the consideration of the bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, did the gentleman from Texas reserve points of order or did he not?

The SPEAKER. He did.

Mr. GARNER. I did.

HOOR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. MONDELL. I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Wyoming if it will be agreeable to have an adjournment of the House to-day at 4 o'clock to the end that the minority may hold a conference?

Mr. MONDELL. I understand the minority desire to hold a conference, and in view of that fact I feel that we should adjourn at 4 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to make a short statement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I want to say to the minority Members of the House that there will be a minority conference held in the Hall beginning at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 1269. An act to make a preliminary survey of the Calaveras River in California with a view to the control of its floods;

H. R. 1940. An act for the relief of the Southern Iron & Metal Co., Jacksonville, Fla.; and

H. R. 1475. An act providing for a grant of land to the State of Washington for a biological station and general research purposes.

SENATE BILLS, REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 561. An act to grant citizens of Washington and Kane Counties, Utah, the right to cut timber in the State of Arizona for agricultural, mining, and other domestic purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 757. An act to validate certain declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States; to the Committee on Immigration.

S. 2153. An act authorizing the owners of the steamship Texas to bring suit against the United States of America; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1824. An act to provide for the relief of certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1099. An act to amend section 2372 of the Revised Statutes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 490. An act to consolidate national forest lands; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 157. An act for the relief of the Rosen Reichardt Brokerage Co., of St. Louis, Mo.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 65. An act to grant medals to survivors and heirs of volunteers of the Port Hudson forlorn-hope storming party; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2272. An act to amend the act approved October 29, 1919, known as the national motor vehicle theft act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 1831. An act to amend section 237 of the Judicial Code; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 5. An act to amend an act approved February 28, 1899, entitled "An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings"; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 2108. An act prohibiting the interment of the body of any person in the cemetery known as the Cemetery of Whites Tabernacle, No. 39, of the Ancient United Order of Sons and Daughters, Brethren and Sisters of Moses, in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 1733. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, to deliver to the president of the Milwaukee Press Club, of Milwaukee, Wis., the bell of the wrecked cruiser Milwaukee; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2306. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to release a certain right of way no longer needed for military purposes at Springfield Armory, Mass.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1718. An act authorizing the distribution of abandoned or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes to hospitals maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

S. 1408. An act authorizing the Rolph Navigation & Coal Co. to sue the United States to recover damages resulting from collisions; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1283. An act for the relief of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co.; the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Co.; and the St. Louis Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. J. Res. 67. Joint resolution stating the true meaning and intent of the provisions relating to the erection and use of the George Washington Memorial Building in the act entitled "An act to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings; to authorize the enlargement, extension, remodeling, or improvement of certain public buildings; to authorize the erection and completion of public buildings; to authorize the purchase of sites for public buildings; and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1913, as amended; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

WAR FINANCE CORPORATION.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill S. 1915, an act to amend the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, to provide relief for producers of and dealers in agricultural products, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. STAFFORD in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 1915, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 2. That section 1 of the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and four additional persons (who shall be the directors first appointed as hereinafter provided) are hereby created a body corporate and politic in deed and in law by the name, style, and title of the War Finance Corporation (herein called the corporation), and shall have succession for a period of 10 years: Provided, That except as otherwise provided by this amendatory act the corporation shall not exercise any of the powers conferred by this act except such as are incidental to the liquidation of its assets and the winding up of its affairs, after six months after the termination of the war, the date of such termination to be fixed by proclamation of the President of the United States."

The Clerk read the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 6, after the figure "1," insert "of Title I."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 9, after the word "after," strike out the words "six months after the termination of the war, the date of such termination to be fixed by proclamation of the President of the United States," and insert the words "July 1, 1922."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend section 2 as follows: Page 2, line 6, after the word "this," strike out the word "amendatory."

Mr. McFADDEN. This amendment explains itself.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 3. The War Finance Corporation Act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, is amended by adding after section 21 thereof the following new section:

"Sec. 22. Whenever the board of directors of the corporation shall be of the opinion that conditions arising out of the war, or out of the disruption of foreign trade created by the war, have resulted in or may result in an abnormal surplus accumulation of any staple agricultural product of the United States and that the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable producers of or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the corporation shall thereupon be empowered to make advances, for periods not exceeding one year from the respective dates of such advances, upon such terms, not inconsistent with this act, as it may determine:

"(a) To any person engaged in the United States in dealing in or marketing any such products, or to any association composed of persons engaged in producing such products, for the purpose of assisting such person or association to carry such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner. Any such advance shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding 1½ per cent in excess of the rate of discount for 90-day commercial paper prevailing at the Federal reserve bank of the district in which the borrower is located at the time when such advance is made:

"(b) To any person without the United States purchasing such products, but in no case shall any of the money so advanced be expended without the United States. Every such advance shall be secured by adequate security of such character as shall be prescribed by the board of directors of the corporation. The rate of interest charged on any such advance shall be determined by the board of directors. The corporation shall retain power to recall an advance or require additional security at any time.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, is the bill being considered by sections?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair directs the attention of gentlemen to the fact that this bill is being considered by sections, and the section under consideration is section 3, which embraces various amendments to the War Finance Corporation act, to sections 22, 23, 24, 25, 26 to 30, inclusive.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I think it might expedite matters if we consider the bill under subsections, because they are substantive propositions.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I make that request, that the bill be considered in that way.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered by subsections in considering section 3. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 15, after the figures "21," insert the words "of Title I."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 21, after the word "States," strike out the word "and" and insert "or lack of a market for the sale of same, or."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 16, strike out paragraph b.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of opposing the committee amendment. I regret to see that so many representatives of farmers, after having disposed of the beer bill, have left the Hall. Looking over the Hall, there is a larger percentage of those who represent the manufacturing and city districts than there are those representing the agricultural districts. Of course, it may be explained in a psychological way that they think the farmers of this country are more interested in beer and wine than in agricultural credits. I do not propose to deny their right to place that relative value on pending legislation, but I want to point out what subsection (b) does. If you want to know what the action of the committee means by striking out subsection (b), you must first understand that under the present existing law the War Finance Corporation has authority to make advances covering the export of any domestic product, and they have been making advances for that purpose. Subsection (b) was adopted in the Senate as a substitute for a proposal that was in the Norris bill which authorized the War Finance Corporation to make loans to foreign Governments. The fight was not whether or not you took care of the question of furnishing money to export the products of the United States, but the question was whether you would furnish it to foreign Governments or to the individual that was purchasing the exports. That was the controversy, and it was settled by adoption of subsection (b); and there is something in the argument that we should not extend, even through the corporation whose capital stock is furnished by the Government, loans to foreign Governments. I agree to that. I am opposed to making any further loans to foreign Governments, either out of the Treasury or through any agency that is capitalized or financed by the Federal Government.

But it is the height of folly to say that you will prevent the exportation or shipment of wheat or cotton or any other domestic product of the United States, unless that exportation is underwritten purely as an underwriting proposition by some domestic person, when the foreigner who is going to be the exporter—that is, he will export from the United States into, say, Germany—can offer you a piece of paper, an acceptance that is acceptable in international exchange; and the proceeds of that acceptance is specifically required by this subsection (b) to be expended in the United States. The United States citizens will get the benefit of it. It will be relieving the jam in the accumulation of American products, and in the name of common sense, why should we not allow the Finance Corporation to make that advance to any man who is doing the prime purpose of the bill, which is purchasing our commodities for export, and relieving the jam of American commodities?

If you do not do that, what will happen? You will compel these people who want to come here to try to do the things they are not able to do now, even though some gentlemen contend there is no trouble with foreign credits at the present time. I have little respect either for the judgment or the veracity of the man who tells you that the credit situation is easy, and that foreigners who are coming here buying our agricultural and other products are able now to arrange suitable credit that the American banking institutions will take to an extent adequate to finance the accumulated surplus of farm products. He is ignorant of the facts or is willfully trying to mislead Congress. I think the amendment of the committee ought to be voted down.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, the managing director of the War Finance Corporation does not want this authority. While the gentleman says there is a demand from foreigners for loans, it is a fact that the War Finance Corporation is not making any loans to foreigners for purchases in this country at the present time. The committee acted upon the theory that it is much better for us to confine our advances to Americans here who are engaged in the sale of goods abroad, because they know better where the credits are good, and they take the risk and guarantee these obligations to the War Finance Corporation, and the Government should not engage in the export business. These loans should be made direct to our banking institutions and those concerns in this country engaged in this international trade, as now provided in this bill as reported by our committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. KING. Can the gentleman think of any wilder scheme than this idea of loaning money to foreign nationals, when the foreign Governments owe us now $10,000,000,000.

Mr. McFADDEN. No; and I would state further that there is an unsettled trade balance of some three to five billions of dollars at the present time. To permit the War Finance Corporation to make additional loans to foreigners abroad, it seems to me, is entirely without reason. I therefore hope that the committee's judgment will be sustained.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 3, line 16, insert the following:

"(b) To any foreign Government or person without the United States purchasing the products of any essential industry of the United States, but in no case shall any of the money so advanced be expended without the United States. Every such advance shall be secured by adequate security of such character as shall be prescribed by the board of directors of the corporation. The rate of interest charged on any such advance shall be determined by the board of directors. The corporation shall retain power to recall an advance or require additional security at any time."

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to explain to the House that the only difference between this amendment and the Senate provision is the fact that the Senate amendment is confined wholly to agricultural products. This amendment broadens the scope so that it includes the products of any essential industry of the United States. It would include the manufactured article and the products of the mine and of any other essential industry, making it broad, so that it will not be subject to the charge that it is class legislation in any respect. I think it is very important to adopt this amendment, after it has been broadened as it has, for this reason. Under the bill as drawn it throws all of the export business into the hands of a few exporters. If you adopt this amendment and finance the foreign purchaser of American exportable products, then you will have competition, because those foreign agents can come here and compete for our products and the business will not be all thrown into the hands of just a few men. Therefore we will have competition in the market for our exports, and we will be able to get probably what they are really worth not only in respect to agricultural products but to the products of every other essential industry.

Mr. BRAND. Mr. Chairman, in addition to the statement made by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Wingo], which was to the effect that this provision was in the Norris bill originally, I call the attention of the committee to the fact that it was also in the amendment offered to the Norris bill by Senator McNary. It was not only in the Norris bill and in the McNary amendment but it passed the Senate without a dissenting vote—by a unanimous vote. The first time any opposition was heard to it was when Mr. Meyer, the manager of the War Finance Corporation, came before our committee and testified as a witness. I do not think we should entirely submit and yield to the judgment and the opinion of one man, however well informed and capacitated he may be, in regard to the control, disposition, and sale of our agricultural products when dealing with the people of Europe, who may want to purchase them. It is stated that Mr. Meyer is the author of this bill, and the impression left on my mind when I heard his reason and argument against retaining this provision in the bill, and the provision making the Secretary of Agriculture a member of the board, was that he did not want to be interfered with in his management of the War Finance Corporation. If this Senate provision be stricken out of the bill, then Poland, Germany, Rumania, Russia, Lithuania, and Czechoslovakia, and other foreign countries, who have heretofore been purchasers of our cotton and other agricultural products can not send to this country their agents or representatives and buy a bale of cotton or a pound of wheat or a bushel of corn without consulting the War Finance Corporation, or Mr. Meyer, who is the body and soul of this corporation and who, I admit, has done more than anyone else to make it a success. When he gets to his office and pulls off his hat the War Finance Corporation is in session.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRAND. Yes.

Mr. KING. Does the gentleman think it would be proper to sell these immense amounts of cotton to Poland if the Polish securities were of no value or if there was liable to be a sudden revolution or overthrow of the Polish Government? What security will you have for your cotton from Poland?

Mr. BRAND. Well, if the gentleman will read the hearings before the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry in the Senate he will find that representatives from Poland and one from Czechoslovakia and one other foreign representative said they could present satisfactory security provided they were allowed to come to this country and purchase our wheat, flour, cotton, and other agricultural products which they need, if time was granted them in which to make payments.

Mr. KING. The representative from Poland said he would give any kind of security desired, but what kind of security did he offer, if the gentleman remembers?

Mr. BRAND. The evidence taken at the hearings will show. This section itself says:

Every such advance shall be secured by adequate security of such character as shall be prescribed by the board of directors of the corporation.

Mr. KING. But they can not give any other security than what they have?

Mr. BRAND. Suppose Germany comes and wants to buy 2,000,000,000 bales of our low-grade cotton. Under this amendment she can not go in the market and make an offer to buy a bale of cotton without consulting the War Finance Corporation. Under this bill as amended the corporation would only deal with exporters residing here, and not with these European representatives and agents.

Mr. KING. They have no gold to pay for the cotton, have they?

Mr. BRAND. If they are permitted to go to the War Finance Corporation and say, "I will offer you satisfactory security for so much cotton," the corporation would then investigate the securities offered, and if found satisfactory the foreign representative or agent would then go into the country and buy our cotton and your wheat and cattle.

Mr. KING. And Uncle Sam would be guaranteeing these securities to Poland; that is what it would amount to.

Mr. BRAND. I do not think so. I have as much respect for my friend's opinion as that of any man on that side of the House or this either, but I differ with him upon that statement.

Mr. WINGO. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. BRAND. They can not get our products unless the security offered be approved by the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman from Illinois asked the gentleman if it would not make the Government guarantee it. Would that make the Government guarantee it any more than the Government guaranteeing the loan that is made to the Federal reserve banks if the security fell down? This War Finance Corporation is a financial institution set up.

Mr. McFADDEN. I understood the gentleman to say this prohibited Germany buying cotton in the United States?

Mr. BRAND. On account of Germany's financial condition she can not except through the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. McFADDEN. I do not see why anyone in Germany who has credit here can not purchase. They are not prohibited under this law from buying anything they want to buy here.

Mr. BRAND. In reply to that I say no country in Europe that wants to buy our wheat, corn, flour, and cotton can buy a dollar's worth in this country for exportation to their country unless they deal through our exporters or bankers who are backing them, except by and with the advice and consent of the War Finance Corporation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me the suggestion made by the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McFADDEN], that the Director of the War Finance Corporation does not take favorably to this provision of the bill gives double assurance that we need not fear any great loss through any business that may be done by the authority conferred in this clause of the bill. Now, I do not think that the War Finance Corporation can do any great amount of business with people outside the United States. I do not think the members of the board of directors of the War Finance Corporation intend to undertake to do much of that sort of business, and I agree with them that it is not practical to do business on a large scale through the corporation with people outside the United States. But I do insist that there may be cases, though they may be rare, I can readily conceive of many cases where the War Finance Corporation may be able to facilitate the purchase of our products abroad by extending temporary credit or by acting in conjunction with the corporations that are authorized to do international banking and with importers and others to whom the War Finance Corporation is authorized by this bill to make loans and advances—I say I can readily see how the corporation might in conjunction with them, in some cases at least, further our foreign trade upon short-term loans that would not involve the corporation in any greater risk than is involved in other things which we authorize them to undertake to do. Now, to be perfectly frank about it, I do not think there is the extent of benefit by virtue of this particular provision of the bill which some gentlemen seem to think. I recognize, as does every Member of the House, the desirability of enlarging this kind of business. There is not any question but that our chief difficulty right now in this country is the lack of foreign markets.

I understand that thoroughly, I think, and I want to see the situation relieved in every legitimate way. We are piling up our goods at home here all the time, and this bill in large part provides further means for keeping and preserving our products for orderly marketing. The one great necessity is finding markets abroad. Until that is accomplished our difficulties will continue in greater or less degree. I am frank to confess that the situation can not be relieved entirely or probably to any very great extent by the War Finance Corporation, because in the nature of things the corporation can not conduct such widespread and scattered transactions. But we can authorize them to do this kind of business. It will help in a psychological way, at least, and, if opportunity offers, they may make some such deals. We have every assurance from directors of the corporation that there will be no carelessness in handling any business that may be done under the authority conferred by this bill if this provision is retained. I have great confidence in the ability with which the corporation has been managed and in the purpose of Mr. Meyer to make the corporation of value in solving the difficulties that have confronted and still confront us. I would not for a moment sanction making further loans either by the Government or through the War Finance Corporation to foreign Governments. The time has come when we should insist that foreign Governments indebted to our Government should begin to pay, and we should not hesitate to make known that such is the desire of the American people. But we do not propose that the War Finance Corporation shall make loans to any foreign Government. It is only proposed that credit be extended in such cases as the directors of the corporation in their prudence and good judgment may think proper to persons, corporations, or associations, and every dollar of such loans must be spent in the United States.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, if I understand the proposition now before the committee it is the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN] to agree to the provision in the bill at the bottom of page 3 and insert in place of the term "such products" the term "essential industries." I think that is correct.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Products of essential industry.

Mr. MANN. All right. "Products of essential industry." The purpose of this bill is to aid in financing the agricultural products when there is a surplus or no sale.

It takes billions of dollars a year to finance all the essential industries of the United States. The War Finance Corporation can loan no money that it has not got. It has to sell its securities in order to get money before they can loan money. And it will have all it can do—in my judgment, a good deal more than it can do—to raise the money to finance a small portion of the agricultural products. And yet the gentleman from Texas proposes that the money that they can raise by the sale of their securities shall be diverted from financing agricultural products and put into financing steel or rubber or some other of the products of the United States. Where the agricultural industry is demanding help in the way of financing its products, he proposes that the money which the War Finance Corporation can raise shall be used for other purposes and not for financing agricultural products. I do not believe that the War Finance Corporation will be able to finance all the industries of the United States. There is a special need at present for financing the agricultural products, although in the main people who handle different products will be compelled to finance their own industries and their own products. The Government agency will never borrow enough money to finance all the business of the United States, and the sooner the people find it out the better it will be for all concerned. I doubt myself whether it is advisable for the War Finance Corporation to loan money to the foreigner, not because I have any question in reference to the desirability of their buying the products, but because the demand would probably be so great from the foreigners that the corporation would not be able to raise the money to finance people at home. I believe it is first desirable to lend it to those of our own citizens who are endeavoring to export these products or handle them, instead of diverting the money which we raise to foreigners. [Applause.]

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is not exactly accurate in his understanding that this bill only deals with agricultural products. While it is true that the particular sections which are added to the War Finance Corporation act by this bill only deal with agricultural products, the bill also provides for the continuance of section 21, which was added to the War Finance Corporation act in 1919. That particular section provides:

That advances may be made to persons, firms, corporations, or associations engaged in business in the United States of exporting therefrom domestic products.

Now, of course, that language would include manufactured goods as well as agricultural products; but I did not rise for the purpose of entering into a controversy with the gentleman from Illinois upon that proposition. I took the floor to advocate the retention of the provision of the present bill, and for this reason:

Now, let it be understood that the real purpose behind this bill is not to start a holding movement of agricultural products. The real purpose of the bill is to start a moving movement, to get the agricultural products into the channels of commerce, and one method of doing it is to facilitate the exports of these products to those European countries which may need them most. Now, of course, we all want to encourage our domestic exporters in every legitimate way we can, but I can easily see where cases can arise that we could find a large outlet for some of our surplus products by financing some foreign manufacturer or some foreign importer in his purchases of American raw material. Now, let it be understood—

Mr. KING. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLACK (continuing). That the War Finance Corporation under this bill, if the committee amendment should be adopted, would have no right to grant any such concern any financial assistance.

Now I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KING].

Mr. KING. Will the gentleman illustrate by an example the kind of a case he is speaking of, where we might safely advance money to foreigners, for instance, some shipment of cotton to England?

Mr. BLACK. Certainly. I can illustrate it very easily. Mr. Meyer, managing director of the War Finance Corporation, when he was before our committee stated, in substance, that the need for this bill arose out of the fact that we could no longer expect the European merchants and manufacturers to buy our products within a period of a few months and store them over there. He said the conditions had so changed that these foreign customers must look for some financial assistance and credits in the United States. Now, I can easily conceive, if the gentleman will permit, of some well-rated, some high-class, manufacturer of cotton goods, for instance, in Liverpool or Manchester who could furnish to the War Finance Corporation adequate security for money to be used in the purchase of cotton in the United States. The same illustration might be given as to manufacturers in France or Germany or Italy or Belgium. I do not see any reason why the War Finance Corporation should not be authorized to make loans in such cases.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have three minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. KING. Taking the illustration which the gentleman has given, which is a perfectly proper transaction, and the Government would not lose any money on it, could not that transaction be always financed by private enterprise?

Mr. BLACK. I am assuming that it could in many instances. And yet if I take the testimony of Mr. Meyer, who probably knows more about this matter than any other man in the United States, or certainly in the War Finance Corporation, I conclude that cases might well arise where such foreign manufacturer could not obtain credit facilities in his own country sufficient to handle the transaction. This is only a temporary measure. No advances can be made after July 1, 1922. And in view of present economic conditions I submit that it would be a serious error to strike out subsection (b), and that therefore we ought to refuse to adopt the committee amendment.

Mr. STEVENSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for five minutes.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we can not agree upon some time when the debate shall end.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I want five minutes.

Mr. ANDERSON. I should like five minutes.

Mr. McFADDEN. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that the debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 25 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman purposes in his request to apply it to all of section 22?

Mr. McFADDEN. Section 22 and all amendments thereto.

Mr. WINGO. Oh, no; I have two original amendments to section 22 other than this. This section (b) is the one that will precipitate most of the discussion.

Mr. McFADDEN. Very well; section (b) and all amendments thereto.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McFADDEN] asks unanimous consent that the debate on paragraph (b) and all amendments thereto close in 25 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. STEVENSON. Mr. Chairman, gentlemen seem to get the impression that this means sending money abroad; that it means subtracting cash capital from the sum of capital left in this country and dissipating it into the coffers of other countries.

Now, if you will look carefully at the bill you will see that the money must be expended within the United States. It must be expended for agricultural products within the United States. Therefore the question of the person to whom the credit is made is an immaterial question, provided always he furnishes the adequate security which the War Finance Corporation is charged with the duty of taking. So you do not subtract anything, and this cry of "America first" has no bearing upon this question.

Now, let us see the reason for allowing this to be done. The cotton exporter—and I use cotton as an illustration, because that is what we are accustomed to in our country—the exporter of cotton makes exports and takes paper until he gets to the point where he is not able to back the risk; and there is still an immense demand for the cotton; there is still an immense surplus to be sold. Now, what is the proposition here? It is that if the people who still want cotton and to whom the exporter in the South is unable to sell because he has reached the limit of his credit, can get the credit on adequate security from the War Finance Corporation, they can come and take it off the hands of the people who are carrying cotton already, with a great deal of money tied up in it. They can take that cotton off their hands and release that capital to buy more cotton and sell further and thereby keep the wheels moving. It does not subtract from the credit of this country, but it does enable the people who have cotton to sell to have purchasers whose credit is not strained to the last notch to export it, because it increases the number of people who are buying for export when you enable a man in a foreign country to come in and buy it, getting the money to pay for it.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEVENSON. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Is it the real object of this bill to enable the producer to hold what he produces until such time as the price shall rise? Or is it the purpose to so help him as to enable him to sell it to somebody who wants to use it?

Mr. STEVENSON. The primary purpose is to create a market for his product, and in order to create a market for his product you must finance somebody who wants to buy it, and that is the purpose of subsection (c).

Mr. TILSON. Then if it is limited to America alone is it not more likely to result in an accumulation and holding of this surplus product here, rather than selling it somewhere where it is needed?

Mr. STEVENSON. It is bound to result in that, because if a man who proposes to export buys the cotton and has gotten to the limit of his resources and has not got a purchaser to buy for cash, he can not do anything, and for that reason I am very much in favor of retaining subsection (c), although it may not be used much.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEVENSON. Yes.

Mr. KING. Is it not just a question whether we will have foreigners owing us or Americans owing us?

Mr. STEVENSON. It is a question whether we will have more surplus money, and have that money in circulation for the benefit of the great producers and manufacturers of the United States, and enable them to buy, so that all business may move. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to know who are the five gentlemen who desired time?

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], and five minutes to myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS].

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want to state briefly to the members of the committee the situation and the reason why I believe this subsection ought to be retained in the bill.

Let us see what is our situation. We have on the American farms and in concentration places in America vast surpluses of agricultural products which must remain unsold unless sale to Europe can be effected. There is no getting around that proposition. If this surplus remains unsold there can be no renewal of agricultural prosperity, no renewal of the debt paying and purchasing power of the farming sections. Europe needs our surplus grain and the livestock to keep vigorous the physical energy of the people there, whose work must rebuild the waste places of Europe and revive its industries. There is need for our cotton and other products to put into operation the industries of Europe, out of the operation of which it can alone hope to rehabilitate itself and to pay us back this $10,000,000,000 and other debts which it owes us. That is the situation. Now, what are we going to do about it? We can keep our surplus or sell on credit. We all know that Europe has not the money with which to pay us in cash for these surplus commodities. It does not matter whether the commodities are sold on credit or paid for in cash as the result of credit extended; it must be a credit transaction. These are points on which I think we all ought to agree.

Now, that brings us down to the point as to how we are going to make these sales. We can not sell for cash. These commodities must be sold on credit. This bill does not interfere with any independent transactions. On the contrary, it proposes to enable the War Finance Corporation to finance any American exporter who will effect the sale and tender to the War Finance Corporation acceptable security.

But the necessity of making these sales is so great, in the judgment of the Senate—and I hope the House will agree—that no safe method of effecting this distribution ought to be overlooked and no doorway which can safely be opened ought to be permitted to remain closed, so the proposition contained in this subsection was incorporated.

Mr. LAYTON. Will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I would like to yield, but I have not the time. Now, if you are not willing to trust the War Finance Corporation to carry out the provisions of this subsection (b), then we should not trust the War Finance Corporation to carry out any provision in this bill. I challenge any gentleman here to attack the soundness of that proposition, because in both instances the extension of credit is left to the discretion of the War Finance Corporation, and it is requested by the legislative body to procure good security in each instance.

There is another angle to the matter. It is of the highest necessity from the standpoint of every interest in America that we get some money to the country districts as quickly as possible in exchange for the surplus piled up there. We must revive the debt-paying and the purchasing power of the people of the country before we can hope to have a financial revival and a business revival in this country. The testimony that has been introduced before the Commission of Inquiry created by the two bodies of Congress shows that while rediscounts have been reduced about $1,000,000,000 in the last year, they have doubled in the country. That means that when the country people get money it goes down through the entire channel from the country merchants, the wholesale merchants, the country banks, and the city banks, and into the cancellation of the city obligations. For every dollar that we can put into the country we start a debt-paying and a purchasing movement in this country that multiplies itself over and over and over again.

Briefly, I have outlined the situation and have indicated the objective sought to be attained. In the face of a situation like that, how can any Member of this House object?

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Chairman, from my very close study of this bill I do not regard this section authorizing the War Finance Corporation to extend credit in foreign countries of the greatest importance, and I regret that I am unable to agree with some of the members of the committee that such a section ought to be in the bill. I do not agree with the statement that the countries with which the War Finance Corporation will do business are unable to finance themselves or their business institutions in purchasing the surplus products of this country. The chief countries with which business would be done are England, Belgium, France, Italy, and Germany, and according to the best information that can be obtained they are not in the deplorable condition which would make it absolutely impossible for them to arrange purchases in this country. But my theory is that as soon as it should become known that credit could be secured in America in order to finance them, their own efforts in that direction will be lessened or abandoned.

Those countries have very liberal and almost extravagant ideas about money when it is coming from this country, and I fear that we may go back to a condition which has already existed there, that when the possibility is held out that financial assistance will come from America they will look entirely to this source. So I believe the safest proposition is to leave out this section and to apply the entire amount of money, which would be some $2,000,000,000, available for the War Finance Corporation, to financing Americans and American concerns engaged in the export business, and those who are producing and holding products for export. So, Mr. Chairman, I shall stand by the committee amendment which leaves out this section.

Mr. PARRISH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILSON. I yield to my friend from Texas.

Mr. PARRISH. Does the gentleman not know that England is already financing the people in Italy and France and other countries who are buying English manufactured products?

Mr. WILSON. If England can finance her exports to other countries, why could she not finance her own imports from the United States?

Mr. PARRISH. But the condition is that she is not doing it.

Mr. WILSON. And she is not going to do it as long as there is any hope of the United States doing it.

Mr. PARRISH. But France and Italy, which England is financing, are going to trade with England instead of America until we make some arrangement.

Mr. WILSON. I can not agree to that statement. I think as long as you hold out the hope that financial assistance will come from the United States you will find a great deal of difficulty in making proper arrangements for exports to Europe, except at our expense. They should use their own resources, and my judgment is that whatever is done by the War Finance Corporation should be in the way of standing by American concerns and American citizens.

Recent press reports from Austin, Tex., convey the information that the War Finance Corporation has agreed to advance $10,000,000 to the Texas Farm Bureau to finance the exportation of 600,000 bales of cotton. This money is to be advanced to Texas farmers on the delivery of the cotton to the bureau. This is the character of transaction that we should provide for in this legislation. In my judgment there will be a demand by American exporters and producers for every dollar made available for the use of the War Finance Corporation.

The corporation reported to-day that it had received repayment of $2,834,830 in connection with advances made for the exportation of grain to Belgium. My understanding is that this transaction originally amounted to $11,000,000, which was loaned by the War Finance Corporation to Americans who purchased wheat in the United States and sold it to Belgium concerns. The securities given by the Belgian importers were guaranteed by the Belgian Government.

On the same date the corporation also announced that it has agreed to make an advance of $140,000 in order to assist an American exporter in financing the exportation of cotton to Belgium. What the Belgians are doing other nations of Europe can do and will do if we let it be known that they are expected to finance their own people and institutions, and that they can not depend upon America for both the products and the money.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, the fundamental purpose of this bill is to facilitate the export of American agricultural products by providing the necessary American credit. That exportation is made necessary by the fact that there is in the country to-day a very large surplus of certain classes of agricultural products which I have not the time to give in figures. It is made necessary by the fact that the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar to-day, as expressed in the price of all commodities that he has to buy, stands at 69 per cent of its value in 1913. I mention that fact not only to indicate what the farmer's position is to-day but to indicate that the price of agricultural products is very near the bottom. I venture to say it is at the bottom. Now, for the most part, these products when they go abroad are themselves the security upon which the credit is based, and the rest of their importation is reduced by the present low price.

There seems to be some impression here that there is a difference between financing the foreign importer and financing the American exporter. For the purpose of this bill there is no difference. In either case the credit is furnished in this country, in either case the goods go abroad and are security for the credit advanced.

Mr. FULMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. FULMER. Is it not a chance that if you finance the American exporter he will take advantage by holding the cotton to the disadvantage of the producer, whereas the importer could not take that advantage?

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not quite catch the gentleman's point. My own judgment is that there is no difference from the standpoint of facilitating exports between financing the European importer and the American exporter. In either case the credit is furnished in this country and the money is spent in this country, and the only thing that goes abroad is the goods.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The point, if I understand it, of the gentleman from South Carolina was that if you finance the exporter here he could store the goods and thus tend to throw the production back on the new crop, whereas if you financed the man in a foreign country he would spend the money and move the crop.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think there is something in that. Unquestionably the problem for the American farmer is to export his surplus agricultural products. We have been investigating that in a Commission of Agricultural Inquiry, of which I have the honor to be chairman, for weeks. That investigation shows that the problem of the American farmer is to get enough of his products out of the country so that he can get a living price for what remains. That is the problem as far as the agricultural prices are concerned. The banks of this country are extended and the banks that ordinarily do an export business are extended. To attempt to force through these extended banks additional export credit is to attempt to do something which, in my judgment, it is impossible to do upon a scale that is necessary if agricultural products are to be exported in sufficient quantities to affect the situation. You have got to find some route around the extended banks both as respects credit in this country and credit for the purpose of export.

This particular section which the Banking and Currency Committee proposes to strike out proposes to set up that route around the extended banks of the country and to furnish credit directly to the foreign importer instead of to the American exporter through the medium of extended banks. In my judgment it is a great mistake to strike out this provision. I venture to guess, at least, that the banks which ordinarily do an export finance business will be much more ready to furnish the necessary credit if they know that if they do not do it the American Government stands ready, through the War Finance Corporation, to do it. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I do not think it is necessary for me to again remind the committee of the serious situation that confronts this country in regard to extending additional credit to the countries of the world. Our country as a Government has loaned $10,000,000,000, and there is legislation pending here to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to get that debt in some kind of shape where we will at least know that we are going to get the principal back, and also to be able to collect the interest on that obligation. There is also due to these people in this country who have been engaged in the export trade some $4,000,000,000 of unfunded debt at this time, which is carried principally on the books of the banks of export houses due to these people or borrowed from banks in this country, which loans are sometimes called foreign loans or credits.

The question naturally arises as to whether or not we are going to extend still further credit besides this debt of eighteen to twenty billion dollars to foreign countries. I think our people have made up their minds that, until there is some settlement made for the goods and loans which have already been made to Europe, we will go very slow about extending further help. The Government itself has announced that it will make no further loans, and I think their judgment was backed up by the American people. This is only another subterfuge for the purpose of granting by the Government credit indirectly to foreign countries and individuals and concerns. I say it is a great deal better if we want to relieve this situation to make loans to our own people, to our own financial institutions, and have their guaranty rather than have the uncertain securities that foreigners will furnish us.

Mr. STEAGALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman does not mean to say that this provision authorizes a loan to foreign Governments, does he?

Mr. McFADDEN. No. But it does provide for increasing the debts owing by foreigners to the people of this country. The Government of the United States and its people are alike creditors now.

Mr. STEAGALL. We expressly eliminated that provision which the Senate adopted and limited it to short-time loans to such business as is contemplated by the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. LAYTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. LAYTON. There are just two facts, as everyone knows in this country, and the first is that this Nation is fairly staggering under a national debt.

The other is that to-day in our history we have more money in individual hands, more money in the hands of the bankers, than we have ever had before.

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. LAYTON. Why, therefore, should not this matter be taken over by the individual rather than that Uncle Sam should be still further loaded down?

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman is correct. It is a fact that a large part of the export business of the country is now being taken care of by people engaged in exporting through the banking channels, and just so long as those in this country engaged in this class of trade think this Government will finance this business and take the risk, just so long private capital will let them do it. This is strictly an emergency proposition, and the loans and investments of this corporation should be confined strictly to the highest grade securities. I hope the committee will sustain the judgment of the Banking and Currency Committee in this matter.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. TOWNER. I want to ask the gentleman a question, based on this suggestion: It occurs to me that in a transaction of this kind it is almost self-evident that you would have to have cooperation between the banks here and the banks either in England or France, we will say. If you take away the right that is given in this subsection (b), would you not absolutely prevent that cooperation, and is it not absolutely essential practically, no matter where initially the credit comes from, that the business would be transacted and the credit in fact extended not only here but there?

